The gentlemen who made these charges are respectable men who reside near the bridge and who, no doubt, were smarting from the great inconvenience caused by the closing of so important a thoroughfare for so long a time in a very busy season. I deeply sympathize with the many people of the county who suffer so much inconvenience from these conditions. The men who made these charges are certainly sincere, and fully believe them. I am in no position to contradict them. No one made a charge against a member of the committee. While Mr. McLaren, Mr. Sills and Mr. Bleecker who constitute the committee need no certificate of character from me, I beg to say, that having been brought into intimate business relations with all of them for many years, I have no doubt of their personal integrity and devotion to the public welfare, and that they desire the full light of day to shine upon every transaction with which they have connection.

I write chiefly to express the hope that moderation of speech will characterize all that may be said or written hereafter upon this subject, and that the public will keep an open mind until an opportunity be given for the hearing of both sides of the question, and also to ask that any one having personal knowledge of wrong-doing, at once, put in, over their own signature, their charges to the County Clerk, so that they may be dealt with when the Council first meets.

Faithfully yours,
N. VERMILYEA.

EVANGELISTS.

The Toronto Glone says: "Billy" Sunday is not the only baseball player of note to devote the later years of his life to evangelism. He had his prototype in our own "Billy" Crofoot, whose Gospel wagon and band of workers have been familiar to Toronto street crowds for about fifteen years. Mr. W. L. Crofoot, whose death was reported in yesterday's papers, was a generation ago one of the best known ball players in Canada. He played in the old Canadian League that preceded the International, and included two teams in Hamilton and one each from Toronto, Guelph and London. In those days that represented the baseball interest, which was twice as strong in Hamilton as in Toronto. Mr. Crofoot after retiring from active participation in the game, officiated as an umpire.

Another great evangelist of modern times who was a baseball player of prominence is E. J. Crabill of Montrose, Pa.

Crabill played with the New York State League and pitched for Binghampton, and was offered a contract to play with the Boston Nationals at a good salary about the same time that he became imbued with the spirit of evangelism. He refused the offer and commenced mission work. That money influenced him could hardly be claimed, for during the next five years he didn't get enough to equal one year's salary as a ball player. Although using different methods than "Billy" Sunday, E. J. Crabill has been phenomenally successful as an evangelist and is considered one of the best on the continent.

THE MEXICAN SLAUGHTER.

The murder of General Manager Charles R. Watson and his party, who were on their way to reopen their mines in Mexico, was the most cruel of many cruel deeds that have been committed in the bloodstained republic for a long time past. The assassins were rebels, of course, but it is understood that they are followers of General Villa, who was president a short time ago, and it is even asserted that they acted directly on his orders. It was Villa who ordered the murder of Benton, the rancher, a British subject, and Mexico has yet to answer to the Government of Great Britain for that crime.

Murder is an everyday occurrence in the disturbed parts of Mexico, and the people have come to regard the shedding of blood as a matter of course. Leaders who have displeased a section which has grown stronger than their own realize the situation so well that they take the first opportunity to escape over the border, and if they are wealthy enough they put the ocean between themselves and their native land. Diaz had to flee, as did his nephew later on. Huerta got away as soon as his power waned. President Madero and his partner, Vice-President Pino Suarez, were a little too slow, so paid the penalty with their lives. When the Mexicans do not stop at slaying their own kith and kin it is not to be wondered at that they should think little of taking the lives of foreigners, especially Americans. The latter, indeed, they blame for some of their troubles, charging that money for rebellion comes across their northern border.

Washington is to call on President Carranza for the prompt punishment of the murderous bandits who slaughtered the mining party. If they are Villa men, Carranza, no doubt, will be delighted to asquiesce in the demand, if he can manage to apprehend the villains. If he fails, what can be done? The President of the United States has on more than one occasion warned Americans to leave Mexico and remain away from it. That is advice that not all have heeded, for men do not care to abandon their interests even in case of personal danger. The latest slaughter has created another very difficult problem for Washington to deal with.

Great Britain has submarines that are capable of remaining submerged for three days at a time. That's nothing; Germany has a lot of them that will stay longer than that. In fact, they will never come up.

That Manitoba Free Press thinks that Henri Bourassa must be quite disgusted with his young cousin, Talbot Papineau, who has just been promoted to a captaincy in the Princess Patricia's. He is the only officer remaining of the original crowd which went overseas with the Patricia's. Papineau has been in the thick of the fight from the very outset, and acquitted himself so well that he was given the Distinguished Conduct Medal and was frequently mentioned in despatches. Papineau is a grandson of Louis Joseph Papineau, the French-Canadian rebel of 1837, and the young man inherits all the fighting qualities of his belligerent grandsire. The Free Press' idea of a man who has not the least resemblance to Henri is Talbot Papineau.

Kitchener As A Spy.

A few days after Christmas, 1884, in the British camp at Korti on the Nile, where the Gordon Relief Force was waiting for its final dash on Khartoum, an Arab prisoner was brought in.

Tall and thin, his dress a much patched djibbeh, and a dirty skull cap, there was round his neck the string of ninety-nine beads that showed a devoted follower of the Madhi.

"Another blooming spy, said one of the privates guarding him. "He'll be shot to-morrow, I suppose."

But he never was, for the Arab spy was Lord Kitchener of Khartoum.

Lord Kitchener knows the east as no other living man does. He knows it so well that he can speak half of its tongues and dialects with ease, and disguise himself so effectively as to be taken for an Arab.

Lord Kitchener's first job was in the East three years after he had entered the Royal Engineers. He then went out to survey western Palestine. Lord Kitchener's last position before becoming secretary of state for war was in the East, when he was Consul-General in Egypt.

In between those duties, save for the three years of the Boer war, Lord Kitchener has lived in the East. From Egypt to India, from Calcutta to Cairo, his name is one to conjure with. He has talked trade and commerce in the crowded bazaars of Bombay and sat cross-legged with Arab merchants in the Soudan, gravely discussing Soudanese politics.

In the bazaars of Egypt and Soudan he is spoken of as "El Lord," and he is regarded by the masses of the people almost as a god. Did he not smash the Madhi, the god of the peoples of the Near East?

The East looks upon Lord Kitchener as the greatest white man who has ever been among them, greater even than "Chinese" Gordon, and he was a great man. And it is because of this that Lord Kitchener went East. He is the only man who knows the Eastern mind, and has the power to sway it the way he will.—Brantford Courier.

The Poets' Corner

Flowers of the Dust.

The Mills of God grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small—
So soft and slow the great wheels go,
they scarcely move at all;
But the souls of men fall into them,
and are powdered into dust,
And in that dust grow the Passion-
Flowers—Love, Hope and Trust.

Most wondrous their upspringing, in the dust of the Grinding Mills,
And rare beyond the telling the fragrance each distils—
Some grow up tall and stately, and some grow sweet and small,
But Life out of Death is in each one—
with purpose grow they all.

For that dust is God's own garden,
and the Lord Christ tends it fair;
With, oh, such patient tenderness, and oh, such loving care!
In sorrow the seeds are planted, they are watered with bitter tears,
But their roots strike down to the Water Springs, and the Sources of the Years.

These flowers of Christ's own providence, they wither not nor die,
But flourish fair, and fairer still,
through all eternity.
In the Dust of the Mills, and in travail, the amaranth seeds are sown,
But the Flowers in their full beauty climb the Pillars of the Throne.

—John Oxenham.

Her mother tucked her in bed, and then went into the next room, leaving the door open.

To Ease Her Mind

The nurse was writing a letter for a wounded soldier.

"There's something I'd like you to put in, miss," said the soldier hesitatingly.

"Well, what is it?"

"You won't mind, now? Just put 'The nurses in this hospital are all rather elderly persons.'"

"That isn't quite true," said the youthful nurse.

"It isn't miss; but it would ease my missis's mind wonderful. She's always been a bit on the jealous side."

The missis's mind was eased.

MID-WINTER NEAR THE EQUATOR

(1) Cocoanut trees by the sea side, Honolulu. (2) S.S. "Niagara." (3) Episcopal Cathedral, Honolulu. (4) Hawaiian flower sellers —a familiar street scene. (5) Surf ride.

THE eleventh annual Mid-Pacific Carnival of the Hawaiian Islands will be held in Honolulu, February 21-25, 1916, and preparations for entertaining a large army of tourists are under way by the commercial organizations, as well as by special committees, in which the war department is taking an active part. The carnival will extend throughout a week, the key note being the celebration of Washington's birthday on February 23, on which day there will be a parade of nearly 10,000 United States soldiers with six military bands in line, added to which will be the famous Royal Hawaiian Band, and possibly the band of the Royal Rosarians of Portland, Oregon.

One of the features of the Carnival will be a massed band concert, in which all the bands will be merged into one, and selections directed by each of the leaders in turn. In this massed band concert there will be about 300 musicians. Ancient Hawaiian history will be revealed in elaborate pageants undertaken by Hawaiians, while the Japenese, Koreans and Filipinos will also present bizarre spectacles based on life in their own lands. February is one of the most popular tourist months of the year, although the Islanders claim that every month is the month of May. One of its important steamship services is supplied by Canada from the Vancouver port. The S.S. "Niagara" leaves for the Carnival on January 19th. Honolulu has splendid hotels, while motor cars are almost as numerous as in the large cities of the mainland.

Red Cross Obligations

he Red Cross New Year Resolutions

The one appropriate resolve for the Canadian Red Cross in the coming year is a determination to discharge faithfully all the Red Cross obligations which 1916 will impose.

This, like all New Year's resolutions will not be an easy one to keep. For instance, the announcement of the Government that the Canadian forces will be increased to 500,000 automatically doubles the work of the Canadian Red Cross. Further, with a probable increase in the intensity of warfare during the coming year, there will be a corresponding immense increase in the demands on the Red Cross.

Thus it is a conservative estimate that the output of the Canadian Red Cross will have to be two to two and a half times as large as in 1915, a year which, as the annual meeting of the Canadian Red Cross will show, was it self a year of astounding Canadian Red Cross records. A resolution to shoulder this increased obligation is indeed no light one. It can pass out of the realm of nebulous good intentions into the clear light of concrete achievement only if the latent Red Cross will of this country is translated into unfagging activity on the part of every Red Cross supporter.

The same faith however, which inspires our Parliament to decree the doubling of our military strength lends confidence also to our Red Cross executives. It is a faith in the future based on previous experiences of the greatness of the spirit of Canadian sacrifice.

There is indeed little reason to doubt that the Canadian Red Cross will pass triumphantly the crucial 1916 test. It is well, however, that every one who feels a responsibility to relieve suffering of our national task.

"Truth Dexter"

By

Entering his suite at the Hanover he stumbled over a thick letter that had been thrust, with difficulty, under the door. An instinct told him that it was from Truth, and he felt a twinge of disappointment at Mrs. Dexter's thin handwriting.

As the letter seemed to be unusually long, he decided to make himself comfortable in slippers and smoking-jacket before reading it. He smiled, thinking of what Orchid had said of slippers. A cigar lighted, the lamp adjusted, and his big easy-chair drawn up at the right angle, Craighead prepared to read.

As he reached the full significance of Mrs. Dexter's vaguely delicate and often ambiguous sentences, he gave a low cry, sprang from the chair and began pacing the floor. In a moment, however, the letter was resumed.

He read the last word, and refolded the letter with a strange smile. Then he leaned over to one of the desk drawers, drew out the half-finished communication to Truth, and began tearing it into shreds. Truth's Paris photograph seemed to nod at him from the desk. But something else was needed,—what was it? Suddenly the thought came. From a small secret drawer he took another photograph, this time the face that he called "Jeanne d'Arc." He held it under the light until the shaking of his hands blurred the sweet outlines. Then he placed it upright against a pile of books, still in the full light, and stared on, silently.

Was there ever a sweeter face? —one more noble, or pure. She was only a child yet, and to think—to think —! What must she have suffered all those days Craighead thanked God that he had not been more impatient. A tiny rainbow came between him and the picture. He knew it for a tear upon his lashes. Brushing it away, he leaned nearer, and said aloud —"Little girl! I was not going to give you up, even without — this!"

CHAPTER XXX.
Conclusion.

Six months had passed. On the gray walls of Trinity Church ivy had again changed from emerald to bronze and the elm trees on the Common again bore sparrows in lieu of leaves. In the South, the country roadsides blazed with golden-rod and purple iron-weed; the great forest about the Big House had entered upon that iridescent drowsiness which heralds winter sleep. Blossoms had fallen and fruit was being stored—yet Craighead had not seen his young wife face to face.

In answer to the telegram sent so long before, she had returned the message: "Thank you with all my heart. We are very happy. But do not come —wait for my letter."

What a letter that had been! Gratitude, pride, humility, passion, shyness, love,—all emotions of which a proud, sweet, unspoiled woman could be capable of, crowded like luminous flowers into the garden of that single cry.

"My whole lifetime will be too short to prove my love," she wrote. "Perhaps if I had a thousand lives, each melted into a single day and each filled to overflowing with love for you, it would do for a beginning. Oh, but I shall be so good! So careful of your wishes! I don't believe I can ever have another sad thought. But now I am ashamed for, even while thanking you for your glorious nobility, I am going to ask you still another favor. It will seem a strange one to you, I fear, but it is very real to me. I want you to let me stay in the South quietly, just with grandma, until—October. I know that we Southern girls are brought up in foolish reticence and modesty, but the feeling is in my blood and bones, and I cannot give it up all at once. Oh, you can't imagine how I shrink from seeing any one but grandma—even with her I am sometimes confused. I should die of shame in meeting even you, my dear, noble husband that I love more than any woman ever loved her husband before. This will not make you doubt my love, I know. This is my strong, earnest wish; almost my prayer—but even in this, if you feel very strongly, I will fight down my feelings and come back to you in Boston. I cannot help thinking of the heavenly sweetness it would be to meet you for the first time here—when I am well and strong again. The fear of losing you has made me see how precious you were. I will do everything you say."

Craighead frowned as he read this unique proposition, but under the shadow of a frown a smile burst forth. Truth's Jeanne d'Arc picture was, at this time, never absent from his desk. At this he glanced, as he said aloud, "You are a strange, silly, charming little woman, and I guess you are going to get things just about as you want them."

A week later he saw Mrs. Wiley's name no the passenger list of a New York steamer, and knew that she was passing out of his life forever.

Some time after, while writing to Truth on the subject of her uncle's will, he received the following answer: "We rely on your advice in this as in everything. But grandma and I have talked it over a good deal, and we thought perhaps the best thing would be to build and endow a big Home for veterans of the Civil War, and let both sides be equally welcomed. It might stand on the banks of the Potomac River. I should love to go to it and see that the soldiers had every comfort, and, because I love you so dearly, I shall feel no different to the Northern soldiers from the Southern. We should have just the same number of each, and I think they would enjoy themselves fighting over old battles in memory. What do you think of this for a plan? Grandma is eager for it, and already talks of putting up unlimited supplies of fig and watermelon-rind preserves this summer, to be used there. Oh, if you could only see grandma now that this nightmare of money is taken from her! Both of us are entirely, perfectly, absolutely happy. I have found that sewing can be more fascinating than the most inspiring of lectures. And this all because of your great nobility."

Van agreed, tentatively to the plan, but said that it must wait for actual commencement of operation until they could all be together, and work out details. The money was put into the hands of trustees, with income to accumulate for the present. The checks that he now sent Truth were all from his own earnings, and he fell into the way of making a playful statement as to the derivation of each sum. "Enclosed please find a check for one hundred dollars, being payment in full to Van der Weyde Craighead, barrister, from Josiah T. Quail, for services rendered. N.B. The service was rescuing him from a night in jail."

With another fifty dollars he wrote: "Payment in full for drawing up a last will and testament of G. Milton Trashbasket, a professional poet, with nothing to leave but pencil, ends and rejected MSS."

If Craighead lost, during this interval, in the companionship of his wife, he gained an unlooked-for harvest in her letters. These were all written in her quiet evening hours, her "holy time," as she called it; and came as regularly as the day. In them he was often startled by flashes of rich imagery, insight into the deepest problems of human existence, and, above all, by cleaving expressions of love for himself. The pure, simple home-life of the two women unfolded before him as a new and exquisite species of life. Truth told him of her garden, her thoughts, and of the books that she and her grandmother took turns in reading aloud as the other sewed. Once in a great while she hinted of the progress she was making on a certain important outfit. "As I sit by the table, writing, the bed beside me is full of little clothes. Each one is a chrysalis woven more of love than visible fibres. Almost every night I take them out this way, so that I can see them all. I am not used to the wonder of them yet, and, often, when I have been gloating over them, half-frightened by the beating of my own heart, I must fall on my knees to kiss each one again, to hold out the unbelievable little sleeves, to thank God, and whisper your dear name. Oh, Van, Van! I pity you for being a man!"

It was, indeed, a time of brooding sweetness in the Big House. The acute sorrow of the Colonel's death had melted into a softer memory. Mrs. Dexter once said: "I cannot even wish him back again. It is the sunshine of his blessed presence that is over us all. Why should I demand the earthly part? For that dreadful year while we used the money I was afraid to meet him, even in dreams, but now I sleep again, by his side."

One of Craighead's letters written in September deepened in Truth a joy that already, at times, seemed too great to be endured. "While my little wife spins and weaves in her South it behooves the head of the family to be seeking a sheltered nook in his colder clime. Shall I be shamed by mocking-birds? In pursuance of this, my plain duty, I have been spending a day looking at houses in Brookline, and have secured the refusal of a charming new cottage, which has not only sufficient ground for a whole Dutch colony of bulbs, and many winding walks for toddling feet, but actually a well-spring of its own, and a tiny birch forest which will please some one I know more than a little. I must give my answer by the end of three days. Shall it be 'Yes'? or does that some one prefer the grandeur of the Hanover?"

Thus the blessed months slipped by. Magnolia blossoms stood, like ivory chalices upon the enamelled altars of their boughs, then fell away into tarnished petals, leaving silky burrs, from which, in time, oozed seeds like drops of clotted blood to hang, suspended at intervals, from threads of invisible silk. The yellow flowers of the "rattle-box" changed into small translucent bladders, each loosely filled with black atoms of seed. Along the creekside ripe whortleberries tantalized hungry assemblies of minnows, and on the hills brown "chinkapins" twinkled as brightly as the squirrel's eyes which sought them out. Harvest time was at hand, and the wood responded to the immemorial cry; in the Big House (itself an adaptation of forest trees), one of God's creatures waited for her hour of fruition.

At last it came, a fiery Nessus garb of agony, which, being endured, cooled into the white robe of motherhood.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

Martyred Belgium Cries for FOOD!

You have Plenty — Share it!

We cannot—we MUST NOT let the destitute Belgians starve! No victory could be lastingly glorious if it involved the decimation by famine of a small nation that deliberately sacrificed itself rather than sacrifice honor!

Earl Curzon of Kedleston, says:

"We have to relieve from privation, and from worse, these unhappy people during the forthcoming winter, the second winter which they have passed under these cruel conditions; we have to keep alive their vital resources, to support their courage, and enable them to continue to endure".

THE Belgian Relief Fund

has been and is administered with an Efficiency and Economy never before equalled in Public Relief Work.

All accounts are audited, and every pound of food and supplies is accounted for. The arrangements are absolutely effective for securing that none of the food or money goes into the hands of the Germans, is requisitioned by military authorities, or in any way diverted from the object for which it is given.

Nearly 3,000,000 Belgians must depend this winter on charity! Without help hundreds of thousands will starve! We in Canada have plenty! In the name of humanity and of the cause for which we are fighting, let us do our part toward saving these heroic allies!

THIRD INTERNATIONAL GOOD ROADS CONGRESS

30.000 Invitations Sent Out For Meeting in Montreal in March

With over 30,000 invitations being sent out at the end of the month by George A. McNamee, secretary of the Third Annual Canadian and International Good Roads Congress, to be held in Montreal, March 6th to 10th, a conservative estimate of the attendance of bona fide delegates is 2,000. When the first Congress was held in Montreal in May of 1914, the attendance was about 800, while at the Congress in Toronto last year this record was nearly doubled, over 1,400 delegates being present. With the constantly growing increase of interest in the subject of Good Roads, and the large expenditures being made this year, it is certain that the Congress will attract a goodly number not only of the govermental and municipal representatives and officials who are most nearly connected with the planning and carrying out of the work, but also of private citizens, more especially from the agricultural districts, who have come to realize how intimately their welfare, prosperity and productiveness are bound up with the provision of safe, smooth and permanent highways. The invitations are going out to Dominion and Provincial cabinet ministers, government engineers, mayors, reeves, and councillors of cities, towns, villages and townships, wardens and councillors of counties, road contractors, manufacturers of supplies, members of boards of trade, engineering societies, automobile clubs agricultural societies and other bodies directly or indirectly associeted with the Good Roads Movement. Many of those who come will be equipped with the expert knowledge and the actual experience which will enable them to impart valuable information; others will be able to furnish illuminative details in the discussions which will follow the various addresses and papers still others will bring problems which the collective wisdom of the gathering will help to solve, and those who come only to listen and learn will return to their home places and their duties with a vast fund of useful data and a larger outlook upon the whole question of Good Roads.

The usual exhibition of machinery and accessories will be held in connection with the Congress, and for this purpose 25,000 square feet of space has been set aside at Sohmer Park, the scene of the gathering. That the Dominion Government recognizes the educative value of this exhibition is apparent from the fact that the department of Customs is allowing all exhibits to enter Canada duty free.

British Ready To Beat Germans

LONDON, Jan. 13.—There is a spirit of great optimism in both British and French dispatches expressing the firm conviction of the allied Generals that there is no possibility of any successful German offensive anywhere in the West.

The correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company sends from British Headquarters an interview with an unnamed prominent staff officer, who is quoted as saying.

"We now have full information about the German forces facing us. We know their exact dispositions and strength. We everywhere outnumber the Germans, and also outnumber them in both field and heavy artillery, and our weapons are better than theirs. We can fire five shells to their one, without depleting our munitions. We can take their first line of trenches wherever we wish.

"To say that we have got them beaten is dangerous rubbish, but the truth is, we have got them ready for a beating."

Spy Plot Found by Censoring Mails

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The recent inauguration of a censorship upon both outgoing and incoming American mails has already produced results, according to officials, in the form of the revelation o fa widespread espionage plot. which the officials declare has amply justified the organization of the large department necessary to carry on the work.

According to evidence revealed by the opening of American mail, it is stated, an organization of spies here has been sending information to an American branch, which forwards it to Germany by various routes, chiefly by one through Holland.

EX-TELLER ACQUITTED, BUT ACCOUNTANT HELD

MONTREAL, Jan. 14.—Leslie G. Kastner, formerly paying teller of the local branch of the Sterling Bank of Canada, was acquitted to-day by Judge Leet on the charge of stealing $2,850 from the Sterling Bank, but committed to stand trial on a charge of having made false entries in the bank's books. Judge Leet said Kastner evidently had made the entries acting under the instructions of the accountant, D. J. Couchon, and may not have made them with criminal intent.

Couchon was held on a charge of stealing $2,850, and was committed for voluntary statement on January 19th.

NEW YORK WARS ON GRIP

400 Summoned to Court For Expectorating in Public Places

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—To prevent the spread of the grip and other communicable winter diseases by a campaign against violation of the ordinance against spitting in public places, the Sanitary Squad and inspectors of the Department of Health, with the aid of thirty-four detectives and every patrolman in the Police Department, on Tuesday served 400 persons with summonses to appear in magistrates' courts to-day and be fined and reprimanded. Only a few of the offenders were discharged and all got lectures.

SLAIN GIRL BURIED IN HER WEDDING GOWN

Coroner's Jury Finds Her Death Due to Bullet Fired by Her Lover

LONDON, Ont. Jan. 14.—Within 52 hours of the shooting of Dora Kowalck, Coroner Ferguson's jury brought in a verdict that her death was due to a bullet fired from a revolver in the hand of Nickolas Nesterook. Nesterook, who will have his preliminary hearing Saturday, in time to have the case before the Grand Jury next week, was counselled by Mr. Edmund Meredith, K.C., that it was unnecessary to testify to-night.

The funeral of the victim took place this morning from St. Mary's church, where a Cleveland priest of the Greek Orthodox rite was to have conducted the marriage, and the girl was buried in what was to have been her wedding gown.

How to Save Your Eyes

TRY THIS FREE PRESCRIPTION

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to J. S. McKeown druggist, or to the nearest wideawake drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Optio tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvelously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

WIRELESS MYSTERY OUT

Plant at Maine Can Receive Direct From Germany

BOSTON, Mass, Jan 14—The Evening Traveller has the following special dispatch from Portland, Maine:

That the big wireless station at Nasion's corner, in the Deering section, is owned by a German company, with headquarters at Hanover, Germany, and that it can receive messages direct from Germany, became known today. E. E. Mayer, an official of the company here, said to-day that the same company is conducting the Tuckerton, N.J., station.

Mystery has surrounded the erection of this wireless station, which was completed about two weeks ago. Men first, finally admitted it was connected with the Tuckerton Station. United States officials simply said that "the station is under supervision." Lieut. F. S. Hatch, of the United States Navy is here to act as official supervisor.

The station will be in operation receiving messages from Germany in about two weeks. It receives only. It is one of the three biggest wireless stations in this country and the first, it is said, to demonstrate in practical use that lower towers are as efficient as high aerials in receiving wireless messages. Many experimental messages already have been received.

Servant Problems In United Rtates

Estimated That 50,000 Girls Could Find Situation

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The scarcity of servants in New York City because of the war is causing great concern among employment agents, and as a result of a recent meeting at Little Hungary, East Houston street, an organization may be formed to meet the situation. The employment agents at the meeting expressed alarm over the news that after the war laws would be enforced by various countries restricting emigration, and plans were discussed for sending representatives abroad to stimulate the supply of girls to do housework.

"Not alone in New York City, but the whole nation is feeling the effects of the curious situation," one who was present at the meeting said. "There never has been anything similar in the history of the country that I know of. It was suggested that men be sent to Germany, France, England, Russia and other countries to advise the women how to get to America and the advantages in the shape of employment to be obtained there, but nothing definite was accomplished. The demand for servants is pouring in from all over the United States and at least 50,000,000 girls, I think, could find places."

INSTALLMENT PLAN FOR BELGIAN FUND

MONTREAL, Jan. 15.—Among the pledges placed in the hands of the Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter street, is one from a man who agrees to send five dollars monthly for six months to be used for the purchase of Canadian wheat for the starving thousands in Belgium. This is but one of a number of such pledges which provide a steady income of money for the Belgian Relief Committee and an easy method of payment for those who desire to give but cannot afford to give all they wish in a lump sum.

The seriousness of the situation demands immediate consideration and even the smallest sums are acceptable to the committee. The need of Belgium is great just now. Starvation faces the people and relief must be sent at once or thousands will perish this winter. The initial payments of these installment pledges form a nucleus on which the committee is enabled to contract for wheat, the one article most needed to relieve the destitution now existing.

The difference between theory and practice is often exemplified by the advice we give and the advice we take.

GRADUATING EXERCISES AT BELLEVILLE HOSPITAL

Three Nurses Receive Diplomas — Addresses by Chairman J. W. Johnson, Dr. McColl and Sergt Crozier

A number of ladies and gentlemen of the city yesterday afternoon assembled at the Belleville hospital for the purpose of witnessing graduation exercises. They were cordially received by Miss Green, lady superintendent, and nurses and were conducted to the assembly room, which had been tastefully decorated with bunting for the occasion.

Amongst the gentlemen present were Messrs. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. and J. J. B. Flint, Revs. S. C. Moore, C. J. Smith, A. S. Kerr and A. M Hubly. A few military officers in khaki were also present.

Previous to the exercises, the orchestra of the 80th Battalion rendered a number of selections which were much appreciated.

The three nurses who, having completed a three years' course and graduated were, Miss Crozier, of Lindsay, Miss Howard, of Port Hope, and Miss Mastin, of Belleville. These talented young ladies offered their services for overseas work in connection with hospital work and were accepted. All are expected to leave Canada in the near future and will be taken to Cairo, Egypt.

Owing to Dr. Gibson, who was to preside over the ceremony being called away on professional duties, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., was asked to preside, and did so in his usual affable and able manner.

The proceedings were opened by an appropriate prayer, being offered up by Rev. A. M. Hubly, rector of the Reformed Emmanuel church.

Lieut. Stares sang a war song in fine voice and all present appreciated same.

Mr. Johnson then gave an address, speaking as follows:

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., was chairman and in a happy, informal way presided over a proud and happy gathering. He said that thirty-six years have passed since the noble women who then composed the membership of the W. C. A. of Belleville, erected the original structure which has through the never ending efforts of the association and the generosity of our citizens grown to its present magnificent proportions. The older citizens will each year recall with pride the labors of love performed by Mrs. Nathan Jones and Mrs. Jacques and their associates in the days long past.

The Belleville Hospital exists for the purpose of assuaging pain and healing disease by the skill of learned physicians, and the treatment of injuries or disorders of the body by expert surgeons. Here is poured out the Balm of Gilead.

The great war in which we are engaged for the preservation of our Empire and the liberty of the world has given those sons of Canada in whose veins the red blood of the race is flowing the opportunity to prove their valour and tenacity as soldiers under the most trying circumstances and against the greatest odds that soldiers ever faced, and all the world has said, "Well done, there never was performed, there never could be performed greater deeds than yours"; and in this room we are honoured by association with a returned veteran, Sergeant Crozier of Peterboro, sorely wounded and only a short time ago a prisoner in Germany, whose sister graduates to-day.

Equally with the great Canadian fighting man, the surgeon soldier and the soldier nurse from Canada have given proof of possessing skill and bravery, indifference to danger and devotion to duty such as were never even dreamed possible before the war began. Yesterday's papers tell how the King has honored them and we are proud beyond expression to know that our Belleville's Matron Ethel Ridley and Kingston's Dr. Ross are among those whom his Majesty has chosen for signal distinction. He, the speaker, felt that the young fellow who now neglects the opportunity to do his part will in future be without a title to manhood and that the parents who abetted him to shirk his duty will live to see their son dishonored.

Canada expects to be called to the councils of the Empire when the war is over, that will be her right and privilege; there will be other rights to be granted, other privileges to be extended when that time comes. In view of their services at home and at the front how can Canada and the several provinces longer deny to the women of the land the right of franchise? Think of Ethel Ridley's work at the front and its recognition by the sovereign and that under the present law that brave, intelligent woman on her return to her beloved home land could have no say in its national affairs, because she is denied the right to vote.

Dr. MacColl was called upon to present the diplomas and did so in a most gracefully manner. Previous to handing the nurses their diplomas, he spoke briefly, but appropriately. He referred to the fact that this was a military year and he was in touch with military matters. In speaking of the nurses who had graduated and other nurses, he said he had no doubt that after the war was over, there would be a change in the status of the nurses. It has without the shadow of a doubt, been shown that by the government it should be recognized as a professon, the same as lawyers and physicians. Upwards of 1,500 Canadian nurses have gone to the front and what a name they have made, not only for themselves but Canada. This was an auspicious occasion as the nurses receiving their diplomas had volunteered their services for the work of attending to the sick and wounded. What a noble work this was. The nurses have the faculty and are trained to have that human touch that accomplishes much. There was no doubt in warfare, the nurse would yet displace the nursing orderly as he has not the touch of human side of nature as the trained nurse had. The nurses never had the standing they have today. In the present war they have even been sent and gone to the firing line, and how nobly had they performed their duties. After the war is over, he had no doubt that there would be recognition of gallant work done, and this has even been done now. One of Belleville's nurses, namely, Miss Ridley, had been honored by the King for services rendered. The speaker then referred to Dr. Ross, M.P.P., of Kingston, who at the front did splendid services, even going into the firing line where he was not supposed to go. His gallantry had been fittingly rewarded. Nurses were coming forward for duty in this regard, and all would no doubt get places in the near future. In referring to the nurses, who were to receive their diplomas, the Dr. spoke of Miss Crozier, who brother was present at the gathering and who had done his bit, and was for some time a prisoner of war in Germany. He congratulated the young ladies upon the success that had attended their efforts and wished them all success in their future operations wherever they might be.

The nurses were then presented with their diplomas by Dr. MacColl and Mrs. J. C. Moynes pinned a clasp pin upon each, stating she did so on behalf of the Hospital Board and the Women's Christian Association. She congratulated the nurses upon their splendid work and with them ultimate success. The graduates were each presented with beautiful bouquets by their sister nurses.

Miss Green, Lady Superintendent, spoke a few words. She said the nurse loves her work, no matter what it might be. Those nurses who had not received their diplomas, had like other nurses who had graduated from the Belleville Hospital, done well their services. She was especially pleased with the interest generally taken in the Belleville Hospital by its citizens.

Lieut. Stares was again called upon, and rendered a song of a military nature.

Lieut. Crozier, of Lindsay being called upon gave a short address. On behalf of the boys at the front he wished to thank the ladies of Belleville, and in fact all the ladies of the Daughters of the Empire for the many gifts received at the front. He could say that they were much appreciated. He referred to the time he was in Germany and gave a brief outline of the routine duties they had to perform. At 4.30 in the morning, they were routed out, and at 6 or a few minutes after breakfast was served. The meals were poor, in fact the only word he could use to designate them was punk. Whilst a prisoner, only two letters and four postal cards are allowed to be written monthly. In speaking of the Canadian nurses, Lieut. Crozier said all the boys at the front were proud of them and could do nothing but praise them. They all call them sisters. In concluding his remarks, the speaker said that the boys who were prisoners, were in need of more clothing for the winter, blankets especially, would be much appreciated.

This concluded the programme, and light refreshments were served.

NOTES

The nurses' reception room was most appropriately decorated with smilax and carnations. In this room was set aside for the providing of refreshments.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P.P., in introducing Miss Green as Superintendent of the Hospital, spoke glowing words in regard to her work as head of the institution.

BELLEVILLE DEFENCE GOOD

Practically a New Team Upsets all Precedent and Defeats a Well Trained Organization

Phillips, Symons, Whitty—you've heard it all. Might just as well stop the article now. Picton forwards would work down until they struck that stone wall defence then good night, there was nothing to it. they simply coudn't get by.

Phillips stopped shots that seemed impossible and did it time and time again. Either Whitty or Symons went down the ice apparently at will. Didn't always score, but always went through. These three make as strong a defense as Belleville has seen in years.

Don't think that Belleville forwards were not good, because they were. Finkle, Whalen, Simmonds and Mitchell played a stellar game.

Finkle reminds one greatly of his great supporter, Symonds, in his style of play. Looks to be going slow, yet no one can catch him.

Simmonds was described as being a player that would make a man mad. He was eternally picking away at an opponetn's stick. He was always where the puck was on his side of the ice, and that he was ever laid off, as he was last season, is a mystery to all who witnessed the game last night.

Every hockey fan ought to make their prettiest bow to Whalen, who was head and shoulders ahead of his opponent.

That Belleville forwards have not worked together, was evident from the start. Individually, Belleville players had it over the Picton bunch like a tent, but Picton had the better combination. Individual rushes characterized Belleville's game, while Picton worked down the ice together, until they stuck that stone wall—Whitties and Symons—then they stopped.

Outside of Bedborough, on the Picton team, the Belleville boys simply outclassed their opponents, and won on their actual merits—not on team play.

The score of 8 to 5 does not show the relative ability of the players, while if the score was 10-0 in Picton's favor, it would about show the relative team work. Picton has held to the same team, and their boys are working together like clock work, but they cannot get far in their group, because they are not fast enough man for man.

When this Belleville bunch have been together for two weeks, there will be no stopping them in this group.

On Monday night they line up against the 33rd Battery, of Kingston, and they undoubtedly will win that game by a wide margin, as we are satisfied there will be no stopping Belleville from this date forward.

Early betting was against Belleville and several bets were laid by Belleville men against the home team. This, however, didn't last long and by seven o'clock no Picton money was in sight. That Belleville is in a class by themselves in this group, is a certainty.

A. Brouse, Kingston, referee.

Nothing New on British Front—Russians Advance in Persia—French Continue Action

NO PEACE FOR MONTENEGRO

Casualties Among Canadians Only Normal—Inflated Report False—Russians Launch Fierce Attacks—Greeks Stirred

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 16.—British official statements says that beyond artillery exchanges there is nothing new to report.

The Constantinople war office announces briefly that a new general offensive along a hundred mile front has been begun by the Russians in the Caucasuas.

A Paris official report says there is spirited artillery fighting in the Champagne district at Lille and in Woevre.

A Rome despatch says the Montenegrin authorities officially deny that there will be an Armistice with Austria, Montenegro will fight to the end and will not consider peace proposals from any quarter.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—It is announced that the report that a long list of Canadian casualties was issued in London yesterday was misleading as the list was for the full month of December. The casualties among the Canadians at present are only normal.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The British steamer Toquet 5,000 tons has been torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean. No word has been received as to her crew.

A Berlin despatch states that huge Russian reinforcements have arrived on the Galician front. The Russians have launched fierce attacks at several points along this front. The despatch admits that the Germans are hard pressed in several places.

An Athens despatch reports there is much ill feeling stirred up over the German raid at Yanesha, Greece, during which several Greek soldiers were killed.

BRITISH FORCES WIN IN MESOPOTAMIA FIGHT

The Force Marching to the Relief of British Army at Kut-el-Amara Defeats and Pursues Turks

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN TELLS THE STORY

Russians Successful in Persia and the Caucasus—Anglo-Russian Forces Apparently Working on a General Plan With View to Joining Hands on a Wide Front

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The announcement was made in the House of Commons today that the Turkish forces in Mesopotamia have fallen back to within six miles of Kut-El-Amara. The announcement was made by Austen Chamberlain, who said the Turks had retreated as the result of another British victory. The Turkish positions at Waddi, he said, were carried on Saturday by the British forces.

Britons and Russ Combine

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Despatches from the Far East to-night show that British and Russian forces are meeting with considerable success in campaigne against strong enemy forces in Mesopotamia, Persia and the Caucasus. While these campaigns that the Allies are working on a comprehensive plan, with the idea of finally establishing an Anglo-Russian line from the Persian Gulf to the Caspian Sea. A feature of the Caucasus fighting is that the Russian official statement gives the first official intimation that Germans are fighting with the Turks in Persia.

Good New From Mesopotamia

To-day's official statement by the Press Bureau that British forces marching to the relief of General Townshend's beleaguered army at Kut-El-Amara had won another stiff battle and were pursuing the retreating Turks was received with delight here, and the hope is expressed that the critical stage of the situation is passed. The statement follows:

British are in Pursuit

"After their defeat the Turkish force opposing General Aylmer retired to a position astride the Tigris at Orah, 25 miles down stream from Kut-El-Amara.

"During the evenings of January 13 and January 14 the enemy began to retire, and is being closely pressed on the east and on the north by the British forces."

The Fighting in Persia

Petrograd and Constantinople despatches regarding the fighting in the Caucasus are contradictory, the Russians, commanded by Grand Duke Nicholas, giving details of guns and prisoners taken. The Turks admit a Russian offensive on a front of nearly 100 miles, but claim that the fighting which they say has progressed for five days, is progressing favorably for them.

Took Many Guns and Men

The Petrograd report says:

"Caucasus—In the course of the fighting January 14 we captured 20 Turkish officers and more than 400 men, a quantity of war and engineering material and provisions, one heavy gun and seven other guns and eight machine guns.

"Persia—In the fighting at Kangaver, half way between Hamadan and Karmanshah, we took many prisoners. The enemy abandoned many dead on the battlefield. Our losses were insignificant.

"Southeast of Hamadan we drove back towards Daulatabad a detachment consisting of Turks and Germans."

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(Later).—The recent operations in Mesopotamia, including the advance to Ctesiphon, were considered and approved by the war council, said Mr. Chamberlain. It would not be in the public interest that I should make any statement on the scope of the operations now in progress. Information of that kind in the present circumstances would be far more valuable to the enemy than to the House. On the 11th inst., I announced the enemy had retired to Essian, a position six miles east of Kut-El-Amara. He, however, assuredly advanced again on the 12th to what is called the Waddi position.

Since then we have received telegrams from General Townsend up to the morning of the 15th. From these telegrams it was apparent that General Aylmer was pressing back two divisions on the left bank. At and about the Waddi position, there was continuous fighting on the 13th, in the neighborhood and on the morning of the 14th, General Aylmer reported the enemy were again retiring and he himself was moving his quarters and his water transport to the mouth of the Waddi. On the 15th, General Aylmer reported that the whole Waddi position had been captured and that the enemy's rear guard had taken up a position at Essian.

General Aylmer reports that the operations were seriously hindered by the weather, and I am sorry to say the weather is still reported bad. All the wounded have been sent down the river.

Berlin Admits Defeat

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—The Russian forces in the Caucasus have forced the Turks to withdraw their advanced positions several miles at some points according to a Turkish official statement of today received here from Constantinople.

A DEBT OF HONOR

"They preferred to go starving rather than dishonor and soil their hands by work for their enemies and the invaders of their country," said T. P. O'Connor in a recent speech, appealing for assistance for the destitute population of Belgium. Mr. O'Connor had reference in this particular passage of his address to those Belgians in that part of the country under German occupation, where the invading forces attempted to press the prisoners into doing work for the German army.

Mr. O'Connor's address was a powerful one embodying many details of the Belgian situation which the whole world should know, but lack of space precludes the possibility of our treating at this time with more than this one passage.

They preferred to starve rather than work for the invaders of their country, says "Tay Pay". They preferred death to dishonor,—they were willing to give up their lives rather than aid their enemies.

Nay, they did more than this. They gave to the world a display of courage such as has never been known and have placed upon the British Empire a debt that must be paid. England can never fully repay Belgium for what she did in the dark days of August and September, 1914, for she can never bring back to the mourning widows and mothers the men who fell at Louvain, Liege, and on the other fields of battle. But Britain can, must and will partially pay this debt of honor when the opportunities are presented as we have them to-day.

Winter is upon the Belgian men, women and children, who are forced to stay at home, and with winter comes the dark shadow of misery and want. Relief has been extended in food and clothing and is still being given, but to-day Belgium finds herself facing imminent starvation, and England and her dominions have a debt to pay.

Now is the time for its payment. Bread is needed. Literally bread is wanted. This is no figure of speech but a cold fact that no Canadian who prides himself on being British can dodge. Canada cannot send bread, but Canadians can send wheat or flour and a bag of flour will keep one Belgian family from starvation on entire month.

Will not Canada pay this debt of honor, or at least her share? We have the wheat, we have the flour. Can we sit snug by our fires, fat with the glorious harvest of this year, and let our debt go unpaid? Are we going to let the poor women and children, who gave their men to save the British Empire, starve and die miserable deaths because we will not pay?

Canadians must hold up their heads and open their purses and help. Let us come forward with the aid that is needed. Let us help pay Britain's debt of honor to Belgium by feeding her starving.

We are all working—some of us fighting—for the Empire's victory over our enemies and Belgium's enemies, but no victory could be lastingly glorious if it involved the decimation by famine of a small nation that deliberately sacrificed itself rather than sacrifice honor.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE TWO THOUSAND PRISONERS

Great Masses of Wounded Left Behind by Teutonic Forces—Retreat From Stripa was Disastrous to Foe

AUSTRIANS CLAIM ATTACKS REPULSED

Says Russians Have Attacked in Great Force But Have Not Succeeded—No Territory Lost—Admit Determined Attacks by Slavs

Retreat was Awful

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(Special).—A Petrograd despatch to The Times says:

According to prisoners, the Austro-German retreat to the western bank of the Stripa was terrible. They had erected on a 20-mile front only two wooden bridges across which they might transport their artillery. The infantry forded the stream over treachtrous ice, which was flooded at many places, and retired under a ceaseless fire from the Russians.

Frightful Havoc

The Russian fire wrought frightful havoc. A single division took an entire day to cross, and just barely reached its destination.

Great masses of wounded remained on the eastern bank, and fully 2,000 unwounded men were captured by the Russians.

A sudden thaw in the Poliesie region caused the Austro-German transport and heavy guns to stick in the mire. They will be fortunate if they succeed in extricating themselves in time to save them from the Russian advance which is being conducted along the entire breadth of Poliesie.

The Austrian Claims

While the Russian War Office in despatches received on Sunday declares that the situation is unchanged on Russia's western front, the Austrians report that the Russians have resumed their offensive in eastern Galicia and Bessarabia, and after desperate fighting the Russians have suffered heavy losses.

Heavy Attacks

The Russians, it is claimed, attacked in columns twelve to fourteen lines deep, and made four to six attacks at some places, with disastrous results to themselves, leaving 1,000 dead in front of one brigade and losing 240 prisoners.

"The Austro-Hungarians have maintained all their positions," says the report, "and the Russians have not gained one inch of territory.

"Vienna territorials have repulsed superior Russian forces on the Karmin.

"Since the beginning of the battle the Austro-Hungarian forces of Generals Pflanzer, Baltin and Bothmer have taken 5,100 Russians, including thirty officers."

HOT LEMONADE AND WARM SLEEP STOP GRIP

Health Commissioner of New York City Sanctions Common Sense Preventitive Treatment For Influenza

How to keep from having the grip when everyone about you is suffering from this aggrevating disease and you are beginning to have the symptoms yourself—this is the question that has been uppermost in the mind of hundreds of thousands during the present epidemic.

In an attempt to answer it a representative of the New York Tribune interviewed a large number of prominent physicians and submitted to Health Commissioner Haven Emerson a summary of their advice. The latter put his official O. K. on the following treatment:

Take a cathartic.

"Then take a brief hot bath to warm up the body and start the blood running freely.

"Drink a large bowl of hot lemonade and go to bed early. Cover one's self thoroughly and warmly, even to an extra pillow to protect the head and ears, and get nine hours' sleep.

"If the trouble seems to be chiefly in the throat, wrap the neck in a wet woollen cloth covered by a dry woollen cloth."

The official qualified his recommendation as far as the hot bath part of the treatment is concerned, saying that none should do this unless they were very sure that they would be able to keep themselves perfectly warm during the night and the morning afterward.

"But the hot lemonade, the cathartic and the warm sleep stand as the official preventive for the dread disease which is adding from 10 per cent to 40 per cent. of the weekly death records in many parts of the country."

Commits Murder Then Suicides

(Canadian Press Special)

EAST BOLTON, Brome County Que., Jan. 17.—George Rakenreed, a German laborer, aged 45, living in a squalid cabin with Naomi Tennyson, aged 40, and her daughter, aged 12, killed the child on Sunday morning, and later slashed his own and the woman's throats, announcing his intention of making an end to everything. The Tennyson woman made an antemortem statement.

This is the third murder in this section in the past few weeks. Rakenreed had inflamed himself with whiskey purchased in Eastman on Saturday night.

Following the crime, the murderer and Mrs. Tennyson lay in the unwarmed shack for several hours before accidental assistance intervened, and both will probably die from pneumonia. All three came from the States several years ago.

Big Booze Battle For Ontario

"Wet" and Dry" Organizations in Fierce Preliminary Skirmishes

"DRYS" QUOTE KITCHENER

"Wets" Protest Against Campaign During the War—Both Use Name of Patriotism

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—The rival publicity campaigns now being waged by the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred and the Personal Liberty League of Ontario, are serving to stir up the otherwise dormant bear of politics in this Province.

Whether Old Man Ontario welcomes the diversion of his interest from his sons at war remains to be seen, but meanwhile the coffers of the big dailies are being enriched and the electorate amused by a very strenuous offensive which both sides have taken during the last three nights in the Toronto papers.

Each organization with a tremendous name is appealing to patriotism and the clash is naturally sharp and resonant. Says the latest half page advertisement of the Personal Liberty League of Ontario:

"And now at this critical time comes the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred with its campaign for total prohibition to divide us, to throw us into opposingg camps, and if possible force their will on this Province when many of the electors are fighting for the Empire in Europe.

"The Citizens' Commttiee of One Hundred realizes that the men who are fighting for the world's liberty on the battlefield of Europe would be fighting for the liberty of the individual if they were home."

It is not thought, however, that they are idle. In fact, it is known that the hosts are marshaling for the greatest temperance fight that Ontario has ever known. The old organizations, the Dominion Alliance for the total suppression, etc., and the Licensed Victuallers' Association, are not appearing in this campaign.

Perhaps there is a magic in new names and machines, both of the new organizations express great confidence in their ability to overawe the Legislative mind when it appears in Queen's Park not many weeks hence. It is prophesied that Ontario will forsake the quarrel over Bilingualism for a much more congenial and familiar fight over the giant Booze.

The most portentous fact in the political situation is that for the first time the Abolish-the-Bar forces are making an appeal primarily on patriotic grounds and that they apparently have enough funds to rival the trade in publicity and organization.

Deceased, who was 24 yars of age, was born in Uxbridge Township, but had lived for some time in Midland. This was his second year at Albert, where he was beloved by his fellow students. He was an exceptionally clever young man and by his genial disposition made many friends, and his demise is sincerely regretted. KHAKI SERVICE AT TABERNACLE

Choir is Formed of Men in Uniform—Former Methodist Minister Offers Opening Prayer—Chaplain of 155th Read Lessons

The services at the Tabernacle Methodist Church in this city last evening were strictly of a military nature. In fact it was termed a Khaki Service. The choir gallery was filled with members of the 80th Battalion in uniform who were musically inclined, whilst others occupied seats about the pulpit. The service opened by the well known marching hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," followed by an opening prayer by Corporal Dickson of Coe Hill, who gave up his charge as a Methodist minister to enlist. Chaplain Ketterson of the 80th Battalion, read the lessons and also at the close of the service pronounced the benediction. During the service Lieuts. Stairs and W. H. Wrightmyer rendered appropriate solos in fine voice.

Rev. S. C. Moore, Pastor, gave a discourse which in the main was of a recruiting nature. His subject was "The Challenge of the War," and the the text was from St. Luke, xxii:36— . . . . . . "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garments and buy one."

In the course of his sermon the preacher said that this was our war and that it was a war for righteousness and home. That the Kaiser had an eye on Canada there was not the slightest doubt, but thanks to the British navy, of which we are justly proud, we are spared from an invasion by the foe. That Canada had given proof of her patriotism and love for the mother land could not be denied, but more men, and more men, and more ammunition were needed An appeal is being made for 500,000 men from Canada, and this was not asking too much from this country, considering its population. The question is, are we alive to the situation that confronts us and what it would mean if the enemy were victorious in this conflict? He would not like to think there were shirkers or slinkers in Canada. It is no more or less than a sacred duty to assist the Allies in this struggle, to assist in the defence of right, humanity righteousness and home. That Canadians who have gone to the front have done valiant service as witnessed at Langemarck and other places. For the unity of the Empire we fervently pray, but we must be prepared to pay the price to secure that peace, no matter what the sacrifice may be. It is sad to see our sons and loved ones go away over the sea, but it was sadder still to see shirkers in Canada when the call for help from the mother land comes. The Germans are making great sacrifices in defence of the fatherland and should we not make even greater sacrifices when we are defending such a cause in which we are engaged. We want peace, but only that peace which secures honor and integrity, justice, righteousness and love for God and mankind in general. This should come before safety first. God bless the soldier lads, and God comfort those who mourn. Those who have laid down their lives have not died in vain. Their blood calls loudly from the ground; it calls for a new and greater sacrifice. Enlist now, not only in the King's army for defence of our land, but in the army of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. When peace finally comes what a greeting and welcome will be accorded those returning home. If some are called upon to make the final sacrifice their names will be memoralized for years to come.

Wheat Not On The Free List

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—Reports that the Government will put wheat on the free list, thus availing itself of the United States market under the American tariff legislation, are understood to be wholly unfounded.

They have probably arisen from the fact that J. G. Turriff, Liberal member for Assinaboia has placed in the order paper of the Commons a resolution declaring such action to be desirable.

The free wheat agitation was resumed in the West this year owing to the big crop, but little has been heard of it since the commandeering of wheat for the British Government and the probability of a similar market being secured overseas for the rest of the surplus crop.

So far as can be learned here, the arguments against free wheat as put forth in the Budget speech two years ago, still hold good. They were a reiteration of the Conservative policy in respect to reciprocity.

Letters From Belleville Boys At the Front

In June, 1915, the R. T. of T. Knitting Circle was organized and since then the members have knitted two hundred pairs of socks, and have also done considerable sewing.

On the 16th October last, a bale consisting of 125 pairs of socks, 22 night shirts, soap, candy, gum, and a quantity of hospital supplies, was sent to Miss Ethel Ridley, matron No. 2 Canadian Stationary Hospital at Le Touquet. Since then the hospital has been moved to Boulogne Base.

On November 24, 1915, the following letter was received by Mrs. H. J. Sharpe, Secretary of the Circle, from Miss Ridley:

Dear Mrs. Sharpe:—Thank you so much for your letter and certification of the bale you have sent. Miss Denmark, Miss Green and I appreciate greatly the interest that the people of Belleville have taken in No. 2 Canadian Stationary Hospital. We have received so many boxes at various times, containing all sorts of most useful things which have been the greatest assistance in our work. Your bale will not probably reach us for a long time yet, as cases are very much delayed in transport. However, I will let you know as soon as we do receive it.

We will be very pleased indeed to receive the stockings, or rather socks. I always try to keep the nice warm ones for the men who are going back to the Front. They do appreciate having an extra pair of clean dry socks.

It is dreadful to think that anyone would be base enough to sell the poor men socks that the women at home are denying themselves to provide.

It is kind of you to say that you would like some suggestions as to what we need. Mufflers and socks are very useful in the winter; candy and gum are enjoyed greatly by the patients; soap, bon ami, sappolio, Dutch cleanser, are more than welcomed by the Sisters; dish towels and dusters are also very useful.

Recently we have been moved from our place at Le Touquet, and now have a very much smaller hospital, so that really our needs are not quite so great as they once were.

When we had officers there were many things that would have been of great help, but we have no beds for officers here. Please don't judge from this statement that our enlisted men suffered, for everything we can do has always been done for them, and I think I may say they liked our hospital very much, but of course, a difference is made on account of rank which is only right and taken for granted.

Thanking you again, I am,

Yours most sincerely,
ETHEL B. RIDLEY,
Matron.

Friday another letter was received by the Secretary:

Dear Mrs. Sharpe:—Your parcel containing socks, shirts, gum, etc., came some few weeks ago. I waited instructions from Miss Ridley. She has given me permission to open the bale and use the contents for this hospital, which I was, of course, very glad to do.

Please accept our sincere thanks. We will find everything most useful. We use such tremendous quantities of all supplies. The socks are especially acceptable. Thanking you again, I am,

Sincerely yours,
ANNIE C. STRONG,
Matron.

No. 2 Can. Stat. Hospital,
Boulogne Base.

In addition to the above bale sent to No. 2 Can. Hospital, the R. T. of T. Circle supplied twelve pairs of socks for shipment sent by Mrs. C. J. Bowell direct to the trenches.

Also a few days ago parcels containing thirty pairs socks, two mufflers, pair gloves, candy, soap, etc., were mailed to Belleville boys in France.

Belgium, Dec. 25, 1915.

Dear Mother:—Just a few lines to let you know I am still alive and well. This is Xmas day. We are in the front lines but there is not much doing in the way of fighting. The Huns have hardly fired a shot to-day. Our boys are just waiting for them to start something. They, I mean the Huns, have never showed their heads above the trenches. A few stray bullets are about all they got from us. Last night we could hear them singing some kind of lingo. In return our chaps kept shouting to them that we were going to have turkey for dinner to-day. By the way our Xmas dinner consisted of beef-steak, plum pudding, cheese, jam and tea. Some class to us!

The weather over here is not so bad at present. If it wasn't for the mud we would just be fine. We are up to our necks in it. Still we don't mind it much after three months and a half. The boys are as hard as nails, although it is a hard old game. You never hear any of us kicking. We know it won't last for ever. As long as I am in good health I don't care.

Well, Mother, I think I told you I received all your boxes so far. The next time you send me a box I would like very much if you would put in some short-cake. You know the kind I mean, those home-made chaps. We are getting lots to eat over here, but the same thing day after day don't go very good. I spend nearly all my month's pay in food. There is a little store behind the lines where we order our groceries. They charge us eighty-five cents a dozen for eggs. That's going some, isnt' it?

Tell Kathleen I received her letter of December 1, also Minnie's card. I will write to you often, so cheer up! Better days are coming. I think I have told you all for this time. Give my love to all. I remain

Your son,
Pte. P. A. Boland.

WHAT WEAK WOMEN NEED

WE HAVE IT IN A REMEDY CONTAINING THE THREE OLDEST AND MOST FAMOUS TONICS KNOWN

Vinol contains the three oldest and most famous tonics known to medicine, viz.—the medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, peptonate or iron and beef peptone.

That is why Vinol is such a wonderful remedy for weak, run-down persons, feeble old people, delicate children, and to restore strength after sickness. Read this testimony.

—Savannah, Ga. "I was weak, nervous, run-down, had no appetite, and could not sleep. I had tried medicines without any benefit, and one day the nurse asked me to try Vinol. I did so and it made me feel like a new woman. It has restored my strength and I can do all my own housework. I would not take anything for the good Vinol has done me." Sarah White.

We return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit the purchaser. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

HAMS OF WESTPHALIA.

Processes by Which They Are Cured and Flavored.

The famous Westphalian hams, which are eaten without cooking, are cured by an elaborate process that has been worked out patiently and skillfully by generations of expert workmen.

After being rubbed thoroughly with a solution in which there are 100 pounds of salt to one pound of saltpeter, the hams are placed on cement floors, or in vats, and thickly strewn with salt. They lie under salt for two weeks and then pass to a vat that contains a 22 per cent solution of brine. They remain in that solution for eighteen days. Every day they are shifted in the vat; the hams on the bottom are brought to the top, and vice versa.

At the end of the eighteen days the hams are packed, one upon another, in a cool, dry cellar, where they remain for four weeks, in order to ripen—that is, to take on color and become tender. Then the salt is washed off with a stiff brush dipped in lukewarm water, and the hams are put to soak for twelve hours in fresh water. After that they are ready for the smokehouse.

The smokehouses are two or three stories high, with holes bored in the flooring. The fires are kindled on the ground floor, and the meat is hung on the second and third floors. The fires are made entirely of beech wood, but the workmen constantly throw juniper berries and juniper twigs on the embers. The fire burns brightly. It is checked with beech wood sawdust whenever it burns too briskly.

The smoking continues for about eight days. Under the ancient curing methods, however, the hams were often kept in the smoke rooms for six weeks, and it is by this latter method that the best hams are still made by the country folk of Westphalia.

WHAT A MAN READS.

A certain low form of aquatic animal life anchors itself to a rock and feeds on whatever the current brings. The average man feeds his mind in much the same way. He falls into line for current amusements. He reads only current literature. He listens to what happens to go by. He makes but little systematic attempt to shut out the unfit or to put himself in line for the fit.

The result is a defective grade of human life that rarely elevates society and often degrades it. If a man would make the most of himself, and that is manifestly the supreme purpose for which he was put into the world, it is worth his while to do his daily work where unclean things, mental and physical, are not made common.

It makes a good deal of difference in the worth of the man today as to whether his reading last night was "Hamlet" and "Isaiah" or "The Other Man's Wife," whether he went to the art institute or the burlesque show. An ancient teacher of well balanced mind gave this direction to his disciples as to the topics to be selected for deliberate thought:

"Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

To think on these things one must see and hear these things. To see and hear these things one must make an effort to do so.

Sunlight and Vegetation.

The early rays of the sun exercise a more powerful effect in promoting rapid vegetation than the sun's light during the later hours of the day. The active little chlorophyll grains work faster and better in elaborating food for the plant under the action of the blue and yellow rays of the early morning than under the later violet and blue rays. Practical gardeners should make use of this fact by growing early produce as far as possible in a position where the plants will get the full benefit of the morning sun.—London Mail.

Siberia.

Siberia comprises 5,100,000 square miles, divided into the following regions: Western Siberia, comprising the governments of Tobolsk and Tomsk and the territories of Semipalatinsk, Akmolinsk and Semiryechshensk; eastern Siberia, the governments of Irkutsk and Yeniseisk and the territories of Transbaikal, Amur, Yakutsk, the littoral and one-half of the island of Sakhalin.

Not Mercenary.

Suitor—The fact that I am asking you for the smaller one proves, at any rate, that I am not mercenary.—Chicago News.

He Knew.

"Aren't you going to listen to the vox populi, Senator Headstrong?"

"Vox populi, nothin'! What have these here secret orders ever done for me?"—Buffalo Express.

Outclassed by a Long Shot.

Little Wifey—Did you tell Mr. Blinks that the baby had cut his first tooth?

Big Hubby—It's useless. He has a hen which laid fourteen eggs in six days.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An even disposition is the best pillow on the sea of life.

WINDING THE CLOCK.

Follow This System and You May Get More Accurate Time.

You cannot secure the best services from a good watch or clock unless you know how to wind them so as to cause the least wear and irregularity in their delicate machinery.

A watch should be wound at the same time every day. If allowed to run down or even almost do so and then wound up until it will not wind any further it cannot do as perfect work as a watch that is not allowed to run to its full capacity or wound up until it is as tight as it can be made.

If a watch is wound both morning and evening at about the same hour and the key is given only enough turns to wind it a little less than half what it could be wound the watch will run more evenly, wear much longer and keep more accurate time than if it is wound up tight once a day.

A watch spring will last longer if it is wound when there is the least extreme of temperature, and morning and evening are, of course, the best in that respect.

It is more or less dangerous to wind a watch during a heavy electric storm, and it is best to avoid winding while on an electric car.

An eight day clock should be wound twice a week at as regular periods as possible to secure the best results. Never allow the clock to run down, and if possible do not wind it until it is tight.

Learn by experience just how many turns of the key it takes to wind the clock to run eight days and then when half of the week is gone wind the clock by giving the key just half as many turns as it would require to wind it all the way. More accurate time will be had and it will avoid placing any of the parts in a strain, which is frequently the cause of good clocks giving out in some particular before they have served half as long as they should.

A little attention to this advice will lengthen the life of any watch or clock and make it a better timepiece.

A FAMOUS MISER.

Cooke Died Wealthy After a Life of Petty Saving and Trickery.

Thomas Cooke, known as the "Islington miser," left at his death more than $300,000. His whole life was one of penury, petty saving and petty trickery. He made it a habit in order to get meals for nothing to fall in a pretended fit in front of a house at dinner time and on recovering he would naturally be invited to share the meal, which he always did after the proper amount of protestation. Often he would pretend to these kind people that they had saved his life, would make a great fuss over them and tell them he intended to remember them or their children in his will.

One man, a poor relation, occasionally sent him small presents of butter. This angered Cooke, who said to him: "Why send me such driblets, you who are to get thousands and thousands at my death? Send me a firkin." The firkin and several more were sent, but neither this legacy nor any of the others came to reality.

Like many men shrewd in petty ways, he was easily deceived in matters out of his own line. Thus once when his horse was sick he was too mean to pay a horse doctor and asked advice of a quack, who told him he must take thirty onions, drill a hole through each, put them on a string, put the necklace around the horse's neck and let it stay there. The expense of thirty onions was too much; he bought fifteen, and when, after many days, they had served their purpose, he took them to the servant and ordered her to make an onion porridge for the day's dinner.—Exchange.

Homemade Toothpowder.

An effective tooth powder which can be always recommended is made as follows: One ounce of precipitated chalk, half an ounce of carbonate of soda, half an ounce of powdered orris root. Mix well together and pass three times through a sieve. Place in a bottle or in tins until required for use. The carbonate of soda removes the grease from the teeth and prevents decay, and the powdered orris root keeps the gums healthy.

Proof In Hand.

"Those fish will cost you just $10 apiece," said the fish warden as he caught a disciple of Izaak Walton pursuing his sport out of season.

"Great!" exclaimed the fisherman, handing over the money. "Give me a receipt, please. Now the boys will have to believe me when I tell them what I caught."

"What is that class of girls doing?"

"Studying fossils."

"Well, I used to object to being called one, but I guess I'll own up to it now."

This is the 532nd day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

DARED BY MEXICO.

There are three excellent reasons why the United States should recognize the timeliness for intervention in Mexican affairs.

The first—and perhaps the most popular reason—is the natural resentment occasioned by the wholesale killing of Americans, the spirit of killing and the taunting message of the Villaists that they are bent upon a war of extermination.

This latest atrocity has stirred Canada more than usual because of the fact that a Canadian was also among the killed.

The second — and perhaps the least worthy of the three—is the fact that millions of dollars' worth of American, English and German properties are in need of protection such as only the American nation can give, with present world-wide conditions.

The third—and we reason the best of all, certainly the highest ground we may choose—is best summed up in the lamented McKinley's justification of the American policy in Cuba:

"It should be our duty to assist in every proper way to build up the waste places, encourage the industry of the peopleand assist them to form a government which shall be free and independent. There must be no thought of conquest or of permanent American overlordship."

This we believe about agrees with the common sentiment of the American nation.

President Wilson is playing politics and is basing his hope upon his record as a "Peace President," and to take a hand in the Mexican affair would take away his only hope of re-election.

The whole idea is quite obvious —and the politics contemptible.

STAGE FAVORITES.

We all have our especial favorites, and this is as true on the stage as it is in private life. You may like Mansfield; you may like Mantell, but every man has his favorites. Even critics are quite likely to be influenced by particular favorites.

Johnson Marshall, the great dramatic critic, one time sat in his dress circle seat, and next to him was his old friend Grey.

"What do you think of her?" asked Grey, who greatly admired the opinions of his friend.

"Rotten," said Marshall, promptly; "she doesn't even know the very element of elocution, and her exit in that second act was a tragedy. She went off as if she had a bulldog after her; now, didn't she? The part requires more repose of manner."

The party was a great success, and the hostess felt quite satisfied as she sat chatting to Johnson Marshall.

"I've got that new little actress coming along," she said, "Miss Verbena Folely. She ought to be here."

When Verbena Foley was shown in, her hostess introduced her to Marshall.

"Pleased to meet you," she said. "Thanks for your tip. I try to get off the stage gracefully now. I really was so nervous the first night, you know."

"I was a little severe, perhaps," he admitted.

"Not at all," she said promptly. "Your notice helped me. Everyone says I am much better in the part now. Come and see the show again tomorrow, will you?"

Now it had always been Mr. Marshall's boast that he never went to see a play a second time, but Miss Foley leant close to him, and Miss Foley was even prettier close to than on the stage, which is unusual.

"Well, if I've time," he said indulgently.

And so, Mr. Marshall toppled and fell.

It was the first night of a new comedy, and once again Mr. Marshall sat beside his friend Grey.

"It's a funny play," said Grey at last.

"Rather," said Marshall. "Perfectly delightful."

"You used not to care for Miss Foley's acting, did you?" Grey murmured. "I'm afraid she —"

"The finest actress on the English stage, bar none," said Marshall imperiously.

Grey looked at him curiously.

"I thought you never reversed your judgments, Marshall? Your notice of her in the other play—"

"She has improved," said Marshall positively, and with the air of one who will not admit of contradiction.

Grey has lost all respect for Marshall as a critic. He thinks a critic ought not to be human. Marshall is very human.

Nobody knows it better than Miss Foley, either.

As arule most of us are human, and although we try to be impartial, seldom do we succeed. Milton was supposed to be above flattery, yet when a friend told him that he had that reputation, Milton smiled as he responded "Is that so?"

PAPEN'S PAPERS.

There was good reason why Captain von Papen became so frantic over the seizure of his correspondence by the British authorities at Falmouth. The papers taken contain records of large payments of money, apparently to secret agents for unlawful acts.

The most conspicuous memorandum is a payment of $700 to Werner Van Horn, who for nearly a year has been held in custody while the United States authorities have been trying to decide what to do with him for blowing up the Vanceboro bridge. Van Horn's counsel triumphantly exclaims that this was a military act and that he cannot be punished for it.

If so, it was an act of war against the Government of the United States, for which both Van Horn and the German Government should be held to account.

The Poets' Corner

Get Into The Boosting Business

Do you know there's lots of people
Sitting 'round most every town,
Growling like a broody chicken,
Knocking every good thing down?
Don't be that kind of cattle,
'Cause they ain't no use on earth,
But just be a booster rooster,
Crow and boost for all you're worth.

If your town needs boostin boost her—
Don't hold back and wait to see
If some other fellow's willin—
Sail right in, this country's free,
No one's got a mortgage on it,
It's just yours as much as his;
If your town is shy of boosters,
You get in the boostin' biz.

If things don't seem to suit you
An' the world seems kinder wrong,
What's the matter with a boostin'
Just to help the thing along?
'Cause if things should stop a-goin,
We'd be in a sorry plight.
You just keep the horn a-blowin!
Boost her up with all your might.

If you see some fellow tryin'
For to make some project go,
An' you can boost it up a trifle,
That's your cue to let him know
That you're not going to knock it,
But that you're going to boost a little
'Cause he's got the best thing out.

Armand the Adorable.

Why should Armand Lavergne, M.P.P., strut and pose, and talk in the heroic guise of a traitor when Mr. Lavergne is only fitted to serve as a valet or barber to a real traitor?—Toronto Telegram.

Tories in Khaki.

General Sir Sam Hughes saw several of the members of parliament in khaki on the opening day of the session, so he rounded them up and told them about a fine recruiting meeting he was going to hold at Prescott. In his own nice way he ordered them to accompany him, and they all went to Prescott last night. It so happens that the members in khaki are all Conservatives. There are six of them: George H. Bradbury, an old Ottawa boy, Gerald V. White, a Pembroke boy, Dugald Stewart, H. B. Tremain, W. Ross Smyth, and George W. Fowler.—Ottawa Journal.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Daily Intelligencer, Jan. 17
1868

A fire consumed the barn of Mr. Thomas Oddie, 6th concession Seymour. One span of horses and a young colt perished in the flames.

The people of St. Thomas and St John's, West Indies, have voted for annexation to the United States. The vote was 1244 to 22.

Robbers entered the house of John Benninghoff, Titusville, Pa., and stole the sum of $100,000.

Keir Hardie's Rough Attire.

James Keir Hardie, the British labor leader, never relinquished his working class garb, and many were the occasions when his rough attire led to mistakes on the part of others. One story is that Keir Hardie, then many years an M. P., was challenged by a policeman outside the house of commons. The officer asked Mr. Hardie if he was working there. "Yes." "On the roof?" (which was undergoing repair). "No," answered the leader of the Independent Labor party, "on the floor." Another time a landlady refused to let him have rooms until he gave references. He looked too rough. The good woman was astonished when Mr. Hardie named a number of the most prominent men in parliament. He was arrested in Belgium once on suspicion of being in collusion with a notorious anarchist whom the police had detained. The Belgian police never could understand why a British M. P. was not elaborately attired.

How to Slay a Grudge.

"I forgave you once, and I won't forgive you again." This is what we heard one brother say to another who had unwittingly broken his chisel for the second time. He would not listen to an explanation. "You shall not use another of my tools," he continued. The next day he wanted to borrow a book from that brother. But before he asked for it he remembered he had said he would not lend his tools any more. He said to himself: "Well, I don't care if I did. He owes me something for breaking the tool, so I will just ask for the book." And he did. "Certainly you can have it and keep it as long as you want it," replied the brother without one bit of grudge in his heart. The effect was good, for the very next day he asked his brother to go with him into the tool room, and there he said, "You can use any of them if you wish, only please be careful not to break them." The grudge had disappeared.—Christian Herald.

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Retreating Through a City Is Disastrous to an Army.

If you suffer defeat in front of a great town and have to retreat through it under the blows of the victorious enemy you are in the worst possible position for conducting that retreat. The streets of the town (but few of which will run parallel to your course and can, therefore, serve as avenues of escape for your army) are so many defiles in which your columns will get hopelessly congested. The operation may be compared to the pouring of too much liquid into a funnel which has too small an orifice. Masses of your transport will remain clogged outside the place. You will run the risk of a partial and perhaps of a complete disaster as the enemy presses on.

There is very much more than this. A great town cannot but contain, if you have long occupied it, the material of your organization. You will probably abandon documents which the enemy should not see. You will certainly, in the pressure of such a flight, lose accumulated stores. Again, the transverse streets are so many points of "leakage" into which your congested columns will bulge out and get confused. Again, you will be almost necessarily dealing with the complications of a mass of civilian conditions which should never be allowed to interrupt a military operation.

In general, to fight in front of a great town when the chances are against you is as great an error as to fight in front of a marsh with few causeways. So far as mere topography is concerned, it is a greater error still.—From "The Elements of the Great War," by Hilaire Belloc.

Seville Nights.

In all the principal places and gardens of Seville moving picture screens are erected and small tables and chairs set out, the exhibitors either making their profits from the drinks sold or by rental of chairs at 2 cents each. Thousands of people go nightly, to the different plazas and gardens, and the entire life of the city for about four months centers around these moving picture shows.

Leakage In Steam Pipes.

To make a permanent cement for stopping leakage in steam pipes where caulking or plugging is impossible, mix black oxide of manganese and raw linseed oil, using enough oil with the manganese to bring it to a thick paste. Apply to the pipe or joint at leak. If the pipe be kept sufficiently warm to absorb the oil from the manganese, in twenty-four hours the cement will be as hard as the iron pipe.

"Oh, no, but she hopes the observer will strike an average between her age and that of her apparel."

Ribbon of the Garter.

The dark blue ribbon now worn by the Knights of the Garter was changed to its present shade from one much lighter in tone in the year 1622. The pictures of Charles I. by Vandyke always show the lighter shade.—London Mail.

Putting the Blame on Noah.

A tablet believed to be 4,000 or 5,000 years old and to antedate the book of Genesis by 1,000 years sets forth, according to the translation of Dr. Steven Langdon of Oxford university, England, that it was Noah and not Adam and Eve who brought about the fall of man. Noah was commanded not to eat of the cassia tree in the garden of paradise, the translation has it, and when he disobeyed the curse of ill health and an early death instead of a life span of 50,000 years like that of his ancestors, fell on him. According to Babylonian and Sumerian accounts, the flood occurred about 35,000 years before Christ, and the period between that catastrophe and creation—432,000 years—was filled in by ten kings, so that each must have ruled something like 43,200 years. The comparatively short reigns of later kings is explained as being the result of Noah's sin in eating of the cassia tree.

Legend of the Pearl.

The ancient inhabitants of India had a very pretty superstition concerning the origin of pearls. They believed that at certain seasons Buddha showered dewdrops upon the world, which the oyster, floating on the waters to breathe, received and held until they hardened and became pearls.

Business and Pleasure.

"We want to keep business out of politics," said the reformer.

CARE OF GOOD CLOTHES.

The Finer the Stuff the More Watchful One Should Be.

It is a very common mistake to believe that good materials, whether of cotton, silk or wool, need less care than cheap ones. How often does one complain of the lack of wearing quality in a garment for which a big price has been paid. Yet, most frequently, what has worn out the fabric has not been actual use, but the neglect it has suffered.

One of the principal differences between good and cheap materials is that the better grades are finer spun. This may mean that the fabric is stronger and, in proportion to the uses to which it is put, may wear longer, but it also means that each tiny thread by itself is weaker and more apt to injury. Anything which may attack the threads one by one, therefore, does more harm with fine goods than with coarse.

No matter how careful one may try to be, clothes that one wears gradually get a trifle of the grease from the perspiration of the body. In spite of constant watching clothes will become dusty. This combination of dust and body moisture forms a regular breeding ground for tiny little vegetable growths. These are so small that it takes the most powerful microscope even to see them.

In themselves these bacteria do but little harm, but many of them set free an acid which eats into the fiber of the material. If the individual fiber is coarse the deposit of the acid upon it is not enough to eat all the way through, but if it is sheer or woven of fine threads one by one the threads are eaten through and the texture weakened.

Good clothing, instead of being kept shut away in boxes and drawers, should be constantly aired and shaken. The finer the material the more often should it be looked after. A coarse piece of goods will wear out by using, a fine piece by being laid away

Finance.

His Sole Merit.

"You're a brute!" wrathfully exclaimed Mrs. Wrangle. "I know a thousand reasons why I'd hate to be you and only one reason why I'd like to be you."

"What is that one reason, madam?" frigidly demanded Mr. Wrangle.

"Because, sir, you have a good wife," she fired back at him.—

"I understand he inherited a fortune?"

"Yes; he was his rich uncle's only heir."

"I thought so."

"What do you mean?"

"Nobody who had more than one heir to choose from would have picked him to leave all his money to."

The Fault of Ridicule.

There is no character, howsoever good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, howsoever poor and witless. Observe the ass, for instance. His character is about perfect, he is the choicest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet see what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass we are left in doubt.—Mark Twain.

Military Spies.

One of the ingenious ideas of modern war strategy is to utilize artist skill in making a drawing of a fortification without betraying its purport on the surface. The spy makes a drawing which appears to be an ordinary landscape. If caught with it he might pose with comparative safety as an artist who had been sketching for pleasure and was entirely ignorant of the existence of any fort and its surroundings.

Interpreted according to a secret code, however, the picture reveals to the spy's government a fairly complete plan of a fort. This is indicated by the character and position of details. One kind of tree represents an armored gun turret. A bush is an observation turret. Other forms of trees are gun positions, a couple of gates are entrances to the fort, a piece of fencing is a barbed wire entanglement, lines of bushes are ditches, and so on.

EAST INDIAN IDOLS.

Some That Are Guarded and Saluted by British Troops.

In India a British guard of honor presents arms to a stone tiger every day. The tiger is regarded by the natives as a god who drives away all danger and calamity, and once some soldiers, in a spirit of mischief, overthrew the image from its resting place and sent it rolling into the valley below.

So snocked and scandalized were the natives that a revolt seemed imminent, and Lord Combermere quieted the outraged natives by restoring the image to its pedestal and ordering the regiment to salute it in full view of all. Since that time a British troop has kept watch over the tiger idol day by day.

Another Indian idol which is watched over by the British is the god whose name is Kiak Kiak, equivalent to "Lord of Lords," which is supposed to be asleep for 6,000 years and whose awakening will be the end of all things.

Hence the natives of the city of Pegu, in Burma, are terribly afraid that some one will arouse the god, so the British government, to avert trouble, stationed a sentry there to prevent this catastrophe.

Once a year a strange custom is observed in Cairo. A piece of carpet on which, according to tradition, Mahomet once sat and which is the most famous sacred relic of Islam, is carried through the streets, and the khedive and his troops all receive it in review order and salute it as they pass. The relic is guarded most carefully at ordinary times, and the officer in charge of it each morning must salute it with his sword raised, while the bugler blows three blasts before it. —Exchange.

Perpetual Motion.

Several people have had a shot at making something that would go on forever, like Tennyson's brook. And these have not all been cranks. A mechanician, for instance, made a top, which was balanced on diamond tips and spun in a vacuum, which ran for twelve months.

A Swiss watchmaker has invented an electric watch which will go for fifteen years without requiring to be rewound.

A watch and clock maker of Burton had in his possession an electric clock of his own making which has already gone twelve years and has never failed to record the time during that period, although it has never been rewound. He claims that the mechanism will last fifty years and that he would not be surprised if the clock ran uninterruptedly for a century.

Of course the possibilities of radioactivity are today only dimly known, but they may yet revolutionize all our notions of motion and energy and put even electricity out of court.

The Explanation.

"My dear," said Mr. Hemmandhaw, "I hope you are not planning to buy a lot of new furniture."

"I am not," replied Mrs. Hemmandhaw, "and I don't know what gives you the idea."

"This shopping list gives me the idea."

"What shopping list?"

"On this paper which I just picked up off the floor are written 'wash stand, parlor chairs, dining room table, writing desk, refrigerator, piano stool, pedestal, stepladder, cedar chest, music cabinet and garbage can.'"

"Oh, that is just a record I was keeping of the things the baby has fallen from this week.

How Climate Has Changed.

In Switzerland a mean temperature equal to that of north Africa at the present time is shown by its fossil flora to have prevailed during the miocene or middle tertiary epoch. Anthropoid apes lived in Germany and France; fig and cinnamon trees flourished at Danzig; in Greenland, up to 70 degrees of latitude, magnolias bloomed and vines ripened their fruit, while in Spitzbergen and even in Grinnell Land, within little more than 8 degrees of the pole, swamp cypresses and walnuts, cedars, limes, planes and poplars grew freely, water lilies covered over standing pools and irises lifted their tall heads by the margins of streams and river.

Sand Swept Asia.

In the arid lands of central Asia the air is reported as often laden with fine detritus, which drifts like snow around conspicuous objects and tends to bury them in a dust drift. Even when there is no apparent wind the air is described as thick with fine dust, and a yellow sediment covers everything. In Khotan this dust sometimes so obscures the sun that at midday one cannot see to read fine print without a lamp.

Where Scotland Joins England.

The width of the island of Great Britain at the point of contact between England and Scotland is about sixty miles. The river Tweed divides the two countries for a few miles at the east, and the Cheviot hills serve as a boundary for the greater part of the rest of the distance.

Quite So.

"What a shocking theory!"

SHRAPNEL SHELLS.

Various Types In Use and the Mass of Bullets They Carry.

Most nations are agreed that the three inch shrapnel is the most effective for killing men in modern warfare. The three inch type, which is almost universally used, contains from 210 to 360 half inch lead bullets, bunched together in the front part of the shell. A time fuse, which is made with the accuracy of a watch, is graduated in seconds and is set to explode at a given range as determined by the artillerymen.

The velocity of the shell may be gathered from the fact that it travels a mile in four seconds and within a quarter of a minute is four miles from the mouth of the gun. At any time during this rapid flight the shell can be made to explode with marvelous precision and deadly effectiveness, driving its bullets in a cone shaped shower down on the heads of the enemy.

A remarkable fact regarding these shells is that the velocity of the bullets when the shell explodes exceeds the velocity of the shell at the time of the explosion by from 250 to 300 feet per second, the bullets of a bursting shell covering a zone about thirty yards wide and 250 yards long.

Shrapnel shells used by different governments at the present time all operate on the same principle, but differ somewhat as to size and the arrangements of the fuse.—Pearson's Weekly.

Belgrade.

Belgrade, the capital of the kingdom of Servia, has gradually, for many years past, been losing its old Turkish aspect, becoming more modern, more European. The history of the city for nearly 1,000 years has been one of continual contests. The walls have disappeared since 1862; the last and finest of the five gates was demolished in 1868, and the citadel is not up to the requirements of modern warfare. The manufactures of Belgrade consist of arms, cutlery, saddlery, silk goods, carpets, etc. The chief buildings in the city are the royal and episcopal palaces, the government houses, the cathedral, barracks, bazaars, national theater and various educational institutions. The population is about 70,000.

What Interested Her.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, discussing the divorce evil, on one occasion said: "Love is the best foundation for marriage, of course. But common sense keeps it cool, and cool things, of course, keep the best. But selfishness kills all—and some married people are as selfish as the lady to whom the palmist said, 'These lines, alas, tell me that you are destined to wear widow's weeds.' 'Oh, dear me!' said the lady. 'For how long?'"

Strength of Oysters.

If a man, in proportion, had the strength of an oyster he could lift a locomotive with ease. With the muscles with which an oyster of good size holds its shell closed a weight of thirty-five pounds can be supported. A weight of more than six pounds is required to force apart the shell of a common mussel, and in the Mediterranean a clam exists that will support nearly 500 times its own weight—equivalent to a 150 pound man supporting more than thirty-six tons. These interesting facts have been brought to light by a series of experiments and investigations conducted by Felix Plateau, a Belgian scientist. Dr. Plateau has been measuring at the same time the strength of insects. Harnessed to a delicate weighing machine of special construction, the insects were prodded into attempts to escape while weights were added until any forward movement was rendered impossible. By such means the investigator learned, among other curious facts, that a bee, weight for weight, is thirty times as strong as a horse

Pink Pearls.

One of the most important industries of the Bahama islands is the gathering of pink pearls. It is the only place in the world where these pearls are found. They are not taken from the oyster shell, but from a shell resembling a large snail shell, called a "conch." These pearls when perfect bring very high prices.

The Member for Calais.

There was a time when Calais was represented in the English parliament. BERLIN, Jan. 15.—The Austrian official report dated Friday was received here today. It says: On the Bessarabian front the Russians have again attempted to break through near Toporarutz and east of Rariucze. Five great attacks have failed. Since the beginning of the battle in the east in Galicia and Bessarabia, the Austro-Hungarian forces of Generals Pflanzer, Baltin and Bothmer have taken 5,000 Russians including thirty officers. The Austro-Hungarian patrols routed the Russian Field Guards near Karpilovka. Montenegrin troops are in retreat in the south and west directions and are pursued by Austrians.

"Truth Dexter"

By

Truth lay on her bed, pale as the last honeysuckles that crowded at her window, and more sweet. The physician was long gone, and the siege of pain forgotten in the first mother's ecstatic cry, "I have gotten a man from the Lord!"

Aunt Big Mary, being celebrated for skill and knowledge in such crises, had been transferred from kitchen to sick-room, and now sat, small in person but imposing in dignity, by the low fire of pine-knots. A greenish concoction in a small granite saucepan simmered on the hearth, and gave out a pleasant odor of herbs, which mingled in natural affinity with other prevalent and characteristic smells—soap, damp flannel, and violet-powder. Truth's eyes had been carefully shielded from the fire, but they did not need external light. They were fixed, as it were, upon some vision of rapture dawning for her alone; a heavenly smile was set on her lips, and she seemed to listen to music. Indeed any intent ear could have heard the sound, a weak, thin, irregular breathing that rose from a cocoon of white flannel close against her arm. What a sound is that! Not all the trumpeting of earth's victorious armies is more mighty, or the song of dying violets more sweet! The first cry may torture and tear the heart with memories of a thousand vanished pangs of motherhood; but the rythym of the sweet, consenting sleep that follows—that is the true music of the spheres!

Mrs. Dexter entered on tip toe, closing the door with painful care. Unsoftened by the precaution Big Mary frowned, and lifted a threatening hand. Her beady eyes expressed a question. Mrs. Dexter must have understood, for she nodded.

The nurse stooped for one more stir to her concoction on the hearth, then walked toward the bed, Mrs. Dexter following meekly, and stood scowling importantly upon her charges.

"How is you now, Miss Troof?" she demanded, with a sort of suppressed ferocity that would have daunted the uninitiated.

"I never felt better in my life!" said Truth. "I am dying to take him down into the garden this minute and show him to the roses."

The cocoon stirred, groaned, and then sneezed, as if in indignation. "Bress his heart!" cried the nurse, her stately manner melting like wax before that sound, "did dey talk about takin' hit into de cold world, an' hit skeercely rested from Heaven? Nebber min'! Hit's mammy will look after her lamb!" She turned the bundle over to the other side, Truth watching the operation with a distressed frown. "I ain't calkerlatin' ter have one side er its head like a climbin' squash an' de yother like a hive o' bees, ef you an' Miss Dolly is," she said indignantly, in answer to the frown.

Mrs. Dexter waited to hear no more, but stole, laughing, from the room.

Aunt Big Mary, still grumbling, caught up a bit of flannel here, a brush there, as if in anticipation of a guest; but before Truth had time to wonder the door opened again and the tall figure of a man came slowly into the firelight.

Truth flung her off. "It is Van!" she cried in a voice that burst through the shadows like a star.

She heard heard one great sob; Aunt Big Mary sped from the room, and Van was kneeling by the bed, weeping out his heart on his young wife's pillow.

An hour later, when the baby had been soothed and apologized to for the unwarranted disturbance, Van was allowed to come in again, this time escorted in state by Mrs. Dexter.

"Isn't he just the beautifullest thing you ever saw?" asked Truth, warily elongating the tiny aperture at the exposed end of the cocoon.

"I haven't had a good look yet," responded Van, evasively.

"Why, here,—you can see him perfectly! There's his whole face, nose, eyes, mouth and all!"

"I presume that—er—button—may become a nose some day!"

"You sha'n't see him another minute!" said Truth indignantly, and brought the edges of the shawl together.

"Good Gawd! You gwineter smother my chile!" shrieked Big Aunt Mary. "Miss Troof, you ain't got no mo' notion er takin' keer o' dat baby dan a jay-bird has o' pickin' his teeth!"

"But, Van," began Truth, when the disturbance was quelled and the nurse pacified, "how on earth did you get here? How did you — know?" Her pale face became crimson.

"He's been in Montgomery a week!" cried Mrs. Dexter, before Van could answer.

"And such a week!" groaned Van. "I read enough magazines and trashy novels to soften the brains of Solon, not to mention the strain on my nerves."

"Oh," said Truth in a low voice, "and you were that near!" Her pretty confusion deepened.

Van laughed, and a moment later drew from his pocket several yellow envelopes. "Do you care to hear your congratulations, Mrs. Craighead?"

"Congratulations!" echoed Truth. "Who could send them? Does anybody else know?"

"Why, of course! What do you expect? A man can't keep news like this all to himself. There would be danger of bursting!"

"Well, I never!" ejaculated Truth, and lay back on her pillow, quite exhausted. Mrs. Dexter crept to the bedside, and held Truth's hand while the messages were being read.

"Here's the first," said Van. "Drat the boy! How's Truth?"

"Father!" exclaimed Truth. "Isn't it exactly like him? That one doesn't need a signature."

"None of them do, I fancy," remarked Van. "Here's the second. 'Rah-rah-rah-Harvard! Remember, I am his godfather! How is Truth?'"

"Quin!" cried Truth with shining eyes.

"Now who sent this one? 'God bless Truth and her boy! How is the little mother?'"

"My dear, dear Mrs. Adams!" whispered Truth, her eyes filling with tears.

The little group fell into silence Only the baby's irregular breathing marked off the sweet, flying moments. The sound of a distant whippoorwill, twice repeated, came faintly, like the echo of a vanishing regret.

Mrs. Detxer roused herself with a start.. "Night is coming in! You have had too much excitement for one day already, my darling. Now we must leave you and the little one to Aunt Mary."

"Oh, just one moment!" pleaded Truth. "Just one—alone with Van."

Mrs. Dexter looked appealingly toward the nurse. The old woman nodded grim assent, and followed her mistress from the room. The two stood, whispering together in low tones, just without the door.

Mrs. Dexter did not look into Van's face as he came out, but before she knew it he had flung both arms about her, without a word, and was straining her against her breast.

"My son!" she whispered, "my own dear son!"

Night came down over the Big House, and darkness was everywhere except in the wide, softly shaded room where slept Truth and the cocoon.

The End..

OUR YOUNG WOMEN

are so often subject to headache—are languid, pale and nervous—because their blood is thin or insufficient. They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. They do not need drugs—but do need the tonic and nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that makes richer blood, fills hollow cheeks, suppresses nervousness and establishes strength. Nourishment alone makes blood and Scott's Emulsion is the essence of concentrated nourishment, free from wines or opiates.

If mother or daughter is frail, pale or nervous, give her Scott's for one month and see the betterment. It has a wholesome, "nutty" flavor. Avoid substitutes. At any drug store.

A FIND ON THE BEACH

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

The Palawan islands, in the China sea, are to the north of Borneo and form a part of the Philippine group. They stretch out for a distance of 700 miles and number nearly a thousand In the year 1882 I was landed on one of the Palawans from a Singapore trader to get up and run a copra plant. I had with me four Chinese, and the trader landed provisions for a year.

Nothing of special interest occurred until I had been on the island three months. Then one morning as I went down to the boat to go on a fishing trip I was amazed to find tracks of a woman's bare feet on the wet sands.

Whoever had visited our island in the darkness had come up out of the depths of the sea. No boat or raft had landed on the shore. The footprints were as plain as a plaster cast, and we were immediately interested and more or less excited. After thinking the matter over I decided that the woman must have come from one of two islands north and south and determined to give both a search. I set off to the north and in the course of an hour made a landing. This island had an area of not more than five acres. I went over it carefully, but not a living thing did I find.

It was noon when I got back to my own island, and after dinner I set out to search the other. As this one had more vegetation I took with me a boy, who was about fifteen years of age and named Whang.

It was near sunset when we put off after a vain search, and when we reached the reef surrounding our island and a half a mile out from the beach, the evening breeze died out to a flat calm, and we lay like a log. Before taking to the oar to scull us into the shore I sat quiet for a minute listening to the whispers of the sea. Whang leaned over the rail of the boat and watched the sharks darting to and fro and leaving trails of fire behind them, and things were so still that I could hear the ticking of my watch, when there came a strange interruption. It was the voice of a woman in laughter, and it sounded close by. We both sprang up at the sound, wondering if our ears had deceived us, and as we stood listening the sounds came again. When they had died away the boy turned to me and whispered:

"Master, let us get ashore at once! There is a witch of the sea close by, and she will drag us down!"

I waited ten minutes, and, hearing nothing more, I picked up the oar and sculled in to the landing. There I found the three Chinamen waiting for me, and they were in a state of great excitement. They had heard the laughter, and they believed with the boy that a witch of the sea was hanging about and meant to do us harm.

I simply contented myself with saying that we would leave some provisions on the beach that night and see if they were missing in the morning and with sleeping with one eye open to see that the frightened fellows did not steal the boat and make off to some other island.

We were down on the beach when daylight came, and there were fresh tracks again. The woman had circled about the heap of provisions, but had touched nothing. The Chinese were absolutely knocked out with consternation, and only my promise to watch the beach that night and capture or shoot the witch calmed them down. I remained with them all that day to prevent them from plotting, and it was not until midnight that I took up my watch on the shore.

It was low tide at 2 o'clock. I was concealed behind a heap of brush, and it was a starlight night. At that hour a figure which looked like a human being came out of the gentle surf and began to walk up and down the beach. As it walked away from me I rose up and went forward on tiptoe and was within thirty feet of it when it caught the alarm and fled back to the water like a shadow. I heard an exclamation of alarm and splashes in the water and saw the wake as the "it" swam away. I had meant to keep cool, but the sight of the figure excited me, and its escape when I figured on capture added to it, and so, hardly knowing what I did, I drew one of my revolvers and began firing as the swimmer moved away. I fired six shots, but I heard no cry of pain or other sound.

I went back to the Chinamen and found them chattering in terror, and if they had not been afraid of the witch they would have made a rush for the boat and left me alone on the island I sat watching them till daylight came, and then we all went down to the beach. The tide was coming in, but we found tracks as before. While we were hurrying about, arguing and discussing, the tide brought in the naked limb and foot of a woman, a white woman. It had been torn from the body by the sharks, and it was the foot which had made the tracks in the sand. One of my shots had struck and killed her as she swam away, and the blood had brought the savage sharks to the attack. There lay the limb before us, with the flesh hard and firm, though showing a bruise here and there. But no other part of the body came ashore. To whom the limb had belonged, how she had been cast away there, where she was hiding, why she did not seek our protection—none of these questions can I answer. We buried the limb in the sands and heard no more of the nymph of the sea.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

ACTION OF PEROXIDE.

It Cleanses a Wound, but Does Not Aid in the Healing Process.

"It would be well for people to understand what peroxide of hydrogen will do and what it will not do," remarked a dentist just after extracting two old roots on which a large abscess had formed. "It is one of the best, if not the very best, antiseptics we have, but it has no healing qualities. Many people imagine that it will heal a sore place in the mouth, yet that is just what it will not do.

"I have just injected peroxide and water into the cavities in the gums from which I extracted those roots. I did that to destroy the pus that had been left behind by the abscess, for that is the use of peroxide. It unites chemically with the pus and kills the germs that make it. But this is all that it does. And if you continue to use it you will retard the healing instead of hastening it. Peroxide, improperly used, has injured almost as many mouths as it has benefited. The sore place in your mouth is clean now, and all it needs is something to keep it clean while nature heals it. Peroxide will not do that—in fact, it will retard it."

The dentist then prescribed a healing wash. There are many such on the market, but any one having a tooth pulled is foolish to select his own.

The First Canal Builder.

General Goethals is the latest canal builder to achieve fame, but he has had many predecessors, and the earliest so far as is known was one Naram-Sin, who nearly 5,000 years ago opened a canal from Nippur to the Euphrates. This was discovered by Dr. George A. Barton in deciphering some of the ancient Sumerian tablets at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. He found a tablet dated "the year when the divine Naram-Sin opened the mouth of the canal Erin at Nippur." This was not an Irish canal, so far as is known, but it was a great event in the history of Nippur, which gave it transportation facilities with the rest of the world. Naram-Sin was a king of Babylonia, and he is responsible only for financing the canal, and slaves probably did the work.

Disraeli as a Turk.

At one period of his life Disraeli had decided leanings toward the life of a Turk, "very much confirmed by my residence in Turkey." And the Turkish grandee who told him that he must be one of the eastern race "because he walked so slowly" won Dizzy's heart at once.—London Standard.

Two Distant Suns.

The nearest star to the earth is, as far as known at present, Alpha Centauri, in the southern hemisphere. It is a double star, consisting of two suns, each about as massive as our sun and slightly brighter, revolving around each other in a period somewhat more than eighty years at a mean distance apart of about 1,000 million miles.

But the orbit is so eccentric that at one point in the revolution the two suns are not farther apart than the distance between Jupiter and our sun, while at the opposite point they are nearly as far apart as the distance of Uranus from the sun. Thus the two suns in Alpha Centauri rush around their common center of gravity, now sweeping nearer to each other and now farther apart, all their evolutions being performed within a circuit much smaller than that of the solar system.

The Old Year Out and the New Year In

By EDITH V. ROSS

The celebration of New Year's day in New York has necessarily changed with the people who celebrate it. It was transplanted to New Amsterdam from Holland when a few houses clustered about the fort and every person in the village knew every other person. That was a fit community for making calls. When the people of New York had grown from hundreds to millions the custom broke down of its own weight.

How far back dates the custom of seeing the old year out and the new year in is not known. Certain it is that one night in New Amsterdam—Dec. 31—Hendrick, the watch, after calling the hour "Twelve o'clock and all's well," turned to walk to the next corner to repeat the announcement, when he saw the house of Killian van Gansback in a blaze of illumination from fully a dozen wax candles. Hammering with the great iron knocker, the upper half of the door was opened, and he saw a number of Dutch girls in many petticoats and young men in many pairs of breeches raising pewter mugs to drink in Holland gin to St. Nicholas, the patron saint of the town, "May he grant us a prosperous year."

"What means this invasion of the night when all good citizens should be sound asleep in bed?" he cried. "Disperse!"

The moment it was noticed that the intruder upon the festivities was the watch every light was blown out and there was a scattering of the revelers. Bolts were shot, and in a few minutes the rooms on the ground floor were locked and the great front door was barred.

At that time Katrina Van Gansback was at a marriageable age, and her father had decided to wed her to old Dedrick Beekman, more than twice as old as she. Her mother was dead, and she had been brought up under the care of her aunt, Anneke Ten Eyck, a spinster of fifty. During the festivities on that eventful night the aunt drew Beekman into a side room for the purpose of arranging the settlement he was to make upon her niece and to appoint a day for the wedding.

Katrina was not only opposed to marrying old Beekman, but had a lover in young Wouter Ten Broeck, and the young couple were at their wits' end to find a way to defeat Anneke Ten Eyck's plan for marrying Katrina to Beekman. During the evening of the old-new year conviviality Katrina stood at the door listening to the arrangements that were being made to dispose of her. The moment the company were gone and the lights were put out she turned the key on her aunt and Beekman and led her father, who was feeble, up to his room and put him to bed.

A loud knocking came from below, but as the only persons in the house, except the couple locked in below, were Katrina and her father, and the latter was deaf as the stone steps in front of the house, their ability to get out depended solely on Katrina. When she had seen her father in bed and well covered, especially about the ears, she went out, closing the door behind her, and descended to the room where the prisoners were still hammering to be freed.

"Who's there?" asked the minx, pretending ignorance.

"Your Aunt Anneke. Let me out at once."

"Any one else?"

"Yes; Meinheer Beekman is in here with me."

"Oh, auntie, what a talk this will cause!"

"No scandal at all unless you blab."

"My keeping the secret will do no good. You and Meinheer Beekman must be married."

"I don't want to marry Meinheer Beekman, and I do want to marry Wouter Ten Broek."

There was no reply to this for some time. Evidently the parties within were consulting as to what it was best to do. Whether the woman refused to marry the man or the man refused to marry the woman was never known. At any rate, after a conference the aunt returned to the attack, or, rather, persuasion, telling her niece of the advantages she would enjoy as the wife of Meinheer Beekman, who was the largest dealer in pelts in New Amsterdam.

But Katrina was not to be persuaded, and her aunt was at last obliged to consent to her terms. No written pledge was required, for Katrina needed only to tell the story to set the tongues of the town wagging about her aunt and Meinheer Beekman.

As soon as an agreement was reached Katrina unlocked the door, and Meinheer Beekman, taking down the bars to the front door, stole away in the darkness. The next day the betrothal of Katrina and Wouter Ten Broek was announced.

Katrina kept the secret till after her aunt had been dead some years, then told it to her daughter, who was about to be married. The daughter handed it down, and it is preserved in the archives of the family to this very day.

However, the story does not prove that the Dutchmen of New Amsterdam were in the habit of seeing the old year out and the new year in, else the watch would not have broken up the party.

HER LOVE AND FROGS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The Swamp farm, as it was called, was situated four miles out of Dayton and was owned by the Widow Bliss.

The tin peddler, the sewing machine agent, the book canvasser, the patent right man and many others who came that way saw, admired and were ready to love the owner of the Swamp farm. She admitted to herself that it might be better if she had a good husband, but she had a "nay" for all these men except one. He was a Mr. William Burton. He was a man just about her age and ranked as an old bachelor. Mr. Burton didn't begin as most of the others had. He had the sense to admire the widow without telling her that he admired.

Mr. Burton could talk of soils, crops, swamps, the weather and a hundred other things and never let a hint fall that he intended some day to talk of love and matrimony. The widow mentally pitied him for this, and yet she felt a bit piqued.

Mr. Burton was a surveyor, and his duties called him into the neighborhood of the Swamp farm about once a week. He could probably have made it once in two weeks and perhaps once in four, but it's none of our business. Along about Wednesday in every week the widow would look out of the front door and see Mr. Burton surveying or pretending to. He would look up by accident and see her standing there and would be invited in to drink a glass of fresh buttermilk.

This thing had gone on for a long, long time when he called one day, not to survey her garden, but to sit in the house and talk.

"Widow, I have been coming here a long time," he began.

"And it has tired you out?" she laughed in reply.

"Not a bit. I came today to ask you to be my wife."

"Mr. Burton," replied the widow, "I made up my mind about this marriage question quite a long time ago. I shall marry the man who can tell me how to make money out of my old swamp. When I am sure that he has told me right he may bring in the preacher."

"That old swamp has been a bleak spot for fifty years," he said after a time. "By the way, you don't own all the swamp, do you?"

"No. There's twenty-eight acres of it that belong to Mr. Cooper, but he can't do anything more with his part than I can with mine."

Mr. Burton walked down to the edge of the swamp and back again, and then he sat down and took his head in his hands and thought and thought. By and by he looked up with a bright smile on his face and said:

"Mrs. Bliss, I have got it. I have solved the problem. You are to turn that swamp into a frog farm!"

"Gracious me, but whoever heard of such a thing?" she exclaimed.

"Lots of folks have heard of it. There are half a dozen men in this state who are raising frogs for the market and making a heap of money out of it."

"But I never heard of any one selling frogs," persisted the widow. "Would any one in Dayton eat a frog, much less buy one?"

"Not in Dayton," he laughed, "but in New York. They are on the bills of fare at most hotels and restaurants and are considered a great delicacy. They eat only the hind legs."

It was a week later that men and boys called at the Swamp farm with pails and baskets and paper bags.

When the widow had bought 600 big and little frogs and paid out so much money that she had to let her taxes slip by she went down to the swamp one morning to have a look at her "live stock."

Not a frog was in sight this morning, not a big one or a little one. That swamp was absolutely without life.

The widow ran back to the house and arrived there just a minute before Mr. Burton appeared.

"I—I was going to send for you!" she gasped.

"What has happened?" he asked.

"Every frog has disappeared!"

"You don't say?"

"Come along and see for yourself."

He walked along down to the swamp with her, and she heard him chuckling as he walked. Instead of looking over the swamp to see if he could solve the problem he sat down on a log and began to laugh.

"What do you mean, Mr. Burton?" was almost demanded.

"I was to tell you how to make money out of this old swamp."

"Yes, you said you could, but it seems you have only shown me how to lose money instead."

"You are wrong, widow—you are wrong," said Mr. Burton. "You see, there were twenty-eight acres which you didn't own. I bought them. When you had 600 frogs on your side of the swamp I threw a lot of frog food in on my side. Last night your 600 came over the line. They are now my property."

The widow looked at him with mingled amazement and indignation.

"Oh, don't look that way," he laughed. "I am now going to tell you how you may make the money."

"How—how"—she stammered.

"Why, marry the man who owns the 600 frogs," he replied.

And after about a month she did. She not only made money out of the frog farm, but she got a good husband besides, and that is something that money cannot buy.

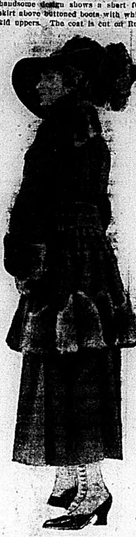
Woman's World

A STUNNING TAILLEUR.

Of Richest Materials, This Suit Speaks the Last Word.

Developed in navy broadcloth, this handsome design shows a short full skirt above buttoned boots with white kid uppers. The coat is cut on Russian lines, and around the bottom of the full peplum runs a band of muskrat fur pointed at the top. Deep collar and cuffs of this same fur give the rich finish, and the velvet hat is set off with small ostrich feathers.



REAL DISTINCTION.

A Thanksgiving Cue.

Candle shades are made for Thanksgiving decoration by painting fruit designs on paper and cutting away the spaces between the patterns. Designs in which the stems and leaves form a trelliswork should be used, and the more cutting out the scheme admits of the better. The frame chosen is the simple style in which there are two circles, a smaller above a larger, and in which the shade has a flat surface and sloping sides. The wire is then covered with thin silk gathered to both edges, the color being chosen to contrast prettily or to harmonize with the fruit scheme. Lattice designs are good, and plums, peaches, oranges and the grapes are painted to trail all over latticework. Flowers, such as pansies, wistaria, peonies, roses and chrysanthemums, are painted in brilliant and natural colorings, and the stems are twined in and out to form the intersections.

A pretty idea is to match the shade decoration in the flowers of the centerpiece, using glass candlesticks and setting the center one into a great mass of the flowers, which are so arranged as to bank around it without vase or bowl being visible. Chrysanthemums in red and white and yellow shades make a lovely combination, in which the lining can be of the lighter color and the most of the outer decoration in the dark.

The painting is done with water colors, but when this is too laborious a process wall paper can be used and can be found in many latticed patterns which are even more effective than the water colors.

Sun Baths.

Prolonged exposure of the human body to bright sunlight for those not accustomed to its rays is dangerous.

The damage is more than the sunburn which results, for physicians have shown that headache and symptoms of meningitis have developed after youths under their observation have been sitting or lying several hours in the sunlight with unprotected heads.

Sun baths are most popular with anemic and nervous city indoor workers, but too much sun is apt to harm the nerve system of nervous people.

Instead of being benefited by long exposure to the sun the nervous are rendered more nervous. No one welcomes more than the physician the "back to nature" tendency of recent years, but they are now being careful to warn against excesses and abuses in the "enjoyment of nature."

Adequacy.

"Bobby," inquired the mother, "did you wash your face before the music teacher came?"

"Yes'm."

"And your hands?"

"Yes'm."

"And your ears?"

"Well, um," said Bobby judicially, "I washed the one that would be next to her."—Ladies' Home Journal.

IN AT THE FINISH.

For Her Who Makes Her Clothes, but Doesn't Look It.

The woman who sews well often does not undertake to make her own clothes, simply because she knows that it is impossible for her to give them the proper finish. But if once she can master a few details of finishing even the woman who does not sew well will dare to undertake a new frock or blouse of pretentious fashion.

At the trimming and plaiting shops, under whatever name they go, it is possible to get various sorts of dainty finishes made. Machine hemstitching for cuffs and collars and hems, picot edges, plaiting of all sorts, shirring and cording, all these are done for reasonable sums, and often a bit of such finishing goes a long way toward giving the right air to a homemade frock.

But the woman of ingenuity can do many things herself to give her frocks the right style. For one thing she can substitute a dainty finish for a picot edge. This is used along the edge of flounces and frills with good effect. Simply roll the edge in a tiny roll and whip it over and over, evenly but not specially close together, with strong thread of a matching or contrasting shade.

A net lining for the bodice of a silk frock is easy to make. Again it is the finishing that counts. The neck part should be cut a little lower than the neck of the silk and edged with a very narrow bit of valenciennes lace. The front should be closed with ball and socket snaps and the armholes should be edged with the lace.

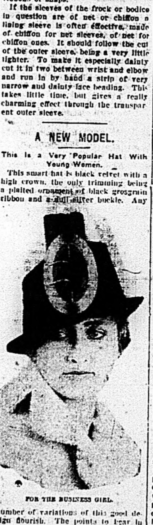
When there is a transparent bodice or vest a little underbodice or part of one should be fastened under it. For a transparent vest the underbodice need be no more than a piece of chiffon or net that reaches from the waist to the chest, gathered or shirred to the belt of the bodice and daintily shirred at the top, edged perhaps with narrow lace and fastened together either with ribbons or snaps.

If the sleeves of the frock or bodice in question are of net or chiffon a lining sleeve is often effective, made of chiffon for net sleeves, of net for chiffon ones. It should follow the cut of the outer sleeve, being a very little lighter. To make it especially dainty cut it in two between wrist and elbow and run in by hand a strip of very narrow and dainty lace beading. This takes little time, but gives a really charming effect through the transparent outer sleeve.

A NEW MODEL.

This Is a Very Popular Hat With Young Women.

This smart hat is black velvet with a high crown, the only trimming being a plaited ornament of black grosgrain ribbon and a dull silver buckle. Any number of variations of this good design flourish. The points to bear in mind are a high crown and narrow brim, with an upstanding front trimming set perpendicularly.



FOR THE BUSINESS GIRL.

Make Your Own Fernery.

You can have success with grapefruit seeds by taking a few precautions. When planting these seeds do not keep any that have been cut. Then before planting the seeds should be soaked for one day or at least for half a day.

Fill the receptacle up to within three-quarters of an inch of the top with dirt mixed with a little sand, on which place the seeds so thickly that no soil can be seen.

Then cover with dirt and keep in a warm, sunny place, wetting with warm water, but not too wet.

The seeds sprout in about five weeks. They are both beautiful and hardy and need practically no attention.

What His Wife Thinks.

"Yes, indeed. She can't understand why a man of my refinement should want to associate with a man like you."—Detroit Free Press.

DOING GOOD.

There is one thing that can never turn into suffering, and that is the good we have done.—Maeterlinck.

THE FAMILY BUDGET.

The Wisdom of Settling on a Family Financial Program.

The young married man must, to be successful, outline some sort of financial program. He must, after careful consideration, decide upon the family budget. Next to the budget, or in most cases of even greater importance, is protection. It is the sacred duty of every married man to provide this protection. Should one remain lax and improvidential one may have cause to regret.

Therefore when one has selected the wife, or perhaps one has already done so, it is the duty to announce the family budget, and the first and most important part of the budget is the protection fund—life insurance.

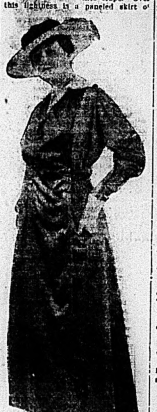
Life insurance is the greatest institution for systematic saving there is, and it has more adherents by several millions than the savings banks.

A depositor in a savings bank makes a deposit and may intend to make more. But a man taking a life insurance policy makes a definite financial plan for years ahead, if not for life. He may forget to make his deposit in the savings bank next year, but the man who takes out the life insurance will be reminded of his obligation.

A PRINCESS EFFECT.

A Smart Afternoon Gown Suitable For Young Women.

The bodice of this one piece dress is georgette crape of a wistaria shade over shadow lace. The cuffs are banded, and the collar is white crape. Over this lightness is a paneled skirt of pussy willow satin in a deeper shade of wistaria, with a demi belt fastened by novelty buttons. The purple velvet hat that goes with this frock is faced with white satin.



AN ATTRACTIVE DESIGN.

Delicious Meat Patties.

To make these delicious additions to school or office luncheon there are required one pound of flour, half a pound of lard or dripping, half a pound of raw beef or mutton or six ounces of veal and two of ham, one egg, salt and pepper, a tablespoonful of baking powder and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Cut the meat into small dice. Mix it with the parsley, salt, pepper and a little stock, water or gravy. Mix together the flour, baking powder and a teaspoonful of salt. Rub the lard or dripping finely into the flour. Mix to a paste with cold water. Work it lightly on a floured board into a smooth ball; then roll it out to about an eighth of an inch thick. Stamp it into rounds with a cutter a size larger than the patty tins.

After greasing the tins line each with a round of pastry, put a good spoonful of meat in the middle. Damp the edges of a second round with water, lay this over the tin, press the edges together and crimp them neatly.

Brush the top of each patty with beaten egg or a little milk. Bake them in a moderate oven for about three-quarters of an hour.

Unconscious Versification.

Among examples of unconscious versification the one cited below should be noted as being probably the best on record. Many imaginative writers become lyrical, inspired by the beauty of their subject or by the mere harmony of words reacting on their imagination, but the following lines, which might be a stanza from "In Memoriam," are from a solemnly prosaic textbook on the "Parallelogram of Forces," by, I fancy, Sir David Brewster:

And hence no force, however great,
Can draw a cord, however fine,
Into a horizontal line
Which shall be absolutely straight.

The Best That Could Be Done Under the Circumstances

By F. A. MITCHEL

Margaret Brierley was brought up by a couple of maiden aunts, sisters, who were well off and intended that after their death Margaret should have their belongings. These were in part a comfortable house and grounds in the village, in which they lived. Margaret proved an apt scholar and was graduated with honor. Since life with her aunts was very dull she yearned for something livelier. After a year of "sitting around holding her hands," as she expressed it, she determined to go to the city to teach.

Her aunts combated her resolution. They reminded her that they had cared for her since she was an infant, educated her and given her everything she wanted. All in vain. One morning when Aunt Sarah went into her room to awaken her the bird had flown.

Three years passed, during which there was no communication between the aunts and the niece. Margaret was getting on well as a teacher when she fell ill. Having no means to provide a substitute for her school duties, she was dropped from the salary roll. Then the poor girl began to regret that she had yielded to the impulse to be independent. Nothing remained for her but to go back to her aunts and ask their forgiveness and help.

Taking advantage of a slight rally, she spent her last funds for a railway ticket to her former home. She arrived at the house as darkness was falling. How comfortable everything looked! There were the dainty white house, the porch and lattice covered with vines, the flower garden to one side, the kitchen garden in the rear, the whole inclosed by the low picket fence. She went as fast as her condition would permit up the walk, opened the door and entered. All was still.

"Aunt Elizabeth!" she called, with no reply.

"Aunt Sarah!" Still no answer.

She went through the house, but found no one. Thinking that her aunts had gone out, she took off her wraps and sat down in the living room before the open fireplace, in which were live coals.

Presently she heard the front door open and shut. She arose, intending to greet her aunts. Instead a young man entered. Seeing her, he paused.

"Where are my aunts, Misses Elizabeth and Sarah Stacey?"

"Are you Margaret Brierley?"

"I am."

"Miss Elizabeth died a few months ago, and Miss Sarah followed her in two weeks."

Margaret sank back in her chair and covered her face with her hands. It was some time before she spoke again; then she said:

"Who lives here now?"

"I do. I am Roger Blackmore, a distant connection of the two ladies. They made me their heir."

"What shall I do?" moaned Margaret, forgetful of the presence of another.

"Have you not been successful?"

"I am ill and without a cent in the world."

"You are welcome to remain here as long as you like. I will leave you and send some one to take care of you."

"What claim have I on you?"

"I will show you."

Going to a desk, he took out a paper and handed it to her. It was the will of her aunts, leaving all they possessed to him. There was a clause stating that if their beloved niece, Margaret Duncan, ever returned in need it was their desire that the said Roger Blackmore should relieve her wants. She looked up at the heir.

"How can you relieve the wants of a woman near your own age without"—

"I think your aunts were mindful of that."

"Then why this request?"

"Perhaps they fancied"—

"What?"

"That we might pool our issues?"

"Pool our issues! What do you mean?"

"Marriage."

Margaret made no reply to this. She felt that she would be willing to marry Polyphemus for a home and rest. Presently she arose slowly and with difficulty.

"Where are you going?" asked Blackmore.

"I don't know. I can't stay here."

He went to her and gently forced her back in her chair. "The good ladies," he said, "told me that if you failed in your work they would be glad if you and I could occupy their old home and enjoy their income together."

Margaret sat silent for awhile, then looking up at him, said:

"As for me, I can do nothing else. It remains for you to decide whether or no you care to accord with the wish expressed."

Without reply he left her and went to the telephone booth. She heard him ask: "Is the Rev. Mr. Stark at home? Tell him to come to the Stacey place immediately." Then, returning to her, he said: "You can't leave here in your present condition. If I permitted you to do so your aunts would turn in their graves. You can't stay here alone, and I can't stay with you without scandal. You'll have to take my unworthy self. It's hard luck for you, but it can't be helped."

She put out her hand to him, and he bent down and kissed her.

The parson came, and all was well.

A Worse Place Than Up In the Air

By JOHN Y. LARNED

One evening at a social gathering I was introduced to a young woman—a widow—whose expression on meeting me was, to say the least, surprising. There were recognition, astonishment, pleasure, all mingled with something like wonder. It occurred to me at once that I must have met one with whom I had been connected in the past. My assurance is by no means of a low order, and I determined not to assume the defensive.

"Can it be," I hazarded, "that I have met a friend of my youth?"

"No."

"I have it. We were in Switzerland together last summer."

"We were not."

"Strange," I said, assuming a thoughtful tone and expression, "that I should remember a person distinctly and yet cannot call up the circumstances"—

"I don't believe you remember having met me at all."

I smiled and confessed that I did not.

"Never mind where we met," she said, pouting.

"It wasn't up in the clouds sailing in aeroplanes, was it?"

"Worse."

"Upon my word, you speak in riddles! Please explain."

The lady changed the subject, speaking on ordinary topics. Curiosity led me to retain the acquaintance I had formed, and I asked permission to call. But my affairs were in bad shape at the time, and, being much worried, I failed to avail myself of the permission granted. Matters went from bad to worse with me. The fact got whispered about that I was in financial difficulty, and I was pressed on every side for payment of accounts for which there were no funds ready. One morning the mail brought me a letter from John Simpson & Co., a firm doing the same kind of business that I did, stating that they had been made aware that I needed funds to tide me over difficulties and that they would be happy to advance what I required.

It is needless to say that such generosity surprised me. I had known and done business with the concern, but had no idea that it took any interest in me. I called on Mr. Simpson, the head of the firm, and offered to make a showing of my affairs with a view to proving that a loan of $20,000 for a year would pull me through. But I could furnish no security. I was informed that I would hear from him within twenty-four hours, and the next morning's mail brought me a check for the amount I needed. No receipt to be signed was inclosed; nothing was said about a showing up of my accounts; no time was specified for payment. Twenty thousand dollars were handed to me just as if they belonged to me. I called on Mr. Simpson at once for an explanation, but got no satisfaction.

"You go on doing business," he said. "You have the good will of your competitors and business men generally. Don't bother your head about the money advanced. Are you sure it is a-plenty?"

I assured him that it was.

Being set up on my feet, my mind was more at ease, and I resumed my social connections. One morning I was passing a shop where women's goods are sold just as a lady alighted from an auto. I recognized Mrs. Carmody, the lady who remembered me, but whom I had failed to remember. Conscious of my neglect of her permission to call upon her, I felt embarrassed; but, pulling myself together, I spoke to her, told her that a pressure of affairs had prevented my availing myself of the honor she had done me, etc.

I left her, thinking of the mystery concerning her. One thing especially puzzled me. When I had facetiously suggested that we might have met up in the air she had replied, "Worse than that." What did this mean? I resolved to get it out of her and to call upon her at once for the purpose.

"Now," I said to her when we were seated tete-a-tete in her drawing room, "I confess that I cannot remember you at all, and I wish you to relieve my curiosity by explaining what you meant by saying that we had met in a worse place than up in the air."

"Can't you think of a worse place than that?"

"No."

"Down under the water."

The expression on my face caused a burst of laughter that was both tantalizing and becoming.

"You and I," she continued, "were on board the Titanic together on her last trip. We both went down or were sucked down with the vessel. I clutched some one under water. It was you. When we came up I was bereft of my senses. You unstrapped your life preserver and gave it to me. I clung to it till I was picked up."

In time I married the widow, who was wealthy, and she turned over to me the management of her affairs. One day while looking over some old papers of hers I came upon her check for $20,000 payable to John Simpson. Then I knew who had advanced the money that had saved me from financial failure. I went to my wife, embraced her and covered her face with kisses. She wished me to explain my sudden demonstration of affection, but I paid her for keeping me in ignorance of where we had met by withholding my knowledge of the check.

The Devil's Bible.

The devil's Bible is in the Royal Palace library of Stockholm, Sweden. It is a huge copy of the Scriptures, written upon 300 prepared asses' skins. One tradition declares that it took 500 years, or from the eighth to the thirteenth century, to make the copy, which is so large that it has a table to itself. Another tradition affirms that the work was done in a single night by a monk with the assistance of his satanic majesty, who, when the work was completed, gave the monk a picture of himself for the frontispiece, where, amid illuminated incantations, it is still to be seen; hence the name. This marvelous manuscript was carried off by the Swedes during the thirty years' war from a convent in Prague.

A Fable.

A woman once came to the cave of a sage who was renowned for his profound analysis of her sex.

"Master," said she, "let me sit at your feet awhile. I am but a woman—faulty and foolish and weak—but I would fain be the pupil of your learning and the disciple of your virtues."

And the sage, secure in his wisdom consented.

Then he laid himself down to sleep in the shade of a rock, out of the glare of the sun. When he wakened he was blindfolded and bound hand and foot—a prisoner to love.

He had protected himself against every feminine weapon except the most dangerous one—humility.

Military Diagnosis.

A nurse related as a true story of a soldier's wit that a soldier in a hospital on recovering consciousness said, "Nurse, what is this on my head?"

"Vinegar cloths," she replied. "You have had fever."

After a pause:

"And what is this on my chest?"

"A mustard plaster. You have had pneumonia."

"And what is this at my feet?"

"Salt bags. You have had frost bite."

A soldier from the next bed looked up and said:

"Hang a pepper box to his nose, nurse; then he will be a cruet."—London Strand Magazine.

Tireless Camels.

An eastern legend has it that the camel was fashioned last by the Creator, and so it is held in very high esteem by the people of the east. Although a somewhat unshapely and perhaps bad tempered animal, the camel is an untiring worker. He will travel on for hour after hour without appearing distressed in any way and on this account has made a good name for himself.—London Answers.

SERGT. GERALD SPAFFORD WRITES INTERESTING LETTER

Belgium, Dec. 12, 1915.

My Dear Friend:—I am sending you a few hastily written lines, in a form of a cheery message to our dear ones at home.

We are having terrible weather and the boys are bearing up well under the strain, and are cheerful.

We lost three fine lads in a duel we were engaged in the other day—a big 8-incher landed on our dugout and killed Sergt. Highley outright, and Gunners Foley and Pearson died from their terrible wounds, a few hours later.

Gunner A. E. Harris, of Belleville, one of the old 34th men, had a miraculous escape from death, by the same shell.

I am sending you a snap photo of myself, taken recently. The field in the back ground is close to where the London Scottish made their famous charge, a year ago; close at hand are the heavy guns, we now have near us. You can detect the mud bespattered condition of my clothing.

Trumpeter F. Sheldon, is doing his bit and the box contributed by his friends was received with exceeding pleasure, particularly Sergt. Harman's gift and message.

Bom. E. A. Carr, of G. T. R. staff, is going on fine. Good soldier is Ernie as expressed in Wiltshire.

Bom. F. Day, another Belleville boy, who has climbed to the dignity of N. C. O. recently, by hard work and attention to business.

"Hinckey" Bowen, the little, big-man, for he has been doing a man's work, although only a wee shaver, is progressing favorably.

Bom. Buck is in the happy hunting grounds of a hospital, undergoing an operation—not a serious one; hope to see him back soon.

Belgium, Dec. 20 1915.

Dear Mr. Bowell:—The N.C.O.'s and men of the Fighting 34th all send their greetings with the compliments of the season.

I am glad to report that all the boys are exceedingly well, and enjoying good health.

We welcomed Bom. Harry Hollands, who has joined his old Belleville comrades at the front, a few days ago. He is looking fine, and we are glad to meet him.

What's doing here? Well, while we are playing a waiting game, we have had a number of little shows here lately, and many artillery duels, and in spite of the excessive rain and muddy conditions, we have been holding our own, and a little bit more.

A good joke on the "Boches" happened this week, they started a gas attack, and got their poison fumes going nicely, when lo, the wind changed and blew it back into their trenches. Our artillery gave them almost sixteen hours of shell-fire, and reports are, we got several lines of their watersoaked and literally wrecked trenches.

A few weeks ago the Canadians, after we bombarded the German trenches—took a run over to see how they were, after bayoneting about 30 of them, they returned with 12 prisoners; dejected looking customers.

Several letters to hand and seemingly the question prominent in every-one's mind: When will this terrible war end?

Naturally I presume it is assumed that we, who are out here, have at least a faint idea, or at least hope that hostilities will soon cease.

I have information from time to time, which I am sure is from a reliable source, and I am satisfied that we have, in spite of appearances to contrary recently, owing to the Central European situation on which the eyes of the world have been centered, every cause to be cheerful and accept circumstances, as they are presented and as loyal British subjects, in this time of sacrifice, with persevering determination, for we HAVE GERMANY BEAT right now.

Sixteen months have passed and gone, during which time the Titanic struggle is still going on with seemingly never ending intensity. Millions of lives have been sacrificed, and billions of gold expended, and yet the destinies of the great European powers are apparently hung in the balance. We hear the peace cranks howling for peace and the pessimists predicting disaster, but in spite of it all, we still hear the call to arms resounding, and in spite of our reverses, we see the nasty little, contemptible army of Britain gradually growing from thousands to millions. We see and hear the thunder of ponderous guns, which a year ago were conspicuous by their absence. What has this to do with the situation? Simply this. To say we have what Germany has not—We are to-day prepared — and Germany has long since shot her bolt, and we find her straining every muscle in their body to gain time by bothering other powers for what? To gain if possible, an honorable settlement of peace. Germany is beat and she knows it. She already feels the gigantic chain, which is slowly but surely being wound about her. She realizes that our navy is the mistress of all the seas, and we have by grim determination driven her pirates and submarines either to destruction or capture, until at present we seldom hear of them.

We already hear the cries of distress and demands of the population, who have seen the legions of which their brothers and fathers were part, melt away like the snow before the Spring-time sun. We have before us a few facts and figures which are worthy of consideration, which will help us to decide whether our deductions are justified when we say Germany is beaten. An official census tells us that the total male population of Austria and Germany in 1911 was 27,000,000. We must now find, allowing for reservists, munition workers, artificers, etc., the number of men of gross military age in both countries. Again we refer to reliable computation and find that they had 12,000,000 men of the gross military age, between 17 and 45 years.

Now then, if official records of the casualties, which have been faithfully recorded during the present war, are correct, we find the following figures: Up to July 31st, allowing for temporarily incapacitated returns at one quarter of one per cent.; German dead, 620,000; Austrian dead, 525,000; German prisoners, 300,000; Austrian prisoners 600,000; disabled, sickness of permanent character, and unfit for service, 4,500,000 for both Germany and Austria—the total presented to us is 6,525,000, not forgetting recent fighting and the additional losses which have occurred. If the above figures are even approximate we can, I believe, with justifiable optimism, conclude that Germany has an army you can count in thousands; and considering the lavish expenditure of ammunition at the commencement of the war we find today that when on the defensive she husbands her supplies, for she realizes that her resources are at an ebb and the hour fast approaches when, after the smoke of thundering guns has cleared away we will find but remnants of the once proud and seemingly invincible German army crying, as we have made them cry in the past at the sight of British bayonets, for mercy, and howling for peace and clemency.

Not only have we got them beaten on the land, on the sea (and beneath it), but also in the air. Records show that successes in the air are ten to one in our favor.

We have them beaten, even with their poisonous gas. The recent attack referred to proves that it is feared no longer by our brave Tommies for today we are prepared, and our artillery fire strikes terror into their hearts. Diaries of captured officers reveal to us the terrible strain they have undergone in recent engagements when under our terrific shell fire. Reports tell us that Germany is feverishly manufacturing machine guns and automatic rifles to compensate for the lack of men.

And not only have we got Germany beaten in man power and guns, in the air and on the sea, but our resources are unlimited. Our people have food in plenty, while we hear of food riots in the enemy's country, and we know the people there are groaning beneath the stress of taxation and feeling the dire pangs of want. We have crippled her commerce forever. Our navy has slowly but surely throttled her, and the to-morrow of Germany is assuredly one in which we shall see—not as the peace fanatics and howling pack of pessimistic lunatics predict, that we want peace. May God forbid. We must forever crush the would-be conquerors of England and Europe and obliterate from the fair name of liberty—freedom and honor—the stain of dishonor which Teutonic Kultur has sought to substitute in letters of blood on the face of Europe and the world—Kultur. So in spite of recent events and seeming reverses, I believe candidly the end is near and soon the joy bells of victory—and while we still hear the trumpet call to arms resounding, I conclude to the slacker—get busy or clear the way for we will soon be home and we will have no room for slackers nor for the would-be peacemakers who have retarded rather than helped us toward this end by supporting the cause for which our sons have sacrificed their lives and all, to restore to civilization our birthright. Watch Japan, and while the Balkans are fuming and fomenting, hearken to the echoes from the battlefields of Flanders and France.

We have Germany beaten; but we must forever crush her. Now is the time for us to do it. We shall have no assurance of peace until we bring William the Monster to account for the atrocities he has been the instigator of through the medium of his Kultured assassins, and regain that for which our forefathers fought on these same battlefields in the days of Waterloo.

Sincerely,
SPAFFORD

Italy's Ancestral Glories.

Three times has Italy ruled over Europe. She has sat on the political throne under the Caesars, on the ecclesiastical throne under the popes from Gregory the Great to Leo X, and on the intellectual throne of the renaissance. These things every Italian family remembers. Augustus Caesar and Trajan, Hildebrand and Innocent III, Dante and Petrarch, Michelangelo and Raphael, Galilei and Bruno are in his mouth like household words. The Italian does not consider himself and us as equals; he accepts, he believes in, modern democracy, but deep in his heart he is an aristocrat, haughtily proud of his long descent and his ancestral glories. When thinking of Italians one must always bear in mind that they, out of all the peoples of Europe, have the most glorious past and that they are conscious of it to the quick.—Henry Dwight Sedgwick in Yale Review.

Balzac's Way.

Jules Sandeau related that one time while living in Paris Balzac locked himself up in his room for twenty-two days and twenty-two nights, refusing to see any one and keeping the curtains closed and the lights continually burning even in broad daylight. The only human being he saw during this time was his servant, whom he rang for when he felt the need of food, which he washed down with numerous cups of coffee. He would throw himself on his bed only when entirely exhausted from lack of sleep, and he remained in complete ignorance of what was transpiring outside, the state of the weather and even of the time and day of the week. He only freed himself from this voluntary captivity when he had written the word "End" on the last page of the manuscript he began when he entered his prison.

SPORTING NEWS

THE GAME TONIGHT

No hockey fan will miss the big intermediate game here to-night when the 33rd Battery of Kingston clash with the local team. Both of these teams have defeated Queen's, and a whirlwind game may be expected from start to finish.

Kingston and Belleville both have a rock bound defense, according to all reports, and although Whitty is sick with LaGrippe, and will be unable to play to-night, Holloway may be depended upon to put up a good game.

The same team is expected to play to-night that played last Friday with this one exception, and much better team work among the forwards is predicted.

The report reached us that Whalen who played on Friday night was the younger brother, who is a junior. This was wrong, as the boy who played Friday night and will play again to-night, is "Ted" Whalen, who has played intermediate hockey for the past three years.

The forwards will show up stronger to-night for two reasons. They are pitted against a weaker forward line up than on last Friday night and they have now played one game together.

Belleville defense will probably be as strong as ever in defensive play, but it is likely that Symons will be compelled to do all the offensive work that is done by the back division. He is perfectly able to shoulder a fair percentage of the work at that, and with Phillips in goal is not likely to worry much when he rushes.

LaGrippe is bound to keep a lot of fans away from the rink to-night, but everyone who is able is almost sure to be there to see Belleville close the first lap on the group leadership.

The Juniors play Lindsay here on Friday night.

It is near-officially announced that Whitty will be unable to play tonight, and that Hollaway will take his place. Hollaway in a wonderful check and will only lack Whitty's experience and "get-away" speed.

There is no truth in the rumor that Symons, Belleville's crack defense man, is out of town. Big Bill will be on hand to-night as usual.

Not Guilty.

Marcus Pickney had been arrested through the activities of his 200 pound Scotch wife, and the pair were facing the judge.

It seemed that Pickney was a shiftless, ne'er-do-well, lazy man, with a strong disinclination to honest toil. Moreover, he was in the habit of coming home "corned" and beating his thrifty better half. It was on the occasion of the last of these episodes that she had brought about his arrest.

After patiently hearing testimony the judge said:

"Mrs. Pickney, it seems to me that this is a case where prosecution is possible for nonsupport."

"Oh, your honor," wailed the excited woman, "they can't bring that up ag'in me! I've took in washin' and giv' him what you might say was fine livin' ever since we was marrit. No; he can't accuse me of that, judge."

World's Oldest Industry.

The pearl fisheries of Ceylon are said to be the oldest industry in the world. For over 3,000 years the pearl oyster harvest has been gathered by the natives, who, skilled in diving, have handed down the industry from one generation to the next. Pearl fishing in Ceylon today is somewhat of a speculation. The greatest care is taken lest when the shells of the bivalves are opened any of the precious gems be lost or stolen. A very strict watch is kept over the natives who are employed in this kind of work, but in spite of the greatest precautions some of the smaller stones are frequently concealed. The refuse from the shells is very carefully examined subsequent to this first examination. Even the dried dust of the oyster is carefully sifted.

Grazed in the Fog.

It is not usual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "catted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit, but fortunately the chain parted just as the room was being ripped into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

The Cocoa Bean.

The cocoa is a native of Venezuela. It is a pod bean the size of the first joint of the finger, six or eight of these beans to the pod. The wet beans are shelled from the pods and then fermented in heaps for six days until cured. During this ferment heat is developed that will cook an egg, so it is said. The cocoa bush begins bearing at five years, grows into a tree thirty feet high, and, like the olive, the older the tree the better. The beans hang from the trunk and the under side of the limbs, sticking out on stems.

Colored Oysters.

Although he had never before been inside a big city hotel, Uncle Sol was determined to keep the fact a profound secret.

"Have some oysters, uncle?" asked the nephew.

"Don't care if I do."

"What'll they be?"

"Oh, most any kind, I guess!"

"I'll take a few blue points."

Some Foreign Coins.

The franc was formerly called livre (pound), though the connection with any special weight is not evident. The name of the German coin, mark, meaning a weight of eight ounces, was formerly in general use in Europe. The name of the Italian coin that corresponds with a franc (lira) also means pound. The coins in present use in Spain have their names from other sources. The five peseta piece is called escudo (shield). Peseta, the name of the small coin representing the monetary standard, means simply "little piece." Ruble is from the word meaning "to cut" and was so called because originally the coin was made with an ornamental edge.—London Telegraph.

Great Scheme.

"I have a scheme."

"Propound it."

"A movie show to be called 'The World.' Everybody in the world will be employed to act in the picture. We're bound to get an audience. Every person depicted will want to see it."

Egg Crop Loss.

Two per cent of all eggs sold are broken before they get to the consumer. Two per cent more are dirty. The total loss from all causes is over one-sixth the total egg crop.—Farm and Fireside.

Rivals.

"Is this an all star company?" asked the manager of the Bunkhurst Opera House.

"Sure it is," said the press agent. "They haven't spoken a pleasant word to each other since they started on tour."

Hold Up Your Head.

The simple habit of holding the chest high and the head erect will do more than anything else to retain a youthful figure. The moment the back bends goodby youth!

As a moth gnaws a garment, so doth envy consume a man.—Chrysostom.

MONTENEGRO HAS NOW SURRENDERED TO AUSTRIA

So Says Berlin Despatch—First One to Sue For Peace—Austro Hungarian Parliament Cheers Announcement

ACT CAUSED A TREMENDOUS SENSATION

Brave Little Nation was Expected to Fight to the End—No Word as Yet From Montenegro

Montenegro Surrenders

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Montenegro has unconditionally surrendered to Austria. She will lay down her arms. She is the first of the European belligerents to sue for peace in the eighteen months of fighting. Terms will be discussed at once. It is believed they will include the cession of Mount Lovcen to Austria and the northern Albanian town of Scutari to Montenegro.

Announcement of the submission of the little mountain kingdom was made to-day by General Headquarters of the Austro-Hungarian army and by Count Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, before the Hungarian Parliament.

Army Lays Down Arms

The official announcement says:—"The King and Government of Montenegro, on January 13, asked for a cessation of hostilities and the opening of peace negotiations. The Austro-Hungarian Government answered that this would not be possible unless the Montenegrin army should unconditionally lay down its arms.

"The Montenegrin army yesterday accepted these terms."

Count Tisza, addressing the Hungarian Parliament, said: 'Montenegro has asked for peace. We asked that, beforehand, Montenegro unconditionally lay down her arms. Just now news has arrived that the unconditional laying down of arms has been accepted. Peace negotiations will be entered into immediately."

Commotion in Parliament

The Premier's announcement came just after proceedings under the first paragraph of the order of the day had been completed. He asked permission to interrupt the discussion.

His announcement caused a tremendous sensation. A deep silence followed his words and then Parliament broke into commotion. Shouts of joy made the ancient chamber ring.

The news quickly spread to the streets, and the entire city joined in the first peace celebration.

The sudden announcement of Montenegro's capitulation came on the heels of despatches quoting her King and Cabinet Ministers to the effect that the nation would never surrender. It was declared they would fight to the last man; that Montenegro never had been conquered, and never would be.

.... Not Confirmed ....

The announcement that Montenegro has surrendered has not as yet been confirmed from any allied forces.

Prohibition In Ontario

Which Gives Best Results—Past And Present Reviewed

Regarding prohibition in Ontario the Montreal Gazette says it is only natural, perhaps, that the drift of opinion in the western states should be felt in our western provinces. A while ago the western states were fired with a rage for "advanced legislation," such as the initiative and referendum, and forthwith those measures were taken up in Alberta and Saskatchewan. Since then seven states have adopted prohibition, which went into effect on New Year's Day, and Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are now following suit. Ontario is likewise joining the procession. A Committee of One Hundred, with headquarters in Toronto, is organizing a campaign for the total suppression of the licensed liquor trade so far as it can be suppressed by the Provincial Legislature. The Legislature has not the constitutional authority to close the distilleries or breweries, nor can it stop the transportation of whiskey or beer from a "wet" province to the consumers within its own boundaries, but it can deprive the 1,500 hotels and saloons of licenses and thus outlaw the traffic. In the last thirty or forty years Ontario has had recourse to the Dunkin Act, Scott Act and local option, but it cannot be said that such efforts at suppression have resulted in much good to the cause of temperance. They were enforced for a time, but when the zeal of the temperance men abated and the people wearied of government by whiskey detectives, the acts usually became a dead-letter. So it was and has been in other parts of the Dominion. No one doubts the sincerity of the temperance leaders, but, like other ardent social reformers, they are apt to overestimate the force of public sentiment in favor of their project and to underestimate the amount of public objection to compulsion, even for the best of causes.

The Toronto committee is raising subscriptions to carry on this work, and advertises itself as thoroughly non-partisan, portraits of Mr. Hearst, the provincial premier, and Mr. Rowell, leader of the Liberal Opposition, appearing side by side in its printed appeals. It may be doubted, however, whether the two sides are thus entirely unanimous. At the last provincial election Mr. Rowell was defeated on the cry of "Abolish the Bar" and it is suspected by some that he is trying to recover his ground and to land the Tories in disaster by roping them in as out-and-out opponents of the liquor trade. When the Liberals were in office for so long under Mowat, Hardy and Ross, they made the license law a party engine, appointing their own friends as commissioners and inspectors and seeing to it that the licensee who dared to remain a Tory had an unpleasant time of it. On public occasions, notably when church members were present, they denounced the trade as an agency of the devil, but never failed to blackmail it out of election funds in the name of righteousness. Mr. Rowell is no doubt honest in his belief in prohibition, but he is a Liberal partisan before he is anything else, and the Tories may be forgiven if they regard him with some suspicion. It is not likely, therefore, that the present movement will succeed. The efficient regulation of the traffic appears to yield better results than futile attempts to abolish it. Mr. Rowell says its suppression would enable the province to give more money to the fund for war purposes, but so for that matter would the refusal to subscribe to the committee's treasury until it is clearly shown that there is no sinister object in the campaign.

PREPARING FOR WAR YOUNG MAN GOES INSANE

Operation to Fit Albert Oliver For Active Service Causes Trouble

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—Driven suddenly insane, Albert Oliver, 2058 Yonge street, stripped himself of his garments and raced wildly up and down Yonge street in Eglinton on Sunday morning until a policeman from No. 5 Sub-station took him into the office of a Yonge street physician. From here he was taken to the General Hospital and then sent to the Reception Hospital.

Ambulance driver Ross of the Police Department says that the surgeon to whose office Oliver was taken by the policeman states that the young man's condition might have been caused by an operation of a trivial nature performed recently in order that Oliver might be accepted for active service.

Later in the day Oliver's brother informed Police Sergeant Grant that his brother was seemingly in perfect health at breakfast time. Oliver was dressing to go out for a walk when his brother left the house for church.

British Forcing The Turks Back

Steadily Gaining Ground on Turk Forces—Relieving Expedition Wins Big Victory—Will Soon Join With Kut-el—Amara Force

RUSSIANS ARE ADVANCING

The Winter Bear is Steadily Diving Teutons Before Them—Turks Admit Defeat

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A special despatch form the British forces in Mesopotamia, says that the British are driving the Turks back daily and are expected to relieve the forces at Mesopotamia to-day.

Campaign Co-Related

LONLON, Jan. 17.—Anglo-Russian forces in the Far East continue to make progress in co-related campaigns against the Turks, official despatches to London and Petrograd recording victories in Mesopotamia and the Caucasus respectively. The British force in Mesopotamia, under General Aylmer, advancing to the relief of Kut-el-Amara, where General Townshend's force is besieged, has fought another stiff battle. As a result the Turks opposing the advance, who were compelled to fall back after the fighting on the 13th and 14th inst., have lost their positions and have again retreated to a point within six miles of Kut-el-Amara. From the latter place word has been received up to Saturday last, and from General Aylmer up to Sunday. All Britain hopes that the relieving and the beleaguered forces will soon be able to join hands, if they have not already done so, and bring the Turks to a decisive battle. The movements of the British forces are greatly hampered by the bad weather, which has flooded large sections of the country.

A Turkish Admission

The Turks now admit the withdrawal of "advanced posts" in some parts of the Caucasus, owing to the Russian attacks, and, the Czar's forces record the capture of additional prisoners and munitions. They say nothing of the Mesopotamia fighting other than a reference to intermittent artillery duels.

Diamond Smugglers Now Plead Guilty

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Herman P. Deltz and his son, Charles Deltz, bankrupt diamond dealers, called to trial to-day before Judge Hunt in the United States District Court for smuggling nearly half a million dollars' worth of jewels across the Canadian border, brought the case to a sudden end by pleading guilty. The elder Deltz was sentenced to a year and a day in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and the son to pay a fine of $5,000. The court directed that if the fine was not paid by next Monday Charles Deltz should be brought before him for re-sentence. The action was taken just as the trial was to start.

Counts in the indictment charging the defendants with personally carrying the jewels across the border were dropped with the consent of the District Attorney.

The Government charged that the smuggling conspiracy continued from 19191 to 1914, the evidence of which was obtained in the course of bankruptcy proceedings against Deltz and his son and Joseph Samuels & Company, braid makers of New York, and Aranson & Ruttenbery of Montreal. Deltz claimed his insolvency was due in part to the loss of diamonds he had pledged with pawnbrokers.

VERY LITTLE SICKNESS AMONG THE CANADIANS

Sir George Perley and Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railway, have just returned from a three days' visit to headquarters and other parts of the Canadian front. They met many Brigadiers and Colonels. They crossed the Channel on a destroyer.

They report very little sickness among the Canadians.

All are cheerful and well-fortified against the weather, which already is improving.

The soldiers are confident "Fritz" will shortly receive fits. The visitors were particularly enthusiastic over the efficiency of our artillery.

Gen. Turner is here on leave.

MILITARY CROSS IN COBOURG

Mrs. R. J. Craig received from her son, Lieut. C. S. Craig, the Military Cross, which he was recently decorated with by the King at Buckingham Palace. There are two crosses, each of solid silver. The larger one is 1 5-8 inches square, and the silver bar is one and a half inches wide. The cross bears in the centre the letters "G.R.I." and on each of the four arms of the cross is the Imperial Crown. The ribbon is of 3 equal strips, 1 2-8 inches wide and 1 1-2 inches high, with the centre strip dark purple and the other white. As the military cross is of recent origin, this is probably the first one to arrive in Canada.

Took "Ten Nights" To Quit Gallipoli

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Further details of the evacuation of the Sulya Bay and Sedd-ul-Bahr regions appear in the morning newspapers. The accounts state that the operation in each case covered ten nights. The first period was devoted to the removal of winter stores and superfluities. During the next period everything was removed except the actual foood and munitions needed for the final ten nights, during which the troops embarked with guns and animals. On the last night picked men held the first line trenches, one man to seven yards of the front, and they remained until word came that all was clear on the beach.

Murphy to Introduce Prohibition Question

Borden Government Asked Whether Temperance Legislation is in Prospect

FISH PRICES AN ISSUE

Jameson, of Digby, N.S., Suspects Middlemen Get Undue Profits

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Evidence that the question of prohibition of liquor in Canada during the progress of the war will come before parliament this session was forthcoming this afternoon when Hon. Charles Murphy gave notice of the following enquiry of the government:

Is it the intention of the government to introduce during the present session of parliament legislation restricting or prohibiting the manufacture or sale of liquor during the war?"

Mr. Murphy returns again to the question of the two submarines purchased by Sir Richard McBride, by asking when they were equipped with torpedoes.

Clarence Jameson, M.P. for Digby, N.S., who has taken a deep interest in the development of the fish industry, intends to move in the House this session for an enquiry into the causes of the great discrepancy between the prices of fish at the places of production and those charged on the interior markets.

George W. Kyte, of Richmond, N.S., gives notice of motions for returns showing the names of members of the House of Commons and the various Legislatures who are in the service of the militia department, either in Canada or overseas, their rank and rate of pay; also the names of employees of the government who have enlisted for home or foreign service since the war broke out, with their rate of pay, specifying those who continue to receive the same salaries that were paid to them before they enlisted.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux will move the following resolution: "That this House recognizes the necessity for immediate national action to cope with new and complex conditions arising after the war and emphasizes the urgent need for a system of national labor bureaus."

Francis Glass of East Middlesex has given notice of a resolution calling upon the government to encourage the flax and linen industries of Canada.

Canadian Lieut. Burned to Death

(Canadian Press Special)

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Cables today announce that Flight Lieut Ross, a Canadian, was burned to death yesterday. He had started on a flight when his machine burst into flames and came down wrecked and it is supposed that the tank exploded. The authorities at Ottawa say that the only Ross on the list of Canadian aviators was Gordon Ross, aged twenty-one, of Kunvegan Road, Toronto, who after a a course at Dayton, Ohio, went to England a few months ago.

CANADIANS BREAK UP MEETING OF QUAKERS

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Wild scenes were witnessed at a gathering last night in a Quarker meeting-house, in which Canadian soldiers participated. The trouble arose owing to interruptions by a faction of Quakers of a Quaker speaker who was supporting conscription.

One of the Canadian soldiers tried to muzzle one of the interrupters of the speaker with his gauntlet. The meeting house was soon a mass of struggling forms. In the melee hats were smashed, clothes were torn and collars lost. The conscriptionists finally came off victorious in the struggle, and then sang the National Anthem and cheered the King.

CONSCRIPTION NOT NECESSARY IN CANADA

AMERICANS ARE LOYAL TO ALLIES' CAUSE

Premier Borden Believes American Settlers Are Anxious to See Britian Win—Debate in House of Commons to Continue To-Morrow

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Perhaps the features of the debate upon the address in reply to the speech from the throne which began in the House of Commons today was Sir Wilfrid Laurier's appeal to the Prime Minister that conscription would not be resorted. Sir Wilfrid spent a good deal of time in replying to the arguments of the Nationalists against Canada's participation in the war. Speaking for himself, he declared that neither the King of England nor the Parliament of England could compel a Canadian soldier to go to the front or take a dollar from the Canadian treasury. Canada's participation in the war, he said, was the spontaneous expression of the people's will and the deliberate action of a free parliament.

Sir Robert Borden dismissed the appeal about conscription with a sentence, saying that the government did not propose conscription.

Personally he did not subscribe to the belief that conscription would cause the American settlers to leave the country. On the contrary he believed the American settlers were as anxious to fight for the Allies as were native Canadians.

Sir Wilfrid's Doubts

The address was moved by Dr. Thompson, M.P. for the Yukon. He made an excellent speech. The motion was seconded by Dr. Paquet, the Conservative member for L'Islet, Quebec. Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke next, and was followed by the Prime Minister. Sir Wilfrid seemed in excellent health and spoke with unusual vigor. He ventured to doubt whether the government would be able to raise 500,000 volunteers and criticized the lavish expenditures upon public works and the commandeering last autumn of all wheat in the eastern elevators.

Sir Robert Borden seemed quite recovered from his recent illness and spoke at considerable length. He reviewed the history of the war and the great part Canada had played therein. Considering the millions of men that Great Britain had already placed in the field, Sir Robert did not consider that Canada should shrink from raising an army of 500,000. Parliament must remember, he declared, amid prolonged applause, that Canada was a part of the British Empire.

The Premier was followed by Dr. Clark, the Liberal member for Red Deer, who intimated that the Liberals would not oppose an extension of the parliamentary term. Postmaster-General Casgrain will resume the debate tomorrow.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Ketcheson, at 11 a.m., Jan. 12, 1916, when their youngest daughter, Mary Alma, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Kenneth A. Faul, of Sidney, by Rev. L. M. Sharpe. To the strains of the bridal chorus, rendered by Miss Luella Potter, of Frankford, the young couple took their places beneath the floral arch. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was charmingly attired in white voile with pearl and fur trimming. She carried a shower bouquet of carnations and smilax, and wore the traditional bridal veil with orange blossoms, which had formerly adorned her aunt, Mrs. John Spear, of Chicago, on a similar occasion. The usual congratulations extended, the invited guests, numbering about seventy, were ushered to the dining room by Mr. Bert Lott, where a good dinner awaited them, the guests being served by a few girl friends of the bride.

The signing of the register was witnessed by Mr. Arthur Craig and Miss Eva Sine. Mr. and Mrs. Faul left immediately after dinner for Belleville, where they took the 3.05 train for their honey-moon tour. The bride travelled in a navy blue suit and white sailor hat. The display of handsome and useful gifts testify to the popularity of both parties. Upon their return they will reside in Sidney. The Intelligencer joins with their many friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous path through life.

JONES—HARRY.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Harry, Bayside, on Wednesday, Jan. 12, when their second daughter, Jennie, was married to Mr. Walter Jones, of Bowmanville, by Rev. F. G. Joblin, Pastor of Bayside Circuit.

After ample justice had been done to the very bountiful and wholesome dinner which was provided, a pleasant hour was spent in toast-making to the future happiness and health of the bride, which toasts were responded to in a very efficient manner. The happy couple then left to go to their new home in Bowmanville.

MUSIC & DRAMA

"QUO VADIS"

It would require a second Solomon to decide what is the most attractive feature of George Kleine's artistic production of the Cines photo-drama "Quo Vadis", which is now exciting the admiration of the world. Some spectators enjoy most, the spectacular scenes of the Arena with its ferocious lions, exciting gladiator combats and chariots, to say nothing of Ursus' thrilling conquest of the savage bull, while others prefer the romantic love story of Vinitius and Lygia, which is so completely related. Some admire the characteristic scenes of Nero's court with its brilliant pageantry, magnificent festivals and reproduction of Roman palaces and gardens—and a great many applaud the production for its deep moral and religious note, the impressive visulization of the early struggles of Christianity and inspiring scenes in which the Saviour and Apostles Peter and Paul deminate. Altogether it is a supreme masterpiece and the one word that fittingly describes it is "marvellous." Geo. Kleine's "Quo Vadis" is announced for two nights, commencing Wednesday, Jan. 26 at the Griffin Opera House with matinees daily. All seats are reserved for the matinee and evening performances, and will be on sale beginning Monday, Jan. 24, at Doyle's Drug Store. Prices 10, 15, 25c.

MONEY IN TRANSIT

How Millions Are Moved In Safety From City to City.

STRONG ROOMS IN BIG BANKS

The Modern Manganese Steel Vault, With Its Electric Skin, Can Defy the Most Daring and Clever Burglar Equipped With the Finest Tools.

Millions and billions in real cash, gold and bills, are vague things to most of us, and few people have any idea where this immensely wealthy nation keeps its real money or how it is guarded on its travels.

It is with the greatest reluctance that its owners or trustees ever move it; they prefer to exchange the checks, notes, drafts or securities that represent it. But there are times when the real money must go, and then its journey is a very interesting thing.

Every bank and trust company is required by the banking laws to keep a certain amount of money on hand, the amount being in proportion to the size of the institution, and in addition the current business of the house requires that so many millions more be available for use at the paying teller's window. To safeguard these large sums is the business of safe and vault building experts, and so far advanced is this science that it is practically impossible for the best equipped crooks to extract $1 from any big bank vault. Bank robbing these days is practiced on small country banks or is achieved by dishonest bankers.

The manganese steel vault, with its electric skin, is the last word in protection. The vault designer selects a spot in the institution, in any place from the cellar to the roof, where the vault can be isolated and cannot be reached easily by tunnelers, and there the big steel house is built. Its walls are so thick that they will resist fire, earthquake and heavy explosives, and the whole is protected by an electric skin. This is usually of a soft foil of alloy, and if even a pin is thrust through it at any point a short circuit is made and alarm bells set ringing in the building, in police headquarters, in the offices of private protective agencies and in the homes of certain officers of the bank. The burglar, with a torch that would burn a hole through the steel in a few minutes or tools that would cut out a door in an hour, has not a chance, even after he has tunneled to the vault and overcome the watchmen.

When millions in cash are taken from the vaults a picked corps of guarded clerks check it out in steel casks of the kind known as express strong boxes, and these are placed in wagons in which the carrying compartments are wholly of steel screens. Each wagon has its set of guards, usually two on the front seat, one driving, one locked in with the money and one riding on the rear.

The money is checked out of the vaults into the hands of express company employees, who cart it to their express cars in the railroad yards, and it travels to its destination in as simple and unostentatious a manner as if it were so many crates of eggs. The express company employees never know what is in the strong boxes—they merely know that they have so many of them in given numbers to receive and to deliver, and that is all there is to it.

An additional safeguard is the very weight of any given quantity of gold and the serial numbering of large bills. These latter are kept in the same packets in which they leave the banks if possible, and the groups of numbers make them as individual and as easily identifiable as one man from another. If a thief extracted a million in $10,000 bills he could not cash a single one of them.

"Blackmailed," by Arthur Applin, author of "The Girl Who Saved His Honor," a copyrighted story that is run only by the Intelligencer will start in this paper on Thursday.. This is one of the best stories of the year and should not be missed by any story lover.

The "Land of Cattle."

Italy may fairly claim to be senior among the nations of Europe, so far as its name is concerned. The peninsula has been "Italia" almost as far back as even legend reaches. According to Mommsen, the "Itali" proper were the inhabitants of the southern part of the country. As to the origin of the name, there is the normal legend of a King Italus, but his name must have been pronounced Vitalus and Vitulus, which means a bull calf, and it is easy to recognize in it an allusion to Italy as the land of cattle.—Spectator.

A Dilemma.

Wife—Henry, you really must have the landlord come and see for himself the awful damage the rain did to our ceiling. Hub—I can't without letting him see the damage the children have done to the rest of the house.

We are all born for love. It is the principle of existence and its only end.—Disraeli.

The Modern Way.

Mrs. Henry Peck—Men have degenerated sadly since the days of chivalry. Sir Walter Raleigh spread his cloak on the ground for the queen to walk on. Women do not walk on men's cloaks in these modern days. Mr. Henry Peck—No; they walk on men's necks now.

Open to Conviction.

"I understand," said Mr. Dolan, "that you declared there should be no more fightin'."

"I said that," replied Mr. Rafferty. "But I never was obstinate, an' mebbe a few words of argument from you can make me change my mind."

An Artist's Struggles.

Professor von Herkomer, the famous painter, had such a struggle to gain a living in his early days that had it not been for his inexhaustible stock of patience and self confidence he would probably have abandoned art entirely. He sold his first picture for 2 guineas and later on earned for a short time a couple of pounds weekly for a woodcut which he supplied to a comic paper. This modest salary coming to a stop, he was at his wits' end to know what to do. He applied to a troupe of minstrels for an engagement as zither player, but in vain, and then took to designing carpets. For some years he battled with poverty, achieving no success until he obtained employment on a weekly illustrated journal.—London Globe.

Ownership of Deserts.

The national government virtually owns all our deserts, although in Texas the state owns all the public lands. It is probable that eventually the desert lands will pass from public ownership into the hands of private owners by allotment of areas, the size of which will be relative to their productiveness. For it must be realized that whereas in a well watered region five acres may be enough to support a family, anywhere from 500 to 10,000 acres may be needed to support a family in the desert. It is all a matter of water supply, for water is primarily the basis of land utility and value, as it is the prime means of subsistence of all living things, whether plants or animals.—

Smokeless Powder.

Smokeless powder dates back some fifty years, but it was not until about 1886 that it attained its real efficiency and sprang into general use. It must be understood that even the best of this powder is not absolutely smokeless. It is not smoky enough, however, to "do any harm," and as compared with the old powder may well be called "smokeless."

Charles Reade's Mistake.

"It was Charles Reade, wasn't it, who wrote, 'Nothing is so terrible as a fool?'"

"Yes, but he was wrong. I live next door to a newly married couple. If Charles could see them he would at once admit that two fools are even more terrible."

What Did It Mean?

A notice board in a Scottish kirk once bore, it is said, the following amazing sentence: "This church is licensed for the solemnization of marriages."

One of the very best of all earthly possessions is self possession

RE. O'BRIEN'S BRIDGE REPAIRS

To Editor Intelligencer,

Dear Sir:

Several letters have recently appeared in the public press criticising the work of making the necessary repairs to O'Brien's bridge, and while fair and competent criticism of any public work is always in order, certain statements have been published in reference to this work which tend to reflect upon the integrity and efficiency of those in charge of the work, and which are in the writer's opinion not justified by the facts in the case, and for that reason should be publicly corrected.

On August 2nd last, at the request of the committee, appointed at the January session of the County Council, to make the repairs to this bridge, the writer with the committee made an inspection of the condition of the pier as well as the superstructure, finding the pier had settled some 14 to 18 inches, thereby distorting the superstructure and rendering the bridge unsafe for the heavy traffic pasing over this bridge. On subsequent inspection and soundings being taken, and after ascertaining from what was thought to be the best sources of information the character of the present old foundation, the writer advised the committee of the seriousness and difficulties which would likely be met with in securing a safe and permanent foundation, and also asked the advice of Mr. W. A. McLean, Provincial Engineer of Ontario and Mr. William I. Bishop, C. E. of Montreal, who is a member of the Province of Quebec Steam Commission. The reports of these two engineers, as well as my own report, together with plans showing the proposed method of carrying out the work to secure a permanent foundation were submitted to the committee in joint session with other members of the County Council and after full and careful consideration the committee instructed the writer to proceed along the lines then advised. It might be also stated here that the Provincial Act and Regulations of the Public Works Department of Ontario require that work of this kind be carried out by a competent engineer.

The work has therefore been carried out to date exactly along the lines first decided upon and approved of by the best engineers available and with the approval of the committee. Many difficulties and unforseen delays which cannot be gone into in this brief communication have been encountered and overcome in connection with this job that no engineer or anyone else could predetermine. Although soundings were carefully taken around the present old pier, many obstructions such as logs, old timber, portions of the former bridge which had been destroyed, and one of the old boiler caissons filled with concrete which supported the former bridge, had to be cut through or encompassed in driving the steel sheet cofferdam. All of these obstructions being covered with from six to ten feet of stone filling it was manifestly impossible to remove these obstructions in the depth of water (varying from ten to fifteen feet) existing at the site of the old pier, by anything outside of a steam dredge which on account of the location of the bridge was out of the question.

From the best information that was obtainable by the committee or the engineer from those who claimed to be familiar with the foundation under the present pier, (and it might be stated that there seemed to be no unity of opinion among those who claimed to have first and personal knowledge of this foundation as to its construction and permanency) and from the fact that the pier was easily movable (which fact is attested to by members of the committee and many others) it was deemed advisable and in accordance with the best engineering advice, in order to secure a permanent foundation to remove the present old pier and excavate sufficiently to determine whether it would be necessary to carry a concrete foundation down to rock bottom, or put in a large spread supporting base within the cofferdam properly reinforced upon which to erect the new pier. As the sheet piling has already been driven to a sound foundation, either solid rock or a hard compacted gravel, it is highly improbable that there are large cracks in the rock bottom which will seriously interfere with the pumping out of the cofferdam, as the driving of the pile sections would have indicated whether there was any large cracks or not.

If, as is stated in one of the letters published, some of the original wood piles were not driven down to solid rock on account of entering large cracks in the rock bottom of the river, that in itself would be ample justification for removing the present old pier, and excavating to rock, or putting in a spread base of reinforced concrete as already mentioned, and this could only be done by the use of a cofferdam.

Only such amount of crib timber was ordered as was deemed necessary for the construction of the supporting cribs, bracing, etc. after allowing for the maximum amount of settlement of the cribs on the soft mud bottom when the weight of the bridge spans were placed upon the cribs, and while there was some timber that was not required to be used in the construction of the cribs, owing to a lesser settlement than was expected, it would have been poor policy in the writer's opinion to not have provided for any ordinary contingency when placing the weight of the bridge spans upon the cribs. This was proven by the fact that one crib after sinking had to be extended by the addition of more timbers in order to secure sufficient bearing and prevent the crib from shifting on the mud bottom of the river.

All timber was properly checked by the foreman on delivery, and no timber to the writer's knowledge has been disposed of without proper authority and accounting.

Owing largely to the large harvest it was with considerable difficulty that sufficient teams could be secured for hauling material to the work during the months of July, August and September, and the foreman, Mr. George Vanderwater informs the writer that all teams hauled as large loads of the heavy and green hemlock timbers and the steel sheet piling as could reasonably be expected, and many times the teams did not arrive at the bridge to unload their last load for the day until 7:30 in the evening.

One car containing 150 barrels of Portland cement was ordered for the work shortly before it was expected it would be required and was stored in the most convenient and dry place near the bridge. A portion of this car was used by the Corby Distillery without hauling to the bridge for which the county will receive pay for, and the balance excepting what has already been used in the work is safely stored and should not be damaged to any serious extent for concreting the pier. This car of cement has all been checked over by the foreman and all that has not already been used or sold will be available and required for the work.

Certain tools, rope, chain, blocks, etc. were very obligingly loaned to the foreman by some of the residents in the neighborhood of the bridge to save the purchase of new equipment by the county, and such tools, etc., as have not already been returned to the owners will be done so when desired, and in case of any that are broken or damaged, the owners will be properly recompensed.

Residents in the vicinity of the bridge were asked verbally and by telephone to furnish and deliver from time to time as required the necessary supply of cordwood fuel for the boilers but on several occasions could not or would not deliver the wood when it was required, and to prevent the shutting down of the work, the foreman sent a county team to get the wood. This can be certified by some of the parties furnishing the wood. It was also impossible for the foreman to estimate the amount of wood that might be required to complete the work of sinking the cofferdam, etc.

The hoisting engine, boiler, centrifugal pump and rock drill were rented from Mr. W. H. Harvey, the contractor for the new Trenton bridge, at $75.00 per month which is only a fair rental for expensive machinery of this kind, and saved the county purchasing new equipment. No charge is being made for this equipment at the present time. Mr. Harvey has rented the steam pile hammer from the county on the same basis. The steam boiler connected with the hoisting engine was never considered of sufficient capacity to operate the steam hammer, but did satisfactorily operate the hoist all the time the work was in progress. The steel beam supports for carrying the chain block which were placed in position to move the steam hammer from section to section could not be utilized on account of the unforeseen difficulties experienced in driving the piling, and the irregular shape of the cofferdam, but will still be available for pulling and lifting the piling and for carrying the moving skip used for excavating purposes.

The customary methods for tightening up the cofferdam have been used, the water before shutting down the work on account of adverse weather conditions, being lowered four feet, and with normal weather conditions which will ensure sufficient live steam pressure to operate the pumps to their maximum efficiency and capacity, there should be no serious difficulty in pumping out the cofferdam sufficiently to allow the necessary excavation being made. A steel sheet cofferdam of the same type and construction has recently been satisfactorily pumped out in connection with the work of constructing the new Trenton bridge.

In view of the fact that great trouble and expense has been caused the county in past years on account of the unstable character of the foundations to O'Brien's bridge (two or more bridges having been destroyed) and that when the present piers were constructed some twelve years ago, the writer is informed on reliable authority that Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., former Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, and one of the foremost engineers in Canada, then stated that while it was probably worth trying as an experiment, on account of cheapness of construction, to place the present concrete piers on the old foundations left from former bridges, that the only absolutely sure and permanent method would be to put down a new foundation along the lines as now being carried out, it would appear that better economy would be exercised at the present stage in securing a permanent and sound foundation, thus ensuring the future life and safety of the bridge superstructure.

It is to be hoped that anyone having criticisms to make in connection with this work, which has been carried out under difficult conditions, and which is being carried out to the best knowledge and ability of both the committee and engineer, will appear before the County Council at its next session, at which time and place intelligent and fair explanations of the entire work will no doubt be available.

WEDDING BELLS

WEESE—ROBERTS

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Roberts, Trenton, Ontario, on January 12th, when their youngest daughter, Myrtle Blanche, became the wife of Mr. Norman Weese of Albury, Ontario. At half-past two o'clock, to the strains of "Here Comes The Bride," played by Mrs. John Wilson, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the parlor. She looked charming in a gown of white silk crepe and shadow lace trimmed with pearls. She carried white carnations and wore the groom's gift, a beautiful pearl brooch.

After the ceremony, which was performed by Canon F. W. Armstrong, the young couple led the way to the dining room, which was prettily decorated with pink and white carnations, and where a delicious luncheon was served.

The young couple left amid showers of confetti on the evening train for Eastern points. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue broad cloth and black velvet hat. The costly and beautiful presents show the high esteem in which the young people are held. We wish them every happiness.

Can he get away with it?

The drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee, from 1½ to 3 grains to the average cup, hurts many tea or coffee drinkers, at some time of life, and often hurts them hard.

Caffeine is a powerful irritant that unsteadies the nerves, races the heart, disorganizes the digestive organs and plays havoc with the health of a large proportion of tea or coffee users.

Of course, there are some who go on drinking tea or coffee for years, without apparent harm, at least they don't suspect it, until the cumulative drug, caffeine, has got in its work. Isn't it the best plan to play safe with health—quit both tea and coffee and use

A-CHOO!

Don't sneeze!

That is, don't sneeze in public places.

If you must ka-choo—go down to the water-front, or to the Kingston Road rifle range or some other place with a wide angle.

Just now there are probably 3,000 people in various stages of influenza in this city.

And all because somebody sneezed!

Don't think it's unimportant whether people have grip or not. It is, as a matter of fact, a point of prime importance.

A siege of it is frequently preliminary to pneumonia, or the weakened condition arising therefrom makes many people easy prey to other diseases.

Of itself grip is serious, regardless of what it may induce. This year the whole nation is in its clutches, the most serious epidemic since 1885 or thereabouts.

It's a big factor when it gets fairly started. Back in Napoleonic days when Wellington and the Little Corporal were wrestling in the Peninsula campaign, grip gained such a hold that both armies laid down their weapons and sneezed at each other for days.

It might be a good plan by which to minimize the slaughter over-seas, but Fate exercises her usual perversity with the result that the grip germ is lodged on this side of the seas where it isn't needed.

You can do your own small part in diminishing the casualties by observing simple rules, one of which—to remember easily—can be set to Samuel Clemen' swinging little refrain:

Sneeze, brother, but sneeze with care.
Never in the presence of the passengaire!

FILL UP THE BATTALIONS.

The Christmas holidays necessarily brought some interruption to recruiting, and there is all the more reason now that this work should be taken up with renewed energy, not only by the military men and civilians who have been most active in the matter, but by the people at large.

There are thousands of men in this province who rejoiced in the patriotism of the first detachments we sent to the war, who cheered the men who went, who praised them. Again, last Sunday hundreds gathered in one of our churches in honor of the boys in khaki.

By urging our sons to go and by keeping green the memories of those who have fallen our people have committed themselves not only to a general support of the work of prosecuting the war but to personal and constant participation in the work of filling up the new battalions.

Our men in the winter trenches are calling for their friends at home. Canada has undertaken to double the 250,000 men authorized up to a few weeks ago. Men who are being enlisted today will have to undergo a considerable period of preparation before they are fit for active service, and it will therefore be spring or summer before they can hope to join the forces in the field. This coming period is the critical one of the whole war. This year the Empire must strike with all its vigor.

Before every town, village and parish in Ontario now must be kept constantly the daily thought that every part of the province must provide a larger contribution to the regiments now being formed. Every leader of our race who has recently discussed the progress of the war has repeated with all gravity the statements of His Majesty the King, of Earl Kitchener, of Mr. Asquith and others, that victory is possible only if the whole Empire rises this year to the high level of its duty by pouring an ever-broadening stream of reinforcements into the battle line.

More than ever, then, this is the duty of the hour for everyone in Ontario, not merely the duty of recruiting officer and of civilian committees, but the duty of every individual. The men in the winter trenches must not call in vain. Victory is only for those who show themselves worthy of freedom in this testing crisis.

UNION BANK

Reports Good Profits and an Expanded Business.

The Union Bank of Canada, that old-established institution which, originating in the city of Quebec, placed its headquarters a few years ago in Winnipeg in order to be more closely in touch with the growth of the great west, presents a remarkably satisfactory statement for the year ending November 30, 1915. It is worthy of note that, so sound is the business of this bank and so well-selected its assets, that it has been able throughout the entire period of stringency and war difficulties to maintain sufficient profits to pay its customary dividends and bonus, to keep up its contribution to Officers' Pension Fund, to make full provision for depreciation of securities and other contingencies, and not only to refrain from drawing upon its accumulated balance or its Rest Account but to add a substantial sum to the balance each year.

The profits this year amounted to $659,688 as compared with $712,440 in 1914 and $750,095 in 1913—a very moderate shrinkage indeed in a year of universally diminished bank earnings. This represents 13.2 per cent. on the capital stock of which 9 per cent. was distributed in dividends and bonus, 3 per cent. was applied to Contingent Account war-tax, amounting to $45,730 and Pension Fund $10,000 leaving $106,976.75 to be carried forward at credit of Profit & Loss Account.

These very satisfactory profits were earned upon a balance which is in a highly strong condition, and has been rendered considerably more liquid during the year. Deposits show a heavy increase over the figure of 1914—interest deposits five millions greater, non-interest deposits four and a half millions greater. As against these the total assets are altogether more than 90½ millions against 81½ millions a year ago. There is a very great increase in the cash, securities and call loans items which make up the liquid reserve, which is 47.92% of liabilities to the public. That this increase, however, has not been secured at the expense of the commercial clients of the Bank is amply evident from the fact that current loans and discounts in Canada are $48,941,315 being less than two millions below the figure of 1914 (which was $50,866,365) and considerably above the figure of 1913, namely $46,798,969. As evidence of the quality of the assets and of the improvement in credit conditions it may be noted that the amount of overdue paper has been greatly reduced and is now well below the figure which might be expected in proportion to the volume of the business.

MOBILIZING FOR TRADE WAR

The President of the British Board of Trade is convinced that Germany is feeling severely the economic pressure brought about by the activities of the British fleet. He proposes to increase that pressure if the necessity should arise, by a zollverein to include all the Allies for the period of the war. But whether such a customs union be established or not, every effort will be made, both now and in the peace-time to come, to capture the world-trade of Germany. It is not proposed to allow Germany to rehabilitate herself economically after the war at the expense of the Allies who have suffered so much at her hands.

This is right and proper. Germany had the markets of Britain wide open to her before the war; the seas of the world were hers to traffic in; yet she threw away all her enormous gains to embark on a suicidal war; and now she must abide by the penalty.

Mr. Runciman announced that the Overseas Dominions and the Mother Country will more closely co-operate in the future in all matters of trade and commerce. He did not, however, hold out any hope for free trade within the Empire, for, he said, "the colonies were determined to raise their revenue and foster their industries in their own way."

Germany's bid for world-trade was based on a domestic zollverein; the British Empire in this instance could do worse than fight the enemy with his own weapon.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, Jan. 18, 1868.

The death of Capt. Ransford; late of the 104th Regiment is announced. He served in 1812, and took part in the famous march of that regiment to Canada.

Information is received that a very violent hurricane recently prevailed at Teneriffe and in the vicinity. Ships were driven to sea; houses unroofed and blown down.

A story is rumored that the whole volunteer force will be probably called upon to do frontier duty at an early date.

The Poets' Corner

The Search-Lights.

Shadow by shadow, stripped for flight,
The lean black cruisers search the sea,
Night-long their level shafts of light
Revolve and find no enemy.
Only they know each lapping wave
May hide the lightning and their grave;

And, in the land they guard so well,
Is there no silent watch to keep?
An age is dying; and the bell
Rings midnight on a vaster deep;
But over all its waves once more
The search-lights move from shore to shore;

And captains that we thought were dead,
And dreamers that we thought were dumb,
And voices that we thought were fled,
Arise and call us, and we come;
And "Search in thine own soul," they cry,
"For there, too, lurks the enemy."

Search for the foe in thine own soul,
The sloth, the intellectual pride,
The trivial jest that veils the goal
For which our fathers lived and died;
The lawless dreams, the cynic art,
That rend thy nobler self apart.

Not far, not far into the night
These level swords of light can pierce;
Yet for her faith does England fight,
Her faith in this our universe,
Believing Truth and Justice draw
From founts of everlasting law.

Therefore a Power above the State,
The unconquerable Power returns,
The fire, the fire that made thee great,
Once more upon her altar burns.
Once more, redeemed and healed and whole,
She moves to the Eternal Goal.

An Indian's Comment.

Are we civilized? A young woman who visited the Grand canyon a few weeks ago had an educated Indian as a guide one day, and as the party went along they saw a father, aggravated by something his young son had done, stop on the edge of the canyon and give the boy a thorough spanking. The Indian was indignant. "That is what I call barbarous," he exclaimed. "Now, that boy will always remember this great canyon as the place where he received a spanking. He might have carried a picture of its grandeur in his mind that would have assisted in developing him, but now all that is spoiled. We Indians don't do things that way. We expect our children to endure pain, but we don't inflict it." And wasn't the Indian right?

Firedamp.

Firedamp is the ordinary name for the carbureted hydrogen which issues from "blowers" or fissures in coal seams. It is inflammable, and when mixed with air in certain proportions is highly explosive. Its ignition is attended by the danger of an explosion of coal dust.

His Adventurous Life.

"Uncle, have you had many exciting adventures in your life?"

"Oh, yes, my boy. Several times I have been caught in automobiles driven by fool friends who wanted to show me that their cars could make sixty miles an hour."

Think and Live Long.

Brain workers, according to a medical expert, live longer than muscle workers. Those who make use of both live longer than either, and the greater brain workers live longer than the lesser ones. "Life insurance companies realize the progressive shortening of life as one goes down in the scale of education when they refuse to accept illiterates because they are bad risks."

What He Lacked.

"They tell me," said the innocent maid, "that your marriage was the result of love at first sight. Is it true?"

"It is," answered the round shouldered man sadly. "Had I been gifted with second sight I'd still be in the bachelor class!"

Music and Madness.

Handel and Mozart each died insane, while both Donizetti and Schumann composed much of their very best work while actually inmates of lunatic asylums.

Sure Proof.

Wife—It's a mystery to me that I didn't see these faults in you before we were married. Hub—No mystery about it, my dear. I didn't possess them then.

What is called luck, good or bad, is only the result of the operation of the

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, we report to the Shareholders as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet with the books and vouchers at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In addition to our verification at the 30th November, we have, during the year, checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches and found them to be in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

Winnipeg, 20th December, 1915.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Galt, the Chair was taken by Mr. R. T. Riley, Vice-President.

The Vice-President Address

The statement, which we have placed before you to-day discloses a condition of the Bank which should be very gratifying considering that we are in the midst of a war which has caused an unparalleled dislocation of the world's commerce and finances.

The finances of the Dominion have been conducted during the past year with comparatively little help from outside, and although we shall have to make further borrowings for war purposes, there need be no misgivings as to our ability to repay such obligations.

Trade conditions in Canada have distinctly improved. Orders for war materials and supplies have exceeded all expectations, and the decease of foreign trade is now in our favor and likely to continue so for some time, as there is still a lot of grain to be exported from the crop of 1915.

Our share of the cost of the war has not yet fallen upon us, and it is the paramount duty of every corporation and private individual to exercise the strictest economy, both in public and private life, so that when we are called upon to pay our share we shall not be found unprepared.

Canada has every cause for thankfulness that we have been blessed with a bountiful harvest beyond the expectations of the most optimistic, and as a result the farmers of the West are to-day in a better and safer condition than ever before.

With reference to conditions in England, our London Manager reports that the effect of the war on general business in Great Britain has been confusing, and that while there have been no repetitions of the financial upheavals of the previous year, the burden of hostilities has made great inroads into accumulated wealth, and further disorganized the complex industrial and financial life of the nation.

The United States for the time being has become the money market of the world, and it is pleasing to note the satisfactory manner in which the recent Canadian loan of $45,000,000 has been received, as well as various Provincial, Municipal and Railway loans aggregating in the total about $140,000,000. It is the duty of every financial institution to see that all offerings should be thoroughly sound, and of the highest character.

Our policy for the coming year will remain the same. We shall be conservative, at the same time extending to our customers as liberal treatment as conditions and sound banking will warrant.

General Manager's Address

The year just closed has been one of much anxiety to bankers, and we are pleased to have come through it in such a satisfactory manner.

Reserves—Referring more particularly to the statement which has been presented to you the percentage of Liquid Assets to total Liabilities to the public amount to $47.92 per cent. as compared with 36.27 per cent. last year.

Prifits—The profits for the year were $659,688.01. This is $52,752.47 less than the previous year, which, under trying and abnormal conditions, and the maintaining of such large idle reserves, must be regarded as satisfactory. They have been sufficient to pay the usual dividend of 8 per cent. and a bonus of 1 per cent., making a grant of $10,000 to the Officers' Pension Fund, providing for $45,730.77 War Tax on circulation and set aside $150,000 for contingencies, besides having made adequate provision for all losses.

Circulation—Notes of the Bank in circulation have increased $1,300,000.

Desposits—Total deposits of $72,685,000 show a gratifying increase of $9,240,000.

Balances due to and by Other Banks Balances due by Banks outside of Canada show an increase of $3,050,000 over 1914.

Gold and Silver Coin and Dominion Government Notes amount to $9,257,000, which is $2,140,000 more than in the previous statement.

Cheques on Other Banks amounted to $3,556,000, being $1,120,000 greater than last year.

Investments—There is little change in the Bank's Investments. The increase of $115,000 represents the initial payment on the Bank's subscription to Canada's first War Loan of $100,000,000. The amount allotted to this Bank was $986,400, which has since been fully paid for.

Call and Short Loans—Call and Short Loans in Canada are $4,624,000 higher and are against bonds of a high order.

Current Loans and Discounts—Current Loans and Discounts in Canada have been reduced by $1,925,000.

Total Assets—The total Assets of the Bank have risen to the large amount of $90,663,000 as against $81,561,000 last year, an increase of $9,100,000.

General Remarks—Enforced liquidation has been in progress throughout Canada for the past two years, but the strain has been lighter than was anticipated. This period will be extended until normal conditions are resumed, but the future is faced with feelings of hopefulness and every confidence. The chief factors which have contributed to this lightening of our burdens are thrift, strict economy, the lessening of expenditure on capital account, balance of trade with Great Britain being in Canada's favor and bountiful harvests.

The gratifying results of the past season's crops have enabled farmers to liquidate their obligations very largely, and every encouragement is being offered by Provincial Governments in Western Canada to go more extensively into mixed farming.

Staff—It will be of interest to our Shareholders to know that 315 members of our staff have volunteered for overseas military duty, of these, we regret to announce, nine have been killed in action, and to their sorrowing relatives our sympathy is extended; 21 have been wounded and 285 are still on active service. Too much praise cannot be extended to the 1,476 remaining members of the staff who are so loyally and cheerfully performing additional duties and working longer hours whilst their fellow clerks are fighting for the Empire.

Mr. E. L. Drewry seconded the motion for the adoption of the report.

The motion was then adopted.

Auditors, Messrs. T. Harry Webb, C.A.; E. S. Read, C.A.; and C. R. Hegan, C.A., of the firm Webb, Read, Hegan, Callingham and Company, were reappointed auditors.

The following were elected the Directors for the ensuing year:—Sir William Price, Messrs. John Galt, R. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, Wm. Shaw, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Stephen Haas, Major-General John W. Carson, C.B.; J. S. Hough, K.C.; B. B. Cronyn, Hume Blake, K.C.; R. O. McCulloch.

Boys and Playgrounds.

I do not know of any better way to teach a boy to be honorable and straight than to give him a chance to play with his comrades, says Justice Hughes. In the playground he learns because he does not want anybody else to cheat him, and he is "down" on the boy that does not play fair; he will establish standards of conduct which we must maintain in the community and particularly in our great cities. If there is one thing that we need more than another it is the constant emphasis among our citizens of that spirit of fair play, that willingness to give and take, that generosity in defeat and that lack of assertiveness in victory which we identify with true sport and which is learned best of all in childhood upon the playground.

A Singular Marriage Custom.

The Kurds have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marrige custom, which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, carries his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and is desperately assaulted the whole way by a number of girls. Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who in the coming home with his bride can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the irate amazons often inflict on him marks which he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to

An Old London Paper.

On Sept. 8, 1666, a special number of the London Gazette was issued, the reason being, as described in its first paragraph: "The ordinary course of this paper having been interrupted by a sad and lamentable accident of fire lately happened in the city of London, it hath been thought fit for satisfying the minds of so many of his majestie's good subjects, who must needs be concerned for the issue of so great an accident, to give this short, but true, accompt of it."

The first number had been published on Nov. 14, 1665, when the court was at Oxford on account of the great plague, and the paper was therefore called at first the Oxford Gazette. With its twenty-fourth number, however, it became the London Gazette, by

TOO MUCH OF THE SAME THING

By F. A. MITCHEL

While Donald and Rosamond Burke were courting the hours they could spend together were interminable. Donald would go home, after sitting sometimes till 2 o'clock in the morning, wondering what in the world they had found to talk about. Rosamond would go up to her room regretting that the next evening she must pass without her lover, for her father would not consent to his calling oftener than twice a week.

But there came a time after their marriage when this was changed. To their surprise the evenings began to seem long. Then Donald about 9 o'clock would stretch himself on a lounge and go to sleep. If any friend dropped in there was instant relief. Both husband and wife would brighten up, the hours would fly, and bed time would come too soon.

But they lived in a city where distances were great, and not being especially intimate with their neighbors, there were few to drop in on them socially. They had both been in society before marriage, but as soon as they became engaged they were sure they would never care to keep up the work attending a membership of a large social circle or enjoy the society of any one except each other. They had therefore dropped out entirely.

Donald was a thinker. When anything went wrong he was accustomed to think out the cause. "Cause and effect rule the world" was a favorite phrase of his. When he found that instead of spending six hours on a stretch with Rosamond and wishing they were eight he could now scarce spend one without being bored he set himself about looking for the cause. Not long after he had found it he said to his wife one day at dinner:

"My dear, I wish to call your attention to a matter concerning your providing our food. Don't continue to place on the table any one article continuously. No matter how much one likes tomatoes, if we have them every day we will grow tired of them."

"Just so," said madam.

"And the same cause pertains to another matter of much greater importance. For the same reason that a person can't eat tomatoes every day continuously he or she can't associate with any one person exclusively. There is no truer adage than 'Variety's the spice of life.'"

"I see what you mean. I have noticed it for some time—you have become tired of me."

Some time was occupied in getting over this obstacle to a plan Mr. Burke had formed, and, forcing his wife to admit that they would be better off if they were not so closely tied together, then he continued:

"I propose that one night in the week—say Saturday—we each go out somewhere separately and see other persons besides ourselves. We need not say where we are going, though that shall be optional."

"I know very well where you will go. You will be behind the scenes at the theater. That was your favorite way of spending an evening before we became engaged."

"I don't think," replied the husband, "that I would care to return to that. I shall probably go where I can meet intellectual persons. Where do you expect to go?"

"I can't go anywhere without an escort."

"Humph! I did not think of that. Whom do you propose to call in for the purpose? Your brother Tom, I suppose."

"I shall call on any one I choose. Tom wouldn't do at all. He has too much on hand to give his time to me."

Donald was not so infatuated with his plan after this. There was a great disadvantage in it on his part. He could go alone, but his wife must have an attendant. This attendant might be an attractive man. It would be necessary that the escort should know that the reason he was called upon to take the lady out was because she was tired of her husband. Donald didn't like the scheme so well as he had thought he did. But he had gone too far to recede.

When the first Saturday came round on which the couple were to see others besides themselves before Donald went to business his wife said to him:

"I think, dearie, that you had better dine at your club or somewhere else, and I will dine at Mary Edwards'. She says she will be delighted to have me. So goodby till we meet tonight. Don't be out after 11."

"Why can't we dine at home?"

"Why, I've thought that a dinner at the club with some of your old friends would do you good."

Donald made no reply to this. He kissed his wife goodby, or, rather, suffered her to kiss him. He was thinking that this dining apart would prevent his knowing who would be his wife's escort, and in that he was very much interested.

After business he repaired to his club and looked about for some of his old friends with whom to dine. It was astonishing how the men about the club had changed since he had been married. In all the years of his membership he had not noticed so great a dropping away of old and a coming of new faces as had taken place in the brief period of his marriage. It did not occur to him that he had been standing still as a club member while the club had been marching on. Only two or three members whom he knew well were there, and they were either going home for dinner or had engagements to dine elsewhere. One old friend touched a sore spot in Burke's breast by saying:

"Hello, old man, got back to the club, have you? They all do in time, but it generally takes longer than in your case."

"I've not come back to the club permanently," replied Burke with offended dignity. "I've come because—because—there is no dinner served at home today."

"I see, cook got on a rampage and lit out. That's one of the troubles of married life, you know."

Burke dined alone in a room big enough to seat 200 persons, and there were just twenty men in it. Nothing tasted good to him, and he only half finished the bottle of wine he ordered. Having finished his meal, he went into the lounging room to smoke. There was no news in the evening papers to speak of, and, as for the Parisian illustrated journals with their vivid pictures that used to be so attractive to him, they disgusted him.

He received a pleasurable sensation in being called to the telephone. Rosamond's voice made his heart throb quicker.

"Is that you, dearie?" she asked.

"Yes, sweetheart."

"Having a good time?"

"Pretty good. How about you?"

"Oh, I'm having a splendid time! Mary invited my escort to dine with us. He and I are just going out together."

Mr. Burke made no reply to this. He was thinking about the escort.

"Give my love to the chorus girls," came from Mrs. Burke.

"Eh?"

"Ta-ta! My escort is waiting for me. I hope you'll have a jolly evening. Don't stay out all night."

A click, and Mr. Burke knew that there was nothing further to be said. It was just as well, for he had nothing to say outwardly, though he had a lot to say inwardly.

Several ways of passing the evening suggested themselves to him. He would go to a theater where he had been once well known behind the scenes, in the morning, if his wife did not give a good account of herself, he would fling chorus girls at her. Another plan was to go to the club library and read till midnight. A third was to go home and hide in a room on the top story and let his wife worry till 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. He hoped by that time she would be hysterical.

He tried the library; but, finding that he had read one page over several times and still did not know what was in it, he went to the theater, sat awhile looking at a play he had formerly thought very funny, but which now tired him; then went around to the stage door and was admitted by the same official he had known when a bachelor.

How tawdry the scant costumes of the ballet girls! How frightful the paint and powder! Burke left the theater and when outside among the flaring electric signs debated how he would get through the rest of the evening. Looking at his watch, he saw that it was only 9 o'clock. What would he do with the rest of the evening?

He returned to the club, knocked the balls about on the billiard table, looked at his watch three times in half an hour and at 10 o'clock went home. It was the stillest house he ever entered. He walked the floor till 11. If his wife had gone to the theater she would likely be home within a few minutes. Between 11 and a quarter past seemed two hours. Going to the front door, he opened it and looked out. No wife in sight. Slamming the door behind him, he strode away to Mary Edwards'. Pulling the bell violently, he was admitted by the lady herself.

"Where's my wife?" he asked sharply.

"Upstairs getting on her wraps to go home. The carriage will be here in a few minutes."

"Where's her escort?"

"What escort?"

"Is that you, dearie?" came a lugubrious voice from a landing above.

Down came Mrs. Burke.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said. "Mary has been very good to me, but I've been worrying about you so that"—

"Worrying about me? Why, haven't you been anywhere?"

"Nowhere but here."

"There's the carriage," remarked Miss Edwards, hearing a sound of wheels without.

"I've had a horrid evening," said Mrs. Burke as they drove home locked in each other's arms.

"So have I," replied the husband.

"I don't like your plan at all."

"Nor I. We won't do it again, will we?"

"No, indeed."

"I bored Mary dreadfully. She tried hard to amuse me, but failed."

"I dined alone at the club and had a miserable time of it."

"What did you do after dinner?"

"I went to the theater."

"Behind the scenes?"

"Yes, but the girls were not as attractive as before I met you, dearest."

Burke gave the cabman a five dollar bill without calling for change.

"Reckon them's just married," remarked the cabman to himself as he drove away chuckling.

CANADA'S FISH FARMS

A BILLION FRY ARE FOSTERED BY GOVERNMENT EACH YEAR

Eggs Are Collected, Hatched, and Distributed to All Parts of the Dominion—Great Problem is to Protect the Youngsters From the Depredations of the Fish Which Prey Upon Small Fry.

It is not difficult to imagine that Canada's $25,000,000 trade in fish for 1914 should for this year be largely enhanced because of Great Britain's wholesale withdrawal of trawlers for trapping submarines. That our fishermen on the Atlantic coast and its inlets are finding their nets heavier because of the war is not so apparent. Gaspe's wonderful cod banks never yielded anything approaching the huge catch of this year; it is ascribed to the fish in the North Sea being disturbed by underwater craft and mines; if you don't believe it, you can get even by calling it a fish story by Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who says so.

This year the close season for salmon trout and whitefish was abolished on the Great Lakes, which means the present, their spawning season, says The Toronto Star Weekly. It may indicate a war measure, to try and capture some of the 750,000 ton market which British trawlers have largely lost; or the Dominion Government may be sincere in averring it an experiment, and designed to hugely augment the catch of female fish to supply Canada's hatcheries with spawn. The latter result is certainly being achieved, and a prodigious supply of eggs is daily being dispatched to the breeding depots at Collingwood, Belleville, Wiarton, Point Edward, etc. Even Sir Sam's personally conducted department is not busier these weeks than the hustling branch of the Fisheries with their more than fifty hatcheries to populate.

While the Dominion concerns itself about commercial fish — salmon, whitefish, halibut, etc., lobsters, and oysters — Ontario as a Province anxious to cater to tourists, is encouraged to conserve similarly her natural supply of sporting fish—black bass, sturgeon, 'lunge, pickerel, speckled trout, etc. Maine is a sportsman's State; it is said she earns annually over $30,000,000 in recreation traffic; her motto that Ontario yearns to copy is "Tourists, and more tourists."

The procedure is decidedly interesting. Last week the first shipment of speckled trout eggs, numbering 150,000, arrived from Haliburton at Mt. Pleasant hatchery, near Brantford, which is furnished with extensive brooding ponds. To secure these the fish were netted and the eggs and milk deftly pressed by skilful hands into tubs, where they are stirred together and the eggs fertilized. In the hatchery follow several washings and then they are transferred to glass jars. The quantity of eggs per fish varies according to species; whitefish and pickerel yielding about 35,000. One of the jars will hold 150,000 whitefish or 250,000 pickerel eggs, and in the hatcheries stand close together rows of them, generally in three tiers, so as to be readily in view of the overseer every minute of the day. Through each jar passes constantly a stream of pure water fed at the bottom, the overflow discharging at the mouth of the vessel; this prevents the coagulation of the egg mass and its consequent destruction. The whitefish ova being collected now will hatch in these jars in about five months, being ready for distribution next May. Pickerel break their tender shells in six weeks, but are gathered as a rule in May. Upon hatching, these fry are placed in large vessels to find their "legs," and in a week are ready for shipment in cans to the point where a Government boat is ready to convey and dump them in the best-suited localities.

"Dog eat dog" is a saying which more truly might have been "Fish eat fish," for the latter are cannibalistic to a degree. Experts agree, were it not so, that fish culture would be unnecessary. Extremely few of the eggs naturally deposited by a female fish are ever fertilized. Of these few only a portion of one per cent. ever hatch; they are devoured by living fish, big and little. Fish culture practice first ensures fertilization and then protection from its own species; the hatcheries boast that of the eggs treated they only lose about fifteen per cent. However, Master Fish's troubles are not passed when our parental Government dumps him over the side of the launch into his native element; for big fishes eat small fishes, and the race is to the swift and the battle to the strong unless Master Fish proves a veritable artful dodger. Comparatively few can reach maturity.

It only means "more hatcheries," and even now the hatcheries in Canada are annually yielding well over a billion fish of different kinds.

Black bass, in which Ontario sportsmen so delight, cannot be treated in ordinary mechanical hatcheries, owing to the nature of their ova. They are pesting fish, and have to be retained in brood ponds where they hatch out naturally, but free from the devouring maw of hungry fish enemies that they would face otherwise. From 100 parent bass it is usual to secure 5,000 fry.

It is interesting to note that fish-breeding in this country started from the private fish hatchery established by the late Samuel Wilmot at Newcastle, Ont., and which was taken over by the Dominion Government in Confederation year, he being for many years chief superintendent of the country's fish depots which gradually came into existence.

The subsidizing by the Government of factories for the manufacture of dye-stuffs was suggested at a meeting of the Tanners' Section of the Board of Trade.

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1914.

"Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

WHEN THE SUN DIES.

Deadly Havoc the Change Will Enact Upon Our Poor Planet.

"If the sun should go out how long would it be before darkness would appear on the earth?" asks a reader.

Eight minutes, eighteen seconds and five hundred and sixty-six one-thousandths of a second!

At the end of that brief interval of time the blue curtain of day would disappear as if an almighty hand had snatched it off, and the dome of night, spangled with stars, would instantaneously arch the earth. We would be plunged into darkness so quickly that for a moment nothing would be visible. Then the piercing rays of the stars would begin to affect our eyes, and after that, gradually, our immediate surroundings would dimly emerge from the gloom. There would be starlight, but no moonlight, for the moon shines only with reflected sunlight.

At first the disappearance of the light would be the thing most troublesome to us, but as time went on a chill would begin to creep over the sunless earth, and out of the dark and frozen air, all around the globe, a pallid snow would descend, as the atmospheric moisture condensed. When days and weeks had elapsed the awful cold of outer space would chill the atmosphere down to the earth's surface and animal and vegetable life would alike perish in the endless winter of universal night!

Clever Ruse.

Even more than a fee gratefully paid does a humorous physician enjoy an extra fee adroitly drawn from the hand of a reluctant payer. Sir Richard Jebb was once paid three guineas by a nobleman from whom he had a right to expect five. Sir Richard dropped the coins on the carpet, when a servant picked up and restored them—three and only three. Instead of walking off Sir Richard continued his search on the carpet.

"There must be two still on the floor," was the answer, "for I have only three." The hint, of course, was taken, and the right sum was put down.

The Scorpion's Wonderful Ear.

I have studied the habits of the scorpion for many years and have often noticed how very sensitive scorpions are to the most delicate sound, musical or otherwise. Under the thorax the scorpion has two comblike appendages, which are the antennae (pectinatae). It is pretty well settled by physiologists and entomologists that in insects the antennae represent the organs of hearing. These delicate structures are easily affected by the vibrations of sound, and there can be no doubt whatever that they are also affected by sounds quite inaudible to the human ear. The slightest vibration of the atmosphere from any cause whatever at once puts in motion the delicate structures which compose the antennae, to which organs insects owe the power of protecting themselves against danger as well as the means of recognizing the approach of one another.—London Spectator.

German Spy School at Antwerp

Four Weeks' Course of Instruction Fits Amateurs For Work of Espionage

During the hearings in the case of Marie Therese le Philipponat at Geneva, to which reference was made in recent despatches, it developed that the German General Staff is maintaining a spy school at Antwerp. In regard to the work of this establishment lately arrived newspapers give further details. The spy school receives its recruits from neutral and occupied countries, where the German information service has agents assigned. These locate any persons who may seem willing and well equipped for espionage and send them to the Antwerp institution. Here they are put through a course of instruction lasting four weeks under the tutelage of General Staff officers, police commissionaries, and a professor of chemistry.

The military officers teach the pupils everything relative to the enemy's armies, their composition, the distinguishing marks of different arms and corps, how to compute numbers of various units and estimate the strength of a detachment occupying a transport train of so and so many cars, etc.

On the police officers falls the important task of teaching the neophytes all the little tricks of their trade. The prospective spies are instructed in the accepted methods of ferreting out the secret of their rivals the foreign police and espionage agents. They also get trained in the ways of acting and answering at an inquiry, in order to pull themselves out of a hole should they have the mischance of getting caught. Besides, the commissionaries give the students when graduated their respective numbers of identification, as well as an index of their colleagues already in the service, so that they may be able to appeal for assistance from the latter in case of need.

The role of the professor of chemistry is rather complex. He instructs the pupils in the code to be employed, as well as in the preparation of special invisible inks for correspondence and of reagents necessary to bring out the writing in letters written by other spies with ink of this kind.

Don't Let Soap Spoile your Hair

When you wash your hair be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any durg store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in; about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Whisky For Cow His Novel Excuse

GODERICH, Jan. 17.—Robert Collinson, who keeps a boarding house here, apparently thinks it wise to change the "bill of fare" occasionally, and is now experimenting by giving whiskey to his cow. Collinson was brought before Police Magistrate Kelly for bringing liquor into the county, for other than his personal use, and when the case was being tried ten days ago he was not able to satisfy the Magistrate to what he had done with a gallon and a half of whiskey which he had disposed of in six days, as he swore that in the previous fourteen days a quart was sufficient for his appetite. During the interval of the adjournment Collinson discovered that he had given three quarts of the whiskey to his cow, apparently thinking that his would be a satisfactory explanation, but Magistrate Kelly did not think that milk so flavored would be up to standard, and fined Collinson $50 and costs.

UNITED STATES NOT LIKELY TO GO TO WAR

(FROM THE VANCOUVER NEWS-ADVERTISER.)

With all due deference to Lloyds and other investors in probabilities we do not think that the United States is on the verge of war with Austria. If the submarine outrages continue public opinion may force the President into some course more effective than messages. He has already pretty well exhausted the language of imperative yet peaceful diplomacy. The language does not now serve any serious purpose. It brings out explanations and promises, but the offences go on just the same. How much longer the United States will protest and threaten, and the Teutons parley and butcher remains to be seen. There must be a limit, but it is not yet in sight.

President Woodrow Wilson is a sagacious and conservative ruler. He will always keep a little behind popular demand. If ever he enters into this war it will be when the unquestioned, insistent and urgent demand of public opinion compels it. He will be driven by a public sentiment so strong and so aggressive that he will seem to be almost a traitor to his countrymen if he refuses. This will be so even if the President follows his own inclinations. For a war with a group of European Powers would be such an awful and momentous event, that the President will not undertake it unless he is able to prove that he is carrying out the order of the people.

This is election year and the people have it in their power to reward or punish the President who fails to represent them. It has always been charged that the war of 1812 was brought on by a president and cabinet with a view to the re-election of the former. Mr. Woodrow Wilson is not that kind of a president, but the fact that this is presidential year cannot be forgotten, and he will not be so well able to ignore public opinion as he would at another time. In a few months the parties will be nominating their candidates and making platforms. The slaughter of United States citizens by German and Austrian submarines will be discussed at conventions, and the course of the President in regard to these matters will be an element in the political campaign.

The Allies do not seem anxious for United States to participate in this European war. If the United States becomes a party to the war, even at this late hour, that nation would naturally claim a large share in deciding when and on what terms peace would be made. Though the United States would probably not join the Entente Alliance, and would not intend to fight against any country except those with whom she had a quarrel of her own, she would eventually be drawn into the campaign, so that she would hardly be able to make a separate peace.

There are many who say that the United States could not take much share in the European war because she has few soldiers and could not use her strong navy. That would be so if the war is within a few months of the end. But the United States can raise a volunteer army of a million or two million men as well and as soon as Britain could. She can train them nearly as soon and as well. She could have half a million trained men in Europe within six months, and two million within a year, all supplied and equipped with arms and munitions.

Nevertheless Britain and Canada are well satisfied with the friendly neutrality of the United States. The control of the ocean makes it possible for the allies to use the resources of the United States and other neutral countries, to which Germany has little or no access. The submarine incident and the Teutonic conspiracies within the United States borders have strengthened the sympathy between the people of the United States and the Allies. If the United States finds sufficient cause of war with Germany and Austria, or either of them, the comradeship will be strengthened. But the present attitude of the United States toward the European belligerents is not unsatisfactory to the British people and nation, and they are not asking for a change.

Red Cross A National Service

The primary and foremost object of the Red Cross is the relief of the wounded. But we are all too optimistic with regard to the wounded. We have great confidence in the skill of modern surgeons, and we are apt to exaggerate the rapidity with which cases are cured.

As a matter of fact, a great burden of responsibility and expense is placed on the Red Cross every time a wounded man is taken into a hospital. His cure will require months of the utmost care and attention.

With the steady increase in casualties it is evident that the work of the Red Cross increases in geometrical proportion each day that passes. It has also a great and increasing obligation toward the prisoners of war, nor is it free from obligation toward the invalided and incapacitated soldier. The mere technicality of a government discharge does not relieve the Red Cross of its elementary duty of caring for the wounded man until he is completely restored to health. Even at the conclusion of peace there will be a large unpaid balance of Red Cross obligation.

To discharge these numerous obligations large sums of money are required. None of us are free from the duty of supporting the Red Cross. Its work is essentially a national service.

Those who wish a more practical and cogent argument for their contributions, than the general plea of sympathy and humanity, will find it in the fact that a prosperous Red Cross Society is a powerful stimulous to recruiting.

Men will be much more willing to risk their lives for their country when they see that our National Red Cross Society amongst other organizations is in a position to care for them in all eventualities even after the conclusion of peace.

FIRE DESTROYS BERGEN 20,000 ARE HOMELESS

Property Damage Estimated at $10,000,000—Dynamite Used by Firemen

CHRISTIANIA, Jan. 17.—Twenty thousand persons are homeless as a result of a fire which swept the city of Bergen to-day, causing property damage estimated at not less than $10,000,000.

The fire, which originated in the business district, gained rapid headway. The flames were fanned by a hurricane and soon all the largest business buildings, banks, hotels and newspaper offices, as well as the telephone and telegraph stations, were destroyed.

Efforts of the firemen and police to control the conflagration as the flames swept into the residential district proved futile and dynamite was used to blow up the buildings in the path of the fire.

War Made Bergen Prosperous

The difficulties of the 20,000 persons now without homes were increased by the fact that the largest storage houses, filled with provisions for supplying the surrounding country, were burned down. It is harder to obtain groceries to-day than at any time since the outbreak of the war.

Bergen never was so flourishing at the beginning of the present year, these conditions being due largely to the increased merchant marine.

Bergen is one of the oldest and most pictureque towns in Norway, and it ranks first of the Norwegian shipping centres. It is well built on a hilly peninsula and is situated at the end of a deep bay of the Atlantic nineteen miles northwest of Christiania. Through Bergen passes a large part of the foreign trade of Norway. Fleets of vessels bring the produce of the northern fisheries to the seaport.

Prohibition Is Federal Issue

OTTAWA, Jan. 17—What effect will the propaganda for nation-wide prohibition during the war have upon the present session of parliament?

This question is being asked by the members spending Sunday at the capital. The evening papers yesterday contained the call for nation-wide prohibition as a measure of economic conservation during the war, issued by J. R. Booth, Senator Edwards and the principal employers of labor in this part of the country. Tomorrow every member of parliament will receive a written invitation to declare himself, and petitions from every polling subdivision in Canada will soon be on their way to Ottawa.

There is no indication as yet that the government intends to bring down the desired legislation. That the subject will come up for a prolonged debate in the house of commons is evident.

It is quite possible that the government may answer the demand for nation-wide prohibition by saying that action should be taken in the first place by the provinces. The federal government has a great deal of money to raise, and prohibition would reduce the receipts of the inland revenue department by about $15,000,000 a year, but it is not believed that the loss of revenue would prevent prohibitory legislation if public sentiment earnestly and overwhelmingly demanded the same.

Use Any Household Recipe with Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal, and bake anything from it. If you like, eat hot from the oven. It won't ferment. It makes most delicious baking, prevents indigestion, is very nutritious, relieves constipation, or "money back." That's why a leading physician says it's a godsend to humanity. Especially try it in porridge, pancakes, and gems, but carefully follow directions on package for making porridge. For an early breakfast, cook the night before in a double boiler without stirring and warm in the morning by setting in boiling water while dressing. At grocers', 10c. and 25c.

Raising Fenceposts.

The increased demand for fenceposts has induced some far seeing farmers to raise them for sale as well as for their own use. It takes time, of course, to do this, yet a shorter period than most persons suppose. A plantation of locusts can be brought to fence post size in five years from seed. The seed are first scalded with boiling water and then after soaking overnight are sowed an inch apart in rows two feet apart. They are subsequently thinned to stand four inches apart and are mulched with straw during the first year. As they increase in size they are again thinned until they stand finally eight feet apart. From time to time as growth develops they are trimmed to prevent their becoming top heavy, and at the end of the fifth year they are ready for the market. Each tree will cut an average of three posts, and 650 trees are grown to the acre. In most localities these will sell for from 20 to 35 cents each, netting the farmer no less than $390, or $65 per acre per year. —Exchange.

Chocolate, Spanish Style.

To know the finest method for making chocolate or cocoa one must learn of the practice in Spain or in one of the Spanish American countries. There one finds out two important things. The first concerns the utensil in which the chocolate is made. Our nearest approach to this is an enameled ware double boiler. Indeed, this is a perfectly satisfactory substitute for the heavy and fragile chocolate pots favored by some of the Spanish countries. The second point is that chocolate is better if not served freshly made. Chocolate and cocoa are much smoother and the flavor is much improved if they are prepared some hours before service. Cook the chocolate in the enameled ware boiler very thoroughly. Set in a cool place and let stand until required. Then heat to the boiling point and serve either with or without whipped cream.

Geographical Forenames.

The name "Dardanelles," which one girl baby bears, is more musical than some geographical names with which children are burdened. Mrs. Andrew Lang tells of a family where the babies were named after the places where the father happened to be when he heard of their births. He being a courier, there were a St. Petersburg and a Naples, Kattegat and Skagerrak were the twins, while the only daughter was named Vienna.

Another curious geographical name is recorded in the "Souvenirs du Chevalier de Cussy." In 1820, when attached to the French embassy at Berlin, he met a Countess Bernstorff, who had been christened America because she was born there during the war of independence, her father at that time being in command of a Hessian regiment.—Pall Mall Gazette.

LET LAVERGNE ALONE: LET HIM HANG HIMSELF

Rev. Byron Stauffer Would Treat Him With Same Contempt He Got in Quebec

"Let British, Canadian, Protestant Toronto keep silence and let Mr. Armand Lavergne hang himself," said Rev. Byron Stauffer, speaking at Bond Street Church, Toronto, last night of the recent utterances of the Quebec Nationalist in the Legislature of that Province.

Rev. Mr. Stauffer first outlined briefly the policy of Mr. Lavergne and the other French Nationalists, and declared that his recent opposition in 1909 to the Canadian navy proposed by Sir Wilfrid and later his opposition to the Borden contribution policy.

"I vote to let him go now. I vote to let him hang himself on his own cord. It will save us much rope. Crown Attorney Corley tells me he cannot be arrested on a treason charge. The British way is to let men talk as they wish and not confine them or there might be an explosion. Mr. Lavergne wants to be a martyr, to undo the work of Archbishop Bruchesi. We must treat Bourassa and Lavergne with the silence and contempt that the members of the Quebec Legislature treated him with. We must drop him like a hot potato. Let Sir Sam Hughes take his rank away. It will make his look more silly."

UNDER THE SNOW.

Where the shambling mink, the leaping cotton-tail, and the nimble squirrel were eager to imprint the first inviting sheet of snow with many records of their varied activities there is now only a colony of feeble, timid meadow-mice, hurriedly laying out ramified tunnels under the snow. They must find joy in the transformation of the landscape. Before the snow made all things white no trace of them could be discerned. The marsh hawk flapped and soared low over the matted rushes and prostrate grass, but his keen scrutiny did not detect the careful, silent, shrinking little biders. Where fire cleared the ground last year's runways were still traced, and a small sunken dome of moss and fine grass here and there marked the brief habitation of a young brood. Only the abandoned nest could be found under the dome, with an entrance to the protecting marsh vegetation not yet converted to soil by successive yearly inundations. Through summer and fall the meadow-mice revealed no trace of their existence, but the first snow brought them energetically to life. Though affording but meagre shelter where it clings on the entangled grass, they dart through it along the newly-constructed runways, momentarily displaying their black backs where the white covering is broken, and again disappearing where the matted vegetation sustains the long, irregular canopies.

These preparations for winter would be covered and concealed by a few more inches of snow. Another fall would hide the diminutive world, leaving the nimble-footed and silent inhabitants to hurry unseen along their devious paths. They must enjoy the protection of the snow. When impelled by hunger to feast on the inner bark of small saplings they work up almost to the surface, but never out into the daylight. When small thickets or entanglements of sumach, sassafras, or maple are covered with mounds of snow they seem to mock the silent majesty of burdening winter by improving the opportunities of its concealment. Climbing to the smaller twigs and branches and stripping the bark with their long, paired incisors, they never venture to the surface of the white mounds. A round breathing-hole may reach the surface, but there is never any indication about its edge of curiosity regarding the outer world. Spring reveals the barked twigs, girdled trunks, and confused intricacy of runways through frozen grass, mosses, and matted weeds. Young fruit trees and other nursery stock may prove a temptation in winter. There may be serious depredations, for meadow-mice are very prolific and sometimes move in large swarms in search of more abundant food. Judging by their speed along the newly-designed runways, they may be extensive travelers.

The first snow promotes a time of recklessness between the summer concealment of low vegetation and the safety of the burying depths of winter. Between the beds of lightly-covered grass, where the hard ground is thinly coated, they dart across in startled haste; their short tails curved in outline against the background of white. In these open exposures the prints of their expanded toes seem ridiculously large for such small animals. There are enemies abroad. The marsh hawk is eager to take advantage of the unusual exposure. The invader who causes so much alarm in the snow and frozen grass may be in reality an assurance of safety. The strong-winged enemy flaps and curves threateningly at a distance, showing that he has fear and caution as well as rapacity. And the scurrying meadow-mice continue their preparation for winter, the feeble violence of their haste suggesting terror at the prospect of being found unprepared.—S. T. Wood in Toronto Globe.

Distribution.

"The question of distribution is one of the most serious of our time," remarked the ponderous man.

"It is," replied Miss Cayenne. "There is no telling what may happen to the simplest statement of innocent fact after it has been passed around by the gossips."

2,000,000 Belgians Depend on us for Bread!

Since shortly after the German invasion, the Belgians have depended for food entirely on the "Commission for Relief in Belgium". Their own store of food, even if not destroyed or pillaged, would last only three weeks—they have had no chance to raise more—and the ruthless Germans refuse to supply them!

Backed by the

so generously contributed in the British Empire and the United States, the neutral Belgian Relief Commission has imported enough wheat, flour and other foods to feed the whole nation so far. The great majority of the 7,000,000 Belgians left in the country have been able to pay for their daily allowance of bread—but a steadily growing number have no money left.

Unless we are willing to let these hundreds of thousands of women, children and old men starve, they must be fed at the expense of the Belgian Relief Fund. To make this possible someone must contribute nearly $3,000,000 a month—every month—all this winter!

No people under the Allied Flags are as well able to contribute generously as we Canadians! No cause has ever been more deserving of help! In the name of Justice and Humanity—for the sake of our own self-respect—let us give all we can to help our martyred Allies!

Libel.

Libel once meant any little book, but as many small tracts in the early days of printing were personal and offensive in character the word acquired its present significance.

The Skeptics.

Harvey's theory of the circulation of the blood was considered so ridiculous at the time of the discovery that for ten years not a single patient consulted him.

Beyond Him.

"I cawn't comprehend," said Cholly Tanspatts, "how it—aw—can be that the moon, doncherknow, makes the—aw—tides rise and fall—aw—when they rise and fall just the same when we—aw—have no moon, doncherknow, deah boy!"

Purdie's Panacea.

Tom Purdie, an old manservant in Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books" and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels and before I have read two pages it is sure to set me asleep."

Flooding the Magazine.

A flooding device to prevent the explosion of the powder magazine is fitted to most big battleships. By simply turning on a number of taps sea water is allowed to rush through pipes into the powder store, which is rendered harmless in case of fire.

HOCKEY CLUB FORMED

DESERONTO, Jan. 17.—At a meeting recently held to organize a hockey club the following were elected: President, T. Warren; vice-president, John Burns; secretary-treasurer, Geo. Houle; manager, J. K. Knowles, and Messrs. James Fairbairn and Bernard Marrigan as members of the executive. The club have written Belleville, Napanee and Picton to arrange a four-team league.

A PROFITABLE HERD

PICTON, Jan. 17.—Morden Gilbert of Hillview Farm, Sophiasburgh, has a herd of cows which have proven very profitable. In 1915 he milked ten cows, and up to Dec. 31st they had given 101,416 lbs. of milk, an average of 10,141 lbs per cow. The milk was sent to Ben Gill factory. The average price was $1.25 per hundred pounds, making the earnings of the herd $1,267.70, an average of $126.77 per cow. In 1914 Mr. Gilbert built a new barn and silo and equipped his stables with modern conveniences.

DEATH IN AN ACCIDENT

PICTON, Jan. 17.—Mrs. William Neilson, Gilead, received sad news from Buffalo. Her son-in-law, J. Denison, was the victim of a steam pipe explosion on the passenger train of which he was engineer. It happened just as the train was pulling into Buffalo. He and the fireman were blown clear of the engine. Mr. Denison has since died of his injuries. He has been in the employ of the same railroad company ever since he was a small boy.

PROVING VERY SUCCESSFUL

Well! how is your January Clearance Sale going? was the question we asked Bob, of the Gorman Boot Shop. Business is going along very satisfactorily," answered Bob. The sale is proving to be a great success. The large number of people who have visited our shop have realized that our January Clearance Sale favors the purchaser. January with many concerns is a quiet month, but we do not purpose having any quiet days. We are determined to keep busy and to make this January the largest in the history of the Gorman Boot Shop. The great success we have met with so far certainly signifies that we will accomplish our purpose. The public realize, concluded Bob, that when the Gorman Boot Shop puts on a sale, it does so in earnest, and that the reductions made are honest and liberal.

"PORTO RICO PROGRESS" REPORTS THE DEATH OF LIONEL PARKER

San Juan Paper Tells of His Life—Was Brother of Sir Gilbert Parker-Went to Porto Rico Six Years Ago—Spent the Summer in Belleville

The Porto Rico Progress, published in San Juan, Porto Rico, under date of Wednesday, Jan. 5th, 1916, has the following to say regarding the late Lionel Parker:

Lionel Montrose Parker, 49 years of age, a prominent fruit grower and a brother of Sir Gilbert Parker the novelist, died of heart disease at the Presbyterian Hospital on New Year's night, after an illness of almost six weeks. The funeral service was held Monday afternoon at four o'clock at St. John's Church, Bishop Charles B. Colmore and the Rev. Samuel Sutcliffe officiating. The pall-bearors were Judge E. B. Wilcox, W. A. McKinley, B. Mitchell, Frederick C. Holmes, Capt. E. J. Griffith, W. B. Shaw and Benjamin Murphy.

Mr. Parker came to Porto Rico six years ago last October and purchased a fruit farm beyond Bayamon on the Manati road. His locating in Porto Rico followed a visit of the year previous when he was so much pleased with the climate here that he returned to Chicago and sold out his business there preparatory to moving to the island. He came here on account of his health and that of Mrs. Parker.

Mr. Parker spent several months with his family at Belleville, Ontario, during the summer, returning about three months ago. About the middle of November he was taken ill supposedly with dengue fever, and because his family was still north he went at once to the hospital. His illness at first did not seem to be severe and he expected to be able to meet Mrs. Parker and their two children on their return here early in December. Complications developed, however, and he grew gradually worse, although it was generally believed that he had excellent chances to recover up to a short time before his death.

Mr. Parker was one of twelve children, five of whom survive. He was the son of Captain Frederick William Parker, of Dublin, Ireland, an officer in the British army, and Jane Simmons Parker, of Ontario, Canada. He was born at Camden East, Ontario, in 1866. He was educated in Canada as a chemist and later engaged in the fur business in Canada, New York, Chicago and St. Paul. Prior to coming to Porto Rico he was the head of the Parker Embroidery Company of Chicago. He had made his home in Chicago at different times for twenty years and besides being engaged in business there was prominently identified with many of the leading musical societies of the city.

In 1907 Mr., Parker married Miss Grace Eleanor Marks, daughter of Roland P. Marks of Chicago. The marriage took place at the home of Mrs. Parker's sister at New Brighton, Staten Island, New York. Mrs. Parker and two children, Jane Eleanor Parker and Caroline Hutchinson Parker, survive him. Other survivors are Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart, M.P., Henry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants National Bank of St. Paul, Minn.; Frederick William Parker, of Toronto, Canada; Arthur G. Parker, of Oakland, California, and Miss Josephine Parker of Belleville, Ontario.

Mr. Parker was among the most prominent fruitgrowers in the Bayamon section and was one of the organizers and later president of the Bayamon Saddle and Motor Country Club. He was also a member of the Union Club.

Following the funeral services on Monday the body remained at St. Johns Church until it was placed on the steamer Coamo to-day. The body is to be taken to Chicago and placed in a vault to await burial in the Marks' plot in Rosehill Cemetery.

Mrs. Parker, who has been in ill-health for several years, will go north as soon as her health permits.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.—London Telegraph.

The Difference.

Mrs. Dash—The idea of Mrs. Rash having society aspirations! Why, her father was a peddler! Mr. Dash—Yes, she's entirely too forward. She ought to hang back until people have forgotten it. Now, in your case, my dear, it was your grandfather who was a peddler.

Masked Musicians.

The Shakuhachi players of Japan are a privileged class of itinerant musicians. Their instrument, a kind of reed oboe, enjoys what is perhaps a unique distinction, it having been adopted as a unit of measurement, a sixth of a sen, or about two feet. A peculiar headdress, something like an immense peach basket hat, serves as a cool variety of mask, permitting the wearer to see without being seen—a decided advantage to such people as have come down in the world and are undesirous of publicity. It also serves as a further distinctive feature of this class of musician to those who do not read the descriptive matter which is hung in front of each player.—Wide World.

The Arch.

The consensus of opinion among the learned is to the effect that the arch was invented by the Romans. Some claim that Archimedes of Sicily was the inventor, while there are others who would make it to be of Etrurian origin, but there can be no doubt about the fact that the Romans were the first to apply the principle to architecture. The earliest instance of its use is in the case of the Cloaca Maxima, or greatest sewer, of Rome, built about 588 B. C. by the first of the Tarquin line of kings, a work which is regarded by the historians as being one of the most stupendous monuments of antiquity. Built entirely without cement, it is still doing duty after a service of almost twenty-five centuries.

Snubbed His Old Friends.

In the old days a miner who had toiled and suffered in the Klondike and then struck it rich returned to Puget sound after two years of isolation in the far north. He sought out a restaurant. "Bring me $5 worth of beans," he told the waiter. Remarking to himself that this fellow certainly must be fond of beans, the amazed waiter complied, heaping up the table around the diner with a veritable mountain of baked beans. "Now," said the Klondiker, "take that stuff away and bring me something to eat. It has cost me $5, but I just wanted to show those blank beans that I don't have to eat any more of 'em, now that I'm in a white man's land again."

Aliens Poured In.

Scores of alien enemies, chiefly Bulgars and Austrians, many of whom knew nothing of the events of the past sixteen months other than the fact that their countries were at war, were brought by more intelligent fellow-countrymen to Toronto just before Christmas for registration. They poured into the city from the northern parts of British Columbia, Quebec, and the more settled portions of Northern Ontario to spend Christmas with fellow-countrymen.

Unable to read or speak English, isolated in shanties and construction camps, many of the new arrivals had no knowledge of the past events of the war. In some instances, in spite of the posters scattered over the country calling upon subjects of enemy countries to report themselves to the nearest registrar, the men, until their arrival in Toronto, did not know they were regarded as alien enemies.

The co-operation of the more respectable members of the Toronto colonies frequented by Bulgars and Austrians proved an assistance to the police. Unregistered new arrivals were refused shelter in the lodging-houses until they could produce the card given by the bureau.

Institutions of Western Provinces.

The Cabinet Ministers of the western Provinces decided that institutions for joint use shall be provided as follows: Manitoba, incorrigibles and deaf mutes; Saskatchewan, blind asylum; Alberta, mental defectives; British Columbia, imbeciles. The capital cost of each institution will be borne by the Provinces individually, but the maintenance will be shared among the four.

Wood and Water.

All wood contains more or less water. Even the driest wood known contains two or three pounds of water to every hundred pounds of weight. Absolutely dry wood is unknown, for the heat needed to obtain it would dissolve the wood and convert it into gas and charcoal. An eminent Swiss authority on the characteristics of wood believes that a sufficiently powerful and perfect microscope, could it be made, would show that the ultimate wood cell is composed of crystals like grains of sugar or salt and that thin films of water hold the crystals apart, yet bind them into a mass. A good microscope shows the wood cell and reveals its spiral bandages and its openings and cavities, but no instrument yet made reveals the ultimate crystals that, as many believe, do exist, and that would explain why water cannot be expelled from wood without destroying the wood itself.

BELLEVILLE INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT 33RD BATTERY

Local Boys Have Easy Time Beating Kingston Team--Score of 12-1 Tells Story—Little to Choose Between Belleville Forwards

The local forwards simply smothered the Kingston team and fairly rained shots on the Kingston goal. The visitor's goal keeper put up a good game but the puck was shot at him so fast and often that he had no possible chance to keep it out. Marshall, for Kingston, was a fine hockey player, but except for the first minute or two, he was not allowed to get away.

Mitchell, Finkle, Whalen and Simmonds were all right on the job every minute, and there was little to choose between them. If anything Mitchell had the shade for he possibly excelled in shooting.

Holloway, although he was not kept very busy, gave a good account of himself, and after seeing the game everyone was glad that Whitty did not take any chances on playing.

Phillips let an easy one go by him in the start and was not crowded at any time afterwards. He is beginning to loaf a little and it might not be a bad idea if the management jarred him up a bit.

Kingston scored the first goal through a pretty rush by Marshall, and he was able to beat the Belleville defense. After that the game was Belleville all the way. The first period ended 3 to 1 in Belleville's favor; the second period 7 to 1, and the third 12 to 1.

A big crowd witnessed the game and a team that shows the ability of these boys deserves a No. 1 support.

Jack Moxam, of Toronto, refereed the game and he was far above the average. His work was very similar to that of Fred Waghorne, and it is doubtful if a better referee than Waghorne ever worked in Ontario.

A NICE LETTER FROM "SANDY" BURROWS

It was certainly a feast for the hungry hockey fans to see the Belleville team get together and dish up some real hockey last night.

I was at the Picton-Belleville game and honestly left in disgust on account of the specimen of hockey displayed by the forwards of our team, as they were all over the ice like a bunch of sheep. I saw Bill Symons and Whitty go up the ice continually, and when nearing Picton goal pass the puck over and no one there to receive it. I never saw a more unselfish player than Symons, a very fast skater, beautiful stick handler and lots of grey matter under those auburn locks; and Bill, by his play, doesn't care who scores so long as one of his team bulges the net. He certainly must have given his team a nice fatherly talk, as they were all to the good last night, and above all, played their positions and passed the puck—and this is the way to play hockey to win games.

It looks to me as if we had a real team, the best in years, and if the boys will listen to the advice of their worthy captain and play their positions, the hockey-loving public of Belleville will have a team to be proud of.

Whether there is anything in the wind regarding the formation of an international pro. hockey league or not, suffice is to say that Mr. Lol. Solman, controller of the Toronto Arena, knows nothing about it. Mr. Solman is of the opinion that the whole thing is a dream, and on a par with the fantastic yarns sent out from the same source in regard to the building of race tracks in divers parts of the Province that are never built except on paper. "If there was any proposition afoot to place a Toronto team in a circuit apart from the N. H. A., I should be the first to hear of it," said Mr. Solman this morning. Mr. Solman stated that he would like to have two pro. teams in this city, but that he was perfectly satisfied with the situation as it stands. President Emmett Quinn, of the N. H. A., is also of the opinion that somebody is having nightmare. The N. H. A. is too firmly entrenched in popular favor in Montreal to fear opposition.

THE RING

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 17.—Jess Willard, world's champion heavyweight, was to-night signed by Jack Curley for a bout with Frank Moran of Pittsburg. The contest will be held in New York, and will be for ten rounds, it was announced. No definite date was set for the match, which will be held some time between April 10 and 22.

Curley, who gave out the information regarding the signing of the articles, said Willard would get $32,500, and the privilege of 45 per cent. of the total gate receipts after the State tax had been deducted. The fight papers, Curley said, bore the signatures of both Willard and Tom Jones, his manager.

An Economical Wife.

"A friend of mine," says a clever needlewoman, "had occasion to open my shirtwaist box the other day. She came to me, saying, 'My, but you are extravagant! You have eleven pretty silk waists in that one box. How did you happen to buy so much wash silk?' My answer surprised her. My husband works in a bank and must wear clean linen. He is partial to silk shirts, but as soon as there is the least break near the collar they are thrown away.

"Shortly afterward I appear in a new silk waist, for the rest of the shirt is perfectly good. He is a large man, and there is not the least trouble in getting the waist from the shirt. Sometimes I vary them by putting on a plain collar and cuffs.

"You will find that when using this idea you do not mind at all how many new shirts the man of the house chooses to buy. You will even suggest at times that a certain shirt in the window would look well on him—and incidentally, on you."

Dog Hero of Austerlitz.

In the annals of the French army Mustache is still a celebrity. Mustache was one of the dogs used in the Italian campaign when Napoleon was first consul. He saved the French army from a night surprise and annihilation. Later he tracked and captured a spy who had secured valuable information.

But this dog's crowning achievement was at the battle of Austerlitz. The standard bearer of the regiment had just fallen dead. Mustache's teeth and an Austrian soldier's hand grasped the tattered banner simultaneously. . tache flew at his enemy's throat and bore him down. Then, seizing the flag, he carried it back to the regiment.

Napoleon gave Mustache the highest decoration for his valor. He met a soldier's death not long after this, racing forward beside the flag, leading the regiment in a furious charge.

Curious Street Names.

The list of curious street names is inexhaustible. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's Inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden ironically enough in the slums of the east end.

But for really bizarre street names one should go to Brussels. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Woman and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, considerably narrower than Whitehall. But the cream of Brussels street names surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. This in the original appears as one ponderous thirty-six letter word. —London Chronicle.

The Thriftiest Parson.

A supreme example of thrift was the Rev. Robert Walker—the "Wonderful Walker." For the greater part of his life Walker was curate of Leatherwaite, Cumberland, commencing there with a stipend of £5 per annum. His wife brought him a fortune of £40, and on the interest of this and his £5 annually Walker reared a family of eight. When after twenty years his stipend was raised to £17 10s. a year he contrived to save. And not only did the family "live well, though plainly," but, as he declared with justifiable pride, his children never lacked any of the necessaries of life and were given an education to fit them for any rank of society, the boys, indeed, going to one of the universities.—London Standard.

Lindsay Lady Celebrates Her 100th Birthday

Received Addresses From Two Councils and Other Bodies

LINDSAY, Ont., Jan. 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins, of Lindsay, Ont., who celebrated her one hundredth birthday on Saturday, had the honor of not only receiving telegrams of congratulations from Premier Hearst, Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, the Bishop of Toronto, and other notable people, but also received deputations representing the Town Council of Lindsay, and the Council of Sturgeon Point, both of which presented addresses of congratulation, and paid tribute to her long life of good works on behalf of the communities of the two places.

Mrs. Hopkins received an address of congratulation from the congregation of St. Paul's Church, where she has worshipped for half a century, and throughout the whole of the day was receiving visitors. The house was decorated with an abundance of flowers, the gifts of relatives and friends.

Surrounded by several of her children, grand-children, grand-nephew, and a few old friends, Mrs. Hopkins partook of Holy Communion at eleven o'clock in the morning, Canon Marsh, assisted by the Rev. McConnachie, being the celebrant. The aged lady followed the service with wonderful clearness and at its conclusion received the congratulations of those assembled, knowing each one by name and recalling incidents connected with their lives which showed a remarkable memory.

HATES GERMANS SO GIVES TO BELGIANS

Little Listowell, Ont. Tot Sends Money to Feed One Belgian Child For a Month

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—Among the donations that have come into the hands of the Belgian Relief Committee, at the offices at 59 St. Peter street, is one from a baby girl in Listowell, Ont., "who just hates Germans."

Perhaps everyone may not approv of the sentiment which prompted the gift, but this little tot's money will provide the food that will keep the breath of life for one month in some other little one who perhaps also hates Germans for an even better reason. Life for a month. Few Canadians can realize what that means. The Belgians—three million of them—are living from hand to mouth. They have no money with which to buy food; there is no food to buy even if there were money, no food except that provided through the generosity of their Allies.

Wheat is the one great need and Canada can supply it. If every littl tot in Canada hated Germans $2.50 worth, many a shipload of the much needed wheat would go to feed the hungry Belgian kiddies.

YOUNG MAN, YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU.

One of the reasons assigned for the failure of Britain and her Allies to force the Dardanelles was lack of sufficient reinforcements at a critical hour.

Had the necessary men been available when they were needed the straits would have been forced, Constantinople would long since have been in the hands of the Allies, and thousands of British lives would have been spared; Bulgaria would not today be fighting with the enemy, and all of the Balkan states would probably have been lined up against the German tyrants.

Other critical hours are bound to arise before the end—more critical than that when the Dardanelles might have been opened.

Will the British forces be in a position to take advantage of their opportunities? Every physically fit man of military age can help answer the question by enlisting at once.

Germans Hold Hopes Of Invading Canada

Senator Lougheed Gives Warning Of Results of Enemy's Victory in Europe

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Declaring that in the United States there were from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 Germans, many of them military reservists, who had long dreamed of seeing German authority established in North America, Hon. Senator Lougheed, Minister without portfolio and government leader in the Senate, today urged the people to greater effort in aid of the Allies, in a speech during the debate on the reply to the speech from the throne.

"Canada's security can only be established by a victory over Germany," declared Senator Lougheed, who said these German-Americans had visions of the fatherland one day dominating North America. "Let the allied lines be broken through by Germany, and Canada would be invaded by Germans brought to Canada's shores in transports and Canada's boundary would be crossed by German reservists in the United States."

KINGSTON

The city council last night decided to give Lt.-Col. Low and the 146th battalion every possible assistance in the stampede for recruits which commenced yesterday. Lt.-Col. Low has launched his stampede with the most assuring prospects of success. Everybody has been started to think about recruiting, to talk about recruiting, and many have started to enlist in response to the urgent appeal for men for the salvation of the British Empire. Today, fully forty officers, and every man of the 146th battalion will be in the stampede for recruited, and every conceivable method will be used to secure the 500 men required before the month of January closes. Press, and pulpit are in the movement with the 146th battalion, and the khaki-clad population of the city will increase daily.

Today at noon, seven of the best members of the local staff of the A.S.C. left for Quebec, preparatory to going overseas. These men will go with Captain Priver and Lieut. Alexander The following are the men who were selected by Major Hamilton for the front:—R. A. Gillan, Allan. F. Fair, Richard Somerville, J. A. McCormick, R. M. Reid, H. F. Sarnders, James C. ACCUSE THE MONTENEGRINS OF PACT WITH AUSTRIANS

Astonishing Charges Made by Papers in Rome Against "Black King" It is Stated That Montenegrins Virtually Give Kuc, An Impregnable Position, to Invaders—Supplies Sent By Italy Allowed to Rot on Wharves—Hold King Nicholas Personally Responsible For Betrayal of His Country— Berlin Relates Negotiations For Surrender

ROME, Jan. 18.—Reports that the Montenegrins were heroically fighting the Austrians were false.

On the contrary they were secretly aiding them. They even informed the Austrians of the arrival of ships conveying provisions and munitions from Italy, thus enabling the Austrian submarines to sink the vessels.

King Nicholas has been secretly leagued with the Austrians since October, and practically solicited invasions of his country, which he betrayed with the object of concluding a separate peace.

This explains and fully justifies the attitude of the allies, who knew that to aid Montenegro would be worse than useless. Had they supplied guns and ammunition to the Montenegrins they would simply have fallen into the Austrians' hands.

King Nicholas alone is responsible for betraying his country. The majority of the Montenegrins, including his sons, are opposed to a separate peace, which is bound to lead, sooner or later, to the dethronement of the King.

Gave Kuc to Austrians

An Associated Press despatch from Rome says:

The charge that Montenegro agreed with Austria even before the outbreak of the war to cede Mount Lovcen and that the defence of the mountain was only sufficient to lull the suspicions of the Entente allies, is made by a correspondent of The Idea Nazionale of this city.

"Montenegro allowed the Austrians to take Kuc, which was practically impregnable," says the correspondent, "and when the Government retired to Pedgoritza President Giukanovitch of the State Council and other high officials remained in Cettinje with orders to yield the capital to the Austrians without opposition.

Allow Supplies to Rot

"Italy recently sent an enormous quantity of ammunition to the Montenegrin and Serbian armies, but the provisions sent were left rotting on the quays at San Giovanni de Medua, Albania, although there were plenty of means for transport to the interior. Instead of repairing the Medua-Scutari road, the Montenegrins repaired the Giakova-Scutari road, facilitating the Austrian anti-Serbian operation. The food was not carried into the interior in order to induce the poulation to believe that they were deserted by the allies, and that hence there was necessity for Montenegro joining the Austro-Germans."

Negotiations for Surrender

Berlin, via wireless to Sayville, Jan. 18.—The official communication of the Austro-Hungarian Headquarters, dated to-day, says:

"The negotiations concerning details for the capitulation of the Montenegrin army began yesterday afternoon, and the Austro-Hungarian troops, which meantime had occupied Virbasar and Reika, ceased hostilities.

Rieka is the second capital of Montenegro, where the King's winter palace is located, and whence a steamer line runs along the Crnejovica River to Virbasar and Scutari. Virbasar is the terminus of the railroad from Antivari and is the most important harbor on Scutari Lake. The Rieka and Virbasar basins are the most fertile regions in Montenegro.

According to Rome reports, King Nicholas of Montenegro has issued a proclamation urging that he was compelled to choose between surrender to Austria or utter ruin. He urged his soldiers to lay down their arms in accordance with the Austrian peace pact.

Unconfirmed reports said that Austria will guarantee Montenegro's independence and grant her an Adriatic port in exchange for Mount Lovcen.

A Sorry End

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A considerable share of the editorial space in the morning newspapers to-day is devoted to Montenegro's surrender, which is generally characterized as the work of Court influences, with dynastic rather than national aims.

"This is a sorry end to the glorious history of Montenegro," says The Morning Post, "which henceforth will be only a vassal State of Austria."

The Times says: "However much local and personal considerations entered into the decision of King Nicholas however much it was facilitated by subterranean relations of the kind revealed some years ago in the notorious Austro-Montenegrin high treason trial at Cettinje, it is unquestionable that it would not have been reached but for the German victories. The capitulation of Montenegro is a signal to the Allies that they cannot hope to win without greater vigor and foresight."

SAVED FROM DEATH AS SPY RETURNS TO TRENTON HOME

Release of American Secured by Letter Thrown From Window

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 18.—As a result of intervention by the State Department, John D. Wroblewski, of this city, who was arrested in Austria at the outset of the war and sentenced to death as a Russian spy, has returned safely to his home here.

Having sold out his printing business, Wroblewski, who is a man of considerable means, went abroad, to travel, and was in Austria at the declaration of hostilities. He was an American citizen, but Russian-born, and the Austrians declared he was a colonel in the Czar's army. He was arrested and sent to Przemysl and condemned to die. When the city was besieged he was transferred to Pressburg.

In the prison there he wrote a note to Joseph Zielinski, a real estate dealer here and threw it from a window. A passerby picked it up, mailed it, and it reached its destination. Zielinski took the matter up with a lawyer, who successfully appealed to the State Department.

Pugsley Urges Deepest Probe Into Contracts

Former Shell Committee Accused Of Loose Methods in Giving Orders

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—(Special)—In the debate upon the address tonight Hon. Wm. Pugsley disturbed the harmony which has heretofore prevailed by a sensational attack upon the Imperial Shell Committee, of which General Sir Alexander Bertram was chairman. He demanded that a commission be appointed to investigate certain serious charges and alleged that the shell committee had let contracts for large amounts to firms in which General Bertram and Mr. Carnegie, another member of the committee, were respectively interested. He also claimed that contracts had been let to middlemen who had no factories of their own, and that legitimate manufacturers had been asked to pay commissions when seeking orders. Mr. Pugsley was careful to exonerate members of the committee and members of the committee and members of the government of any charges of a personal wrong-doing, but he contended that a situation was presented which required a searching investigation. He will continue to develop this line of argument when he resumes the debate to-morrow.

RUMORS ABOUT EGYPT TO MASK FOE'S AIM

PETROGRAD, Jan. 18.—(Special)—A correspondent of The Ruskoe Slovo, discussing German designs in Asia, argues that the German high command is deliberately spreading rumors of a projected campaign in Egypt in order to mask the true direction of the blow, which is aimed at the Russian Asiatic frontier and the boundaries of India.

The correspondent cites the recent changes in Turkish Generals, the influx of German instructors for the Turkish army, and persistent reports of the appearance of German units southeast of Urumiah Lake. After the rupture of the Serbian front Germany despatched troops to the Russian Asiatic frontier.

On Tuesday morning, January 18th, a presentation of prizes to successful cadets took place at Queen Alexandra School. These were rewarded to the cadets of this school making over thirty out of a possible fifty points in the recent shooting competition open to Public School cadets of this city.

After the opening exercises in the assembly room, our inspector, Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., called the ten successful boys to the front of the hall. After a short address he presented each boy with a very useful and interesting book. Asa Yeomans was first in this school, with a total of forty-two points, being just one point behind the best shot in the city. The nine other boys who received books were, Roy Naylor, Alex. Kerr, Clarence Ketcheson, Charlie Pratt, Morley Huffman, Allan Boyle, Ward Luffman, Archibakld MacArthur and Fred Clarke.

Mr. Clarke congratulated the boys on their fine showing and encouraged them to practice and do even better in the spring competition. It is an honor to our school that ten prizes out of twenty to compete for, were won by the boys of this school, and we all are justly proud of them.

HOW TO PROLONG LIFE

By adopting a simple diet men like Conaro have lived to be 100 years of age, but with our complex diets of to-day, the vitality of the aged is taxed to its utmost endurance. A simple diet, therefore, is conductive to a long life, and if the vitality of the aged is taxed to its utmost endurance. A simple diet, therefore, is conductive to a long life, and if the vitality becomes impaired and weakness seems apparent, our local druggist, J. S. McKeown, has in Vinol a reliable, non-secret remedy which contains just the elements needed to restore strength to weak, feeble old people, and prolong a healthy, happy life.

MUSIC & DRAMA

Unparalleled in the world for photographic beauty, human interest, dramatic power and spectacular grandeur is George Kleine's production of the Cines photo-drama "Quo Vadis" which is to be the attraction at the Griffin Opera House commencing Wednesday, Jan. 26, for two nights with daily matinees. Although this is a strong statement to make, it is fully verified by the remarkable runs this attraction has had in the Astor Theatre, New York City, the Garrick at Philadelphia, McVicker's in Chicago, Tremont Theatre in Boston and a host of other cities under the most adverse circumstances and in summer time, too, when every other dramatic form of entertainment has failed to attract the public into theatres. This fact alone is sufficient substantiation of almost any assertion that may be made about this truly wonderful photo-drama. The seat sale for the local engagement commences Monday, Jan. 24th at Doyle's Drug Store. Prices 10c., 15c., 25c.

About Baby

III.

BABIES are frequently over-fed. Their capacity for food is very small—at birth 1-oz., at two months 3-ozs.

It is the amount of food digested that nourishes.

Do not feed Baby just because he cries, probably the reason is indigestion from over-feeding, not hunger.

The nature of the Food should be right as well as the quantity. Doctors and nurses throughout the world recommend

'Allenburys' Foods

The best alternative to Human Milk.

"HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP."

Sarnia, Ont.—"About 27 years ago I was taken very bad, my blood, too, was in bad shape. I got so I had to go to bed and I was there for over three months. I could not eat and suffered untold agony. I had three of the best doctors I could get but it just seemed nothing was going to help me. I had almost given up. I thought I would never be any better and was willing to give up and die rather than suffer as I was. A neighbor of mine told me of Dr. Pierce's wonderful remedies and I decided to use them. My husband bought me six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I had not taken it long until I felt better. In less than six weeks I was out of bed, and in less than six months I was cured and have been well ever since. Do all my own work. I have raised three daughters, two are married and have children. They have used it and they are healthy, so are their children. I am sure it was all on account of my having them use the medicine.

"I keep all of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the house. Have 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Smart-Weed'—anything prepared by Dr. Pierce is good. I also have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which I have had 26 years; it has been very valuable to me."—MRS. J. WAY, 232 Ontario St., Sarnia, Ont.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

A most valuable book in any home is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A splendid 1008-page volume, with engravings and colored plates. A copy will be sent to anyone sending fifty cents in stamps, to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only, to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.

This is the 533rd day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

ITS OLD ENEMY.

To other troubles there has been added in Holland the damage of floods. Holland has suffered more from the war than any other neutral country; its commerce has been hurt, prices of food have gone soaring, and above all this the Hollanders have done twice as much as a nation of their size could be expected to do to relieve the sufferings of their neighbors, the Belgians. And now the dikes have broken in its northern provinces and much territory is under water.

It is an old enemy that has attacked Holland. A great part of the country has been carved, or stolen from the sea. A fourth of the region adjoining the sea is lower than sea level, much of it as much as twenty feet lower, and the mean height of the whole country is only about 30 feet above sea level. The history of Holland differs from that of all other countries. Other countries have fought for independence and religious liberty—the Hollanders have fought also for the very land they dwell upon.

But if the Netherlands are the more to be pitied in that the floods have come at a time of peculiarly hard times, on the other hand the Hollanders know how to cope with this old enemy. There have been worse inundations in Holland—that of 1530, for instance. The Hollanders have even cut their own dikes at times in order to drive out an invader. The present floods might have come at an easier time; but, even as it is, they will not daunt Hollanders.

CANADA BEHIND IN BEEF.

Exports of beef alive and dressed were practically doubled in 1915 as compared with those of 1914, and this had a stiffening effect upon the market. The question arises, can Canadian stockmen keep it up? Certainly, and increase the output immensely, but to accomplish it more attention must be paid to the breeding of greater numbers of higher quality of live stock in this Dominion. Comparatively speaking, Canada is poorly stocked with beef cattle. Canada, with a population of three people per square mile, has only one beef animal per square mile. The United States has thirty-three people per square mile, and twenty beef cattle. The United States has eleven times the number of people per square mile, but twenty times as many beef cattle, and yet we are continually hearing complaints of a shortage of beef cattle in the United States, where production of this class of stock is said to be less than in 1870, while the increase in population has been very rapid. The United States, once the leader in meat exports, has gradually been forced, through decreased supplies in comparison with consumption at home, to fall out of a large part of the market abroad, which has been taken by the Argentine and Australia. Australia suffers from seasons of drouth which deal hard blows to the cattle business, and the Argentine is already struggling to cope with the increased demand. The surplus beef which Europe consumes comes, and must continue to come, largely from the Americans and Australasia. Canada must get some of the market and hold it. Our cattle, after feeding our own people, must either go to Europe or must supply a part of the demand in the United States that other cattle may go to Europe. The beef cattle market cannot be overstocked in a few months. It takes years to breed up herds and commence marketing on a very large scale.

But to get back to the Canadian markets of 1915. Official figures tell us that the number of cattle in Canada increased some thousands last year, but Canadian herds have decreased in the last five years by over 850,000 head, and Canada is now credited with 3,399,155 head of beef cattle and 2,666,846 milk cows. Just compare these figures with those of some other countries and note Canada's deficiency in cattle. According to figures recently published in a Chicago market paper Australia has 20,000,000 head, India 106,000,000 head, Russia 51,000,000 head, United States, 58,000,000 head, Argentina, 29,000,000 head, and Brazil 25,000,000 head. Canada, comparatively, does not seem to be overstocked, and yet there were more cattle and more other meat animals marketed in Canada in 1915 than in 1914 or any immediately previous year.

What is the outlook? The British Government has contracted for the Australasian output. The Argentine cannot cope with the demand and sold heavily. The United States has such an increasing demand at home that she cannot relieve matters much. There appears to be a world shortage of beef. The output from Canadian farms was larger last year. It is more than likely that it will increase again this year. The question is this: Are we selling too many cows and heifers for beef when they should be retained in the breeding herds, and are too many calves being vealed? We do not know; but one thing seems certain, there is not going to be, for some years to come, as many beef cattle per capita in Canada as in the other countries named, and there is sure to be a world shortage for some time to come. We are not foreshadowing high prices. They have not be as high as they have been during the past year, but we believe beef-raising will prove profitable, for, when the war is over, grains and feeding stuffs are almost sure to drop in price and perhaps very appreciably, and then, even at lower than present prices, beef-raising will pay. We would caution against rushing good breeding cows to market from two to five years before their period of usefulness as breeders is past. There is a big demand for canners and cutters to supply war orders, and they are being cleaned out. The price for canners is generally around 2½ to 3 cents per lb. That is, to the farmer. If a cow is a good breeder and will raise two or three good calves, and then bring the same price per pound, it might pay to keep her for the sake of getting the calves. And, too, we would not advise the wholesale fattening of promising heifers. The business must be kept up in years to come, and the good heifers and heifer calves are the only safe method of increase. If we are to continue to market more, we must have more breeding stock. If it is not imported, increased marketing does not point to a very rapid increase in breeding stock unless better and more productive methods of breeding are practiced. The stock cannot be sold for beef and added to the breeding herd at the same time. Producers seem to have a good chance now. There would seem to be a bright future ahead. Enough stock should be produced to hold the market now being established. The average price for choice steers on Toronto market for all 1915 was $8.12 per cwt., and for handyweight butchers $7.47. Prices were highest in July at $9.10. These prices do not include fancy Christmas beef. All kinds of cattle have found ready sale. Coarse cattle have been cleaned up for army purposes. Breeders should not sell themselves short of cattle.

Current Comment

Christian Soldiers.

The patriotic and energetic action of Rev. W. A. Cameron in leaving the ministry for active service ought to encourage men of the churches to turn out in larger numbers. It is asked if Christianity is a failure, but it is far from that in the case of ministers who don the khaki.—Mail and Empire.

Common Good.

Instead of proposing a battalion of church members and teetotalers, would it not be better for such to join one of the several units now in formation? They would find good company in many sober, earnest members already enrolled, and be better able to diffuse their own shining light among the few unregenerate.—Hamilton Spectator.

The People's Voice.

The German Government would like to have a new election in order to get rid of the Socialists in the Reichstag. The Social Democrast outnumber every other single party, and their recalcitrance make difficult the working of German Parliamentary stage-managers. If the German masses had free and full voting powers, what would be their verdict?—Mail and Empire.

A Reasonable Proposal.

Mr. D. Dubuc, of Sainte Sophie de Levrard, County of Nicolet, writes to La Patrie a letter, of which the following is the translation: "Will you permit the following suggestion from a reader? Do you not think it would be more practical to offer to the Kaiser of Germany Henri Bourassa in exchange for Dr. Beland, Member for Beauce? Assuredly Canada would gain much by the exchange, and the Emperor of Germany would also gain in having one faithful friend more."—Toronto News.

The Poets' Corner

A Man's Reply.

I stand at the bar of your woman's soul,
Condemned in the cause that you plead.
My only defence is the simple request,
That you'll judge me by motive, not deed.

For remember, that man's but a child in the dark,
Though formed by the hand above;
He will fall many times, but will walk forth at last,
In the sunshine of infinite love,

So I venture to answer your question so fair,
And give you "A Man's Reply,"
That for the prize of a true woman's love,
I am ready to live or die.

You say that the man who gains your love,
Must be brave and true and good;
I answer that she who wins my heart,
Must be true to her womanhood.

You say you look for a "man and a king,"
A very prince of the race;
I look for a kind and generous heart,
And not for a queenly face.

You require all things that are good and true,
All things that a man should be:
I ask for a woman, with all that implies,
And that is sufficient for me.

You ask for a man without a fault,
To live with him on earth;
I ask for a woman, faults and all,
For by faults I may judge of worth.

I ask for a woman made as of old,
A higher form of man,
His comforter, helper, adviser and friend,
As in the original plan.

A woman who has an aim in life,
Who finds life worth the living,
Who makes the world better for being here,
And for others her life is giving.

I will not require all I have asked,
In these lines so poor and few;
I only pray that you may be all,
That God can make of you.

For your heart and soul, and life and love,
Are sacred things to me,
And "I'll stake my life" that I'll be to you
Whatever I ought to be.

Norfolk's First Gallows.

Since Norfolk County, Ontario, has had a jurisdiction of her own, capital punishment has never obtained within her borders until a few days ago, when Emerson Shelley was hanged for the murder of Christian Shoup. In September, 1824, a gallows was erected at Vittoria to swing two horse thieves, named Smith and Carr. The hour was 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and the gallows was framed like the bent of a barn and raised by the crowd so that the posts dropped into holes in the ground. The prisoners were brought out in an ox cart sitting back to back, the sheriff, walking ahead, and a constable on either side. Two prayers were made and eight minutes remained. This time was allotted to the prisoners. Smith would say nothing, but Carr breathed words of penitence and warning to the young about him. He had not occupied more than half the time when a rider drove into the crowd and handed the sheriff a reprieve. The document was on hand three days previously, but it was considered best to give the men all the scare possible. On release Smith disappeared, and stealing a horse rode to the Niagara frontier. He was two hours ahead of his pursuers. Carr had to be ejected from the jail, protesting that he would never be better prepared for death.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Surprise over the smallness of an increase in the United States visible supply total had a good deal to do today with giving the bulls final control of the wheat market, and so, too, did prospects of the removal of the railroad embargo on shipments to Baltimore. The MacGregor Case

It Indicates the Danger of Accepting Circumstantial Evidence.

By ETHEL HOLMES

Fergus MacGregor and his wife, Elizabeth, lived on the outskirts of Edinburgh, Scotland. Their nearest neighbor lived about a quarter of a mile distant. The MacGregors appeared to live happily together till one evening their neighbor, Alexander Tweedy, heard excited voices coming from the direction of their home. Tweedy's wife thought she heard a third voice once or twice take part in what was going on trying to calm the others, but her husband failed to bear her out in this, and she was not sure. Finally the quarreling stopped, and nothing more was heard.

The next morning Tweedy on his way to Edinburgh, where he worked, passed the MacGregor home and noticed that it seemed to be deserted. A window pane on the ground floor was broken, which he had noticed before and at which he wondered, because the MacGregors were tidy persons and kept their home in good order. He continued his way, not attaching much importance to what he had seen or what he had heard the night before.

But when the next morning he passed the house again and saw no one about he became curious and, going to the window, looked in. He was shocked to see evidences of a struggle. Everything was in disorder. A table that had stood in the center of the room had been overturned, and the fragments of a lamp that had stood on it were scattered over the floor. Clothing lay about, both men's and women's.

Tweedy was astonished. He had heard no sounds that would indicate anything more than a war of words. True, his wife had awakened him in the middle of the night and said that the MacGregors were quarreling again. He had listened, but, hearing nothing, told her that it was due to her imagination and she had better go to sleep and think no more about the matter. But now appearances tended to prove that the quarrel had been more serious than he supposed. Putting his arm through the aperture left by the broken pane, he raised the window and entered the house.

There was nothing of value left in it except the furniture. It looked to Tweedy as if either MacGregor had killed his wife or the wife had killed her husband and whichever was the murderer had made off with whatever could be carried away hastily. But this was only a theory and did not account for what had been done with the body of the victim.

Tweedy was about to leave the premises when he noticed on the floor a strand of red hair. The hair was long and evidently a woman's. The finder shuddered. Mrs. MacGregor's hair was red.

Tweedy dropped the strand on the floor, where he had found it, got out through the window and went on to Edinburgh to his work. In the evening when he returned to his home he told his wife that he had seen excellent evidence that their neighbor had murdered his wife, disposed in some way of the baby and fled with all the valuables. Mrs. Tweedy listened to his recital with horror.

"I'm going to the sheriff to tell him of the murder," said Tweedy.

"Ye'll dinna do ony such thing, Sandy," was the reply. "Dinna mix yersel' up with it. They'll think you had summat to do with it. Let somebody else find it oot."

Sandy took his wife's advice. Every morning he passed the deserted home on his way to his work and every evening on his return. His conscience smote him for not making the tragedy known, and on several occasions he told his wife that he would report it, but she always dissuaded him.

But one day the horror came out through another source. A man passing a thicket back of the MacGregor home smelled an offensive odor and thought the dead body of some animal was there. Prompted by curiosity, he made an examination and found the decaying corpse of a woman. Going straight into the city, he reported his find, and persons were sent out to bring in the body. The face had been mutilated besides being decayed, so that it was beyond recognition. The hair was red. The dress was the MacGregor tartan.

An examination was made of the MacGregor home, and what Alexander Tweedy had found was carefully noted even to the strand of hair which was picked up and preserved. There being no doubt on the part of the authorities that MacGregor had quarreled with his wife, murdered her and made off with the family valuables, a search was instituted for him. He could not be found, and the search was about to be given up when some one suggested that in time a murderer will visit the scene of his crime. A watch was set and, true enough, one day MacGregor was captured standing before his house looking at it strangely. He was immediately arrested.

"What are ye takin' me for?" he asked.

"Niver mind what we're takin' ye for? Ye'll have a chance to find that oot later on."

When Fergus MacGregor was informed of the charge against him and of the discoveries that had been made he uttered no reply whatever. He seemed utterly crushed. He was advised to secure the services of a lawyer and permitted a friend to send him an attorney, who asked him what he had to say.

"What's the use o' tellin' a story?" asked Fergus. "Isn't my wife dead? I don't care if they hang me."

"You'd better make up a story," said the lawyer. "Tell me something that I can hang a theory on."

So Fergus told him his story. He and his wife had lived happily together but for a brother of hers, who was always applying to them for money and threatening his brother-in-law if he didn't get it. One night this brother came for money. His sister defended him against the anger of her husband. Fergus, losing his patience, told her that if she preferred her brother to him he (Fergus) would go away from her. Then he had left them and gone to the home of an old friend who lived alone some distance from the MacGregor home. Fergus declared that was all he knew of the tragedy.

"But how do you account for the murder of your wife? Surely her brother would not have killed her."

"I can't account for it any more than you can."

"Her brother must be living. Can't you suggest some way of finding him? His testimony, if you are innocent, would save you."

"He has never had any fixed abode that I have heard of. I would not know where or how to look for him. Besides, if he were not implicated in the murder he would show himself of his own accord."

"He might keep away to prevent his being called on to testify against you."

"No fear of that; he had no love for me."

The lawyer pondered for awhile, then said, "The only defense I can make is to prove an alibi, and that could be done only by fraudulent means."

"Put me on the stand and I'll tell my story."

"It's doubtless the best," said the lawyer, "that can be made out of the matter, but it will have no effect whatever on a jury."

The trial of Fergus MacGregor was looked upon as a mere formality, and there was no doubt whatever that he would be convicted. His lawyer made the most out of his story, and proof was furnished that his client had been where he claimed to have been since he had left his home. The fact that the face of the body found in the thicket could not be recognized was dwelt upon by the prisoner's counsel; but, since the garment on the corpse was one of Mrs. MacGregor's dresses, the hypothetical methods to show that the body was not that of Mrs. MacGregor fell flat. Besides, there was the strand of red hair that several witnesses who knew the lady swore was the exact shade of Mrs. MacGregor's.

The judge, the jury and the spectators were bored by the counsel's defense of MacGregor, the jury listening to it perfunctorily and the others talking together while it was being spoken. When the lawyer sat down the public prosecutor arose and said:

"There seems, your honor, no occasion for me to sum up this case at length, and I will do so very briefly. Sounds of a quarrel were heard in the MacGregor home. The prisoner disappeared, doubtless taking the family valuables with him, though they have not been found. His wife's body is concealed in a thicket near the house, identified by a dress belonging to Mrs. MacGregor and by strands of hair found in the house which she lost during a struggle for her life. Counsel for the defense has claimed that the case is one of circumstantial evidence. If it should not convict the prisoner, then no circumstantial evidence should convict any criminal."

The words were no sooner spoken than a woman came running into the courtroom.

"Fergus," she cried, "they tell me they're going to hang ye for killing me!"

The live body of the murdered woman pushed its way to the prisoner, threw her arms around his neck and patted him lovingly.

"Your honor," cried counsel for the defense, "it has been stated that if the circumstantial evidence in this case should not convict the prisoner then no person should be convicted by such testimony. Therefore it follows that no person should be convicted on circumstantial evidence."

Every one present was dumfounded. When the prisoner could find his voice he asked his wife to tell where she had been.

"With Walter. I've been tryin' to get him out of a scrape he got into in Lunnon."

The mystery of the MacGregor case remained a mystery for ten years. Then a man was convicted of murder in Australia who before he died on the gallows made the following confession:

Ten years before he and two pals, a man and a woman, in Edinburgh, all the worse for liquor, left the town to evade the police. Passing the MacGregor home and finding it unoccupied, they broke a pane of glass, opened a window and went in. They appropriated certain articles of value, especially clothes, the men donning MacGregor's garments, the woman a dress of Mrs. MacGregor. They were about to depart when the men discovered that the woman had found some jewelry of Mrs. MacGregor. They demanded their share of it, which she refused to give up. They took it by force, unintentionally killing her in the struggle. After depositing the body in the thicket they departed. The woman's hair was red.

NO HYPHENITIS HERE.

Canada Has No Problem Arising From German Citizens.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing to his paper from Ottawa, has this to say about "hyphenitis" in Canada:

Canada is a land where hyphens grow in every bush, but it is a land free from the disease known to the United States as "hyphenitis." With the hyphen everywhere in evidence, there is no problem of the hyphenated.

Canada has a "German problem," but it does not affect the German-Canadian. Some idea of the magnitude of the alien situation which confronted the Dominion upon the outbreak of the war will be conveyed by the fact that the number of subjects of the enemy countries within its borders — Germans, Austrians, and Turks—is put as high as half a million. These were men who had not become naturalized. The great majority were recent immigrants.

For the purpose of handling this alien problem the country was promptly divided into registration districts and registrars were put to work separating the sheep from the goats. The records of individuals were carefully looked into, the great majority of the sheep were placed under parole, the goats were incarcerated in detention camps. For reasons that will be made clear, a good many of the sheep went with them.

Between six thousand and eight thousand Germans and Austrians are held at these detention camps. The majority of these, however, are Austrian and German workmen, held, not because of any enemy act or through special fear of their committing such act—this being true particularly of the Austrians—but because they were thrown out of work by the coming of the war, had no place to go, and had to be cared for. So far as this element is concerned, internment is more in the nature of charity than punishment.

Berlin is the principal city of "German" Canada. It is a splendid, up-to-date city of nearly twenty thousand population. The conditions are very much like those of some parts of Pennsylvania—the names are German, some of the elders cling to the traditions of the Fatherland, the German language is taught in the schools, German newspapers are published, and the native-born are as Canadian as the descendants of the "Pennsylvania Dutch" are American. Many of the men now active in the business life of this section are Canadians of the second and third generations.

To a large extent the masses of these German Canadians have lived their lives to themselves. In consequence there was some disposition, when war came, to look upon this element with suspicion. This was especially true after a few Germans in other parts of the country had made themselves obnoxious by their manifestations of sympathy for the enemy, and more especially true when a few hotheads—not Canadians, mind you, but Germans—had been so indiscreet as to attempt to justify the slaughter of women and children aboard the Lusitania.

This suspicion lasted for some time, but has been pretty effectively dispelled. When war came the leaders of "German Canada" came right to the front. In the war Parliament the Hon. W. G. Weichel, member of the House of Commons for Waterloo, was selected by Premier Borden to second the address from the throne.

Mining in British Columbia.

Mining, which, after all, should be perhaps the greatest industry of British Columbia, is beginning to come into its own. There are dozens of big mines, copper, zinc, silver, not to speak of coal, which are steadily producing, and doing so quietly without any band wagon methods. But there are signs that the investing public is getting into a receptive mood in regard to mining. Hitherto British and United States capital has corralled most of the best paying propositions, while local capitalists have been asleep or indifferent.

The investing public is getting into a receptive mood in regard to mining. There is still plenty of money left in the Province for legitimate investment, and given a fair deal, money will be forthcoming. The investing public of this province has cut its investing eye tooth and will demand fair treatment from the prospectors, insisting that they be sure of their ground when looking for prospective buyers, and will expect fair treatment from corporations. When a corporation places its securities in the hands of the public its propositions become the concern, not of the immediate persons interested, but of every man holding stock, who does not want to be kept in the dark regarding operations, and who wants the why and wherefore of all statements explained thoroughly. With reports of dividends and good prices reigning there should not be the lack of confidenec in buying that there is at the present.

Strictly Canadian Henceforth.

All of Canada's army divisions at the front are to be henceforth completely Canadian. The Minister of Militia announced a few days ago that arrangements had been completed for the supplying of every unit of the three divisions now at the front with both Canadian men and Canadian equipment. Although the 1st Division was completely Canadian so far as personnel and equipment went, it was found necessary when the 2nd Division went across to borrow part of the artillery, transport, and other units from the British War Office. These are now being replaced by units and equipment supplied and owned by Canada.

In the case of the 3rd Division, the organization of which is now being completed, the same policy of having Canadian-supplied or Canadian-owned equipment in the way of transports, artillery, Army Service Corps, etc., is being followed.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

A corporation of the city of Glasgow wanted to purchase the Whistler portrait of Carlyle and in due course waited on the master of the gentle art of making enemies about the price (1,000 guineas). They admitted it was a magnificent picture, but "Do you not think, Mr. Whistler, the sum a wee, wee bit excessive?"

"Didn't you know the price before you came to me?" asked the master, with suspicious blandness.

"Oh, aye, we knew that!" replied the corporation.

"Very well, then," said Mr. Whistler in his suavest tones, "let's talk of something else." And as there was nothing else of interest to detain the "corporation" they paid the price and made an excellent bargain.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to J. S. McKeown's drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a 2-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

HOW PRISONERS OF WAR ARE EXCHANGED

Madam Bohny, the wife of Col. Bohny, Physician in Chief to the Swiss Red Cross has written the following account of the manner in which totally incapacitated prisoners of war are exchanged between France and Germany, by way of Switzerland. In one period of two weeks the number of those thus repatriated amounted to over 9,000.

"The selection of prisoners to be exchanged was made at Constance on the German frontier and at Lyon by two doctors belonging to the Swiss Army Medical Corps. The Swiss Red Cross organized two hospital trains, one at each point to carry the wounded released by the medical examination.

The personnel of each train was composed of a doctor major, in complete command of the train; a doctor captain for medical services exclusively, and a secretary whose task was to draw up an accurate list of the wounded. The feminine personnel was composed of a nurse in each carriage or fifteen to every train under the supervision of a Red Cross matron who had complete charge of the equipment of the train and the distribution of the presents, received at the railway stations.

Meals were arranged for in the following manner. The French received coffee and white bread at Zurich and warm milk at Geneva. The Germans received supper at Geneva and breakfast at Zurich.

"I was of the belief at the outset", says Madame Bohny, that man can grow accustomed to the sight of human miseries and become little by little indifferent to them. But no! The frightful aspect of all these young men in the prime of life mutilated, maimed and disfigured for the rest of their existence creates always a most poignant impression. One would imagine that the sight of such wretchedness would infallibly extinguish every thought of gaiety in the beholder. Nevertheless the spectacle of the courage and joy wherewith they resign themselves to their lot enables you to share with them hours which are truly happy.

To die for one's country is nothing in comparison with a life full of pains and infirmities such as these men have in prospect. Nevertheless they face this lamentable future with admirable courage.

Here is an example. One of our invalids, the most deserving of pity, was a young man who had both his legs and one arm amputated and at the same time was totally blind.

I scarcely dared to address him a few words of consolation, but I was soon made aware that he asked for none. He talked gaily with me on all subjects and exclaimed with imperturbable heroism. "Although I have lost everything, my heart still beats safe and sound in my breast."

The most of our unfortunates think and speak in the same manner whether they are French or German.

Our train was overflowing. No less than 320 severely wounded were distributed in 15 cars. Amongst them were madmen, tuberculosis sufferers, and many sick whose lives were in hourly danger. The good nurses had certainly work in abundance. As soon as we had crossed the German frontier into Switzerland we were overwhelmed with ovations. A veritable cyclone of gifts fell on our train from station to station. Soon our carriages were transformed into moving gardens fragrant with flowers. All along the way enthusiastic crowds acclaimed us even in stations where the train did not stop.

Only those provided with a card of admission from the State Dept. had the right to enter the train. This privilege was enjoyed principally by members of the various diplomatic bodies and by the Swiss Red Cross. These visitors made themselves useful by distributing gifts and speaking words of consolation to the wounded.

After leaving Geneva the wounded received at Bellegards, the first welcome from their compatriots. To the strains of the Marseilaise the train drew slowly into the railway station, which was sumptuously decorated as on great festival days. The guard presented arms. Handkerchiefs and hats were waved. All voices were mingled in a thunder of patriotic welcome.

It is impossible to describe the reception which we received at Lyon. An innumerable assemblage, officers in resplendent uniforms, high functionnaries of category, numerous ladies of the French Red Cross in elegant white costumes, the richly decorated station, all formed a setting of extraordinary brilliance and magnificence.

As soon as the train was emptied of French prisoners of war, it was filled with Germans and proceeded on its way to Switzerland. Every night from station to station were renewed the joyous demonstrations above mentioned, as well as a rain of gifts of every variety. During all these journeys to and fro, animated by an enthusiastic feeling of charity, the inhabitants of the districts through which the train passed flocked to the railway station at no matter what hour of night.

Thus journeyed for three weeks from Constance to Lyon and from Lyon to Constance a whole series of trains, exhibiting always the same spectacle and giving rise to sympathy, the same demonstrations and the same heartfelt welcome, but also affording always the same spectacle of the same misery, of maimed unfortunates, galvanized into a momentary life, by the joy of seeing their native land once more.

Once, during this period of lugubrious exchanges, two trains stopped for a moment on opposite tracks in the middle of the night. Heads leaned out of windows. Flowers were thrown from one train to the other. The one train sang the Marseillaise, the other Deutschland uber Allies. Then the wheels moved and the trains disappeared in the darkness.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

This German Spy Has Escaped?

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, a former member of the British Parliament, and a self-confessed German spy, who was being held here pending his extradition to England on forgery charges, was today reported to have escaped while being taken from the Raymond street jail to the federal building in Brooklyn.

Officials were extremely reticent when questioned about the report, and declined to either confirm or deny it. It was understood that Lincoln was being taken to the federal building in connection with an appeal he made from the extradition order.

THE LORD JESUS AS A YOKE-FELLOW

"Come Unto Me, All Ye That Labor and Are Heavy-Laden."

Self-Surrender Absolutely Essential to Discipleship—Advantages of the Poor—The Church's Course Contrary to That of the World—"Prize of the High Calling" Compared With "Restitution"—Jesus' Mercy Toward Honest Doubters—Blessedness of Yoke-Fellowship With Christ.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 16.—Pastor Russell gave a practical address here to-day from the text, "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me . . .; for My yoke is easy and My burden is light." (Matthew 11:29, 30.) The Pastor said in part:

We are to remember that our Lord used these words to the Jews; and that He was not addressing so much those who labored and were heavy-laden in a physical sense as those who were burdened in a mental and moral sense. This class had been striving to keep the Law. They knew the terms of the Law Covenant, that "he that doeth these things shall live by them." (Leviticus 18:5.) But they were all dying; and they well knew that if they had been keeping their part of the covenant, God would have kept His part.

This class is illustrated in the case of the rich young ruler who came to the Master, saying, "What good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" (Matthew 19: 16-22.) He had been striving hard to keep the Law. It was no wonder that Jesus loved him; for he was a noble character. Then in kindness the Master told him in what respect he was still lacking. His heart was set upon his riches. So our Lord put him to the test. "If you are weary and heavy-laden with trying to keep the Law from your youth up," was the thought which Jesus presented, "and still cannot gain life, I will tell you the only way by which you can obtain life everlasting. It is simply to cease from your own works, and accept through Me, as a gift from God, the forgiveness of the sins which you cannot avoid. Then renounce all earthly things, become My disciple, and lay up treasure in Heaven."

But the young man departed sorrowfully; for he had much possessions. Others, poorer than this young man in worldly possessions, had also been striving to keep the Law—Peter, James, John, Nathaniel, and the rest. Jesus presented Himself to them as the Messiah, telling them that if they would become His disciples and share with Him in the sacrifices of the present time, they should also share the Heavenly Kingdom hereafter. They gladly complied, unlike the rich young ruler, for they had less to fetter them to the earth.

We can readily see how riches of learning, of knowledge, of experience, of honor, of men, of social standing, of wealth—riches in any form—would be something to hinder the majority of men from becoming followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. But our Lord has just one set of terms under which any and all may come to Him. There is no royal road to the Kingdom of God. Whoever does not care to come on His terms may stay away and wait for the opportunities of the next Age. God has a great deal in the future—Times of Restitution for a needy world. The Call of the Gospel Age is unique. Some learn of this Call; fewer accept it; and still fewer prove faithful to the end.

God's Plan for the world is to lift them up out of sin, degradation, and death, back to all that was lost by Adam. But no one can get this Restitution now. However, it will not hurt men to know in advance that God is gracious, and that He has provided something good for mankind. As the Love and the Mercy of God shine into their hearts, they will come to love Him more and more. At present God is selecting the soldiers who wish to enlist in the battle now being waged between right and wrong. All others may in the future come into the family of God on a lower plane.

As Adam lost his sonship and all his possessions because of sin, so because of the deliverance which Christ will accomplish by and by these sinners may come back into harmony with God and to all that was lost in Adam. Let us thank God on their behalf. But this will not hinder us from having some still better thing. The more we come to know our Heavenly Father, the better we love Him.

When we find that it costs something to be a disciple of Christ during the present time, we are all the more convinced of the value of the good things which He has for them that accept His Call of the Gospel Age. But during the Millennial Age it will cost something not to do God's will. For all such there will be stripes, and eventually destruction if they continue to be disobedient. But there will be blessings for all who will then walk in the way of the Lord. Now, whoever walks in the footsteps of Jesus must walk contrary to the spirit of the world. Yet this class are the happiest people in the world, even though the world, their own flesh and the Devil are all against them. Satan pays more attention to them than to other people. There is no need for him to give special attention to those who are asleep. But whoever is waking up will be beset with persecution, with worldly inducements, and with everything to oppose his way.

But since He that is on their part is greater than all that can be against them, if only they retain their love, faith, and obedience, the opposition will become a blessing. The Master told His disciples that all manner of evil would be said against them falsely for His sake. St. Paul also declared, "Yea, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" in the present time. But there is a far greater reward for following Christ, for doing the Lord's will under present unfavorable conditions, than there will be for doing the Lord's will in the future. We are glad to suffer now that we may reign then, when the world's opportunity shall come.

The Church's Glorious High Calling.

The High Calling of the Church is the most wonderful opportunity which God has ever given to any of His creatures. Those who have made a Covenant of Sacrifice with God may have severe experiences now; but later the faithful ones amongst them will have glory, honor, and immortality, and in the ages to come God will show the exceeding riches of His grace toward them through Christ Jesus. (Ephesians 2:4-7.) But who amongst those that have this hope would surrender it and take Restitution instead—a perfect human body, a perfect home in a perfect earth, perfect fruits, beautiful flowers, and all the grandeurs of Restitution Times? Not one!

How did we attain this hope? By obedience to the Call contained in our text. By nature we were sinners, even as others, members of the fallen race. But as the Apostle points out, we recognized in our nature the Law of right and wrong. We still retained a part of what was originally given to Father Adam and lost by him. Humanity still has something left of the image of God in which Adam was created. The world in general know about the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." But "there is none righteous, no, not one." Fallen humanity find it a hard battle merely trying to live right, to do justly by their neighbors, to be kind and just to family and friends.

To this class that have been trying to do the Lord's will and that have found it a hard task to live up to the Divine standard, our Lord Jesus says, "Come unto Me"—you who are weary and heavy-laden in your attempts to do what is right, to speak no slander, to treat your neighbor always as you would have him treat you. This class have found out that if God were to require perfection of them, they could never come to Him at all; for fallen humanity cannot measure up to His perfect standards.

But why should we come to Jesus, instead of going directly to God? It is because Jesus is God's appointed Way. (John 14:6.) God is aware of our fallen estate. He knows that we have inherited our weaknesses of mind and body. He could not accept us thus; hence He has provided for us a Saviour and Advocate. He is seeking now for those who are striving to do right, those who realize the grandeur of His requirements in the Golden Rule. To this class He is sending a special Message. He is inviting them to have a share in the sacrifice of Christ.—Romans 12:1, 2.

His Glorious Provision in Christ

But no sacrifice can come to the altar of the Lord except that which is without spot or blemish; and we are spotted and blemished. Therefore unless our Lord Jesus imputes of His merit to cover these spots and blemishes, we never could be accepted as joint-sacrificers with Him. He must do this before we can receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit.

Thus those who realize that they come far short of God's standard and need a Saviour may come to the Lord. These enter by faith into the rest of God—not merely that future rest for the people of God who enter into the Kingdom, but even now. "We who have believed do enter into rest." (Hebrews 4:3.) We have rest even in these imperfect human bodies. We knew that there were weaknesses before, but we did not know how to get rid of them. Now we know that "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," from all unintentional weaknesses. How glad we are that Jesus died for our sins; that He has furnished by imputation a covering for all of our imperfections. So we are resting, trusting, refreshed by this knowledge.

"According to thy faith be it unto thee," says the Master. Our justification is all by faith. God does not purpose to justify those who cannot believe. Some can believe more easily than can others. But the time will come when all can believe.

For my own part, I cannot believe as easily as do some people. I must have a certain amount of evidence. But the Lord was willing to accept St. Thomas even if that disciple could not exercise faith quickly in what he had not seen; in fact, the Master even gave him the demonstration which he needed in order to believe. But unless we can accept the Gospel Call with the evidences which the Lord has furnished, we cannot be of the Kingdom class at all. We do accept. We are resting in the promises by faith. The Apostle says, "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." (Philippians 4:7.) Just as surely as we are children of God, and are living in covenant relationship with Him, so surely is this promise ours.

So then, if there be any dear friends present to-day who have not yet come to the Lord, we would give them this Message, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden; and I will give you rest." If you have not been trying to do the will of God, then you are not weary and heavy-laden. But if you have been trying, and feeling your impotency, then listen to this Call. Do not stop there, however. "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," advises our Lord and Saviour.

Our Great Yoke-Fellow.

A yoke is a symbol of servitude. By the use of this symbol our Lord implies that those who are set free, either from the yoke of the Law Covenant, as were the believing Jews, or from the yoke of Satan, as were the believing Gentiles, should take His yoke, should become His servants, should learn to do His will. A yoke is generally arranged for two; and since our Lord speaks of it as His yoke, we are to understand that He also is a servant. Having come to do the Father's will, He invites us to become true yoke-fellows with Himself in the doing of the Father's will, to be co-laborers with Christ in the great work of the world's deliverance from sin and death.

The secret of the ability to wear this yoke, to have companionship with Christ in His service, and to have as a result a great blessing in our own hearts, lies in our learning to be meek and lowly of heart, as He was. It is impossible for the proud, haughty, self-willed, ambitious, or worldly-wise to labor in the same yoke with Jesus, or to find the true rest of soul which we properly seek. But if we are meek, teachable, humble-minded, ready to know and to do the Lord's will at any cost, then indeed we shall find rest.

Those who wear this yoke have the Divine assurance that all things are working together for good to them; that the heavier the burden now the greater will be the blessing and the reward by and by; that the severer the experiences now, the brighter shall be their character and the surer shall they be of preparedness for the Kingdom. From this viewpoint every burden is light, not only because the yoke is easy, but because the Lord is their Yoke-fellow, and assumes the weight of the load for those who walk close to Him.

Having a strong, efficient Yoke-fellow is very different from trying to pull the load alone. Of our Lord it was written, "Of the people there was none" with Him. (Isaiah 63:3.) But how different it is with His footstep followers! Not only do they have brethren to encourage and assist them, but above all they have the Master with them. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the Age," is His promise. Although we are now in the end of the Age, yet the Age will not close until the last member of the Church is called and proven. Moreover, the Lord will be with His followers all the way as a true yoke-fellow.

"Learn of Me."

"Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," says the Master. If we have taken His yoke upon us, we are in His School, learning of Him. Yet at the same time we are being taught of the Heavenly Father. He says, "I will put you into the School of Instruction; and the One who has redeemed you I have appointed to be your Teacher. You are to be under the care of your Elder Brother." So we are learning the necessary lessons day by day, growing in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Redeemer, in all the fruits of the Holy Spirit.

What are the fruits of the Spirit? Meekness, faith, gentleness, patience, self-control, brotherly kindness, love. The Apostle says that these fruits are manifest—can be seen. "If these things be in you and abound," declares St. Peter, "they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 1:8, 10,11.) We must therefore exercise ourselves according to the Divine arrangements; and then we shall be ready for the graduation, when our Master shall say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things"—you did not do very much, but you had the right spirit, you did the best that you could—"enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

"For I am meek and lowly in heart." This is one of the main lessons in the School of Christ. Whoever has learned to be humble-minded, submissive, gentle, obedient, shall find rest of soul, and finally shall enter into His rest—the Kingdom rest. Then the sons of God will have perfect bodies, complete in every sense of the word. They will have the glory, honor, and immortality which God has in reservation for those that love Him supremely.

Those who have learned of Christ have made God's work the chief interest in life. Therefore they do not give all of their time to the ordinary vocations of mankind. On the contrary, they are determined to follow the Master, to labor for the good of others, and to let the light of Truth shine out wherever they may go. Having become members of the Christ company, henceforth for them to live is Christ. Their work is to serve the Truth and the brethren, to suffer with their Lord now, and to reign with Him hereafter.

The Christian who has been making progress for years, growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, gradually comes to know the Father and the Son in the intimate sense, to become well acquainted with them, knowing their mind as one knows the mind, the heart, of an intimate friend. It is a great privilege thus to know the Father and the Son, a privilege not to be attained by every one. It must be carefully sought and earnestly desired. Such a growth in grace should be eagerly sought by all of the true followers of our Lord, by all who long to be His joint-heirs in the Kingdom; for without this intimate fellowship and communion they cannot make progress in spiritual things. In proportion as we know the Father and the Son, in that same proportion shall we love them and strive more and more to do the things which are pleasing in their sight, and the greater shall be our rest of faith.

PAPER MANUFACTURES AND WAR'S EFFECTS

Trouble May Come From German Aggression—Canada and Other Countries Are Filling Graps Made

IN THE MONETARY TIMES BY E. B. BIGGAR.

There is no more striking illustration of the economic unheavals caused by the war, and of the almost impartial way in which the innocent are made to suffer with the guilty, than that furnished by the paper industry. When the war-cloud broke in blood on the astonished nations of Europe, it appeared certain to the German leaders of industry that Germany and Austria would not only hold Norway, Sweden and Finland as sources of supply for the primary materials of wood and pulp and the cheaper grades of paper, but that the Teutonic empires would continue to dominate the rest of the world in the supply of those specialties in finished papers which had been for years their own monopoly. So commonly was this assumed that when Belgium and Northern France were overrun there was an almost systematic wrecking of paper plants in the devastated areas in order that German mills might supply the trade thus destroyed.

Paper Mills Closed

The illusion was soon dispelled. The rapid internment of German and Austrian merchant ships and the dangers of navigation in the North Sea; along with the Russian ban upon exports of wood and other products from Russia to Germany swiftly brought the German manufacturers to realize that they could not live on their own vitals. In the first four months of the war it was reported that in the branch of kraft papers alone 27 German mills closed down, while scores of mills in other branches either had to close or run to partial capacity, because of shortage of raw materials or the sudden cutting out of the foreign market for their goods. The docks at the seaports of Holland and Germany were piled with pulp and paper, and many other classes of goods for which there was no outlet over an ocean ruled by the enemy. Then the restrictions of the coal trade, followed by the British prohibition of the export of coal to Germany, the embargo placed by Italy on the export of sulphur, an essential in pulp; the stoppage in the shipment of some other raw materials of the trade, upset all calculations, both in Germany and Scandinavia, with the result that not only was the manufacture of German specialties in paper paralyzed, but in the first winter of the war about 200 papers in Germany suspended publication and large numbers of others had to appear in reduced size.

Lost Supplies and Markets

Before the war Germany had been importing 80 per cent. of its pulpwood from Russia and about 20 per cent from Austria, while large quantities of pulp were imported from Scandinavia. Germany, in turn, exported over 200,000 tons of mechanical and chemical pulp to other countries, such as Great Britain, France, the United States and Italy. At the beginning of the war, and for some years before, Germany was also the largest manufacturer of paper and paper products of any country in Europe, her annual output being over a million and a half tons more than Great Britain, the next in rank in Europe. German growth in this industry may be measured by the record of her consumption of wood for pulp, which increased from 485,818 cords in 1900 to 1,342,604 cords in 1913. Of all countries in the world the United States alone exceeded Germany in the manufacture of paper, and this only because of the big production of newsprint, based on the vast issues of the American press. In many specialties a practical monopoly was conceded to German mills. And Great Britain was Germany's largest customer. The big guns that smashed the villages and churches of France and Flanders also severed these arteries of friendly trade, to the deep and specific injury of the German industry—an injury which will prove permanent in many important lines and which will cut the deeper the longer the war continues. This is evident because the world must have the particular kinds of paper which Germany has heretofore supplied, and the mills of Great Britain, the United States, Canada, Japan and India are now called upon to fill up this gap. In fact these countries have already completely succeeded in many lines, nor is it likely that the consuming countries will ever be content to allow any one country to monopolize these products again.

The same is true of many lines of chemicals and dyestuffs, of which a greater or less control of the world's markets has been held by German firms, affecting profoundly the current of the textile, as well as the pulp and paper trades. The scarcity of these chemicals is giving a severe wrench to a thousand different trades and industries all over the world, bringing difficulty and distress in the remotest lands, and in trades and occupations which at first consideration seem to have no connection with the industries that produce the primary materials.

Take one example. Germany holds on to all the bleaching powder she can buy or make, and Great Britain and her Allies prohibit the export of the same to their enemies, and because this material is used in the manufacture of asphyxiating gases, the paper, the textile and many other industries all over the world are in trouble. German toilers in these industries will be injured for years beyond the duration of the war itself, and it seems certain that at least some of these trades will be destroyed forever in Germany.

"The Girl Who Saved His Honor" was a wonderful story by Arthur Applin, but the copyrighted story, "Blackmailed" by the same author which is to begin in The Intelligencer on Thursday, is better yet, and no story lover will miss it. It will be published only in this paper.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Date of Fair Will be Changed to Later in the Season—A Small Deficit Last Year Address of an Optomistic Nature

The annual meeting of the Belleville Agricultural Fair Association was held in the city yesterday afternoon and was well attended. Amongst others, the following were present: Messrs. A. Jones, R. H. Ketcheson, G. G. Horton, H. K. Denyes, Mayor Ketcheson, R. J. Garbutt, W. C. Reid, R. P. White, G. F. Reid, Geo. McCullough, A. Brickman, H. Ketcheson, C. Weese, S. Wellbank, W. A. Martin, W. C. Ketcheson.

Mr. A. Jones, Manager of the Molsons Bank in Belleville, who is President of the Association, occupied the chair, and in opening the meeting stated that last year the fair was good, the programme provided was good, but the receipts were not good. A question to be considered was whether or not the date of the fair should be changed. Personally, he thought the dates upon which the fair had been held were too early. Considering everything the Association was not bad off. This past year only $400 was borrowed, whereas $500 was borrowed the year previous.

Deficit—$35.97.

On motion the report presented by the Treasurer was adopted.

Mr. George F. Reed, as one of the directors of the Fair Association, spoke briefly in regard to the fair and its working.

Mr. George McCullough, a director, was in accord with the proposition of the President to hold Belleville fair at a later date. The prize list might be reduced in some respects. He had done all in his power to keep down expenses. Whilst there was a discount made in the prize list there was no fault found by the exhibitors.

Mr. Asa Brickman said he had done all he could for the Belleville Fair.

Mr. W. C. Reid concurred in the remarks of the President in regard to the date of the Belleville Fair. He thought that it was a mistake to hold the fair whilst the Toronto exhibition was in progress, as it was natural for many to go away from the city for this holiday.

Mr. Harry Ketcheson was of the opinion that the fair last year was a success considering the date it was held on. He would favor the fair being held at a later date in the year. Personally he would do all in his power to make the Belleville fair a success.

President Jones stated that the date of the fair was changed because it was considered to be a good time, especially as Labor Day is a holiday.

Director C. Weese was in hearty accord with the fair being held at a later date in the season. If it was held two or three weeks later it would no doubt be an advantage in many ways.

Mr. H. K. Denyes considered the Belleville fair last year was a good fair and compared favorably with other fairs. Our prize lists were better than those of other fairs. As to holding the fair at a later date, there was a diversity of opinion. There was no doubt that many attend the Toronto fair at the time the Belleville fair has been held in the past two or three years. He thought that perhaps less money might be spent for speeding events, and not have such a cut in the prize list. Our prize list looms up well, in fact, much better than many of the fairs in this district. Our expenses were, in his opinion, too large, especially in printing and advertising.

Mayor Ketcheson, of Belleville, being called upon, said the citizens of Belleville took a deep interest in the fair and he had no doubt would support it in the future as in the past. The city during the past year had great expenditures owing to the war. He would like to see the city membership increased, and he would do all in his power to assist in accomplishing this end. If we all put a little energy into the fair there is no doubt that success would follow. He thought that it was a rather poor policy to hold the fair here whilst the Toronto fair is in progress. All in Belleville want to see the fair a success. He could not promise what the city council would do, but a grant to the fair would be made.

President Jones thanked the Mayor for the remarks he had made.

Mr. R. J. Garbutt spoke optimistically of the Belleville fair, which he considered was an excellent fair. He was of the opinion that the date was a little early in the season, and if it was held later it would no doubt prove to be more profitable.

Mr. Wellbanks, a director of the fair, said that on the 1st of September many farmers are busy and fruit and vegetables were not altogether ready to be exhibited at this time. If the fair was made two weeks later it would no doubt be of advantage.

Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, Secretary of the fair, gave a few remarks. He believed that the holding of the fair two weeks later would be an advantage.

Mr. W. A. Morton suggested that the fair be held after the Picton fair; as it is apparent the dates of late years have been too early.

Mr. Horton, Treasurer, presented a report which showed that the receipts for each day of the fair in late years have been as follows:

Year	Sept.	1st day	2nd day	Total
1908	16-17	$	$	$ 655.00
1909	14-15	61.40	531.05	592.46
1910	13-14	133.60	586.00	719.60
1911	12-13	102.50	708.00	810.50
1912	10-11	100.00	693.00	793.00
1913	1- 2	650.45	563.00	1313.45
1914	8- 9	261.00	763.00	1034.00
1915	6- 7	327.00	549.00	970.00

On motion it was decided not to hold a stallion, and a bull show and seed show competition in the spring, also not to hold a standing field crop competition.

It was decided to have departmental judges and to engage the number necessary.

Mayor Ketcheson stated that he would make the same contribution to the fair as he made last year, namely $25, to be arranged in prizes as the Association desired.

After some discussion it was decided by an almost unanimous vote to change the date of the Belleville fair from the 1st week of September to a later date.

It was moved that the Belleville Society affiliate with the Central Fair Board and send two delegates to the annual meeting to be held in Madoc village.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Second Vice-Pres.—H. K. Denyes.

Letters From Belleville Boys At the Front

France, Somewhere in the mud,
December 31, 1915.

My Dear Mrs. "B."—Your parcel of cake, soxs, chocolate and cigarettes received the 22nd in fine shape; it was really packed exceptionally good. I shared same with two boys who are billetted with me. The way we went to the cake and cigarettes can hardly be imagined. I was very lucky with boxes, so had a great feed during this Xmas, more than we expected. The weather here is like our March. You are no doubt aware of the mud, so I will simply confirm the very worst description you have heard of same. It is all here.

Our lorries have been laid up for a spell as the roads can not stand up under the heavy traffic, so they have us repairing roads and helping the engineers; just how long it is going to last I do not know, but at any rate there is a lot to be done and the engineers would not have too many if they had the whole army. I spent Tuesday, the 28th, with the 21st Battalion in their "Mobile Reserve Trench." I found Ernest Geen and Aruthur Johnson well, also Capt. J. Sills. Between these trenches, which are the third line, and the line of communication, there is a swamp, known as Ypres flats, about one mile wide, pretty much all along right angle with our 2nd Division front, this swamp at this time is six feet deep in places.

I hear from Connie very often. She seems well, but all the time looking forward to our leave which is always rumored to be coming to us soon. I hardly think we will get leave until we are here six months at least. I hope this finds you well. So far I have been good for health and sore feet. Wishing you a very happy New Year, I am

Most sincerely,
Herbert B. Weller.

Dear Sir.—I beg to acknowledge receipt of case of Xmas present from the "Belleville Women's Patriotic Association," forwarded on by you, which I have distributed amongst the Belleville men in the 1st. Canadian Art., Bde., Amm. Column.

My comrades join me in thanking you for your trouble and kindness, and desire you to convey to the ladies of the Association their deepest gratitude and appreciation for their kindness in helping them to forget as much as possible where they are this Xmas, and the delight it affords them to know that they are not forgotten.

Again thanking you on behalf of the following: W. C. Burgess, A. Lafferty, F. Smith, J. C. Sills, F. Ashmore, O. Trainer, C. Nesbit, R. Small and R. H. Wright.

Yours very sincerely,

The Belleville Intermediates are running a special train over the C. N. R. to-morrow night to enable the local hockey enthusiasts an opportunity to witness the game between Belleville and Queens' 2nd.

Mr. Ernie Lang, of this city, will this evening referee the game at Kingston, which takes place between the Frontenacs and K. C. I. teams of that city. This will be a junior O. H. A. match.

O. H. A. HEADQUARTERS

Bowmanville juniors have defaulted to Oshawa, which does not give the district to Port Hope, but ties them and Oshawa. The two will play off home-and-home at Port Hope Thursday; at Oshawa Thursday week.

Meaford has defaulted to Stayner in junior group 9, leaving Collingwood and Stayner to meet in home-and-home games according to the original schedule.

Kingston Frontenacs play their senior game at Brockville on Thursday instead of Friday. W. M. Tackaberry of Ottawa has been agreed on as referee.

Campbellford will play at Cobourg St. Michael's on Friday instead of Thursday. E. Lang of Belleville will referee.

In group five Simcoe Norfolks and Port Colborne will play home and home games, the first at Port Colborne on Thursday next, and the second at Simcoe on the 25th.

Port Hope wins District

At the Belleville Curling Club rink yesterday afternoon and evening, a competition took place between rinks representing Belleville, Cobourg and Port Hope, for the Ontario Tankard Competition for this district. The result was a win for Port Hope. In the afternoon Belleville and Cobourg rinks played, resulting in a win for Belleville by a score of 32 to 30. In the evening Belleville rinks played against Port Hope and the result was a win for Port Hope by a score of 35 to 31. The composition of the rinks and the score were as follows:

FAILURE OF SUBS. TO HURT BRITAIN

Huns' Sea Weapon Proving More Futile—Kept Well in Hand in The Mediteranean

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The following article is by John F. H. Pollen, the well-known naval writer:

The naval news seems to be confined to the doings of submarines, and, during this period when incidents are as common as events are rare it is the submarine services of the belligerents that play the leading roles. Nor is this to be wondered at, for we must remember that Germany's "war of attrition," which was to reduce the British navy to impotence, was to be a war of submarines, and the "blockade" that was to bring England to starvation by the destruction of every British ship that sailed was to be a blockade of submarines

Germany from the outset seems to have staked everything on her U boats. They were to be the primary weapon of offence by sea; they were to snatch the command of the seas from the British navy; they were finally to bring us, starving and craven, to the feet of Germany. And had their submarines been as efficient and our navy as inefficient as the Germans hoped even this end might have been achieved.

Unfortunately for the enemy the weakness of the Briish navy was a myth, and the value of German submarines much overrated. By a display of ingenuity and resource that has never been equalled in this or in any other war, our sea service completely turned the tables, and by a few dexterous moves reduced Germany's submarine war to a matter of almost secondary importance.

Bethmann's Sea Silence

There is no need to dilate upon the ghastly failure of both the "war of attrition" and the submarine "blockade." Their collapse is an accomplished fact, but in passing there is one fact worthy of notice.

It is that in his recent speech on the progress of the war the German chancellor made no reference whatever to the sea aspect of it, beyond one of the usual libels on British seamen that so delight the heart of the Teuton. It is significant. The new gospel, according to the Germans, is that sea-power is valueless! It rather reminds one of the fox and the grapes. But the Germans will remember the time when their hard-earned savings were wrenched from them to build up the "great fleet of Germany," and will perhaps begin to wonder if this is the true gospel. The allied fleets will help them to realize to the full that sea power is going to strangle them in the end.

There is another matter that is also worthy of comment—the recent activities of submarines in the Mediterranean. In the sea of Marmora, where targets are few and dangers many, one of our intrepid submarine commanders spent the opening days of this month in harrying the Turks to the utmost of his ability. One of Turkey's last remaining destroyers, the Yar Hissar, was torpedoed and sunk. The officers and men were picked up, and as they could not be carried off in the submarine were placed in safety on a sailing ship. The Ismid railway was shelled, and, finally, a large transport was sunk in Panderma bay. This anchorage was frequently visited by our submarines, and the sinking of a transport there is a matter of more than ordinary importance.

Rounding Up Pirates

The situation with regard to the submarine campaign in the Mediterranean remains much the same. After the first week of feverish activity, in which a number of transports were attacked and several merchant ships sunk, with due frightfulness, the victims became fewer and fewer, until several days passed without any casualties. The reason was not hard to find, for after the first outburst, the protective measures adopted by the navy began to take effect, and, in fact, as was stated at the time, the navy had the menace well in hand.

The prophecy that there would be several more outbursts was also ventured, and the events of the last fortnight have revealed its truth. In this period a really considerable number of vessels have been sunk; indeed, the Germans have made better "bags" than they did in any of the weeks when the "blockade" of England was at its zenith, but this apparent success must not be construed into a proof that the navy has lost control over the U boats. On the contrary, the fact that of the hundreds of transports that are swarming in the Mediterranean not one has been attacked goes to prove that the Allies are slowly but surely rounding up these pirates. The time will come ere long when not only transports and hospital ships, but also merchantmen, can sail in perfect safety under the protecting wing of sea power.

The task is as yet but half done, and it will take time to cut off all the sources of supply and finally to round up these marauders. From various reports it appears that the navigation to the Italian ports is once more quite normal, and though many of the reports of the sinking of German submarines are exaggerated, it is more than probable that the navy has already accounted for some of them. Though it is true that the casualties among merchant ships have recently been considerable, let us realize once for all that the navy has got the menace well in hand and will ere long stamp it out. These sporadic outbursts will no doubt continue, but given time, our sea power will make the Mediterranean as safe as it has made the English Channel.

SEEING VISIONS DREAMING DREAMS

As Canada is paying for the maintenance of these troops at the rate of about $1,000 yearly per man, the resultant burden of taxation on a community not much more populous than Pennsylvania is very heavy, yet there is no complaint and for any public man to oppose the military measures being taken would be an act of political suicide.

In a recent communication former Governor Pennypacker makes the surprising statement that "If the Germans win, then in all probability Canada, with the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence River and the Manitoba wheat fields, which the British wrenched from us in the Democratic days of Polk, will enter the union of the States"; and the ground upon which he seeks to justify this astonishing opinion is that "Canada will be unable to protect herself in any other way and can do no otherwise."

It would be hard with equal brevity to be more irrational. If Mr. Pennypacker supposes that the Canadian people have the least disposition toward a union with the United States he cannot have made himself acquainted with the situation. So far from being that way inclined, the great majority of the more violently opposed to any movement in that direction. They are extremely jealous of the quasi-independence which they enjoy, and their attitude toward this country, if not exactly unfriendly, is distinctly distrustful.

It was through the influence of this district that the reciprocity treaty negotiated under the Taft administration was so emphatically rejected. At the time of its negotiation the Liberal Party was in power, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Premier. With a misconception of the prevailing conditions not to be expected from a politician of his long experience and exceptional astuteness, Laurier had conceived the idea that American reciprocity would be popular with his fellow-countrymen. He thought that the treaty for which he had become responsible represented a very good bargain from the Canadian point of view, that Canada was getting more than it gave. So when it came to electing a new parliament he made reciprocity the leading issue of the campaign.

It can hardly be necessary to do more than recall what happened. The Liberal Party went down in overwhelming defeat and the Conservatives were restored to power after many years' exile in the wilderness as the champions of Canadian commercial as well as political independence.

How thoroughly loyal and devoted the Canadians are to the British connection has been demonstrated with a fervor and impressiveness which few outsiders had anticipated since the beginning of the present war. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the Canadians have shown a more strongly military spirit, that they have been more ready to make the patriotic sacrifices which the war demands than the British themselves. They have sent 120,000 men to the trenches of Flanders and the Dardanelles. They have another 120,000 in training and the government has just announced its intention to recruit 250,000 more.

Canada will never be embodied in the United States, but after the war is over—a war which Germany will certainly not win—Canada will become a co-equal and co-ordinate member of a reconstructed and federated British Empire.

Former Governor Pennypacker is seeing visions and dreaming dreams.

John Bull Hits Bull's Eye In Baralong Case

Perpetrators of World's Most Hideous Crimes Audaciously Talk of Their Methods

GREAT BRITAIN GIVES EAR

Proposing Only Investigation Possible, a Neutral Tribunal Which Germany, Knowing Too Well Its Verdict, Refuses to Accept

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The British official view of the German note regarding the Baralong case was given out tonight, as follows:

"The Germans claim that their army and navy have observed during the present war the principles of international law and humanity, and that the German authorities take care that all violations will be carefully investigated and punished.

"Some surprise is expressed that the nation whose armed forces have been responsible for the sack of Louvain, the murder of hundreds of unoffending men, women and children on the Lusitania, and other ships, the execution of Edith Cavell, the introduction of poisonous gases, the poisoning of wells, attempting torpedoing of hospital ships and countless other atrocoties, should describe their methods of warfare as humane.

"It is further pointed out that it would be interesting to know how many German subjects, if any, have been punished for these atrocities. The Germans claim that the Arabic was torpedoed because the commander of the submarine had the conviction that the Arabic was about to ram her. The true facts are that the Arabic was deliberately sunk by a submarine without warning and that she neither attempted to attack the submarine or to escape from it.

"With regard to the destruction of the British submarine E-13, in Danish waters, by a German torpedo boat destroyer, it is claimed that it come to a fight between the war vessels and that the submarine defended itself with gun-fire. The true facts are as follows: The Germans found the submarine stranded in neutral waters and incapable of either defence or of fence. The German destroyer fired a torpedo at the E-13. The torpedo exploded close to her. At the same moment the German destroyer fired with all her guns, and the commander of the E-13, whose submarine was on fire fore and aft, and who was unable to defend himself owing to being aground, gave orders to the crew to abandon her. While the men were in the water they were fired on by machine guns and with shrapnel.

RUSSIANS ROUTE TURKS IN CAUCASUS BATTLE

Moslem Troops Dislodged From Positions on Front of Sixty-Six Miles by Czar's Men and Run From Field in Panic

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Late official advices received from Petrograd tonight convey intelligence of the winning of a big victory over the Turks by the Russians in the Caucasus. Turkish official reports of the past few days were indicating that everything was not going well with the Moslem troops in the fighting here, and the public has been expecting good news.

The Russian victory was won by the piercing of the Turkish centre in a furious and unsuspected attack which disorganized the resistance of the Turks and forced them to beat a hasty retreat, closely pursued by the Russians, who drove them ahead in panic flight in many places. The few prisoners taken, 5 officers and 208 men, is believed to point to the desperate nature of the fighting. Much war material was captured by the victors, including machine guns, caissons and an ammunition depot.

Get Near Erzeroum

The Russians have now reached a point about 35 miles east of Erzeroum, on which place the Turks are directing their retreat. The Russian official report on this fighting says:

"Caucasus: By our furious and unexpected attack on their centre, the Turkish army was disorganized and dislodged from a strong position over a front of more than 100 versts (66 miles), extending from the region of Lake Tortum to the region of Charianson River, north of Melazghert, and retreated in the direction of the fortified Plain of Erzeroum. At many places this retreat assumed the character of a panic-flight Several Turkish units were almost annihilated; hundreds of bodies cover the route of our offensive.

"At many points our troops had to advance on heights above the clouds, cutting trenches in the deep snow during heavy snowstorms. We occupied the village of Koprukeui, on the Arax, 50 versts east of Erzeroum. In the course of the fighting on the 17th we took prisoners five officers and 208 men, and captured much material, including machine guns and caissons. We seized a Turkish ammunition depot at the Village of Tsurnachel, in the Charianson district.

"Persian campaign: Southwest of Lake Urumiah there have been engagements with Kurds, who were repulsed southward."

THE MAN AND HIS CLOTHES.

What is the score?
How is the stock market?
What is the weather outlook?

When a man wants to know anything of these things he turns to his newspaper. It is his reference book. What is more natural than he should refer to it when he wants to buy clothes

Several manufacturers of branded clothing have been shrewd enough to see this and have advertised their trade mark in the newspapers. This advertising has cashed in directly over the counter of the dealer, as the latter has been only too glad to co-operate in pushing sales—for he believes in newspapers.

Why M.P. Missed Train to Ottawa

OTTAWA, Jan. 19—According to the story told by friends of W. F. Nickle, M.P., an absent-minded Kingston tailor caused the member from the Limestone city considerable anxiety and embarassment one day this week.

Mr. Nickle intended to reach Ottawa in time for Monday afternoon's sitting of the House. He had just had a new suit made. As tailors sometimes will, Mr. Nickle's tailor made the trousers too long and he dropped in before train time to let the knight of the needle look over his handiwork and prescribe a remedy.

"Sit right down and I'll shorten them now," boomed the tailor, and the member, although in a hurry, removed his trousers and handed them over to the tailor, taking a seat in the rear of the shop.

Before the tailor could get to work with his scissors and needle, someone came into the front shop and he was forced to go in and wait on him. Before that customer got out another man arrived. Then came another and another, and still some more, with a few women dropping in by way of variety.

All this time the member sat in the back office fearful lest the forgetful tailor would land in with some of his visitors. Ten minutes went by, a terrible half hour dragged away, train time came and went and finally the noon whistles blew. It was after this that the tailor sauntered the back shop and found the M. P. in a state of mind that can best be imagined. No description of the scene that followed is attempted.

This, according to friends of the Kingston M. P., accounts for the fact that he reached Ottawa late at night instead of in time for some of the afternoon session.

ROCKWOOD NURSES GOING TO ENGLAND

To Serve in the Ontario Government's War Hopital

KINGSTON, Jan. 19.—Miss Elizabeth Mills, superintendent of nurses of Rockwood Hospital, and eleven nurses in charge of wards at that institution, are going to England to take positions in the Ontario Government's war hospital that is being established there. This hospital will contain 1,500 beds.

The large halls at Rockwood are like a big drygood's department. It is filled with webs of cotton and other materials from which thousands of dressings are being made for the Ontario Government Hospital in England. These dressings are all being made by the Toronto and Kingston hospitals, and the Rockwood nurses and other ladies are working day and night.

11 Interned Huns Dig 150-Ft. Tunnel And Now at Large

HAD ESCAPED BEFORE

Have in Their Possession Maps Showing Various Canadian Railway Lines and Other Information

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 19.—Eleven Germans, prisoners in the detention camp at Amherst, N.S., escaped some time between midnight on Monday and daylight this morning, and are now at large. Four of these men have previously escaped from military custody and are regarded as especially dangerous. The men who made their getaway are: William Schaeffer, Louis Karl Veckerman, Paul Kuhnel, William Schroeder, George Kleinworth, Gustav Hartwig, William Wagner, August Meyer, Fred Schultz, Harry Bolifmeier and Carl A. Volmer.

The method of escape was sensational. The internment camp is located in the outskirts of Amherst and is surrounded by what was supposed to be efficient guards, barbed wire fences, etc. In addition, there is a military guard on the camp patrolling all sections of it day and night.

During the night the prisoners named tunnelled under the enclosure to a spot about 150 feet distant and made their escape. Four of the men had in their possession maps showing various railway lines in New Brunswick and other information of value.

Hartwig, regarded as the ringleader of the gang, was arrested in St. John shortly after the war broke out. He was working on one of the dredges engaged in the harbor development work at Courtenay Bay when arrested by one of the detectives attached to the city police force.

It was then found that he had in his possession maps of the harbors on the Atlantic coast from St. John as far south as Virginia and in the case of the Canadian harbors, these maps were marked with soundings and other charted information. From St. John he was taken to the military prison in Halifax, where he made a sensational getaway by swimming from the prison to shore with his clothes in a bundle on his head. He returned to St. John and was captured here on a schooner about to sail to New York. Then he was taken to Amherst and up to Monday night had been interned there.

Notification of the escape of the prisoners was sent to police and military officials in Maritime Province points and a close watch is being kept.

NEW USE FOR AEROPLANES

May be Utilized in P. Q. to Locate Forest Fires

QUEBEC, Jan. 19—The use of aeroplanes for forest fire fighting in the province is one of the matters taken up in the annual report of the Department of Lands and Forests, which has been tabled by Hon. Mr. Allard. Mr. W. C. J. Hall, superintendent of the forest protection department, in his report states that he made a study of aeroplanes from point of view of his department, and has come to the conclusion that they would be of great benefit to locate fires, and enable them to be localized. However, he found that the cost would be at present prohibitive, but later when the cost of machines dropped they could be used servicebly by the Government for forest protection.

GERMANY CANNOT HIDE WOES CANDID SPEECH IN REICHSTAG

Bitter Criticism Directed At Censorship Which Seeks Vainly to Disguise Bitter Truth of Effectiveness of British Blockade

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 18, via London, Jan. 19.—(Delayed.)—The debate at the closing session of the German Riechstag today was notable for the extremely outspoken criticism of the censorship, especially as it is applied to the Socialist newspapers, as well as to general news concerning the war situation.

According to the report of The Cologne Gazette, the Socialist member, Wilhelm Pittmann, bitterly complained that this censorship was political and not military, and charged that the Prussian Government was making careful preparations that the elections should turn in their favor.

"We must," said Herr Dittmann, "destroy this pernicious mania which only regards voices claiming conquest as the expression of the will of the people. The people are against a will which cries for conquest."

A Candid Confession

Herr Fiscnbecke, Progressive, and Dr. Stresemann, National Liberal, also strongly denounced the censorship and demanded the relaxation of the continuous state of siege. They scathingly criticized a government policy of only allowing the people to hear opinions favorable to Germany.

"We can bear the fresh breath of criticism," said Dr. Stresemann. "That things are not going well with us and that England's blockade is effective is known abroad so exactly that it is needless to hide anything. The government ought to send broadcast the news, not in highly colored phrases that everything is going well, but that much is going ill, and that therefore, it is our duty to assume every burden created by the situation."

Revive Demand For An Election

Hon. Mr. Pugsley's Speech Creates Comment Supporters of Government Talk of a Mandate

(Free Press)

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Men in the government and on the government side of the House, who have been strong for a general election, have resurrected their demand as the result of Hon. Mr. Pugsley's speech last night, in which he declared the operations of the old Dominion shell committee had brought "shame to the people of Canada."

This morning they are declaring that Mr. Pugsley's speech indicates the insincerity of the Liberal protestations of an abandonment of party politics, and that it is necessary, therefore, the government should go to the country for a mandate.

The issue would be, they say, the raising and financing of an army of 500,000 men. They are asserting that the Canadian people would not think of changing horses while crossing the stream, and that in consequence the Conservatives outside of Quebec would be returned with an overwhelming majority.

The question of election or no election may be decided when the legislation forecasted in the Speech from the Throne extending the life of Parliament for one year is introduced. It is understood that one of the conditions decided upon by the Liberals is that there shall be another session of Parliament before an election. This condition might be refused by the government with a view to forcing the Liberals to vote against the extension which, it is asserted, would place them in the position of having made an election necessary.

There is considerable speculation as to whether the balance of the debate on the address will take on the tone set by Hon. Mr. Pugsley last night. If it does the present session will be anything but the peaceful one it promised to be at the outset. Mr. Pugsley resumes his speech this afternoon.

Mounted Police Keep Peace in Northwest

Splendid Order Preserved by Force Among Many Aliens Enemy Settlers

MEN ENLIST FOR FRONT

Crime in Prairie Provinces on Decrease and Horse Thieves Rounded up

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The record of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, which is set out in the annual report tabled in the Commons today, is a wonderful tribute to the efficiency of that famous force. It is particularly interesting with reference to the way in which the enemy alien situation in the western provinces was dealt with.

After the war broke out apprehension was felt owing to many settlers being of enemy nationality, and the force was increased by 500 men. There has been no disturbance of the public peace, the report says, owing to "wise precautions, fair and impartial treatment by the authorities and an admirable self-restraint on the part of the loyal population towards the enemy aliens, and the recognition by these nationalities that as long as they pursued their ordinary avocations and refrained from inimical acts they would not be molested nor interfered with." There were instances of individuals whose acts and words were treasonable and seditious. In a few cases they prosecuted and convicted.

Many Enlist For War

It has now been found to be unnecessary to keep the extra 500 men, and nearly all of them after their one-year engagement took their discharges to join the expeditionary forces. The commissioner feels that any outbreak on the part of the alien population would be sporadic and fruitless. Large bodies of troops are now under training at every centre in the west.

The force on Sept. 30 last consisted of 60 officers, 859 non-commissioned officers and constables. This is an increase of five officers and a decrease of 344 non-commissioned officers and constables as compared with a year ago. The force is distributed as follows: Alberta, 372; Saskatchewan, 488; Northwest Territories, 22; Yukon 57; Now Manitoba, 30. The strength has been increased in Alberta by 63 and decreased in Saskatchewan by 42. Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan are policed under special arrangements with the provinces, and the agreement with Alberta and Saskatchewan expires on March 31 next, but a new agreement had been reached for an indefinite period which may be terminated on one year's notice by any of the parties. The agreement with Manitoba does not expire until 1919.

During the year arms were seized from 350 aliens, 2309 cases were investigated, 396 interned and 326 paroled.

On Sept. 30, 212 prisoners were in custody charged with general misdemeanors and crimes; 5099 were received during the year. This is the smallest number since 1912. The commonest offence was theft, and next in order came common assault.

The report states that crimes of violence are on the decrease. There were 32 murders during the year, and all of the accused except one were brought to trial.

Horse-stealing, which is always more or less prevalent, has received a salutory check, especially in the Calgary district, where through the efforts of Superintendent Horrigan and his division organized gangs have been broken up, and many have been convicted and punished.

DEBATE ON BLOCKADE

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A general debate on the question of the blockade of Germany by the British fleet will take place in the House of Commons, Wednesday next.

MUST CONFISCATE EVERYTHING; GERMAN GENERAL'S ORDER

LONDON, Jan. 19—(Special)—The Daily News prints the following order, alleged to have been issued by the German General Sommer in Russia:—

"Requisitions have been carried out too mildly. I therefore order that everything whatsoever found in requisitions, such as foodstuffs, blankets, warm coats, cattle, horses, sheep, goats, etc., shall be confiscated without delay.

"No prayers of the Russian population that part of such things be left to them are to be regarded. We are in an enemy country, and no humanitarian considerations have any value. There is more safety in taking than in giving."

AN OMISSION

In our report of the Belleville Agricultural Fair Association published in yesterday's paper, the name of Hon. H. Corby should have appeared as one of the Honorary Presidents.

KNOWN IN THIS CITY

Word has been received in the city of the death of Eric J. Goldie, who died from exposure while on active service at the Dardanelles on November 28th, 1915. Eric had many friends in this city,—who will regret to hear of his death. Mrs. Geo. M. Stewart of this city, is an aunt of the deceased.

GIFTS APPRECIATED

Mrs. Hary Doxsee, Octavia street, had a letter from her son, Gunner Earle Doxsee from the front, in which he asked her to thank the ladies of the Rainbow Club for a box received by him, at Christmas time. He evidently had received some instructions about the distribution of same, which he has carried out, and the lucky boys were very much pleased with the contents.

BOXES SENT TO THE FRONT

The Argyle Chapter I.O.D.E., mailed a number of seven pound boxes to the trenches yesterday, each box containing. 1 tin peaches, sardines, pressed beef chicken, sweetened cocoa also coffee, box of biscuits, 1 lb. dates, chocolates, one pair hand-knit socks. It is the intention of the Chapter to send another supply soon, and would be glad to receive other names of boys who are fighting. Kindly phone 365, or send to Mrs. S. W. Vermilyea, 219 Anne Street.

The following were sent boxes:—

Capt. E. O'Flynn, Sergt. Hutchison, Ptes. W. Craig, C. C. Clarke, M. Vandevoort, G. Lancaster, Barnhart, E. Bacon, J. Gilbey, W. Dingman, F. Barnum, A. Lubin, 2nd Battalion.

Lieut. E. Wallace, 1st Contingent.

ORIGIN OF KHAKI

A correspondent in the Vancouver World asks what is the origin of the term "khaki." This is a matter which should be made clear at this time to every man of fighting age in Hastings County. The name used to designate the cloth from which the soldier's uniform is now made is of Hindu origin. In that country it means the color of dust, the original hue of the material. Formerly the British soldiers were dressed as a rule in red, and it was finally decided that this color by making the men conspicuous rendered them an excellent target for the enemy. A hue more in constancy with their surroundings was looked for, and khaki was the result, and at the outset the "dust color" was in keeping with the name. Khaki was first worn by British soldiers in India in 1848. It was adopted by the United States in the Spanish-American War, and is still used there as the light service uniform of soldiers.

DEATH OF AGED LADY

After being ill for some months, Mrs. Hannah B. Tickell, widow of the late ex-Mayor George S. Tickell, passed away last evening at the family residence, 254 Church street. Deceased was one of the best known and esteemed ladies of this city. In the year 1834 Mrs. Tickell was born at Cheltenham, England, being thus in her 82nd years. In company with her husband, she came out to Canada in 1857, and in 1858 located in Belleville where she has since resided. For many years deceased had been a devoted member of Bridge St. Methodist church, and was a lady who always took an active interest in everything, appertaining to the welfare of those of her sex. She was in every sense of the word a lady, imbued with that Christian spirit, which has for its object the doing of good for mankind in general. Her late illness was born with Christian fortitude and without complaint. She has at last passed beyond this vale of tears to be the possessor of joys beyond life's cares. Mr. Tickell preceded her to the tomb, some years ago. Surviving are four sons and one daughter. The sons are, G. W., of Sandiago, Ca.; Dr. A. H., of Nevada, Cal.; Joseph L. and Edward H., of Belleville, and the daughter, Mrs. Annie at home. The grand children are, F. G. Tickell, of Berkely, Cal.; U. S. and Miss Josephine, of Belleville. To the bereaved ones will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all classes of citizens.

"AT THE CLUB"

"At the Club" is the universal answer one would get if he asked every member of the 80th and 155th Battalion who was off duty last night how he spent the evening. Perhaps he was not there for the whole programme, but he was there for some of it, and if he had to leave he made the necessary excuses where he went and then hurried back. Last night's excellent programme was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Wheatley and the boys did not need to be told that they gave the first programme that was presented after the club opened. The men's memories served them well, and those who had other engagements for part of the evening, recalling the interesting evening, this talented couple arranged before, hurried away early and hurried back in a surprisingly short time. That those who arranged and took part in the programme knew the tastes of the men was indicated by the selections offered. Mrs. Wheatley sang "Soldiers of the King," Mr. Cook, "For King and Country"; Mr. McKay, "Mary of Arglye"; Miss Terwilliger, 'Somewhere in France"; Miss MacDonnell, "Peg O' My Heart," and Miss Higgs played I l Trovato re. as a violin solo, for all of whom Mr. Wheatley played. These were the programme numbers and everyone kindly responded to the request for an encore or encores. In the words of one of the men last night the place was "jammed." A few weeks ago, in fact every Wednesday night and most of the other nights we could say the club was full, then crowded was the word, now jammed and as there are no more suitable words left the only solution this supporter could think of was to enlarge the place. After the programme the usually abundance of refreshments were served and the men left, closing with God Save the King and after having an extra long evening through the kind permission of the officers.

ANNUAL MEETING OF JOHN ST. CHURCH

The annual business meeting of the John Street congregation was held last night, and while on account of prevalent sickness and other circumstances attendance was not quite up to the usual number, yet the meeting proved to be one of the most interesting, and everybody was in the most cordial mood because of the excellent character of the reports presented.

The pastor, Rev. E. C. Currie, acted as chairman, and Mr. I. L. Moore, of the Ontario Business College, did duty as secretary in a most accomplished manner.

The report of the Session contained a number of very interesting items. Thirty-seven names were added to the membership roll and thirteen removed during the year. Six of these removals were by the death of faithful members of long standing, who loved their church and gave her of their best.

The introduction of the improved and dated duplex envelope a year ago has resulted not only in a marked increase of givings both to revenue and missions, but in a deepened interest.

The total receipts from all organizations amounted to $4,450, and the expenditure was such as to leave a good balance on the right side. The report of the Church Help Society showed receipts to the amount of $348.74, and the W. M. S. raised by voluntary contribution $328.62. The S. S. Treasurer's report showed receipts to the amount of $268.89.

The givings of all organizations to missionary and benevolent objects was probably the best in the congregation's history and amounted to $1,560.40. The Missionary Treasurer reports $63 more than in 1914 and $232 more than in 1913 in the envelope contributions to missions. This is quite noteworthy in a year of comparative stringency and uncommon demands. In addition to the objects named in the church budget the congregation gave, in 1915, to such worthy causes as the Lord's Day Alliance, Red Cross Fund, Belgian Relief, Sailor's Mission, S. S. Association, Sick Children's Hospital, French Air Fund and local relief work.

Messrs. W. B. Robinson, W. C. Springer and A. O. Marshall were re-elected to the Board of Management, and Mr. W. G. Huffman was elected as a new member of the Board.

Many interesting suggestions were offered as leading to a further advance in 1916 and votes of thanks were passed to all organizations and office bearers in the congregation whose willing and faithful co-operation had helped to achieve the success of the year.

The meeting closed with singing the National Anthem.

"Bradstreets"

There are 543 flour mills in Canada with an aggregate daily capacity of 112,000 barrels. Fully half this capacity is in the hands of four large firms. The war has been favorable to many departments of Canadian industry, but few have benefited so materially as the milling industry. Mills secure the largest measure of their profits from domestic trade. During 1915, however, on both exports and home trade substantial profits were realized. Exports increased during the season 1914-15, the total being 4,897,000 barrels in 1913-14, 4,374,000 barrels in 1912-13 and 4,273,000 barrels in 1911-12. While most of the export trade is within the Empire, more than half of our flour goes to the mother land. This season the increase in exports is being well maintained. Orders have kept the larger and most of the smaller mills busy from the start, the only serious difficulty being ocean freights.

SAVES TORPEDOED SHIP WITH ROPE IN TEETH

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—A. W. Piccott, Minister of Marine and Fisheries in Newfoundland, who arrived here today on the Red Cross steamship Stephano on his way to Washington said:

"Just before I came away from St. John's we heard by accident that Jack Green of Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, an able seaman in the navy, had been decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal for a heroic act in saving life," Mr. Piccott said. "A torpedoed vessel in the North Sea was sinking fast. The captain of Green's ship called for volunteers to go to the rescue of her passengers and crew. Jack did not mind the cold water and dived overboard with a line in his teeth, swam to the other vessel and made the line fast on board.

"A tackle and lifesaving buoy were rigged. Green stopped on board until all hands had been rescued, and then swam back to his ship again. When his mother wrote him and asked for full details, the seaman replied that he did remember going 'over for a bit of a dip' one day."

Farmers Have Had Profitable Year

Chairman of Agricultural Committee Reports on Bay of Quinte District

By J. Elliott
(Toronto Board of Trade News)

It has been suggested that as I am Chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Associated Boards of Trade of the Province of Ontario, I might give a report on Farming and Patriotic Conditions, as at present prevailing in the Bay of Quinte district.

Since I have been very closely in touch with the farming community in the above mentioned territory for the past nine years I can give a fairly accurate account of the situation in Hastings, Prince Edward and adjoining counties.

1915 Rain-Fall Not Unmixed Evil

It may at once be admitted that the year 1915 will prove more profitable to the farmers than any other during the past decade. Prices obtainable for dairy products were much better than in former years, and the field crops exceptionally good, the yield of grain per acre was much above the average. The copious rains during the summer months which, in some sections of Ontario did much damage to grain, were really a blessing to this locality where so much of the land is given to pasturage, and resulted in a much larger make of cheese than that reached the previous year, the increase being at least fifteen per cent. I do not wish to leave the impression that the excessive rain-fall did no damage to grain in this section; it did, but the loss was so small in comparison to the gain by increased milk that I am quite justified in claiming the wet summer was a financial benefit to the farmers of Eastern Ontario. Very little grain is marketed in the counties under consideration, it being used for feeding purposes, the Bay of Quinte District being one of the great dairy sections of Canada.

Farmers Increasing Live Stock

Owing to the splendid financial position of local farmers, and the excellent prospects of good prices for farm products next season, farmers are increasing their stock of cattle, so we may reasonably look for a much greater production of cheese and butter in 1916 than we had in 1915. I am led to draw this conclusion by the fact that at present there is not over 500,000 boxes of cheese available in the combined cities of London, Bristol, Liverpool and Montreal.

Cheese a Soldier's Ration

As the Allied Nations are supplying their soldiers with cheese as a ration, it becomes at once apparent that the present stock will soon be consumed.

Belleville being the largest city on the Bay of Quinte, it naturally follows it should have the most important Cheese Board in the district and one well and favorably known, not only in Canada but in every large city in Great Britain. The product of over sixty cheese factories, some 4,000 boxes, is sold on the Belleville Board each week during the summer months, the same being purchased by local and Montreal buyers, and all of which is exported to Great Britain. The Belleville Cheese Board of Trade is composed of a class of men who, from an intellectual standpoint, cannot be surpassed in any country. Not only are they prepared to produce and sell cheese, but to do their duty in giving their sons and money to aid our Empire in its present great struggle for liberty.

Patriotic Cheese Men.

In September, 1914, the members of the Board organized what is known as the Belleville Cheese Board Patriotic and Red Cross Fund, each farmer giving one day's milk to be made into cheese, which, when sold, the cash received was handed to the Treasurer of the Board for patriotic purposes. The sum thus realized in 1914 was over $4,000.00, nearly all of which was paid out for patriotic and relief purposes. In 1915 an additional $3,000.00 was raised by similar methods, and this is being used to supply Red Cross Societies and Women's Institutes with money to purchase materials to be made by them, and in due course sent to British hospitals for the use and comfort of our Canadian soldiers. Too much credit cannot be given to the ladies of the Bay of Quinte district for the work they are doing in their Red Cross circles, and the men of the community may be depended upon to furnish all the money needed by the ladies for this work.

In addition to the Belleville Cheese Board Fund there is a Hastings County Patriotic Fund. The three organizations are capably managed by persons whose services are gratuitously given, and the utmost satisfaction as to how the money is distributed prevails.

It is fully realized by soldiers from this district, leaving for active service, that their loved ones will not be neglected during their absence.

Annual Exchange of Ideas.

No account of the agricultural conditions of the district under consideration would be complete without reference to an event that takes place annually at one of Belleville's leading hotels, and which, from being a small gathering of cheese factory salesmen nine year ago, has grown into one of the most influential meetings of those representing the great cheese industry held any place in Canada. The object of the meeting is co-operation and bringing together all those who are in any way interested in this work, whether Members of Parliament, Representatives of the Department of Agriculture, Wardens of Counties, Reeves of Municipalities, Railway and Steamboat Managers; all these come together and discuss how best to improve and increase the dairy and farm products of Canada, and so assist in raising this country in the estimation and esteem of Great Britain and other nations of the world.

In conclusion, permit me to say that after thirty years of close business relations with the rural population of Ontario, I am persuaded that when men are called, or money needed, the farmers of Ontario will be found willing to do their duty to Canada and the Empire.

(Sgd.) J. Elliott,
Chairman Agricultural Committee,
Belleville, Ont., Dec. 10, 1915.

Vocabulary of Barracks and Camp

Among the thousand and one new things that shoals of young men who are entering the army daily will have to learn is the curious vocabulary of barracks and camp, especially in England and France. How racy it is can be seen from the following examples, taken from a chapter on "Tommy's Private Language," an excellent new book on "The Way They Have in the Army."

Atchz.—All right.

Badg-y.—An enlisted boy.

Baggies.—Sailors in the navy.

Bun-Wallah—A soldier who drinks nothing stronger than tea, and is, in consequence, supposed to eat voraciously of buns.

Jankers—Defaulters' drill.

Lance Jack—A lance-corporal.

Poultice Wallahs—Royal Army Medical Corps men.

Pukin—Proper, correct, genuine.

Quarter Bloke—The quartermaster.

Rookey—A recruit.

Presentation of Gold Medals

On Monday afternoon of this week, a very interesting event took place at Queen Victoria school of this city, when Inspector H. J. Clarke presented the prizes for shooting awarded by the Strathcona Trust.

Cadet Gordon Craig, as best shot in the city P. S. Cadet Corps, received the gold medal. Other valuable book prizes were donated to Gordon Craig, George McIntosh, Harry Mills, Will Ormond, Wendell Johnson, Will Andrews.

The boys were delighted with their prizes. Queen Victoria school is very proud of its record in obtaining medals and trophies. During the past four years this school has won the gold medal for Entrance Candidates three times, the trophy for base-ball twice and now in their first shooting competition a Queen Victoria boy has carried off the gold medal as best shot among the city Public School Cadets. The boys intend to enter at least two teams for the National Rifle Association Junior prizes.

MUSIC & DRAMA

Among the host of interesting characters in George Kleine's marvellous photo drama "Quo Vadis," which comes to the Griffin Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 26 and 27 with daily matinees, none are more enjoyed and respected by the audiences than Sig. Castellani as Ursus, the giant slave so thoroughly devoted to his mistress Lygia. He completely realizes in his appearance, height and muscular power, all that our mind pictures of the physical giant who could uplift trees and even tear a huge bull asunder. Castellani was not an actor until he posed for this photodrama.

Endless Chain Can't be Stopped

Two New York Misses Start Ball Rolling For 25-Cents War Relief Fund

NEW YORK, January 19.—The sum of $5,000, most of it in 25 cent contributions, has been collected by two women, inexperienced in such work, for anesthetics for European war hospitals. Money is still coming as a result of their appeal, sent out under somewhat unusual circumstances. The fact is, that now the ball has been started rolling they cannot stop it, even though they want to. The money is being turned over to various relief organizations as rapidly as any considerable amount accumulates.

The money is being collected by means of the old system, now frowned on by the authorities, known as the "endless chain letter." The first batch of letters was sent out some months ago by Miss S. V. Clarke, a nurse of Park avenue, and a friend, Miss Winifred Lipscombe. To how many thousands the letters have gone by now it would be impossible to estimate, but the contributions received show that the letters have reached every state in the union. Here is a copy of the letter, several of which have been sent to the Times' office, by persons who wish to know if the "chain" is all right:

"Owing to the scarcity of anesthetics, operations which give untold agony are performed daily without their aid.

"To mitigate the suffering, we make an appeal to every one to give 25 cents toward the purchase of chloroform to use in the 'hospitals of the Allies.' Please make four copies of this letter and send them to your friends, using the next highest number than this on each letter. Do not fail, or the chain will be broken. Send 25 cents to Miss Elizabeth Whitman, Eye and Ear Hospital, Thirteenth St. and Second Ave., New York City, New York." (Each letter bore a number.)

Investigation by the Post Office Department and by the Times has established the fact that the appeal was made in good faith and that Miss Whitman is in every way responsible. But there are complications, as the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, of which Miss Whitman is head nurse, has not given its sanction officially to the collection of a fund. That is why an effort was made to check the flow of contributions, an effort which has been unavailing.

The facts are as follows: The idea of an endless chain was brought forward by Miss Clarke and her friend, because they felt deep sympathy for the men in the war hospitals, who were suffering because of the lack of medicines. They saw only a chance to do good for others and, desiring to select some one to whom the money contributed could be sent, hit upon Miss Whitman, a personal friend, whose position gave her a certain "stability" required to make a success of their effort to help others.

And so, despite Miss Whitman's objections, the letters were started on their way and grew in numbers until it is estimated that possibly 50,000 of them have been circulated. That is but a guess, for none could hope to tell the actual number.

The Post Office Department sent an inspector to see Miss Whitman, and on going over her receipts decided at once that everything was regular. At the inspector's department of the Post Office it was said yesterday that there was no question about "everything being all right." The chain letters was termed a "worthy charity," and that was the end of it, as far as the department was concerned. The police department and different charity organizations also looked into it and came to the same conclusion, that the work was for a good cause and that everybody connected with it was worthy of respect, and confidence.

Miss Whitman is receiving 25 cent pieces by the bushel. She said yesterday that the money had been turned over to various organizations, among them the British War Relief, the Red Cross the Junior War Relief, the Needlework Guild and the British-American War Relief. She has kept every receipt, and every contribution has been tabulated and accounted for.

This is the 533rd day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

WHY CANADA FIGHTS.

What is the idea of public speakers, like Sir Wilfrid Laurier for instance, insisting that Canada is in this war of her own free will, and not because she is forced into it by Great Britain? Why should the obvious thus be emphasized? asks the Mail and Empire. Whoever supposed that Canada was coerced into fighting? The suggestion underlying the remarks of certain speakers on the subject is that to fight for Britain alone would be unworthy, a sacrifice of Canada's autonomy; that this country is at war, not because Great Britain is at war, but because Canada, having thoughtfully debated upon the various white books and red books, has come to the conclusion that, upon the whole, the balance of right and justice is upon the side of Belgium, France, Russia, and incidentally Great Britain, and that Canada has made up her mind, like any judge, that this is the side upon which she should stand. The inference is that, had the rights of the matter been more obscure, Canada might have refused to participate in the war, or even, conceivably, might have cast in her lot with the other side.

Some time ago the theory was put forth that in a war in which Great Britain was engaged, Canada became automatically a belligerent; that when Britain was at war Canada was at war, but that Canada might remain a non-combatant, and apparently it is to bolster up this notion that so much stress is laid upon the fact that while Canada is actively participating she is doing so of her own free will, and not because of any obligations to the British Empire. For this suggestion there is no warrant in the action of the Canadian people. Nine-tenths of the Canadians who have enlisted have done so, not because Canada enjoys autonomy, not because of the wrongs of Belgium, but because the British Empire is in it; and they would have enlisted just as readily without autonomy as with it. Speakers who harp upon the entire freedom of choice left to Canada in regard to enlistment seem to forget that up to the present time an equal freedom of choice has been left to the people in the British Isles. Canada is in this war just exactly as Ulster or Leicester or Ayrshire is in it.

THE EVER-ACTIVE SPY.

Out of some hundreds of German spies arrested in Britain since the war began, eight or ten have been shot; out of 1125 apprehended in France, 55 have been put to death. These figures give some idea of the far-reaching extent of the Huns' secret service. It was estimated before the war that Germany paid $50,000,000 yearly for espionage, and that Britain spent only $250,000—chiefly to find out what the German spies were doing.

As we now know, the German secret service has been active throughout the world for years past. It fomented rebellion in South Africa; it stirred up civil war in Ireland; it subsidized newspapers in the United States, and, as we know to our cost, in Canada too; it created discontent in Persia; it tried to buy over leading Belgians to betray their country; it attempted to mislead Italian public opinion; it bribed the Turks and Bulgars to sacrifice themselves to Teuton ambition—in a word, the Hun sought world-domination just as keenly by underground methods of treachery and espionage as he is now doing on the battlefield.

Anyone acquainted with the ramifications of the German Secret Service before the war would have looked for outrages in the United States immediately the British Fleet secured control of the seas and the shipment of munitions to the Allies was thereby assured. But the United States itself was caught napping. Its secret service was negligible and the instigators of the bomb outrages, ship and factory-wrecking plots and other criminal acts were able to work their will unhindered. Fortunately the British secret service was awake to the situation. It followed close upon the heels of the Hun plotters and secured the evidence necessary for the American counts to inflict more or less adequate punishments.

Those in a position to know assert that the American army and navy is full of spies today; and that not a gun is built nor a ship launched that Hun emissaries do not know all there is to be known about them. In the very unlikely event of the people of the United States entering the war, their first task would be to segregate the enemy in their midst. But what a task it would be!

LET BORDEN WORRY.

The Winnipeg Free Press treats the gross waste and jobbery on the National Transcontinental Railway with easy resignation. It says: "It has cost a good bit of money, but the money was there, and if it had not been so spent it would have been spent probably in some other less beneficial manner. It is now idle and useless to talk of the cost."

In the meantime a Conservative Government has to operate a railway through long stretches of unsettled country at an annual loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars. It has to take over a huge reach of road in order to protect the public credit and save something out of the Laurier Government's "investment." It will have to meet the attacks of Liberal politicians and newspapers in any measures that may be taken to protect the credit of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the credit of the country.

But, as The Free Press says, the money has been spent. The road is there. On the strength of the money put into the project the Laurier carried two general election. Now let Borden and White and Cochrane and Rogers worry.—Toronto News.

"TIPPERARY" IS DONE INTO NEW YORK LATIN.

Night Pupils at De Witt Clinton and Professor Collaborate on Songs.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—You can't keep a good song down. When it has been translated into all the living languages it takes up the dead.

If whoever wrote Tipperary will visit the New York Evening School in De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth street, he will hear there almost any night this lyric lilt—and wonder what has happened to the darling of his brain:

"Longa via ad Tipperarium,
Longa via ibo;
Longa via ad Tipperarium,
Ad pullam quam cognosco.
Vale Picidilium,
Vale Leicester Forum;
Longa via est ad Tipperarium,
Ibi est cor meum."

Also, if he listens longer, he will hear, "I Don't Raise My Boy to be a Soldier," and the other songs of the moment done into the purest New York Latin.

The explanation, if he asks one, is that Professor Horace C. Walt, teacher of Latin in both De Witt Clinton High School and the Evening School, has discovered the way to interest his pupils is to bring Latin up to date. Of course Caesar's legions may have sung the same song, as they realized how far it was from London town to Ireland, but even so, thinks Prof. Walt, to put Tipperary into Horace's tongue brings the past more in line with the present.

The Poets' Corner

GOOD OLD TOM THERMOMETER

Good old Tom Thermometer!
Now what do you think of that?
Did you ever hear
Of a name as queer
For a fire department cat?
But that's his name I tell you,
Not simply an idle ruse,
And you'd say 'twas fact
If you'd seen him act
For us fellows at the Twos.

No, Tom he's not a loafer,
Though seldom he nips a mouse,
But we call his purr
The Thermometer
For the stove that warms the house.

Old Tom, you see, has wisdom,
In fact, I would say, a soul,
For he lets us know
When the fire burns low
And it's time to put in coal.
When the engine house gets chilly,
Then you'll see Tom take a seat
On the stove and wait
Till we shake the grate
And turn on a bit of heat.

It's there he'll sit a-toastin'
Till we're tired, that hard we've laughed.
Then he'll purr and mew
To say: "That will do"—
Then we go shut off the draft!

The value of the stock prizes was $102 at 117 a share.

Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation confirmed the story of the stock prizes today but declined to comment on it, saying it was a private affair.

Who Were They?

A Case That Puzzled a Detective.

By EUNICE BLAKE

In important social centers where persons congregate who are interested in passing themselves off for more than they are worth there are establishments where jewelry, fine clothes and other articles intended for display may be hired. There is no better location for such a business than a gambling center where crowned heads, nobles, capitalists and such like are to be found in large numbers.

At Monte Carlo there was ten years ago the firm of Dorel & Co., whose stock of jewels was worth several million francs. They would loan these gems, charging therefor an amount equal to 5 per cent a month on the money invested in them. Their intention was to loan only to persons in good standing, but since they took a risk on any one they let have their jewels they hired detectives to keep all their debtors in sight and if possible forestall any loss.

A great many Americans visit Monte Carlo, and occasionally one of them would apply to Messrs. Dorel & Co. for the wherewithal to make a display. Since an American knows more about America and Americans than Europeans know about them the firm concluded to send to New York for a detective to occupy this especial field. Harry Havens was sent by a prominent detective agency and straightaway entered upon his duties.

Havens for the purpose of trial was set to watch a man who purported to have descended from one of the old Dutch settlers of New York. He was known as Heiliger Van Zant. He told Mr. Dorel, head of the loan firm, that his family, though impoverished, still held a high social position in New York society. He had followed a Russian heiress to Monte Carlo whom he was desirous of marrying. He needed clothes and a moderate amount of jewelry that he might make a suitable appearance. As for money, he had enough of that to enable him to make necessary expenditures.

He was furnished with what he asked, and Havens was set to look after him, though his story was believed and the property loaned him was not very valuable. As I have said, the detective was given an unimportant case that he might prove his worth.

Havens was not long in getting a view of the Russian heiress, Maria Nicholevna. She was about twenty-five years old and a fine looking woman. She stopped at one of the principal hotels with her mother, an aristocratic looking old lady, with two iron gray curls on either temple. She was known as "the Countess." The two ladies drove out a good deal and sometimes played at the gaming tables.

Havens had doubts as to Mr. Van Zant's being a genuine member of the old Dutch aristocracy of New York. He secured an introduction to Van Zant and asked him a few questions about life in New York, and the replies were hardly satisfactory. But the gentleman excused his ignorance on the ground that he had been educated abroad and had not been at home since he was sixteen years old. His accent was decidedly English, and this he accounted for from the fact that he had studied at Eton college.

Dorel & Co. knew nothing about the relationships between persons who were constantly coming to and going from Monte Carlo, relying entirely on those they employed to watch their clients. Havens was one day about to enter the office of his employers when he met Maria Nicholevna coming out. The detective was a close mouthed man and made no mention of the fact, but he jotted it down in his mental memorandum book.

The next evening the lady appeared in the gaming pavilion in company with Van Zant, wearing a coral necklace, the carving of which was so delicate that Havens knew it must be of considerable value.

Inquiry at the office of Dorel & Co. brought out the fact that it had been loaned by them; that it had been made in Rome and was worth $1,000. Havens was also told that the lady was laying her nets to catch a British earl, who was in Monte Carlo incognito.

Dorel & Co. went on lending articles of display, and Havens continued to perform his duties, which were to keep track of the supposed New Yorker. But he was equally interested in the Russian heiress.

Why she should borrow jewelry if she were rich he could not tell unless her own gems were in Russia, locked in the family vaults.

If she were really trying to catch an English earl, borrowing the stones might be in order. Havens did not set it down as convincing evidence against her.

Van Zant was intimate with an Englishman named Perkins, whom Havens thought it might be advantageous to pump. He sought Perkins and soon found an opportunity to lend him 100 francs ($20).

This put Perkins under obligations and he told Havens as a great secret that Van Zant was no American at all, but Lord Herbert Hinchelwood, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Abbingward. Lord Herbert was inclined to be wild and had come to Monte Carlo unknown to his father, the earl, to take a flier at the gaming tables.

"The plot thickens," muttered Havens to himself.

"Query: Is Van Zant a New Yorker or Lord Herbert Hinchelwood, or is he neither?

"Is Maria Nicholevna the daughter of a Russian countess or an adventuress?

"Are these two deceived in each other, or are they working in a common plot?

"Is Perkins a stool pigeon for Van Zant or what he pretends to be, a London stockbroker?"

Havens leaned toward the opinion that Van Zant and Marie Nicholevna were both adventurers laying a trap for some person or persons unknown to him. But he was very uncertain. Both were either high bred persons or capable of imitating such. There is illimitable chicanery constantly going on among the nobility of Europe, who are of many grades.

Most of them are constantly scheming to gain something from some one else. Some are honorable; some are swindlers. The fact that Van Zant had borrowed the clothes he wore and Maria Nicholevna the coral necklace did not necessarily prove that they were impostors.

One evening Havens missed both Van Zant and Maria Nicholevna from the gaming tables, where they usually spent an hour or two tossing coins on to the table, sometimes winning, sometimes losing.

The detective had noticed that they were not especially interested, but were simply betting to pass the time. He believed they were absorbed in a bigger game, or at least a game of another kind. Their disappearance did not worry him so much as to his responsibility for Van Zant, since the value of his borrowings from Dorel & Co. was small.

He leaned to the opinion that they had gone after some one for whom they were laying a trap. On inquiring he learned that Maria Nicholevna, or "the countess," had gone to Nice and Van Zant had followed her there.

Havens went at once to the office of Dorel & Co. for information. What was his surprise to learn that Van Zant had been there and had returned all the articles he had borrowed, stating that his baggage, which he had left in England, had been forwarded to him. Maria Nicholevna had returned the coral necklace.

The detective was puzzled. The conditions would fit almost any theory. He formed no theory, for he had learned by experience that theories are misleading. He departed for Nice. After a search he learned that both his quarries were there at different hotels.

Soon after his arrival he saw Maria Nicholevna driving with her mother. She was returning to her hotel, and the detective followed the two into the house. He dined there at table d'hote and saw the Russian ladies in company with some persons who he felt sure were Americans.

Scraping an acquaintance with one of them, a young man from Philadelphia, he put on the pumping process, but only learned that his informant believed Maria Nicholevna was what she pretended to be.

One morning Havens was passing the little church used for worship principally by foreigners sojourning in Nice, when a carriage drove up, and who should alight but Van Zant. He went into the church, and the detective followed him. At the other end of the building were Maria Nicholevna, her mother and a few friends. No sooner had Van Zant joined the others than he and Maria Nicholevna stood before a clergyman who was waiting for them and were married.

Havens had gone over to Nice from sheer curiosity, for when Van Zant had disappeared from Monte Carlo, having returned what he had borrowed, the detective's official duties were ended. He remained in Nice a few days, scanning the marriage notices in such newspapers as he could get in order to see under what names the parties had married.

It was not long before he saw an announcement of a marriage between Lord Herbert Hinchelwood, younger son of the Earl of Abbingward, to Maria Nicholevna, daughter of Countess Warewtski of Warsaw.

Havens was not satisfied, but there was nothing for him to do but go back to Monte Carlo and ask to be assigned to another case. Nevertheless, having been told that Hinchelwood was heir to the title, he believed something was wrong.

One day, a month later, he read in a Paris newspaper that the wife of Lord Herbert Hinchelwood had applied to have her marriage with him annulled. The couple had met in Monte Carlo, where Lord Herbert had passed himself off as an American, but had given out as a secret his real identity. The lady had married him supposing him to be the oldest son of his father and heir to the title, and he had married her supposing her to be immensely wealthy.

Lord Herbert already had several wives living, or such was supposed to be the case. At any rate, he had a bad reputation and had been disowned by his father. The lady was the daughter of a Polish count whose fortune had disappeared, and he had become a music teacher in Paris.

Such was the experience derived by Mr. Havens, detective, in his first case in the service of Messrs. Dorel & Co. at Monte Carlo. He remained with them several years, and his notebook will furnish plans for a number of stories, the characters of which were either nobles or connected with noble families. But he says that none of them puzzled him so much as this case of an earl's son and a count's daughter. At any rate, in no other case were two sharpers bitten, each by the other.

An exchange tells of a young woman, who, neglecting to carry with her a vanity bag, rubbed a marshmallow on her nose in place of powder. We hae oor doots. There isn't enough whatever-the-stuff-is on a marshmellow to make a good job in the way of powdering a nose, and the average girl would rather not use any if she can't have too much.

A Derelict

There Was a Mystery Connected With It.

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

It is many a year since the United States merchant marine was a thing to be proud of. Some persons living remember the clipper ships of the middle of the last century, with their tall masts and skyscraping sails. Confederate privateers rendered shipping goods on them so dangerous that they all disappeared, their trade passing to English and afterward largely to German ships. The trade then lost has never been recovered. Some say it is because other governments subsidize their ships, others that seamen may be hired cheaper in foreign countries than in America. One thing is certain—the American merchant marine since the war between the states has been little or nothing. Whether the great European war will give any of it back to us remains to be seen.

It was in the fifties that Horace Graham, sixteen years old, ran away from home and shipped on one of the famous "Blackball line" sail ships, the Winfield Scott. Those were days when there was a romance of the sea, when vessels were propelled by sails, when they rode the billows lightly and there was no chug-chug of machinery in their vitals. That is why youngsters were continually running away from home to go to sea.

Horace Graham made trips to and from China on the same vessel as ordinary seaman for three years, when he was made third mate. One day, on a return voyage, a derelict was sighted. The captain stood on the after deck examining her, rising and falling with the waves, and when he had made up his mind that there was no living thing to be seen aboard of her he ordered Graham to man a boat, pull to the ship, make an examination and, if there seemed to be no reason to the contrary, to sink her. When eight stalwart sailors were in the boat, which was provided with sufficient gunpowder to blow up the vessel, several augers and some food in case persons starving were found, she was lowered and pulled to the wreck.

On approaching her Graham, who was at the tiller, had a full view of her stern, on which her name had been painted and from which some of the letters had been washed or worn off. Ordering his men to rest on their oars, he took out pencil and paper and made a record of the letters remaining, giving the proper spaces for those that had been erased, as follows:

M   G RE   UR   ON

Having transferred the letters to paper, the officer gave an order to "give way," and the boat moved forward, passing close under the ship's stern. It was then that Graham noticed, upon a closer view, that an attempt had been made to eliminate the remaining letters, but the attempt had failed. Some one had evidently tried to scrape them off with a sharp instrument, but probably had not sufficient time to complete the work.

On reaching the ship a rope with an iron hook was thrown up, caught on the gunwale, and Graham climbed it, leaving his men in the boat. A terrible scene greeted him. There had been a fight on the decks and in the cabins. Corpses of men, with their weapons in their hands, lay here and there, and all except one wore the clothes of sailors of civilized countries. The one exception was a man in Asiatic costume.

It was plain that the ship had been boarded and captured by pirates. That they had left in a hurry was also evident. An auger had been left in the side of the ship below the water line, indicating that an attempt to sink the vessel had been interrupted. Then, too, all the lifeboats except one had been left in their places. There were blocks for eight boats, all the blocks being filled save one set, and at this point the davits were swinging out, indicating that a boat had been lowered.

There were two cabins astern, one evidently the captain's. In the other women's clothing was found. In that belonging to the captain from a little drawer in a locker Graham took out a daguerreotype—photographs were not at that time common—of a girl some eighteen or twenty years old. There was something very attractive in this young and innocent face among such frightful surroundings. Graham put the picture in his pocket not only for the purpose of identifying the ship, but because he wished it for himself.

Before sinking the derelict Graham returned to the Winfield Scott and reported to the captain. Another boat was sent to the derelict to make further examination, but the pirates had taken care to possess themselves of the log and everything else by which the vessel might be identified. Though they had evidently left her in a hurry, they had taken time for such removal. Nothing remained but to make a note of the latitude and longitude in which the derelict was discovered, at that time a favorite region for pirates.

That night before turning in Horace Graham took out his daguerreotype, opened the case and feasted his eyes on the likeness within. It had been nearly a year since he had seen a woman of his own race, and those of Asia were not attractive to him. It seemed to him that this girl was the spirit of innocence risen from the horrors of a massacre. Placing it where he could turn his eyes upon it, he took out his record of the name on the stern of the derelict, or, rather, the remains of it, and began to try to fill in the letters erased. Fortunately the pirates had either neglected this feature or thought the name illegible and had not taken the time or the trouble to eradicate it.

M   G RE   UR   ON.

From the position of the letters preserved he knew he possessed the first and last letters, "M" and "N." Ships were there and are now named for women, and Graham fancied this was a case in point. By trying different letters successively in the first part of the name he finally obtained M-a-r-g-a-r-e-t. He felt quite confident that the name of the ship was the Margaret ——. Though he puzzled long over the last name, he failed to make it out.

The next morning as he was mounting the companionway to the deck he heard the lookout shout:

"Lifeboat on starboard quarter!"

Reaching the deck, he saw the captain raising his glass. Graham ran down for his own glass and soon descried a ship's boat rising and falling with the waves, but could see nothing in it. Meanwhile the ship had been put off her course to point to the boat. When the Scott came near enough a woman's figure was seen lying in the bottom of the boat, and a man, evidently dead, was leaning over a seat. A boat from the Scott was manned and took the other in tow. When alongside the ship the woman, who was either dead or unconscious, was hoisted on to the vessel.

Almost as soon as Graham saw the face of the woman he recognized in it, though much changed by suffering and hunger, the original of the daguerreotype. A spoonful of broth was given her, and she revived. After taking more she opened her eyes and looked wildly about her. But, seeing that she was on the deck of a vessel, the wild look subsided, and she asked what had happened. After being told she was questioned, but everything except the horror of drifting on the ocean's bosom had passed away from her.

Here was a disappointment to Graham, for as soon as he recognized her as the original of the daguerreotype he believed he would receive an explanation of the mystery of the Margaret ——. The likeness was shown her, but it failed to excite any memory whatever. Other means were tried, including mention of the Margaret ——, but without avail. At last all attempts to draw from her information as to what had happened were given up. Unfortunately at that period it was not a universal custom to paint the names of ships on their lifeboats, so that even this information was not forthcoming. The only thing known about the girl was that she spoke the English language with a Yankee accent.

The rescued girl received every attention and very soon was able to go on deck. She tried everything that was suggested to bring about a return of memory, but without avail. There was no other woman aboard, so that she had no companion of her own sex. Graham was so devoted to her that gradually all others gave way to him. The Scott was homeward bound, and as soon as she came into port he was deputed by the captain to examine the shipping records with a view to gaining any information attainable about the derelict.

Armed solely with the record he had taken from the wreck's stern, he ran over the names of American ships till he came to the Margarets, of which there were several. The Margaret Thurston fitted his record. This was a great gain. He soon learned that the ship had been named for a favorite niece of the master and that she was aboard the vessel in Chinese waters at the time she was discovered by the Scott. She had not been heard from since leaving Hongkong and was overdue.

The rescued girl was thus known to be Margaret Thurston, a spinster nineteen years of age and an orphan. Graham had fallen in love with her, and since her only protector, her uncle, with whom she had sailed, was supposed to have been murdered, Graham interested himself in securing for her some property to which she was heir. These attentions on the part of the young sailor won her heart, and he had no difficulty in persuading her to marry him.

Several years after this marriage Mrs. Graham's memory returned to her. Little by little she recalled the tragedy of which she was a part. The Margaret Thurston was chased by a Malay pirate, which gained on its victim rapidly. Striking a fog, the Thurston's captain, believing that his vessel would be captured, put his niece in one of the ship's boats with two men and set her adrift. This was as far as Margaret Graham's memory served her. The rest was merely a surmise.

It was supposed that when the fog lifted the Thurston fell a prey to the pirates who boarded her and massacred her crew. Probably a cruiser was discovered, and the pirates left the ship they had captured and made their escape.

One of the men sent with the captain's niece in the lifeboat was accounted for, dead. As to the other, there was nothing to indicate his fate, though it was supposed that in delirium he had jumped overboard.

Graham did not return to the sea, for soon after this last trip the war between the states broke out, which put an end to American shipping. He inherited a little property of his own, which, with that of his wife, enabled him to make a good living ashore.

The Germans insist that they must have "milk for their babies and meat for their men and women." But who started the starvation process, anyway? We know, but we are willing to let Belgium answer.

Read that a "new gasoline engine has been invented that uses only one-twentieth of a drop of fuel at each charge," and look at the "charge."

CHATER I.

Sir Galahad of The Wagon-Lit

Sir John Vessie, M.P., got into the express train at Homburg, found the compartment which had been reserved for him, and settled himself down comfortably for the journey. He had just completed the cure and was feeling on good terms with himself and the rest of mankind.

Sir John visited Homburg for preventive measures and because the place amused him. He found it a rest after a strenuous London season—spent in the House. And he was philosopher enough to realize that a short absence from home makes the heart grow fonder.

He was still in the prime of life, still rode straight to hounds when he got the chance, entertained with old-fashioned hospitality at his country place in Sussex, and was regarded by his constituents as an ideal country gentleman and the perfect father of a very happy family. He had married young, the only daughter of a wealthy iron founder.

In spite of bad health, Lady Vessie had proved an ideal helpmate. She was neither brilliant nor beautiful, but she possessed all the other virtues of a simple English gentlewoman. Not a breath of scandal had attached itself either to Sir John's or his wife's name.

Once, in a spirit of humor, Sir John Vessie had remarked that he feared he was woefully old-fashioned and would soon find himself put on the shelf, for nobody in society who was anybody had altogether escaped.

The train had not proceeded far on its journey when Sir John became conscious of an altercation taking place in the corridor just outside his compartment. Having all the Englishman's natural reserve and a rooted objection to mixing himself up in other people's affairs, he would have paid no attention to the heated and apparently one-sided conversation that was being carried on had he not noticed that one of the voices belonged to a woman, obviously an English woman whose knowledge of German was of the slightest.

Unconsciously he listened. It was a remarkable voice—remarkable for its beauty and delicacy even while it was raised fiercely in denunciation of the German State Railway, the German government, and its officials.

Sir John laid down his newspaper and smiled indulgently. How much better these things were managed in England! He raised the blind of the window loking into the corridor. If a countrywoman of his was in distress it was obviously his duty to help her. And he was sure the possessor of such a voice must be well bred and interesting.

As the blind rolled itself up with a noisy jerk the woman turned, looked into his compartment, and waved her hand with an angry gesture toward it.

The stolid German guard merely shook his head; the compartment was reserved. There was no other place in the train except the one he had found for madame. Madame should have applied earlier. If ladies chose to travel alone—

Acting on a sudden impulse, of which he was carcely conscious at the moment, Sir John rose and, opening the door of his compartment, asked if he could be of any service.

The woman looked at him with flashing eyes which almost instantly softened; the frown that had furrowed the white brows disapeared, and the full, red lips parted in a smile.

It is too kind," she replied quietly, recovering her temper instantly. "Foolishly I failed to reserve a wagonlit for myself. In fact, I only made up my mind to return by this train last night. I find the train is full. I am placed in an ordinary first-class compartment with four fat Germans, a smoking compartment; and their tobacco—ugh!"

She held a dainty lace handkerchief to her nose and made such quaint grimaces that Sir John found himself laughing.

"I am expected to pass the night with four fat Germans," she continued. "I know they'll unfasten their collars and take off their boots. I refuse—I flatly refuse.

Tears gushed into the large, blue eyes. Sir John looked at her and stroked his chin thoughtfully. The German official was quite right. The woman had no business to be traveling alone—a woman so young and so beautiful.

He remembered seeing her once at the Casino, and he had mistaken her for a Frenchwoman. He told himself that he ought to have known, if only by her coloring and her figure, that she was English. Her hair was a rich, reddish brown, gleaming in certain lights like burnished copper; level, brown eyebrows; her face was oval. She was not merely pretty; she possessed, too, much character. Those blue eyes, now filled with tears, expressed determination.

A woman who probably was not unaccustomed to looking after herself. But the German was right; she had no business to be alone To be quite certain, Sir John questioned her on the subject again.

"Not a soul I know on the train! My friends left Homburg a few days ago. Of course, I ought to have gone with them, but——" She shrugged her shoulders deprecatingly.

Sir John almost wished he had not interferred. If the woman had been neither young nor beautiful he could have grappled with the problem more easily. He felt shy and embarassed.

"I really do not know what to suggest. I'm extremely sorry for you. I can quite understand your feelings. Perhaps if I were to speak to the gentlemen in your compartment—"

"Gentlemen!"

Sir John turned to the guard, and a rapid conversation ensued in German which the woman failed to follow. She stood staring out of the window. In her right hand she firmly held a crocodile-leather dressing-case.

Presently Sir John turned to her with a courtly bow. "If you will sit down in my compartment I'll see what can be done."

Sir John wondered where he had heard it before. It had a familiar ring. Closing the door of the compartment, he disappeared down the corridor with the guard.

Myra Berrington folded her hands on her lap and gazed around the compartment. She carefully noted each article of Sir John's luggage, his traveling coat, the books and literature with which he had provided himself for the journey. Then, taking down her dressing-case, she opened it and, finding a mirror, she looked at her reflection.

She smoothed her face with a powder-puff took off the glove from the right hand, then, closing the dressing-case, she picked up an illustrated paper, and waited.

Miss Berrington smiled at him sweetly and rose from the seat. "It's really too kind of you to have troubled, Sir John. I must make up my mind to pass the next eighteen hours walking up and down the corridor. The scenery in places is very beautiful—and the nights are warm now. Thank you so much."

She was moving out of the compartment, but Vessie stopped her. The idea was preposterous—yet the only alternative would be to give up his wagon-lit and join the four Germans.

He knew Miss Berrington was probably right in her assertion that they would loosen their collars and take off their boots when night came. Sir John had never known a discomfort. He had always insisted on traveling in solitude. He could not do without fresh air and at least eight hours sleep. Nothing, neither work nor women nor worry, ever succeeded in depriving him of the latter.

"Please sit down," he said. And he seated himself opposite her. "Now let us talk this over quiettly and see what can be done."

Miss Berrington clasped her hands together nervously. Very beautiful hands, judging from the ungloved one—long, narrow, white, with nails of perfect color. Her feet were long and narrow, too. French shoes and silk stockings, both the color of her dress.

"You musn't give me another thought, Sir John. It's entirely my own fault. I ought to have known this would happen. But as a matter of fact—"

She broke off awkwardly and lowered her eyes. There were still tears in them. Vessie was afraid lest they overflow.

She did not suggest a hysterical woman. She was far too refined and too much of the typical Englishwoman to suggest the adventuress. Vessie again found himself wondering why her name was familiar.

He tried to concentrate his mind on the position. It might have been awkward had it not come about so naturally. It was certainly piquant. He had lived a quiet, sober, matter-of-fact sort of life. Nothing quite so exciting as this had ever happened to him. It was peculiar. All the more peculiar because he knew in his heart he was enjoying it.

"No, there's nothing to worry about," he said after a moment's silence. "I'll—I'll see that you're made comfortable. I'm old enough to be your father; so I'm old enough to look after you."

She looked up and gave him a grateful smile. "You really mustn't worry about me. I deserve to suffer. Do you know—"

"Yes—tell me," Vessie said encouragingly.

"Oh, but it's so silly! I deserve to suffer. You ought to know, because when you do know you'll no longer sympathize with me. I feel I'm accepting your protection under false pretenses."

Sir John did not laugh. He was relieved at her frankness and his curiosity was aroused. "What dreadful crime have you committed at Homburg? Are you running away?"

"Yes!"

She nodded her head two or three times vigorously. Sir John found himself wishing she would take her hat off. He had never seen such wonderful hair. He wanted to see more of it.

CANADIAN IN SERBIA.

Captain Roy Leitch is With General Staff of Serbian Army.

The career of Capt. Roy Leitch, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., and more recently of Serbia, who has just left Montreal to resume his place in the General Staff of the Serbian army, goes to illustrate that the sense of chivalry, the impulse that drove Byron to fight for Greece, is not entirely absent from modern warfare. Born and educated in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, he carried off a Rhodes scholarship and went to Oxford. Some years spent in Switzerland together with his reading of history, gave him a strong dislike of Austria-Hungary and when war broke out he offered his services in the hope that he might be sent to Serbia to fight on the side of the under dog." The British War Office granted his request, and since then Captain Leitch has been in the thick of things in the Balkans.

Somewhat seriously injured while making a rapid advance with the Serbian staff several months ago, Captain Leitch was compelled to accept leave in order to recuperate. He returned to Canada to receive medical attention and to enlist, if possible, Canadian sympathy in the Serbian cause. He underwent a serious operation and will be unable to resume very active service for at least another month.

"I do not think it is possible for you in this country to realize the condition of things in Serbia to-day," Captain Leitch told a newspaper correspondent. "You must remember that it is a small country with a small population, and that it has been at war for practically the whole of the last three years. To-day it is a nation at war in the fullest sense of the term. Everybody is fighting, and I mean this literally. Serbia's sufferings are frightful. Happily the worst of the typhus has been stamped out, thanks to the American and English doctors, but at its worst it was appalling. Picture to yourself a Serbian village under the scourges of plague and war. Before the door of every second house would be standing the women, mourners for the dead within, chanting the death dirge. Perhaps in the next house there would be a group of Serbian soldiers dancing one of the national dances. And this wailing for the dead, this pitiful attempt to put the best face on things, went on from one end of the country to the other.

"Food in Serbia is scarce, unbelievably scarce. Just before I left I dined with a man who was a short time ago one of the richest men in Serbia. All he could offer me was bread and a dish of greens of some sort and this was his fare twice a day. If this is what the rich live on, bread and some green leaves in small quantities, can you imagine how the poor are faring? I have seen suffering incredible, borne with perfect heroism and illuminated with chivalry of the highest order. I could tell you stories of the treatment of Serbian peasants by Austrian invaders that would make your blood boil, and as against this I know where Serbian soldiers, fighting after a three days 'fast, have at the end of the fight, given their scanty rations to Austrian prisoners and wounded. You may think of Serbians as 'uncivilized—they are in the sense that they have not the latest machinery—their ploughs are branches of trees with the children of the family seated on them—but in the essentials of civilization, the spirit of chivalry, they have nothing to learn from us.

"I could tell you stores of Serbian heroism in the field that would keep you here all night, things I myself have seen. I saw three Serbians, an officer and two privates, dynamite a bridge under the fire of ten thousand Austrians. The fuse was far too short and the officer would not let the privates take the risk of firing it. And yet that fuse was fired after the dynamite had been so cleverly placed that not a flying fragment of the bridge fell among the Serbians close at hand. I know a boy of fourteen who insisted in being allowed to join the army and who led the troops for a three days' advance, the last twenty-four hours of which were made almost without a stop.

Strathcona's Beneficence.

Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, the Labrador missionary, relates that on one occasion Lord Strathcona asked after a certain woman who had been his servant in Labrador over fifty years before. "I told him that she had long ago passed away, but that her daughter, who was married and had a very large family, had often spoken of her mother's connection with him. He asked how she was faring with so many children, but appeared to take very little notice when I told him that the family were having hard times. However, the next time I visited that part of Labrador I heard that he had sent a special Labrador order of pork, flour, molasses, and butter and many outfits of clothing for herself and the children. To this day the woman is wondering where the gift came from.

May Use Old College.

Old Knox College on Spadina avenue, Toronto, was inspected by Lieut.-Colonel Marlow and his staff recently with a view to using the building as a convalescent home for returned soldiers. The project has yet to be more fully considered. Estimates of the cost of fitting it up for the purpose are being drawn up and the matter will be submitted to the Government for consideration. The old building is in many respects well suited for such a home, and its size will give ample room for expansion as the number of invalided soldiers increases.

A Light-keepers Gift.

A lonely light-keeper on the Atlantic coast receiving only a small salary, celebrated Christmas by sending $16.25 to be used for purposes of the war in whatever way the department thought best.

The Oldest Death Sentence.

The oldest death sentence extant is found in the Amherst papyri containing the trials of state criminals in Egypt, about 1300 B. C. The criminal in this case was found guilty of magic, which his judges state "was worthy of death, which he carried out, and he killed himself," apparently by stabbing, as in the Japanese harakiri, which is also of very ancient origin.

Among less civilized peoples drowning would seem to have been the earliest method of legal punishment, for about 450 B. C. the Britons killed their criminals by throwing them into a quagmire. Of other than capital punishments the oldest recorded comes from Chaldea, where it was enacted some 6,000 years ago that when any one maimed a slave "the hand that thus offended should pay him each day a measure of corn."

Canadian Cigarettes Can Not be Purchased at the Front

Soldiers "Miserable and Dispirited" When They Have Nothing To Smoke

How Our Readers Can Cheer Up Our Fighting Men

Do you know what the lack of cigarettes and tobacco means to our troops in the fighting line?

Let us tell you in a word

When the lads in khaki have enough to smoke, and this, unfortunately, is only a very rare occurrence, they feel, to use their own expressive phrase, "as fit as fiddles."

They are ready to tackle the Germans in any situation that may arise.

Tobacco gives our fighting men the necessary stimulant in the trenches; it fuses their courage to a white heat, because when the Canadian soldiers are smoking they don't care a darn for any German regiment breathing.

Won't you please do something, no matter how small, to make some brave man happy and bless you for the kind action? As little as one quarter will keep a man going with tobacco and cigarettes for almost a week if you will subscribe to Canada's Tobacco Fund (organized by the Over-Seas Club.)

Remember, Canadian tobacco and cigarettes can not be purchased at the front and it is only through the generosity of those at home that our boys can get them. All the tobacco and cigarettes sent to the front through Canada's Tobacco Fund are Canadian manufactured, of the best quality, something that our men are used to and prefer over anything they could buy in France or Belgium.

Each contribution of 25 cents will supply a package containing 50 good quality Canadian manufactured Cigarettes, one-fifth of a pound of good quality Canadian manufactured Tobacco, a box of matches and a reply post card.

Our readers can send their money to Canada's Tobacco Fund through the Editor of the Montreal Gazette, or can deposit it with any Post Office or Bank with the full assurance that they are laying their money out to the best possible advantage. Be careful to specify that your contribution is for Canada's Tobacco Fund, which has been organized by the Over-Seas Club.

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

BAND MUSIC PLAYS SMALL PART IN THEATRE OF WAR

Valandova, Old Turkish Village in Southern Serbia, Furnished First Band Seen by Corespondents Near Battlefront

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

SALONIKA, Dec. 11.—(By mail to New York.)—Our ambulance rushed down the mountainside at French chauffeur speed and into a valley behind Hill 516, which sheltered us from shell-fire, and, at last, we were so far away from the artillery battle that we could barely hear the guns.

At Old Turkish Village

Valandova, an old Turkish village, in Southern Serbia, was to be our stopping place. There, in the early evening, General Baillaud, whose brave troops—nearly all of them Zouaves—had fought their way to Krivolak and had there tried to reach the Serbians and form a junction with them, was to receive, with field ceremonies, the order of military merit. But we were too late. The ceremony was over. However, we were astonished to see in the yard of a Turkish mosque a French Zouave band.

Little Music in The War

It was the first band that any of us had seen near any battlefront. Between the five of us. American newspapermen, we had seen every front on both sides. Band music hasn't much place in this grim war. There were ninety musicians and five drummers and they stood in the mud, up to their shoe-tops.

"Can't you get them to play?" we asked our guide. "It's the first band we ever saw near a battlefield."

"Will you write stories about it," asked the leader.

We said we would.

Whereupon, standing in the mud, in an evening dusk that was almost darkness, with the Turkish mosques behind them, and two French officers, standing fifty feet above us in the minaret, the band struck up the song of a certain regiment of Zouaves.

Some members of the band sang; they played on their horns in relays, so that we had a chorus, a band and a fife and drum corps going all at once. It was a rattling good tune, and as all Zouave songs are about the desert and Egypt and Arabs, these Zouaves in Serbia didn't sing of Germans or Austrians or Bulgars, but of their enemies of other wars. A translation would go something like this:

Bang! Bang! The Arabs!
 The wolves aren't far away.
Forward! Hustle forward
 And let your rifles play.

We gave three cheers for the band, and the band gave three cheers for us the bandmaster made us promise again that we would write a story about how his band played, and then we were ordered to get back into our ambulance for the ride to Strumnitza, where we were to spend the night. If you hear anyone say that there is no music in the 20th-century war, that men no longer die to stirring tunes, just tell your informer that he's wrong

Band Goes Right to Front

The French Zouaves have a band and it goes with them right up to the front and it plays while they fight and while they die. There are some things a regiment won't give up, no matter what the war councils say or what the general thinks best. With the French Zouaves this thing is their band.

This was on Dec. 2 and that morning General Sarrail, back in Saloniki, had ordered his forces to retire. This band had marched down to Valandova from the mountains. Perhaps they didn't know their march was part of a retreat, but, at the very hour they were playing and singing so blithely about the Arabs, their fellow-Zouaves in the mountains were packing up their things in their dugout and awaiting orders to retire from their mountain top trenches.

In a Hospital Tent

We were taken to a hospital tent at Strumnitza and found a dozen hospital cots ready for us and our military guides. In the center of the tent was a big wood stove which a huge French soldier kept filling with firewood. The lights were candles.

A canvas tunnel ran from our tent to another, in which lay thirty French soldiers whose feet had been frostbitten.

"We start to-morrow for Paris," one of them said. "But it's a long way. First we ride by train to Saloniki. Then they put us on a boat, they tell me and take us to a hospital ship. Then the ship travels eight or nine days until it reaches Marseilles. Then we get on a train and ride twenty-four hours until we get to Paris. It seems far, far away, Paris. But I suppose we'll get there some time."

He was suffering from gangrene following frost-bite and the chances were, the doctor told me, that he might be a cripple for life. He was sick and suffering and he had a right to feel that it was miles and the days between home and this tent in Serbia would be many and long.

It was supper time and a big banquet, of a sort, was before us. Also, we were to hear more rumors of the coming retreat. Our tent stood on an embankment alongside the railroad track. On the bank across the way stood the little Strumnitza railroad station, where we were to dine. When we came out of the tent into the darkness a wonderful sight met our eyes. The lights of hundreds of camp fires shone on hundreds of tents which had been pitched for the night by the withdrawing of troops. We heard singing and a mouth organ.

FIRE PROTECTION IN THE HOME.

Fires in the home are easier to prevent than to extinguish.

Practically every fire originating in a dwelling house is due to carelessness or neglect.

The attic, cellar and all clothes closets should be cleaned at least once a year, and all useless material and rubbish removed and burned.

In storing clothing, remove all matches and other material from the pockets. Do not hang clothes near hot chimneys.

Do not go into closets with lighted matches or candles.

Never throw burned matches on the floor or into waste baskets.

Coal oil lamps should always be filled by daylight. They should be kept clean and properly trimmed. A dirty lamp is unsafe.

Especial care should be taken in the home to prevent fires from starting, because when they do start there is seldom a man about to extinguish them. Where women and children are housed, the utmost vigilance is necessary on the part of those responsible for their welfare.

A fuse is the 'safety valve' of an electric system, and should never be replaced by one of larger size or other material.

Do not allow paper or rubbish to accumulate behind steam coils or radiators.

Be careful of ashes. Do not deposit them against wooden buildings or fences. See that there are no live coals. Far better to pour a pail of water over them than to take the risk of a strong wind carrying live coals and starting fires.

Rags and cloths saturated with cleaning and polishing oils may ignite spontaneously in a few hours. Burn them at once

Gas stoves should never be connected up with rubber tubing. Gas pipe, rigid and secure, is the only safe connection.

Canada to Pay Her Bills Abroad

Government Anxious to Defray Cost of Maintaining Dominion's Troops

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—"We desire, to put it as broadly as possible, to pay the entire cost of Canada's expeditionary force abroad," said Sir Thomas White, in concluding a brief statement in reply to a question by Hon. William Pugsley

The member for St. John had enquired what portion of the cost of maintaining the Canadian contingents abroad the Government of Canada was now paying, and what arrangement regarding payments had been made with the British Government.

The Finance Minister said that the subject would be discussed probably by the Prime Minister on the introduction of the war appropriation measure, which would be necessary, and possibly by himself in the budget speech.

"The Government of Canada is bearing the entire expense of Canada's participation in the war," stated Sir Thomas. He pointed out, however, that there might be certain accounts that could not be adjusted as between the Canadian and Birtish Governments until after the war. He understood that the Canadian Government was now bearing all expenses of the Canadian troops still in England, and paying those in France and Belgium. There would, later, be an adjustment of accounts for rationing and equipping soldiers at the front.

Mr. Robert Bickerdike (St. Lawrence, Montreal) introduced his bill providing for the abolition of capital punishment in Canada. He described it as intended to put an end to "legalized murder" in the Dominion, and said that if it were passed the number of homicides in the country would be reduced and conviction for crime would be more certain.

On motion of the Prime Minister, a committee was appointed to prepare a resolution expressing the sorrow of the House for the death of Sir Charles Tupper. The committee is composed of Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir George Foster, Hon. Geo. P. Graham and R. B. Bennett, of Calgary.

HUN CRY FOR VENGEANCE.

Press Hails "Reprisals" With Chorus of Satisfaction.

BERLIN, Jan. 15 (via Aix-la-Chapelle, delayed in transmission).—The publication of Germany's second Baralong note has aroused an emotional storm such as I have not seen in sixteen months. One feels that the Baralong case has now entered a sensational stage. There is no doubt as to the genuineness of Germany's cry for vengeance for the alleged murder of the submarine crew by the men of the Baralong. The whole German press hails the Government's announced intention to take the sharpest reprisals with a chorus of satisfaction, though probably in response to a hint from the censor, it passes over the American ramifications of the case. The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"What form the reprisals will take we can safely leave to the responsible authorities. The main thing is that the blood of the foully murdered brave German seamen will not remain unavenged. The day is coming, when British treachery, hypocrisy, and murderous lust will receive its just punishment. There is still justice in the world."

There is naturally the keenest speculation over the nature of the Baralong reprisals, but it may be said that it will not take the form of putting an equal number of British prisoners to death. On the other hand, merely taking the English prisoners finest rank and placing them in solitary confinement would, to the German mind, be wholly inadequate to avenge the "crime" of the Baralong's crew and wipe out the even more bitterly resented slur cast by Sir Edward Grey on the honor of the German navy.

There is fortunately no reason to believe as yet that the practice of torpedoing merchantmen without warning will be resumed, although this would undoubtedly satisfy the wrought-up feeling of the German navy.

by the German Government in February, 1915. It is claimed that these reprisals are legitimate owing to the action of Great Britain in attempting to cut off from Germany all imports and starve the German people. The Germans thus maintain their submarine policy in consequence of the British measures against German trade.

"This is, of course, quite untrue, the exact opposite being the case. As far back as December, 1914, Admiral von Tirpitz foreshadowed the submarine blockade of Great Britain and submarine attacks were made on a merchant ship and a hospital ship on January 30, and February 1, respectively. Moreover, as far back as September, 1914, a Dutch ship, with a cargo of grain for Dublin and Belfast, was sunk by the Karlsruhe, and the American ship, W. P. Frye, similarly was struck on January 28.

"Further, on February 4, the German Government declared their intention of instituting a general submarine blockade of Great Britain and Ireland, with the avowed purpose of cutting off all supplies from these islands, and this blockade was put into effect on February 18.

"It was only on March 11 that the British Government put into force as a means of reprisal, measures against German trade, which the German Government now try to maintain were the cause of their submarine policy.

"The Germans maintain that in the cases of the Arabic, the E-13 and the Ruel, they were aiming at the destruction of hostile ships, and in nowise the destruction of helpless persons. The death roll of the Arabic, the shelling of British sailors as they were swimming ashore after abandoning the E-13, and the firing on the crew of the Ruel, who were attempting to save themselves in the boats sufficiently answer this claim.

"With regard to the German refusal to submit the Baralong case and the three cases put forward by the British Government for investigation by an impartial neutral tribunal, this action seems hard to explain if the Germans are really so convinced as they say of the guilt of the British commander and the innocence of the perpetrators of the three outrages cited by the British Government.

"So far as Great Britain is concerned, it is entirely untrue to state that the British Government have left unfilled a just demand for investigation. They have proposed it, and it is the Germans who have rejected it, doubtless because they know full well that the cases in which they are defendants would be decided against them by any impartial tribunal."

Letters to the Editor

We are at all times pleased to insert letters upon subjects of local or general interest. It must, however, be understood that we in no way identify ourselves with our correspondents' opinions.

All letters should be written on one side of the paper only, and should be as concise as possible. They must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

Dear Sir,—So many friends ask me for a few more reminiscences that I feel I must comply with their requests. Miss Jepson and daughter kept school on Pinnacle street in a small white house near where the Police Station now stands. There is only one person in the city beside myself who attended that school—Mrs. John Phippen. One of the old boys was the late lamented James Corby, brother of Senator Corby. All of the Phippen family attended; and I presume at that school Mr. John Phippen was attracted by the charms of the prettiest girl in the school, who was named "Cassie Monroe," and who became Mrs. John Phippen, mother of Hon. Justice Phippen. The grammar school was kept in a little wooden building directly opposite Dr. Gibson's dwelling. The lower storey was occupied by the fire department, which consisted of an antiquated fire engine with wooden brakes, which were manned during a fire by stalwart men. A row of leather buckets hung on the wall, a few poles with hooks and a couple of ladders were in evidence. In the room overhead was the grammar school, consisting of one apartment with a partition behind which we piled wood for use in winter. A pail with drinking water stood at the head of the stairway. Around this pail mud collected, which was moistened by water. In this mud we planted peas, which we watched with jealous care. I have seen vines as high as six inches around the pail, which marked the success of our first agricultural effort. If the room was ever swept I am not aware of it. I never saw a person sweep it. One window looked out on the Court House hill, which was not then terraced. The boys who were kept in for bad behavior availed themselves of this window and got out on the hill and played games in the absence of the master, who would lock them in and go into the town to "moisten his clay" as we boys imagined. A watch was generally kept by the boys, and when the master came in sight the scout would give the alarm, and the boys would trip in and be studying hard when the master unlocked the door. One day the scout omitted to give the alarm, and the master, on opening the door, found the window open and the boys out on the hill. The culprits came in through the window. The dear old man (whom we called Aberdeen, because he came from that city, but whose real name was Alexander Burden), had with a great deal of care prepared for such an emergency. He had a weapon of torture called a towse. It was made of leather, split into fine strips, the end of each strip being hardened by fire. When with plenty of leverage this strap was brought into action upon the extended hand of a boy, the effect was electric. When it was applied with all the vigor of a strong right arm five or six times the culprit could readily believe in the fires of the lower regions which tortured, but never consumed, the unfortunate victims. Only one word can describe the feeling, and you can grasp it easily, as it has only four letters, the first of which is H. Occasionally we got back at the master, when our hearts were filled with joy. Some poor wretch undergoing torment would withdraw his hand as the strap descended and Aberdeen's legs would get the full forces of the blow. The boys would hide their heads under the desks and nearly choke with laughter. But the old man could not be caught again. When such a thing happened he laid the boy's hand on a desk, and down would come the strap with every atom of power he possessed. I suppose your readers will not believe it, but I was a good boy and very seldom was whipped. This pleasure was reserved for more hardened sinners. We were all very proud when we had the old stone school, now standing, erected. Our Catholic friends had a school where now stands their splendid academy, presided over by a Mr. Mason. Where the Balmoral stands was an hotel kept by a man named Harper. A fire broke out in this building and twenty horses were burned. I saw a man with a leather helmet, standing on the topmost rung of a ladder in a most dangerous position. He was wielding an axe, striving to make a place for the hose. I thought him the bravest man I had ever seen. I used to see that man in a frame building erected where the Dominion Bank stands, the lower story occupied by John Donoghue as a shoe store, and the upper by The Intelligencer newspaper, which was then being printed by the late George Benjamin. This man could be seen in his shirt sleeves, at the compositor's case, setting type with astonishing celerity and vigor. That gentleman was Sir Mackenzie Bowell, of whom this city and country are so justly proud. The best houses in the city were on Front and Pinnacle streets near the wharves. John Covert kept a tavern many years in a house still standing. The favorite recreation was going to the main wharf and watching the boat from Kingston come in. The "Gildersleeve" was the first boat I remember. She was followed by Capt. Jacob Bonter's "Novelty." Then came the "Bay of Quinte," captained for so many years by the late F. A. Carrell. A fine steamer called the "Europe" also ran on the bay, captained by Edward Harrison, who for many years kept a book and music store on Front street. My father built a steamboat called the "Moira," which carried passengers and freight from Belleville to Oswego. Returning from Oswego something wrong with the propeller shaft, which might have been easily remedied had the captain not been a craven. The result was that she sank and was an entire loss, carrying no insurance. At that early day I do not think there was marine insurance for vessels on that route. Capt. Bonter's steamer coming out of Deseronto, collided with another steamer and was sunk a short distance from Deseronto wharf. I must take no further space at present.

Yours truly,
J. J. B. FLINT.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure; and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

DEATH ROLL

LACHLAN McGOWN

About two years ago Mr. McGown met with a serious accident in the city of Toronto, resulting from which a paralitic stroke followed. Ever since he never fully recovered, and another stroke occurred on Friday last and he passed away about midnight yesterday. He was born in the city of Montreal, about 42 years ago, and spent his early life in the town of Napanee, where he was a practising druggist, he afterwards conducted an extensive coal business in Gananoque, and about fifteen years ago he took up his residence in Belleville and latterly he successfully operated as a contractor until the accident above referred to.

He was a man of quiet retiring disposition and sterling integrity. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Margary, nurse in training at Nichol's Hospital, Peterboro, and Reda, at home. He had also two brothers, William and David, residing in Vancouver, and San Francisco, and three sisters, Mrs. George Reynolds, of Winnipeg; Mrs. H. D. Kelly and Ann McGown, of Toronto. The greatest of sympathy is extended to the bereaved.

KING'S PLATE ASSURED

Will be Run at Toronto on May 20

That there is no truth in the story published in an evening paper that the historic King's Plate race at Toronto would not be run this season was assured last night through a message from Toronto. The King's Plate will be run at the Woodbine this year on May 20 and will have a greater value than a year ago, including the gift of fifty guineas from His Majesty King George V. The King's Plate race run at the autumn meeting of the Montreal Jockey Club each year will also be run this year. One of the officials of the Montreal Jockey Club stated last night that they had heard nothing regarding the cancellation of the gift of the guineas.

Canadians' Duty To Ignore Call Senate is Told

Choquette's Bitter Attack on Participation in War Startled Red Chamber

CALLS FOR A MANDATE

Senator Belcourt Declared Choquette Did Not Voice Sentiment of Quebec

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Declaring that he was opposed to the principles that when England was at war Canada was at war, and asserting that England was somewhat responsible for the war, Senator Choquette (Liberal) of Quebec, caused somewhat of a sensation in the upper house this afternoon.

The senator's remarks were made during the debate on the reply to the address from the throne, and immediately brought down on him the censure of a number of the French-Canadian Senators, who stated that they agreed in no particular with the utterances of the Quebec member.

The debate was continued during the afternoon and to-night the senate passed the address without division.

England Partly Responsible

Senator Choquette said the chief items of the speech were proposals of men and money for the war and to prolong the term of parliament. England had not declared war, but England was somewhat responsible for the war. England had in July flirted with Germany, and French Ambassador Cambon in a report from Berlin that month, said Berlin had been led to believe that in case of war between Germany on one hand and France and Russia on the other, England would stand aside. Had England undertaken a different stand on that day and given Germany to understand they would stand by the treaty for the security of Belgium, there would be no war to-day.

"Toronto Jingoes"

Senator Croquette did not agree with the declaration of the two leaders yesterday that when England was at war Canada was at war. Leaders on both sides in the past had held this wasn't to be the case and when Toronto jingoes forced the late government to send some thousand armed men to the South African war they were sent with the declaration that this was not to be regarded as a precedent.

The proposal to amend this constitution to lengthen the term of parliament was a dangerous proposal Senator Croquette said. He declared that he would oppose with all his power the proposal. Senator Choquette said that half a million men were called for and the expenditure of milions was involved, but for himself he was against more men or more money unless there was a mandate from the people.

Senator Watson, Liberal, said French-Canadians had done their share and more in furnishing men. Many of the English-speaking regiments sent from Quebec were largely made up of French-Canadians.

Wants People's Mandate

If it was true, as Hon. Mr. Lougheed said yesterday, that there was danger of the invasion of Canada, then it would be the part of wisdom to keep Canadian soldiers at home for defence, Senator Choquette continued. He did not think with the United States powerful and friendly, that Canada would be taken by Germany should Germany defeat England in the war. The most that could happen would be to have Canada become independent. He was against the increase of the Canadian force to 500,000 men without a mandate from the people.

Belcourt's Strong Reply

Senator Belcourt (Liberal) said he was opposed to every position which Senator Croquette had taken. He proposed to speak for those of his race in Ontario whom he represented. The motion shown by the Duke of Connaught in the speech from the throne reflected the feeling of Canada. Senator Croquette had said many things, with most of which almost everyone in the senate disagreed. No man of sense believed that England was in any measure responsible for this war.

The business of today in Canada was to provide men and money for the great cause in which Canada and Britian and their Allies were engaged. There should be no limit fixed upon the contributions of either men or money but the need of the situation and ability of Canada to contribute.

The horse is by nature a timid animal, as, generally speaking, all animals are to whom nature has given powers of swift flight as their chief means of self preservation. Of course individuals differ in this respect, but the rule is so general that it should never be lost sight of in training. That the horse can be trained to war simply shows the extent to which his natural impulses can be modified and subdued by the art of man.

Breeds of horses differ in regard to natural timidity. The pure bred Arab is beyond all comparison the most fearless horse in the world. It is possible that this may be owing in part to the fact that his natural development was for long ages in an open country, where he was not in constant danger from unseen foes, but chiefly I think because he is a higher evolutionary type than any other horse.—Farm and Fireside.

Hot Air.

"Have you hot air in your apartment?"

"Have we? You just ought to hear the landlord telling what he is going to do for us."

An Eye For His Colors.

Haiti appears to breed a spirit of sensitive patriotism unknown in other countries. Some years ago a general in the Haitian army ordered an artificial eye. The maker did his best to execute the order satisfactorily, but the eye was returned from Port au Prince, with a letter complaining that "the eye you forwarded me is of a tint that resembles the Spanish flag. I am far too patriotic to wear any colors but those of my own country." After ascertaining from the ministry of marine the colors of the Haitian standard a scarlet and green eye was dispatched, and this met with enthusiastic approval.

The Idea.

"I see where a very clever dog is the star of a play lately produced."

"I suppose they did that to make it a howling success."

Colored Goldfish.

The artificial coloring of goldfish to meet prevailing tastes by keeping them in water containing certain chemicals is extensively carried on in Sicily.

Every base occupation makes one sharp in its practice and dull in every other.—Sir Philip Sidney.

'MISSING' SOLDIER GAVE HIS FRIENDS SURPRISE

Peterboro Man Invalided Home After Injuries Sustained at Givenchy

KEENE, Jan. 19.—(Special.)—A pleasant surprise came to the friends of Pte. J. H. Wilson, Peterboro, who was reported missing after Givenchy when he unexpectedly returned from the battlefront. On June 16 at Givenchy a shell burst on the parapet of his trench, dropping a couple of sandbags on him and pinning him to the ground. He has spent the intervening months in French and English hospitals. He will spend a few weeks in Peterboro and then report at Kingston.

General Villa Reported Captured

Famous Mexican Rebel Leader With 50 Followers Claimed Captured Near San Geronimo

REPORT HAS BEEN DENIED

Villa Once Was Prominent Rebel Leader and Nearly Gained Mastery Over Mexico

(Canadian Press Special)

ELPASO, Texas, Jan. 21.—Reports of the capture of Francisco Villa are denied by General Herrera at Chipuahua.

Reported Captured

EL PASCO, Texas, Jan. 20.—Gen. Francisco Villa with a band of fifty men has been captured near San Geronimo. He is being brought to Juarez and will be publicly executed at the race track there, according to statements made by Carranzista officials. His followers were all executed immediately after their capture, says one report. These reports are confirmed by every available Carranza source on the border. Americans in Chihauhua wire confirmation. Villaistas deny reports of the capture.

The following telegram has been received from Albert H. Davison, a prominent broker of Chihuahua City, who is one of the best informed Americans in Mexico.

"Your telegram received. Carranza officials here declare reported capture of Villa near San Geronimo absolutely confirmed. They say Villa will be brought alive to Chihuahua. His band of fifty men were executed immediately after capture."

Once Near Success

Villa has been the most prominent of the many "rebel leaders" in Mexico, and at one time was thought to be in a fair way to bringing the whole country under his rule. He did not support any President or leader for long. He is regarded as the instigator of the recent massacre of eighteen American citizens. Benton, a British subject, was killed on his orders some time ago, and Britain than stated in effect that she would take reckoning in due course. In the height of his career Villa led armies of 20,000 to 30,000 men, and for a time was consistently successful.

TO WAIT ON THE GOV'T.

And Urge Prohibition as Ecomic War Measure

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The committee named this morning at a meeting of Parliamentarians, the Dominion Alliance, and the Central Citizens' Committee to prepare a resolution favoring the principle of Dominion prohibition as an economic war measure, will wait upon the Government on Thursday, January 27th, at noon.

SENATOR RILEY, B. C., DEAD

George Riley was born at St. Catharines, Ont., in 1843, and came to British Columbia in 1885. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in 1900, but was elected in 1902 and re-elected in 1904. He resigned in 1906 and was oppointed to the Senate in March of the same year.

HOUSE CANNOT START INQUIRY SAYS MEIGHEN

Contends That Shell Contract Matters Are For the Imperial Government Alone—Canadian Government Has No Power

LIBERAL PARTY IS APPARENTLY DIVIDED

Extension of Parliament Touched Upon—Quebec and Maritime Provinces Anxious For An Election—Ontario and The West Are Opposed

Liberals Disagree

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The debate upon the address so far has been controversal only upon the subject of the shell committee. Little has been said about the extension of the parliamentary term, although Dr. Clark of Red Deer favored the same and Hon. Dr. Pugsley to some extent opposed it. That Liberals are not in entire accord was disclosed at an informal conference held this morning.

The Dividing Line

There is evidently a line of cleavage which closely follows the course of the Ottawa River. Quebec and Maritime Province members are rather anxious for an elecion while their Liberal colleagues from Ontario and the west are strongly oposed to it.

No Power to Probe

In the house to-day, Solicitor-General Meighen stated the position of the government in respect to the demand for parliamentary investigation into the operations of the shell committee. Mr. Meighen said that the commitee was responsible only to the imperial government. The Canadian parliament had no more authority to investigate the expenditures of the British Government in Canada than it had to investigate the expenditures of the British Government in the United States.

Contention Combated

This contention was vigorously combated by G. W. Kyte, the Liberal member from Richmond, N.S. He said that the government in the past had claimed a great deal of credit for the shell committee but now sought to evade an investigation by declaring that it was the creature of the imperial government.

Mr. Scott (S. Waterloo) moved the adjournment of the debate.

NO PRINTERS, NO PAPER

Peculiar State of Affairs in St. Catharines

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 19.—There will be no issue of the Evening Journal to-day owing to a peculiar strike. This morning the management left a letter on the type-setting machine of one of the men, saying it was understood he had been bringing liquor into the office which must be stopped or dismissal would follow. As union etiquette was not followed, and this communication sent through the foreman, the men put on their coats and quit.

The first trouble, however, started yesterday, when a man in the newsroom refused to help out in the job-printing department and was given the option of doing so or quitting. He quit.

CAMPBELLFORD FIRM TO MAKE MORE SHELLS

The company will as soon as possible begin the manufacture of a 6-inch shell and will continue to make the smaller shell. The new contract for the 6 inch shells amounts to $350,000.—Campbellford Herald.

Another Division For the Front

Fourth Canadian Division to go Soon—Is Now in England

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—It is announced tonight that Sir Robert Borden, prime minister, sent to the imperial authorities the offer of a fourth Canadian division at the front. The troops are in England now and they will go over to France in the near future.

This will make two complete army corps or about 80,000 men on the firing line.

With the sending of another division of 20,000 men across the channel, it will be necessary to send a corresponding number from Canada to England to be held in readiness to act as reinforcements. The action of the government was made possible by the prospect of a satisfactory response from the country to the call for 500,000 men.

MORE DOGS THAN BABIES

PALM BEACH, Florida, Jan. 20.—Russel G. Colt to-day bet Hermann Oelrichs that there are more dogs in Palm Beach than there are babies, and set out to prove it. He had made considerable progress by to-night. Here is the initial list:—

Mrs. Hamilton Cary, with her prizewining English bull, Newport Nipper; John C. King, one Pomeranian; Hermann Oelrichs, one white Spitz; Mrs. Guerney Munn, formerly Miss Louise Wanamaker, one police dog, two water spaniels, one Russian wolf hound and one pekingese, eight dogs, mostly English pointers and English and Irish setters; Mrs. Willis Seaver Paine, one pekingese; Mrs. Wm. Thaw, 3rd, one Boston bull, and Jean St. Cyr, two Russian wolf hounds.

It was reported to-night that Mr. Oelrichs had been able to discover but eight babies so far. A show-down of the two is to be called for on Saturday night of this week at a dinner at the Beach Club.

GRIBBLE GOES TO JAIL FOR SEDITIOUS LANGUAGE

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 20.—Wilfrid Gribble, Socialist, was sentenced today by Judge Crockett to two months in the county jail here for using seditious language. He was convicted last week.

Application of counsel for Gribble for a reserved case was denied.

Gribble slandered the King at a public meeting, and also said the phrase "Your King and country need you," should be "Your King and country bleed you."

The 155th Battalion have secured 104 recruits for the week ending Jan. 21st. This is an increase of 23 over last week.

The 155th Battalion expect to organize a hockey team in the near future.

KINGSTON

Where the officer commanding a battery of artillery has been given the rank of major there will be no captain appointed for the battery. This is the decision of Ottawa, and will be carried out locally.

Four depot batteries of field artillery will be organized in the city at once, to take the places of the batteries which have been placed in the new artillery brigade for overseas.

There are now 23 men attending the school of military cookery.

Private Mark Dine of the bugle band of the 80th Battalion, is in the city, and has been detained here for several days owing to family sickness.

The following appears in divisional orders for yesterday:

It is published for general information that owing to the scarcity of telegraph operators available for military purposes and the great number of operators required in a divisional signal company, it is desired that all operators who have enlisted in the various C.E.F. units be transferred to divisional signal companies as required.

Officers commanding units of the C.E.F., will therefore forward to headquarters, 3rd division, a statement showing the names and qualifications of all such operators who are at present serving under their respective commands.

RUSSIANS ATTACKING IN GREAT FORCE

Tremendous Struggle Is Now Going on Along Eastern Front—Czar Leave Petrograd to Join Troops

DELAYED OFFENSIVE NOW IN FULL SWING

Teuton Regiments From Serbia and Montenegro Being Rushed To Region of Czernowitz—Enemy Losses Very Heavy—Czar's Forces Repel Counter-Attacks

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A Bucharest despatch says some of the Teuton regiments who fought in Serbia and Montenegro are being hurriedly returned to the Galician front.

The Czar has left Petrograd, and, according to a despatch from the Russian capital, is proceeding to the front near Czernowitz. It is at that point that the general engagement is developing on which the success of the great flanking movement now under way is believed to depend.

As in the case of the recently reported battles, the Austrian despatches again claim that all the Russian attacks have been repulsed with great losses. There is no doubt, however, that the lull in the fighting was brought about by the Russians deliberately for the purpose of organizing the positions taken and bringing up reinforcements and fresh supplies of ammunition before proceeding with the offensive now in full swing.

Repulsed Five Attacks

Petrograd tonight officially reports successes both north and south.

"Northeast of Czernowitz, in the region of Rarinczle," the Russians say, "we captured the sector of an enemy position. In an attempt to capture the sector the enemy made five desperate counter attacks, all of which were repulsed with enormous enemy losses. In the region of Dvinsk," the report says, "our artillery successfully bombarded an enemy column which approached Schlossberg from the west. On the Middle Stripa we stopped an attempt by weak enemy units to approach our trenches."

Foe's Losses Colossal

A despatch to The Times says:

All accounts agree that the Austro-Germans suffered colossal losses in the recent fighting on the southwestern front. During their counter attacks at Czartorysk the German columns melted so rapidly under the fire of the Russian artillery that their armies in that theatre have been forced to remain supine ever since.

At Olyka the Austro-German counter attacks were so costly that the storming columns eventually fell back to the second line without the slightest pressure from the Russians.

Fighting in the North

Serious fighting has occurred on the northern front in the neighborhood of Jacobstadt. During a German attempt to turn the Russian flank in the Drisviaty district the Russians withdrew unperceived, with the result that the German flanking columns came into collision and inflicted heavy losses on each other before the mistake was discovered.

Availing themselves of the confusion the Russians then attacked successfully and expelled the Germans.

What Vienna Claims

The Vienna War Office, in a despatch via Berlin, says:

"The new battle on the Bessarabian frontier has increased in violence. Tenacious attacks by superior Russian forces at several places between Toporoutz and Boyan were repulsed principally by the Budapest Honved division. The enemy several times during the engagements entered our trenches, but were each time repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting with heavy losses.

"At one place the Sixth and Thirtieth Honved Regiments made a victorious counter attack. The ground before the trenches is covered with dead Russians. On the fighting ground of certain battalions were counted as many as 800 to 1,000 bodies of Russians who had been kiled.

"The front held by Generals Pflanzer and Baltin is under the fire of the Russian artillery. There have been artillery duels in eastern Galicia."

Fair Play Is Asked by Times

Says Americans Should Grant Same Interpretation Granted Them

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Times prints the blockade proclamation of the Confederate States issued by Abraham Lincoln, and says: "Lincoln announced that competent force would be posted to enforce the blockade, although he had no such force. We were anxious for the friendship of the American people and allowed them plenty of time. Even if the effectiveness of our blockade should be at first open to question, we might reasonably expect from America that favorable interpretation of a strict law which we allowed here.

HOUSE BLOWN UP IN WALKERVILLE

(Canadian Press Special)

WALKERVILLE, Jan. 21.—An explosion of natural gas wrecked a tenement house on Walker road, containing four families, last night. John Belford is dead and several others are injured, two probably fatally. Gas leaked through the ground from a leak in the main fifteen feet from the house, and the explosion resulted when somebody struck a match to light the lamp.

Victory Depends Upon Civilians

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Speaking to a deputation from the National Railwaymen's Union, formed to help war sufferers, General Joffre said: "If only the civilians will hold firm, that is the essential thing. If Frenchmen keep steady we shall have victory, not immediately, or even soon, but eventually."

New Version of Baralong Affair

Reported That United States Muleteers Killed German Submarine Sailors

COULD HAVE GOTTEN FACTS

Independent Jury of American Officers Would Have Obtained Information

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Special—The Central News correspondent in Christiania says:

The After Posten tomorrow (Friday) publishes from its London correspondent a new version of the Baralong affair which he received from a reliable source. According to this version, when the submarine attacked the Nicolsian the latter's crew, including the American muleteers, took refuge in lifeboats. The Baralong hove in sight and sank the submarine, whose crew sought shelter on the Nicosian.

The story proceeds: "When the American muleteers, having returned with the crew to their own ship, discovered members of the German submarine's crew on board these muleteers not unnaturally became quite furious. A fight ensued, in which the muleteers wreaked fury upon the men who in attacking the British ship were really guilty of attempting cold-blooded murder. I understand that if, as proposed by Sir Edward Grey, the Baralong affair has been submitted to an independent jury of American naval officers the above-mentioned facts would have been disclosed."

Let Soldiers Help With Next Harvest

Suggestion Also to Give up Fall Fairs to Save Grant For Patriotism

COBOURG, Jan. 20.—Special—West Northumberland Agricultural Association held its annual meeting here today, the President, Mr. James McLeod, in the chair. He referred to the fact that although the farmers of this district had met during 1915 the demand for increased production, they are confronted to-day by a great difficulty, that of securing sufficient help to put in and harvest the crop. He suggested that the soldiers in training at the different military centres be commissioned by the Department of Militia to turn in and help the farmers with the harvest.

Mr. McLeod threw out the suggestion also to the farmers of the Province that as the Government grant to the fall fairs amounts to some $70,000 the farmers give up the agricultural shows for one year, in order that this amount might be devoted to patriotic purposes, thus making one more sacrifice to the cause of patriotism and humanity.

Belgian Relief Fund Needs

No tag days, no house-to-house canvasses, just an appeal to the Canadian sense of duty is being made by the Belgian Relief Committee on behalf of 2,500,000 starving women and children.

Two million and a half women and children in Belgium are on the verge of starvation for want of Canadian flour.

Local committees all over Canada are receiving subscriptions to be forwarded to the Belgian Relief Committee in Montreal to meet the situation in Belgium, which has assumed serious proportions.

Germans Burned Belgian Homes

MUSIC & DRAMA

GREAT WAR CORRESPONDENT COMING HERE

Mr. Frederick Palmer will lecture on "The Great World War" and will exhibit the famous movinb pictures of the war at close range, including both the films authorized by the French Government, and those permitted to be taken by the British Government.

It is under the auspices of the 80th "Overseas" Battalion, C.E.F. Belleville citizens will hear Mr. Palmer in Griffin's Opera House on February 1st.

ENGAGEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

Mr. C. R. Scott, of Scott's Theatre, presents his compliments to the amusement loving people of Belleville, and begs to state, that, in his opinion, "The Man Who Stayed at Home" which he has secured for tonight, Saturday matinee and night, is fully deserving of this unusual commendation. "The Man Who Stayed at Home" now playing on the legitimate stage under the name of "The White Feather," is the British War Office Secret Service Drama, which has already reached its second year in London, played for one solid year in New York, and the Strand Theatre, Toronto, broke all records with it. The company is an all English one, picked from the leading theatres of London and Manchester, and includes Dennis Cadic, the very brilliant and gifted young actor. Without any doubt, this will be one of the finest photo-play events ever given in the history of Belleville, and Mr. Scott not only gives his unqualified endorsements to "The Man Who Stayed at Home" but assures his patrons an evening of rare and unalloyed enjoyment. XV. Regt. Band, Chas. Hanna, Manager. Prices: 10c., 20c. Reserved seats now on sale at Theatre. Orchestra in attendance. 1t

Quo Vadis

"Quo Vadis", that marvellous photo drama spectacle that has made the name of the producer, Mr. George Kleine, already famous on this continent, and which has thrilled vast audiences week after week in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia and various other cities, is announced at the Griffin Opera House for an engagement of 2 nights, Jan. 26 and 27th, with matinees every day. That a rare treat is in store for local amusement seekers is a foregone conclusion as such wonderful patronage and praise that has been bestowed upon this attraction cannot be without merit.

Many ministers and priests have been noticeable in the audience particularly in New York and Chicago, and all have given the entertainment their unqualified approval and endorsement. Some of the pictures are more than inspiring and imbue the spectator with an unbounded reverence for things that are sacred and spiritual. According to all accounts, one of the most striking figures among the great list of factors is the character of Peter. It would be hard to find another player who so perfectly realizes the general conception of this noble man. The features of the actor are perfect for the part and could not have been better had they been chiselled out of marble or painted specially for the production. His acting is at all times in keeping with the beauty of the character and many critics have pronounced the picture where he is preaching to the Christians in the cave, the most artistic and inspiring of the whole wonderful group. And certainly no scene ever pictured or portrayed upon the stage is more impressive or carries stronger weight for good than that incident where the figure of Christ appears to Peter and comands him to return to Rome. It is a splendid specimen of dissolving photography and only one of a remarkable group. In fact, it is said, there are so many great scenes in this glorious photo drama production of "Quo Vadis" it is difficult to pick out any one to praise more than the other. Seats on sale at Doyle's Drug Store; prices 10, 15 and 25c.

3 TIMES CONVICT FORD SAVES HIM

They can call Henry Ford any old thing when it comes to settling a war, but his efforts at the reclamation of human wrecks haven't all been failures as the following Detroit despatch shows:

Samuel D. Haynes of Highland Park has erected a two family brick veneer flat building, costing approximately $10,000, and containing billiard rooms, sun parlors, beamed ceilings, tiled bathrooms, and other "modern improvements" which some might term luxuries.

While item of everyday news is removed from very brief mention in the real estate notes by the fact that this particular house is the realization of a dream that came to Haynes in a call in the State prison at Thomaston, Me., where he spent thirty-nine years of his life. Then his eighth petition for pardon from a life sentence was granted.

Now he is "one of Henry Ford's boys," a "Tripple-Ex,' or three times convict, one of the many whom the motor magnate has placed in positions of trust. Haynes is connected with the employment department.

Haynes was arrested in Rockland, Me., charged with conducting a gambling house. A policeman named Robbins was detailed to guard him. Haynes determined to escape. He threw a short piece of iron pipe at his guard intending to stun him while the escape was being made, but the end of the pipe struck Robbins in the temple and the officer died four days later.

Haynes was found guilty of murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment. The prosecutor in the case has since sworn that he believed the verdict should have been one of manslaughter, but Haynes' record was against him.

In prison he made up his mind that not a year should elapse that he did not make an attempt at escape.

The first year he was caught and placed in solitary confinement for five months. The second year he tried again to escape, but was shot through the right lung and shoulder, recaptured and put in solitary confinement for fifteen months.

He made another attempt four years later. His wounds bothered him cruelly, but gradually as he recovered he was beginning to realize that he was only making life bitter for himself and for those friends who "stuck to him."

He decided to abandon his attempts at escape. In the last twenty years of his imprisonment he made good.

He was released July 29, 1913, on his eighth petition. On July 3, 1914, he secured employment at the Ford factory. He started to realize his dream of really "making good." The house on Pilgrim avenue is the realization of that dream. He is saving his loan at 6 per cent. interest and he has a substantial sum paid up.

Samuel D. Haynes, once hater of men, has become a member of a respectable community.

INDOOR BASEBALL

With the lighting which was defective last week all fixed up conditions were almost ideal for the baseball game that took place in the Armouries last night between Mr. Phelan's team from B. Company and the Brass Band. Though the score was a little one sided this was not characteristic of the play. Every man on each team had to be on his toes all the time. The Brass Band's salvation was its pitcher who had considerable speed compared with his opponent. He fanned a number of men and was well supported by his team mates. Some one was on the job to back up any man who made an error and in this way prevented the runs piling up. The greatest weakness of both teams was an inclination on the part of men to hold the ball while deciding which man to close in on and in the meantime two men would steal bases. A good evening's sport was enjoyed after which almost every man took in the weekly programme at the Khaki Club.

B. Company promise the Band a very interesting argument the next time these teams meet. An hour or two's practice together would mean a good deal to both teams and there is opportunity for it almost any afternoon after drill or immediately after supper.

The teams lined up as follows:—For B. Company, Doran, Chant, Brydon, Ellegot, Greenham, Noble, Atkins, and Gordon whose tally was twelve runs. For the Brass Band, Seymour, Guy, Lister, Chamberlain, Brethour, Angrove, B. Sills, and Vickers who scored twenty one runs.

This give s the Band the first place in the league.

The second of this week's' games was between a combined team from the Signallers and Machine Gun Section and A. Company. This was A Company's team's first appearance and though they did not win the game they gave their opponents a closer run than the score indicates and have the first double play of the league to their credit and a very neat play it was. The team lined up as follows: For the combined team, Barlow, W. C. Thompson, A. Thomson, Bolin, Bullock, McCalligott, and Powers. For A. Company, E. Fairman, Nunny, Ketcheson, Bennett, Watson, Friend, Brennan and J. H. Alp. Score 35 to 45. Umpire, C. T. Sharpe.

After the ball game a couple of teams had a basketball workout under Mr. Sharpe in preparation for the league which opens in the Armouries next week.

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin, and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.

How Soldiers Keep Strong

Preparedness against sickness is the big, important thing to fighting soldiers. A sick soldier cannot work with vigor any more than you can work with energy when you are weak, tired, almost sick.

The government of one of our allies is giving each soldier a vial of cod liver oil every day because far-reaching experiments show how wonderfully it increases the calories of human energy and gives them strength to prevent winter sickness. Is this not convincing proof that you need it at this season to enliven your blood to prevent sickness?

Cod liver oil is scarce and high-priced this season and many inferior grades may be offered. But remember that which guarantees pure cod liver oil—free from harmful drugs.

SCOTT'S EMULSION IS MADE IN CANADA.

If you are subject to colds, throat or lung troubles; if you are easily tired, run-down or have thin blood, you should take Scott's Emulsion at once. If your children are backward in growth, frail or anæmic, nothing will do them so much good as Scott's Emulsion, and for girls and women in home or business it is nature's great strength-builder.

Scott's is not a "secret" medicine. It is a rich blood-food and a pure tonic; it contains nothing harmful and is pleasant to take. It is prescribed by physicians and liberally used in hospitals and private schools.

One bottle may prevent a sickness.

(Canadian Press Special)

Russ Destroy 163 Turk Ships

PETROGRAD, Jan. 20.—Special—The official statement issued to-day says:—

"On the Black Sea on January 17, our torpedo-boats raided the Anatolian coast, destroying 163 sailing vessels, 73 of which were loaded with various commodities. Thirty men were taken prisoner. Other vessels made their escape on our approach."

NO "FRILLS."
Just a Statement About Food.

Sometimes a good, healthy commer-ed food and is lucky if he learns that Grape-Nuts food will put him right.

A traveling man writes: "About a year ago my stomach got in a bad way. I had a headache most of the time and suffered misery. For several months I ran down until I lost about 70 pounds in weight and finally had to give up a good position and go home. Any food that I might use seemed to nauseate me.

"My wife, hardly knowing what to do, one day brought home a package of Grape-Nuts food and coaxed me to try it. I told her it was no use but finally to humor her I tried a little and they just struck my taste. It was the first food that I had eaten in nearly a year that did not cause any suffering.

"Well, to make a long story short, I began to improve and stuck to Grape-Nuts. I went up from 135 pounds in December to 194 pounds the following October.

"My brain is clear, blood all right and appetite too much for any man's pocket-book. In fact I am thoroughly made over and owe it all to Grape-Nuts. I talk so much about what Grape-Nuts will do that some of the men on the road have nicknamed me 'Grape-Nuts,' but I stand today a healthy, rosy-cheeked man—a pretty good example of what the right kind of food will do.

"You can publish this if you want to. It is a true statement without any frills."

Deadly Alchohol.

The temperance advocates who like to build sermons on the theory that whiskey has killed more men than all the wars of the world do not give King Alcohol his full due, for he slays directly as well as insidiously. Alcohol is such an important component of the powder industry that it is asserted that the United States Industrial Alcohol Company has sold its output well into 1917 for delivery to the powder mills. The stock, which never paid a dividend, and which sold at 15 last year, crossed 145 yesterday.—New York Times.

This is the 533rd day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

THE "SHAME" THAT MR. PUGSLEY SEES.

(Ottawa Free Press.

The Dominion Shell Commission, appointed by General Sam Hughes within six weeks of the outbreak of the war under the chairmanship of General Alex Bertram, practical mechanic, manufacturer, and soldier, established in Canada an entirely new industry that has brought to and distributed throughout the Dominion, hundreds of millions of dollars."

Six weeks after the opening of the war, and six months before Britain, compelled by her necessities, decided to do the same thing, Canada proceeded to organize its privately owned industrial resources for the manufacture of the shells that General Sam Hughes correctly predicted would be demanded in appalling quantities.

It was a tremendous task—one for which there was no precedent, one which meant generally and largely a groping in the dark. It was a task for practical men, for captains of industry particularly connected with the metal trades, for those familiar with the manufactories of the country and their equipment, for tactful and essentially honest leaders.

In Messrs. Bertram and his associates General Sam Hughes found men of extraordinary suitability. They were practical machinists and inventors, had captained huge industries, had wide knowledge of Canadian manufacturing conditions and had the confidence and respect of all who knew them. These men accepted what from the first seemed a thankless if not impossible task, they served continuously night and day without a cent of remuneration, they achieved against tremendous obstacles a wonderful thing—the organization, on a gigantic scale, of an industry entirely new to Canada, that has kept thousands of Canadians in employment, and that has driven away the distress that threatened our cities and towns.

That is the record which Hon. William Pugsley from his place in the House of Commons declares "will bring shame to the people of Canada," and which, he asserts, has "produced scandals which were reeking from the Atlantic to the Pacific." His condemnation will be printed in a hundred Canadian newspapers today, and in brief telegrams and cables people in the United States and Britain will be told of this horror that has come to the Dominion.

Why does Hon. William Pugsley make this startling statement?

The commission had given large orders to firms in which its members were interested, for instance John Bertram and Sons, of which Sir Alex. Bertram was vice president, and to a concern with which Mr. Carnegie was connected.

The commission had fixed an unduly high price to be paid for shells.

A Canadian had quoted $4 for fuses that had been bought in the United States for from $4 to $4.50.

The commission had been animated by a desire to distribute orders to friends of the Government.

Bernard Hepburn, M.P., had been given a contract which had been turned over to a firm in Montreal.

E. A. D. Morgan, a Conservative candidate in Richelieu, had got an order at higher than the rates recently paid.

An Ontario manufacturer, having been told that he might expect to get an order, spent $15,000 in installing additional lathes, but was subsequently waited upon by "two gentlemen, one of them closely connected with the chairman of the shell committee, who told him that he could not obtain a contract unless he paid a commission of 1½ per cent. to them"; declining to pay, he got no order.

Men without plants got orders for shell boxes, while others with plants did not.

We believe this is a fair summary of Mr. Pugsley's charges as reported in the newspapers.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley, so far as we can see, provides no evidence other than rumors that have been circulated by disappointed manufacturers or distorted statements and half truths that have appeared in certain newspapers. But, supposing all his assertions are true, are they of a nature to make Canadians forget the real and wonderful achievements of the Shell Commission and bring shame instead of pride to the Canadian people?

Firms with which the commissioners were connected were given orders at the outset because they were included among the few willing to try the experiment of making shells; Sir Alex. Bertram has denied that he has any but a nominal connection with John Bertram and Sons; comparatively high prices had to be fixed in order to tempt Canadian manufacturers into the new industry, and at that the total, we are assured, was $15,000,000 less than the amount allowed by the War Office; oftentimes date of delivery offset a lower offer in price; many Liberal firms have handled contracts for the commission; it was not such a heinous offence for a member of Parliament or for a candidate for Parliament to bring the war facilities of certain firms to the attention of the Shell Committee; many scores of firms who at first refused to have anything to do with the experiment flocked to Ottawa when they discovered that others had tried it and had succeeded well.

How trivial is all this compared with the essential fact that the Shell Commission established in Canada an industry that has brought hundreds of millions of dollars to the Dominion, besides materially helping in the prosecution of the war.

The assertion that there are in the country, men politicians possibly mean enough to sponge on manufacturers who have received orders from the Shell Commission and bold enough to pretend that only upon payments to them could future orders be obtained, is quite believable, after some o fthe revelations in connection with the horse purchases; but that men of the stamp of General Bertram, who, despite the rumors which Mr. Pugsley now gives voice to was created a Sir Knight by his King a few weeks ago, would be a party to such contemptible tricks, is unthinkable.

Owing to the extraordinary growth of the munitions business in Canada, which started with so small an order that the difficulties of its inception were added to, the work of the original shell commission may not have been conducted with the complete system that the great task demanded; but the fact remains that results have shown that the Bertram commission was one of the most efficient that has ever been appointed by a government of this country.

The Free Press regrets to find itself in opposition to so clever and distinguished a member of the Liberal party as Hon. William Pugsley; but we cannot help thinking that he has been led astray by the atmosphere of the chamber which has been the scene of so many gallant party fights in which he has been a leading antagonist. From the speeches of the men on both sides who had preceded, from the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Dr. Clark, and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux we had been led to expect that the element of petty partisanship was to be eliminated from this war session, and we had obtained visions of a real drawing together of the two political parties for the prosecution of the war, beside which everything else pales into insignificance.

If Mr. Pugsley's lead is followed by other Liberals, our hopes are shattered and Canada, we believe, will suffer.

In connection with the development of an industry on the scale to which the munitions output has attained, it is too much to expect that there has been nothing deserving of condemnation, but to deliberately and in a wholesale way, blackwash men like Bertram and his associates who have accomplished so much that counts in the successful carrying on of the war does not seem patriotic.

The fishing expedition upon which Mr. Pugsley would have Parliament embark might result in the exposure of some grafters; but it would probably be more prolific in valuable information for the enemy.

BY JOVE!

said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchitis (troubles, you will note, of throat and chest) do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly sound?"

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise food swallowed would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by dosing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must breathe the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. All druggists and stores or Peps Co., Toronto, will supply

A GOOD TRADE SHOWING.

The trade of Canada for the twelve months ending October last, as revealed in the summary just issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce shows a total of $1,147,446,551—the largest on record.

Exports were $669,330,590; imports were $478,115,961, showing a surplus of $191,215,089 of sales over purchases.

In 1913 the exports were $479,126,831, the imports $680,126,591, showing an excess of $200,999,760 in purchases over sales.

In other words, our trade balance for the past year as compared with 1913 has bettered by nearly $400,000,000.

WHO WAS TO BLAME?

The investigation ordered by the Ontario Government into the value of the estate of the late Hon. Geo. A. Cox resulted in the increase of value of the estate for succession duties from $870,071 to $4,834,847. This re-valuation made by the Government placed the taxable value of the estate at $4,834,847, which means a tax of about $425,000 instead of $60,000, if the first valuation of the estate had been accepted as correct.

A contemporary asks: "Is it possible that the first valuation was honestly made? If not, why is not some one prosecuted for the offence? The law provides penalties for improper valuation of estates liable to taxation. An example should be made of somebody, if this sort of attempted cheating of the law and the province is to be checked."

May it not be possible that the first valuation was made by persons not knowing the facts? It is to be hoped that such is the case.

Try This If You Have Drndruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

The Poets' Corner

It Isn't Your Town—It's You.

If you want to live in the kind of a town
That's the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.

You'll find elsewhere what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new;
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town;
It isn't your town—it's you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead;
When everyone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.

And if while you make your personal stake
Your neighbor can make one too,
Your town will be what you want to see;
It isn't your town—it's you.

"FAGGED OUT" WOMEN

Will Find a Helpful Suggestion In This Letter.

Overworked, run down "fagged out" women who feel as though they could hardly drag about, should profit by Mrs. Carter's experience. She says:—"I am the mother of six children and I got so weak and run-down that I couldn't eat anything and it seemed almost impossible for me to get around and do my work. I tried different doctors' remedies without benefit. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and received so much benefit from the first bottle that I continued to take it, and it has built up my strength and made me strong and well. I consider Vinol the best medicine I have ever taken, and advise all weak, run-down women to try it." Mrs. Bessie Carter, State Road, N.C.

If all the tired, overworked, run-down women in Belleville could only realize how our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, supplies the vital elements necessary to build up blood and strength, we wouldn't be able to supply the demand.—J. S. McKeown Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

Current Comment

At any rate, it's consoling to know that while the cold spell lasts we can concentrate on keeping warm, while our more capitalistic friends must give some thought to preventing the ol' 'bus from freezing solid.

Girl hazers at Fairmont Normal School gave a hazee an ice water bath, rubbed her down with fibre towels with nettles in them and then painted her red from head to foot. Really, brothers, why withhold the ballot longer?

PASS THE FIRST AID KIT.

"Is your paper really 70 years old?" asked the sweet young thing.

"Certainly," we retorted, defiantly. "Why?"

"Then I was right. I told mother that some of your jokes are older than the paper."

The attack upon the British steamer Clan MacFarlane in the Mediterranean during a heavy sea, and without warning, was as murderous and piratical as any the Huns have yet been guilty of. It is not known that any Americans were on board, but, of course, that would have little bearing on the case—even in Washington.

It is difficult at this distance to find an excuse for Italy's course with respect to Montenegro. Domination of the Adriatic would give Austria the whip hand over her rival. No nation had so much at stake as Italy, and it was believed she would take every means in her power to prevent the very thing that has happened.

For the purpose of keeping up the spirits of the people at home the Crown Prince of Bavaria tells an interviewer that "the British soldiers are no longer what they were," and he speaks lightly of the new armies now being raised. The Crown Prince has a habit of giving out such interviews. Early in the war he dismissed the British forces as "undisciplined troops" which could never hope to stand firm in the face of the German offensive. His opinion at that time was proved to be worth very little.

DEAN SWIFT AND HIS CHOIR.

Singers, Like Poets, Must Be Very Good, He Wrote.

A characteristic letter written by Dean Swift in reference to an application by a Mr. Lovelace for a vacant place in the choir of St. Patrick's cathedral, Dublin, appears in the appendix to the thirteenth report of the historical MSS. commission. Musical News gives an extract:

"I desire you will ask my Lord Oxford whether his brother Nathaniel understands musick; if he does and recommends Mr. Lovelace particularly from his own knowledge, something may be said. I have the honour to be captain of a band of nineteen musicians (including boys); but my quire is so degenerated under the reigns of former Deans of famous memory that the race of people called Gentlemen Lovers of Musick tell me that I must be very careful in supplying two vacancyes, which I have been two years endeavoring to do so.

"For you are to understand that in disposing the musical employments I determine to act directly contrary to Ministers of State by giving them to those who best deserve. If you had recommended a person to me for a Church-living in my gift I would be less curious; because an indifferent parson may do well enough, if he be honest; but Singers, like their brothers the Poets, must be very good, or they are good for nothing."

SONG OF THE CARROT.

Tribute to a Modest Vegetable the Poets Have Neglected.

Why does no poet arise to sing the song of the carrot, the hardest worked vegetable in the kingdom? Much is said in favor of the plethoric pumpkin, the gathering of corn is a commonplace theme, but the poor carrot has been neglected—yes, even scorned.

For diversity of use the carrot has pumpkin and corn backed over the garden wall. Men feed carrots to cattle, increasing the dairy output. They feed them to other stock sometimes, improving its temper. A carrot artificially hollowed with a knife makes an elegant Japanese vase. Sufficiently hardened by harsh contact with the world, a carrot may be used for a weapon, either operated like a mallet with a handle or hurled like a Russian bomb.

Carrots are sometimes even used for food by human beings. They are a chief ingredient in vegetable soup. Mixed with butter they improve its color. They make better pumpkin pie than pumpkins themselves. Served as Hubbard squash they make one wonder why squashes were invented.

The answer to the high cost of living cry is carrots. Johnson had his Boswell. Whom will the carrot have?

The Black Maria.

The repulsive looking, hearselike van used for the conveyance of prisoners is universally known as the "black Maria." The term originated in America. When that country was filling with immigrants from England a negress named Maria Lee kept a sailors' boarding house in Boston. She was a woman of amazonian strength and, according to the author of "More Anecdotes of Bench and Bar," helped the authorities to keep the peace. Frequently the constables invoked her aid, and the saying, "Send for black Maria," came to mean "Take him to prison." The sailors returning to England frequently used the phrase, and so in the course of time the name of black Maria Lee, shortened and altered to black Maria, became the name of the prison van and remains so to this day.—London Globe.

STRATHCONA STORIES

BECKLES WILSON RECALLS EPISODES IN CANADIAN'S LIFE.

The Late High Commissioner for Canada Was Related to the Originals of Two Dickens Characters—First Purchase of a Black Fox Skin Showed Lord Strathcona's Talent as a Trader.

ONE of the best stories in Beckles Wilson's "Life of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal" tells of the death by drowning of one of his boyhood chums at Forres, Scotland. Nine-year-old Donald called on the bereaved family, and "with a gravity far beyond his years, condoled with them, and on leaving begged that they would accept a slight token in memory of his friend. He handed them over all of his pocket money, amounting to a shilling and some odd coppers." "Thus was the child father to the man."

It is interesting to know that Lord Strathcona was related to the Cheerbyle brothers, those delightful old men in Dickens' "Nicholas Nickleby," who were always so considerate of each other, of their employes, and their mother. Lord Strathcona's paternal grandmother was the sister of Mrs. Grant, the mother of the brothers, whom Dickens happened to meet while on a visit to Manchester.

One morning in the early days of the present century an elderly individual, of no very prepossessing appearance, called at the office of the High Commissioner for Canada in London, and asked to see Lord Strathcona. He was told that his Lordship was far too busy to see any but those who had appointments with him.

"Well," was the confident reply, "he'll see me if you tell him my father drove him to Aberdeen when he sailed to Canada."

The message was delivered, and the man admitted. Five minutes later he appeared with a five-pound note in his hand. He repeated his visit three weeks later with a similar result. A month or so later back he came again. The secretary protested to Lord Strathcona that the man had had two five-pound notes already.

"Oh, well," said Lord Strathcona, in his quiet way, "I cannot see him. Give him another five-pound note, and tell him he need not come again. You may add that his father did not drive me to Aberdeen when I went to Canada. As a matter of fact I walked."

Black fox skins were the most valuable pelts in the early days of the Hudson's Bay Company, as they are to-day, and Lord Strathcona's story of his first purchase of a black fox skin is decidedly amusing as well as showing the diplomatic talent he was afterwards to find exercise for in a far greater sphere. He was then quite young, and was stationed at Tadousac post at the mouth of the Saguenay. News one day came to his bourgeois, as the officer in charge of a post was called, that a trapper named Dugas had several fine skins, but that for some fancied grievance had announced his intention of not selling them to the company, but of taking them himself to Quebec. The man, a half-breed, was camping about twenty miles away. Mr. Smith was sent to investigate and buy the furs if he could. He was insultingly received, but he was resolved not to lose his temper. Not a word was said about the furs. He assisted the old squaw, whom he addressed as "Madame" Dugas, to boil the pot, and cut firewood. He helped to skin a rabbit, gave the trapper tobacco, retailed news and anecdotes of mutual friends, sympathizing with Dugas in his grievance against the bourgeois, for whose hasty conduct he apologized. But what was even of more potent effect, was a little book of pictures and a couple of sticks of barley sugar which he had thoughtfully slipped into his pocket for the children. These naturally won the heart of the squaw and her children. Still not a word about furs. He rolled himself up in his blanket when night came, and went to rest. Up at dawn he first collected faggots, and then caught some fish for breakfast. The meal over he announced his intention of going farther on a visit to another trapper, and thanked them for the hospitality which he would long remember. "Perhaps," he added, "you will still be here on my way back. If so, we may meet again — who knows?" He then shouldered his pack and was shaking hands, when Dugas, who had been standing by in a fit of sulky astonishment, cried out, "You no want my furs?"

Whereupon Smith said: "What? Monsieur Dugas, you have furs to sell? Ah, that will make Mr. H. sorry, very sorry to think that he should have lost his temper. What a pity!"

"Tenez," said Dugas, and he brought forth from his lodge a bundle of several very fine skins, one of which he threw over his arm, stroking it lovingly. "That is the best fox I ever trapped. This other is nearly as good. I said I would not sell them to the bourgeois, and I won't. You are a young man, and perhaps you do not know the value. In Quebec I would get thirty pounds; but I do not wish to leave my family and go to Quebec. You may have them, and if your bourgeois says they are not worth thirty pounds you may send them back to me. I will not take the money now. Voila," and he pressed the bundle of skins upon the young trader.

The upshot was that he paid the sum of £23, all the money he had on him, and he and Dugas parted the best friends in the world. Dugas even accompanied him to the camp of the other trapper, and insisted on advancing the funds to pay for the latter's small catch out of what he had himself received, the money to be returned at Mr. Smith's convenience. The furs proved to be worth twice what he had paid.

What Is Uric Acid?

THE CAUSE OF BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL AND SUDDEN DEATH.

Ever since the discovery of uric acid in the blood by Scheele, in 1775, and the bad effect it had upon the body, scientists and physicians have striven to rid the tissues and the blood of this poison. Because of its overabundance in the system it causes backache, pains here and there, rheumatism, gout, gravel, neuralgia and sciatica. It was Dr. Pierce who discovered a new agent, called "Anuric," which will throw out and completely eradicate this uric acid from the system. "Anuric" has proved to be 37 times more potent than lithia, and consequently you need no longer fear muscular or articular rheumatism or gout, or many other diseases which are dependent on an accumulation of uric acid within the body. Send to Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a pamphlet on "Anuric," or send 10 cents for a trial package of "Anuric Tablets."

If you feel that tired, worn-out feeling, backache, neuralgia, or if your sleep is disturbed by too frequent urination, go to your best drug store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. They are put up in 50-cent packages.

Doctor Pierce's reputation is back of this medicine and you know that his "Golden Medical Discovery" for the blood and his "Favorite Prescription" for the ills of women have had a splendid reputation for the past fifty years.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. One tiny Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

Sharks' Eggs.

The eggs of fishes are usually small, soft and inconspicuous. The most remarkable point about them is the extraordinary number laid by the individual. A single cod lays as many as 9,000,000 eggs. Sharks lay eggs which are large in size, few as to numbers and are deposited singly instead of in masses. These eggs consist of a dark colored leathery envelope and are usually adorned with frills, horns or long twisted tendrils. These appendages serve the purpose of keeping the egg case supported among the branches of seaweeds, thus preserving the embryo from the damage it would sustain were the egg carried hither and thither by the waves.

Precept and Example.

"Colonel, that was an admirable speech you made at the club the other evening on the obligations of citizenship. I've been intending to tell you so ever since I heard it. We need more of that kind of talk nowadays. But what are you looking so gloomy about this morning, colonel? No bad news, I hope."

"Dash it all, yes! I've been drawn on a jury!"

Mount Etna.

Etna, the "burning mountain," is the mightiest volcano in Europe. It is 10,800 feet high. If you wished to walk round its base you would have to walk ninety miles. It slopes steadily on all sides up to the highest crater, which is nearly a mile broad.

Current Bushes.

In Porto Rico, where the air is moist and balmy, air plants grow on the telephone and telegraph wires. The insulation rots in places, and there the plants take root and thrive. These plants are called "current bushes" or "electric light plants."

A Little Too Much.

One evening a little boy entered a grocery store and handed the clerk a note which read: "I am a poor woman and have no money. My children and I are starving. Won't you give us something to eat?"

The kind hearted clerk filled a large basket with food and gave it to the boy, who quickly departed.

In a few minutes he again entered the store.

"What's the trouble now?" said the clerk.

"Ma sent me back to get the trading stamps," the lad replied.

CHATER I.

Sir Galahad of The Wagon-Lit

Sir John Vessie, M.P., got into the express train at Homburg, found the compartment which had been reserved for him, and settled himself down comfortably for the journey. He had just completed the cure and was feeling on good terms with himself and the rest of mankind.

Sir John visited Homburg for preventive measures and because the place amused him. He found it a rest after a strenuous London season—spent in the House. And he was philosopher enough to realize that a short absence from home makes the heart grow fonder.

He was still in the prime of life, still rode straight to hounds when he got the chance, entertained with old-fashioned hospitality at his country place in Sussex, and was regarded by his constituents as an ideal country gentleman and the perfect father of a very happy family. He had married young, the only daughter of a wealthy iron founder.

In spite of bad health, Lady Vessie had proved an ideal helpmate. She was neither brilliant nor beautiful, but she possessed all the other virtues of a simple English gentlewoman. Not a breath of scandal had attached itself either to Sir John's or his wife's name.

Once, in a spirit of humor, Sir John Vessie had remarked that he feared he was woefully old-fashioned and would soon find himself put on the shelf, for nobody in society who was anybody had altogether escaped.

The train had not proceeded far on its journey when Sir John became conscious of an altercation taking place in the corridor just outside his compartment. Having all the Englishman's natural reserve and a rooted objection to mixing himself up in other people's affairs, he would have paid no attention to the heated and apparently one-sided conversation that was being carried on had he not noticed that one of the voices belonged to a woman, obviously an English woman whose knowledge of German was of the slightest.

Unconsciously he listened. It was a remarkable voice—remarkable for its beauty and delicacy even while it was raised fiercely in denunciation of the German State Railway, the German government, and its officials.

Sir John laid down his newspaper and smiled indulgently. How much better these things were managed in England! He raised the blind of the window loking into the corridor. If a countrywoman of his was in distress it was obviously his duty to help her. And he was sure the possessor of such a voice must be well bred and interesting.

As the blind rolled itself up with a noisy jerk the woman turned, looked into his compartment, and waved her hand with an angry gesture toward it.

The stolid German guard merely shook his head; the compartment was reserved. There was no other place in the train except the one he had found for madame. Madame should have applied earlier. If ladies chose to travel alone—

Acting on a sudden impulse, of which he was carcely conscious at the moment, Sir John rose and, opening the door of his compartment, asked if he could be of any service.

The woman looked at him with flashing eyes which almost instantly softened; the frown that had furrowed the white brows disapeared, and the full, red lips parted in a smile.

It is too kind," she replied quietly, recovering her temper instantly. "Foolishly I failed to reserve a wagonlit for myself. In fact, I only made up my mind to return by this train last night. I find the train is full. I am placed in an ordinary first-class compartment with four fat Germans, a smoking compartment; and their tobacco—ugh!"

She held a dainty lace handkerchief to her nose and made such quaint grimaces that Sir John found himself laughing.

"I am expected to pass the night with four fat Germans," she continued. "I know they'll unfasten their collars and take off their boots. I refuse—I flatly refuse.

Tears gushed into the large, blue eyes. Sir John looked at her and stroked his chin thoughtfully. The German official was quite right. The woman had no business to be traveling alone—a woman so young and so beautiful.

He remembered seeing her once at the Casino, and he had mistaken her for a Frenchwoman. He told himself that he ought to have known, if only by her coloring and her figure, that she was English. Her hair was a rich, reddish brown, gleaming in certain lights like burnished copper; level, brown eyebrows; her face was oval. She was not merely pretty; she possessed, too, much character. Those blue eyes, now filled with tears, expressed determination.

A woman who probabry was not unaccustomed to looking after herself But the German was right; she had no business to be alone To be quite certain, Sir John questioned her on the subject again.

"Not a soul I know on the train! My friends left Homburg a few days ago. Of course, I ought to have gone with them, but——" She shrugged her shoulders deprecatingly.

Sir John almost wished he had not interferred. If the woman had been neither young nor beautiful he could have grappled with the problem more easily. He felt shy and embarassed.

"I really do not know what to suggest. I'm extremely sorry for you. I can quite understand your feelings. Perhaps if I were to speak to the gentlemen in your compartment—"

"Gentlemen!"

Sir John turned to the guard, and a rapid conversation ensued in German which the woman failed to follow. She stood staring out of the window. In her right hand she firmly held a crocodile-leather dressing-case.

Presently Sir John turned to her with a courtly bow. "If you will sit down in my compartment I'll see what can be done."

Sir John wondered where he had heard it before. It had a familiar ring. Closing the door of the compartment, he disappeared down the corridor with the guard.

Myra Berrington folded her hands on her lap and gazed around the compartment. She carefully noted each article of Sir John's luggage, his traveling coat, the books and literature with which he had provided himself for the journey. Then, taking down her dressing-case, she opened it and, finding a mirror, she looked at her reflection.

She smoothed her face with a powder-puff took off the glove from the right hand, then, closing the dressing-case, she picked up an illustrated paper, and waited.

Miss Berrington smiled at him sweetly and rose from the seat. "It's really too kind of you to have troubled, Sir John. I must make up my mind to pass the next eighteen hours walking up and down the corridor. The scenery in places is very beautiful—and the nights are warm now. Thank you so much."

She was moving out of the compartment, but Vessie stopped her. The idea was preposterous—yet the only alternative would be to give up his wagon-lit and join the four Germans.

He knew Miss Berrington was probably right in her assertion that they would loosen their collars and take He had always insisted on traveling off their boots when night came. Sir John had never known a discomfort. in solitude. He could not do without fresh air and at least eight hours sleep. Nothing, neither work nor women nor worry, ever succeeded in depriving him of the latter.

"Please sit down," he said. And he seated himself opposite her. "Now let us talk this over quiettly and see what can be done."

Miss Berrington clasped her hands together nervously. Very beautiful hands, judging from the ungloved one—long, narrow, white, with nails of perfect color. Her feet were long and narrow, too. French shoes and silk stockings, both the color of her dress.

"You mustn't give me another thought, Sir John. It's entirely my own fault. I ought to have known this would happen. But as a matter of fact—"

She broke off awkwardly and lowered her eyes. There were still tears in them. Vessie was afraid lest they overflow.

She did not suggest a hysterical woman. She was far too refined and too much of the typical Englishwoman to suggest the adventuress. Vessie again found himself wondering why her name was familiar.

He tried to concentrate his mind on the position. It might have been awkward had it not come about so naturally. It was certainly piquant. He had lived a quiet, sober, matter-of-fact sort of life. Nothing quite so exciting as this had ever happened to him. It was peculiar. All the more peculiar because he knew in his heart he was enjoying it.

"No, there's nothing to worry about," he said after a moment's silence. "I'll—I'll see that you're made comfortable. I'm old enough to be your father, so I'm old enough to look after you."

She looked up and gave him a grateful smile. "You really mustn't worry about me. I deserve to suffer. Do you know—"

"Yes—tell me," Vessie said encouragingly.

"Oh, but it's so silly! I deserve to suffer. You ought to know, because when you do know you'll no longer sympathize with me. I feel I'm accepting your protection under false pretenses."

Sir John did not laugh. He was relieved at her frankness and his curiosity was aroused. "What dreadful crime have you committed at Homburg? Are you running away?"

"Yes!"

She nodded her head two or three times vigorously. Sir John found himself wishing she would take her hat off. He had never seen such wonderful hair. He wanted to see more of it.

I went to Homburg partly for my health, partly to rest before starting my London season. I've taken the Empress Theatre, you know. I'm producing a new play there in October."

"Ah, yes. Exactly."

Sir John knew now why the name had a familiar ring. He found himself wishing she was not an actress. She hardly looked like one—certainly not like the actresses whose photographs he saw in the weekly newspapers.

"It's a great undertaking," Miss Berrington continued. "My first venture at management."

"That's very interesting. You have a good play, I hope?"

"A wonderful play," she cried enthusiastically. "I believe in it so thoroughly that I'm not only risking my reputation—that nothing—"

Sir John bowed gallantly. "You must allow me to contradict you."

"But all the money I've made as an actress." There was a moment of hesitation, and again she lowered her head. "And would you believe it," she went on, "I'm such a stupid, light-brained little idiot that I've actually been gambling at the Casino at Homburg, and lost. I lost so much that I made up my mind if I stopped a day longer I shouldn't have a penny left with which to produce my play. That's why I'm on this stupid old train. Now, having made my confession, I'll leave you."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," Sir John said deliberately.

"Really!"

Miss Berrington looked at him with an amused smile. She had risen to her feet, and was standing with her hand on the bar of the sliding door. For a moment Vessie had a suspicion that she was laughing at him.

"Now sit down again," he said after a moment's hesitation. "You haven't told me everything."

"Oh, yes, I have. I'm running away from temptation. Rather late, I confess. But he who fights and runs —you know the rest." She sank back in her seat. "The worst of it is I'm not expected back for another week. My servants are away on a holiday, my flat is shut up, so I'll have to wire for rooms at a hotel—" She gave him a quick glance. "You will think me perfectly mad."

"My life is lived among the exceptionally sane," Vessie replied. "Now, Miss Berrington, listen to me. You can't possibly wander about in the corridor all night; it's impossible for you to share a compartment with four fat Germans."

Miss Berrington laughed. "Oh, it isn't the first time I've roughed it in my life. I admit that just now, when I found there was nowhere for me to sleep, I lost my temper. But I realize I must suffer for my sins. Anyway, there's no alternative."

Sir John drew himself up with the air of a man who had made up his mind after a prolonged struggle; the expression on the well-bred, clean-shaven face was serious.

Myra Berrington, watching him between her half-closed lids, felt a little nervous. She wondered what was coming. But when she heard his judgment she blushed and raised a pair of astonished blue eyes.

"We must share this compartment!"

Vessie spoke with great deliberation as if trying to convince himself he was not making an astonishing suggestion. He hesitated a moment as he saw Miss Berrington's eyes looking straight into his own, and he coughed nervously, while the color also mounted to his cheeks.

"By day it will be mine; during the night it will be yours. No, my dear young lady, it's not the least use arguing—I have made up my mind. I can get all the rest I want, say, from luncheon till dinner-time. After dinner the attendant will make up the bed, and you'll sleep. I shall occupy your place in the smoking compartment with the Germans. Now let me put your dressing-case on the rack—so. You will be more comfortable if I put this cushion at your back."

Myra Berrington tried to stop him. She threatened to leave the compartment at once if he persisted in his scheme. But Sir John had made up his mind. There had lain buried in his heart all his life the instincts of Don Quixote. For the first time he had come across a woman who roused them to activity. He told himself he was merely doing his duty.

It was impossible that a young and beautiful girl should be allowed to travel alone and unprotected. It was his duty as an English gentleman to protect her.

He told her all this as the train swung and swayed past rivers and mountains, and through miles of beautiful forests. The fact that she was willing to accept the slight sacrifice he was making assured him he was doing right.

When she complained of a headache he insisted on her taking her hat off, sent a car-attendant for a bottle of eau de Cologne, and moistening her handkerchief bathed her forehead himself. He did these things gently and sincerely, almost as if he had been looking after a child.

A man passing along the corridor outside stopped to stare through the window. Glancing up, Sir John saw him watching them with a cynical smile on his lips. A middle-aged man, slightly bald, with a black moustache. Vessie glared, then drew down the blind.

"The sun is getting rather strong," he said in explanation to Miss Berrington.

She smiled. "I shall never forgive myself for all the trouble I've given you."

During luncheon, which they naturally took together in the dining-car, Vessie found himself talking to her as if he had known her all his life. All his national and natural reserve deserted him. He behaved like a youth of twenty instead of a man of forty-five. Once he found himself wishing he could knock fifteen years off his age. He told his companion so.

"I was ambitious once, just as you are," he continued. "The world was mine to conquer. Now—" He shrugged his shoulders and shook his head sadly.

"You have conquered it," she whispered.

"Merely a financial victory," he sighed. 'After all, what can money buy? A couple of motor-cars, a race-horse or two—which run for the benefit of the trainer, the jockey, and their friends. Servants who look upon their master as their natural prey. A name and a position which one has to keep up for the benefit of every one except himself."

Myra Berrington shivered. "You almost frighten me. You have everything I'm striving to attain, and you are not happy. Perhaps it's a pity I didn't remain in Homburg and lose all I possess."

"Even then I would willingly have exchanged places with you," Vessie whispered.

"I wonder if you really mean that," she said, leaning across the table.

Sir John did not reply. He was paying for the luncheon and giving instructions to the steward about dinner. When he had finished Miss Berrington rose.

"Now I'm going to send you to bed," she laughed. "You mustn't attempt to get up until you're called."

They made their way back to Vessie's compartment.

"You won't hide, will you?" he said to her. "I've ordered dinner for you at half past six. At seven o'clock I shall get up; the compartment will be ready for you an hour later. You can take afternoon tea in the restaurant car and read a book until dinner-time."

CANADIAN WOMAN ADOPTS SERB BOY

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(Special.)—Passengers on the Espagne of the French Line, arriving to-day from Bordeaux, were greatly interested in Konseantine Prolich, a thirteen-year-old hero of the war in Serbia. The boy's father was killed in a battle of the Bulgar-Serbia war a few years ago, and, nursing a revengeful spirit, Konseantine enlisted when the recent German drive began. He was captured unwounded by the German troops.

The Germans turned him over to Dr. Harriet Cockburn, a Canadian woman serving in the Serbia Red Cross, on her promise to take him out of Europe. She means to adopt him. The youngster was dressed in remnants of khaki uniform and wore hobnailed shoes he said he had taken from a German soldier he killed.

Passengers on the Espagne stated that the French Government, to protect its vessels had placed aboard all its ships expert engineers to watch day and night, while in port, for any attempt that might be made to cripple the engines.

a new rule

The housewives of America are feeling already the pinch of the European war in the much-shortened supply, always less than the demand, of house servants, says a writer in an American paper. For years the wail has been going up from homes all over the country, north, east, south and west, city, village, and farm, palatial mansion and modest apartment. "Give us someone to do our work.' Every year there have been fewer and fewer willing to do that work, and their wages have mounted higher and higher as the despair of the housewives increased. And now the sudden drop in immigration has almost entirely shut off the supply of young women from Europe who formerly did something to mitigate the trouble. It is said that 50,000 girls could find situations at once, and probably, if they could be distributed ,over the country, 100,000 is nearer the figure that would find warm welcome.

But possibly, as in some other matters, the situation has reached the point where the necessities of the case will generate its solution. We are discovering, for instance, that we can make our own dyes, now that we can no longer lazily import them from Germany, and a new and flourishing industry is springing up, scientific investigation is being stimulated, and we are being taught the wholesome and much-needed lesson that it is better to do things ourselves than to depend helplessly upon others.

So, now, perhaps, out of the acute house servant situation, just because something must be done, will be evolved new methods in home management that will bring it in line with the modern developments of home economic science. The antiquated methods of our grandmothers which still rule in the vast majority of American homes, are as outworn and absurd, in the midst of present day knowledge, ideas, and developments, as would be the spinning-wheel and the loom in the modern home or the horse car in crowded city streets. These antiquated methods ignore the large and important additions that have been made to our knowledge of food values, that, indeed, have made of human feeding and applied science of high consequence. They ignore also most of the developments in the science of childrearing.

Humanity is prone to make its way along the line of least resistance, and so long as the supply of untrianed or poorly-trained house servants made it possible to carry on the housheld in its antiquated, ramshackle likeness to feudal times, its methods could be changed only slowly and with difficulty, just as we bought our dyes rather than make them ourselves, so long as that course was the easier. But now that household management has struck a snag of the toughest sort, perhaps it will find a new channel for its progress.

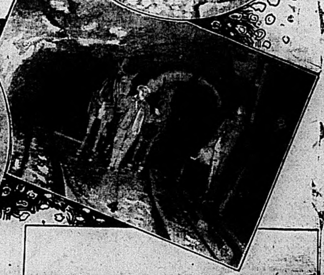
ROGER'S PASS TUNNEL



(1) Party entering tunnel.
(2) From west looking east at final connection.
(3) From left to right: Mr. James, in charge of works; Mr. Dennis, manager for contractors; Mr. J. G. Sullivan, Chief Engineer, Western Lines, C. P. R.
(4) Entrance to tunnel.
(5) Rogers Pass.

NO phase of engineering skill makes a more powerful appeal to the popular imagination than the ability to drive a tunnel from both ends through miles of solid rock and have the two bores meet exactly, as was done in the great Canadian Pacific Railway tunnel at Roger's Pass on December 19th. This shaft of 26,400 feet (five miles) was carried from both ends through the heart of Mount Macdonald and met with such exactness that the layman passing through would not be able to detect the point of union.

Huddled in a little working recess, six thousand feet under ground, twenty-five hundred feet from the remaining wedge of rock which divided the two shafts, a group of railway men and engineers awaited the final shots which should connect the two and mark the completion of this stage in the construction of the tunnel. The success or temporary failure of a work which had been carried on at enormous expense for nearly two years and a half depended on the revelation which would be made when the electric button was touched that fired the charge, but there was no speculation on the part of the engineers. They knew their positions with mathematical certainty, and when at exactly eleven-thirty the detonation of the explosion came roaring down the tunnel, and in a few minutes the powder smoke had cleared enough to permit inspection, and the two cuttings were found to fit as one dime might cover another, there was no outward expression of relief, whatever may have been the inward satisfaction of those in charge of the work.

Not only has this stage of the construction work been successfully reached, but it has been accomplished in a period perhaps unprecedented in tunnel building of this magnitude. It was in July, 1913, that the contract for the mammoth work was let by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Construction on the east end of the pioneer tunnel began in September of the same year, and on the west end in May, 1914. Nineteen months from the latter date the main headings met in the centre of the mountain.

This speed record has been made possible largely by the methods of construction adopted. Instead of attempting to cut the main tunnel through the mountain from both ends, small pioneer tunnels, a little to the side of the location of the tunnel proper, were first constructed. These pioneer tunnels were only large enough for the movement of mule cars, but, by means of shafts cut from their sides, they made it possible to carry on excavation in the main tunnel at numerous places at once, instead of being confined to operations from the end. As they approached the centre of the mountain the pioneer tunnels were deflected into the route of the main tunnel, their purpose having been accomplished.

The first bore of the main tunnel was a shaft of about eight by twelve feet. As this was completed it permitted the laying of rails for mule trains, the introduction of compressed air pipes for ventilation, and the installation of machinery (all operated by compressed air), telephonic communication, and drainage facilities. With this equipment it was possible to proceed with the enlargement of the shaft to its completed size—29 feet wide by 21 feet in height. Some three miles of the tunnel have now been completed to this full enlargement, and the work is proceeding at a rate of one-quarter mile per month, which promises completion of the whole tunnel early in the fall of 1916. Construction has also been hastened by the fact that no serious difficulty was encountered with bad rock formations or excessive water.

Where the rock formation is hard and solid it will remain as the permanent wall of the tunnel, as it cannot be improved upon by any artificial construction. Where it is soft, with a tendency to crumble or slide, it is immediately framed up with an arch of stout timbers. A permanent concrete arch is then built on the inside of the timber work, which is not removed.

A feature of importance in the ventilating system, which will ensure rapid changes of air throughout the entire tunnel.

The construction of this tunnel will only reduce the length of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway 4.3 miles, but it will eliminate 4½ miles of snowsheds and reduce the track elevation 552 feet. It has a maximum grade of only 95/100 per cent, and eliminates 2,400 degrees of curvature which is an important consideration in railway operation and maintenance. And being a double-track tunnel it will form another link in the double-track system of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the mountain region of Western Canada.

The result of the recount was that Mr. Naylor was sustained in his seat by a majority of 3 votes, he having received 183 to Mr. Dryden's 180. Mr. Wm. Carnew, of Belleville, represented Mr. Naylor and Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee, for Mr. Dryden.

A CLEVER ADDRESS

In connection with the Star Course of the Y.M.C.A. last evening, Dr. Arthur W. Evans, who is characterized as the Welsh orator, gave one of his imitable adddresses. The speaker is a relative of Lloyd George, but of late had made his home in the United States. There was a small attendance at the lecture, but those who attended were amply repaid for doing so. The speaker in the course of his remarks referred to the war and prophesied that there would be but one result, namely a win for the Allies.

BELLEVILLE DEFEAT QUEENS AT HOME

Won Handily in Kingston by Score of 7 to 3—Every Player At His Best

That Belleville has an intermediate hockey team of which all lovers of this sport are proud of, there is not the slightest doubt. There is also no doubt but that our boys will win this group and will be well up in the running if they are not successful in landing the coveted championship. The team have played five games thus far, this season, and of this number have secured four victories, their only defeat being at Picton.

Last night the team accompanied by a number of loyal supporters went by special train over the C. N. R. to Kingston for the purpose of crossing sticks with the Queen's team of that city. It was confidnetly expected that the game would be a battle royal, and whilst Bellevillians felt assured that there team would win, it was not expected that the victory would be of such a decisive nature as it proved to be. There was not a largs attendance at the rink, and judging from the demonstration of approval when the Belleville boys scored a goal, the latter had as many admirers present as did the opposing team.

Mr. Lou Marsh, of Toronto, who is recognized as a capable referee in all lines of sports, was master of the situation, and from an unbiased standpoint, certainly filled that position in a most satisfactory and impartial manner.

At about 8.30 the game commenced, and for a few minutes' play was exciting. It was not long, however, before one of the Belleville players placed a well directed shot in the nets much to the delight of the Belleville rooters. When the first period was ended, the score was 4 to 0 in favor of Belleville, and it was then evident, barring accident, that our boys would again have a win placed to their credit.

The second period proved to be the best period of the match in that it was more stubbornly contested by the players of both teams. The result was that both Belleville and Queen's secured one goal, thus making the score 5 to 1 in favor of Belleville.

The third perioa was an excellent period. Queen's players made a determined effort to reduce the lead of their opponents, but were unable to do so, as they were at every point of play met by foemen worthy of their steel. In this period 4 goals were scored, each teams securing 2. The result of the match was that Belleville won by a score of 7 to 3.

It would be insidious to particularize the play of any individual member of the winning team, as each did his part and all it was possible to do to secure the desired end. It can be said truthfully of all the players that they are the right persons in the right place and they know how well to play their respective positions.

The line up of the teams were as follows:

NOTES

The Belleville contingent did not arrive home until an early hour this morning, tired, but naturally elated over the result of the game.

HOCKEY RECORD

GAME POSTPONED

The junior hockey match between Belleville and Lindsay that was to have been played here to-night, has been postponed because of the condition of the ice. The game will be played here one week later, on Friday, January 28th.

The Peterboro' Electrics have defaulted both of their games with Belleville, so if the local boys win here they will be tied for the district. Hard ice will be a great help to the Belleville team as they are light and depend on their speed to win.

BIG REVENUE GAIN JUSTIFIES HIGH TARIFF

Scott, of Waterloo, Ably Defends Government Measures—Debate on Address will Occupy Some Days Yet

HON. MR. PUGSLEY MAKES A RETRACTION

Hepburn, Conservative Member for Prince Edward Clearly Disproves Charge Tnat He Acted as Middleman

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 21—The debate on the address will occupy the greater part of the coming week. At today's sitting speeches were delivered by Hon. Chas. Murphy, F. S. Scott, South Waterloo, and Mr. Onesiphore Turgeon, Gloucester, N.B. Mr. Murphy revamped some more or less familiar charges in connection with the shell committee and protested that the middleman was still active in the militia department, even in the purchase of boots.

Mr. Scott delivered an excellent speech which was well received by the House and added to the reputation which he acquired by his speech in the budget debate at the last session of parliament. It was observed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier remained in his seat and followed Mr. Scott's address with close attention until the house rose for dinner at six o'clock.

Mr. Turgeon developed a line of argument which more than once he has insisted upon, in parliament, namely, that minorities could best be served in keeping intact the constitution of the country. He therefore deprecated the amendment of the B. N. A. Act extending the life of parliament, which has been pracitcally agreed to.

Hepburn's Denial

Mr. Hepburn, the Conservative member of Prince Edward County, rising to a question of privilege, replied briefly to Dr. Pugsley's insinuation that he has obtained a contract for the manufacture of shells as a "go between" or "middleman."

"I have long been engaged," he said, "in the steamboat business, together with other members of my family, in connection with that business we operate machine shops and a foundry at Picton. I applied for a contract to the shell committee for our firm, and no doubt we obtained it the more readily because General Bertram knew that we were a reliable firm, able to carry out our contracts.

Not a Middleman

"I appears, however, that our plant at Picton was not equipped for manufacture of shells and our firm therefore established shops in Montreal. The suggestion that I acted as a middle man or go between has no foundation in truth and I demand that the honorable member for St. John, N.B. (Mr. Pugsley) withdraw what he said on that subject. I do not understand that any member of this parliament violates any rule or custom by being a director of a company which contracts with the imperial government. Indeed, I think that the majority of the members of both parties in both houses of parliament are in the same box as I am in that matter.

Mr. Pugsley: "And so are some members of the government. I entirely withdraw the statement that the honorable member for Prince Edward County acted as a go-between or middleman." (Applause).

Minister Justified

Mr. Scott said the event had justified everything Sir Thomas White had said in defence of last year's budget.

The finance minister had declared that the new taxes would increase our revenue by $30,000,000. It would be found at the end of the fiscal year that the increase was nearer $50,000,000. (Applause).

Scott's Charge

Mr. Scott, amid considerable laughter and applause, read an open letter from A. E. D. Morgan, to Hon. Wm. Pugsley. Mr. Morgan, who was the Conservative candidate in Richelieu in 1911, was subjected to a violent attack by Mr. Pugsley in his speech last Tuesday night as a go-between or middleman. Mr. Morgan's letter showed how baseless were the charges preferred against him and contained some amusing hints at the expense of the former minister of public works.

ARMAND LAVERGNE IS VERY CURIOUS

Puts Nine Questions Before the Quebec Legislature

QUEBEC, Jan. 21.—Mr. Armand Lavergne, Nationalist member for Montmagny, is making a personal probe to find out how much the Quebec Government has done to assist the cause of the Allies in the present war. On to-day order of the Legislative Assembly there are no less than ten motions of his, and the majority have some connection with the war. Here are the motions: (1), How much has the war cost the Province of Quebec up to date? He asks for a detailed statement. (2), Copies of all correspondence and all documents and ministerial resolutions between the Quebec Government and the Federal Government relative to the participation of Canada in the present war. (3), Copies of ministerial resolutions, documents, etc., concerning the Canadian patriotic fund. (4), A detailed statement of all subscriptions put into the hands of the provincial treasurer for the purpose of the war and for patriotic purposes. (5), Demand for copies of all correspondence between the purpose of the war and for patriotic purposes. (5), Demand for copies of all correspondence between the Government of Quebec and the Ontario Government relative to the school situation of the French-Canadian minority in Ontario. (6), Copies of correspondence, etc., relatives to the immigration of Belgians to Canada. (7) Copies of all ministerial resolutions, correspondence, etc., concerning the increased cost of living since 5th August, 1914. (8), Copies of all documents concerning the establishment of a national road from Levis to Riviere Du Loup. (9), Copies of all correspondence exchanged between the Government of Quebec and the anti-alcoholic and temperance leagues.

Huns Nearly Get Away Second Time

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 21.—Seven of the German prisoners who escaped from Amherst internment camp are now in custody, four have been allowed admission to the United States, and one, Wagner, now regarded as the ringleader, is still at large.

Four of the men are now in jail here under double guards, having been brought from St. Stephen last night. These are Fred Schultz, Aug. Meyer, Hans Dollmaier and Karl Wickerman. They were kept in jail in St. Stephen, but almost succeeded in escaping again.

When a sergeant visited their cell shortly before time for the train to leave yesterday afternoon, he found that they had almost succeeded in prying open a window and Schultz said to him: "A few minutes more, damn you, and we would have been over the border into Maine."

Bearded Editor In His Den

TOLEDO, Ohia, January 21.—Captain Cornwallis-West, husband of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the English actress, who is touring the provinces in "Pygmalion," is annoyed at American newspapers, especially those in the rural districts. Captain Cornwallis-West, who has served with honor in the King's army, was rudely escorted from an editor's' sanctum at Lima today. His escort was a blue-coated "bobby," who had been summoned by he irate moulder of public opinion in that section.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell's husband took offence at a story printed in a Lima paper, in which reference to Captain Cornwallis-West's previous matrimonial venture had been made. He asked for a retraction. "Your King and your Country need you right now!" shouted the editor, as he beckoned to a passing policeman.

Plain Talk to U.S. Opponents Of Blockade

Defender of Wilson's Policy, Senator Williams, Staunchly Exposes Allies' Cause

WARNS AGAINST BULLYING

Tells Upper Chamber Entente Would Not Sit Like Whipped Curs Before Country That Has Nothing to Bully With

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Laying aside the Mexican question, the Senate today devoted several hours to the European policies of the Administration with the warmth and bitterness that have characterized all the Senate's recent discussions of foreign affairs. The debate began with the second instalment of Hoke Smith's, of Georgia, attack on the British blockade, with the suggestion that he favored a sweeping embargo against Great Britain to bring her to terms. But the feature of the day was the defence of the President's moderate policy toward Great Britain by John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, a prominent Democrat of the committee on foreign relations.

Mr. Williams, in his reference to the President's policies, did not remain altogether on the defensive. He attacked the Republican and Democratic critics of the President sharply, and the Republicans, at least, made no reply. Mr. Williams went further than the President has yet gone in explaining the slow progress of negotiations over the British blockade. Mr. Williams said that the Allies, if the United States opposed a blockade would not sit down "like cowardly curs and obey the ukase of a Congress backed by only 90,000 soldiers."

Life and Death Struggle

He added that the Allies were in a life and death struggle and he made his own position clear that he did not think the United States, over a mere matter of trade, should obstruct the side that was battling for the freedom of the world and which he, at least, plainly wanted to win.

The Republicans, said Mr. Williams, were bringing in resolutions trying to "nag" the President into war with Mexico, but not with Germany, though the Mexican outrages were committed by bandits, while the German outrages were the outcome of the fixed and declared policy of the German Government. The distinction in Republican minds, he said, was that they thought Mexico was little enough to be kicked, while Germany was not. He did not blame their mildness toward Germany, he said, because Germany, too, was in the death grapple and allowances should be made for them.

One of the developments of the debate was Mr. Hitchcock's statement that he had heard the confidential instructions issued to the British censors who ransacked the seized American mails. These instructions, he said, directed that business letters should be taken to a central office and copied and distributed to British business men so they could steal American trade.

Mr. Williams replied that he did not believe Great Britain was little enough or unoccupied enough for such tactics, but, in any case, he would not fight over a detail of trade. He would register a protest and settle the whole matter calmly after the war He would only shed blood for blood spilt, he said. Mr. Williams said there never was a war between two great powers where the rights of neutrals were strictly protected.

Hun Outrages Upon the Sea

"It was the Federal Navy that whipped the South," he said, "by first starving the civilian population and the army afterwards. But war is war and not a system of caressing. There was a time when Sherman was regarded as a barbarian for having burned Atlanta, and Admiral Semmes was looked upon as a pirate, but what they did was absolutely angelic in comparison with what had lately been done in the European wars. Whoever thought at that time that any assassin of the sea had a right without warning to shoot and sink men, women and children upon unarmed merchant ships?

"If the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Smith) could have his way, and the measures which he advocates were enacted, they would result in nonintercourse with the Allies unless the Allies are going to stand still like a lot of whipped curs while they are engaged in a war for life and liberty, and obey the ukase of Congress with 90,000 men in the army behind it

RUSS SHUT GATES ON GERMAN GOODS.

(Canadian Press Special)
London, Jan. 21.—Upon the reassembling of the Russian Duma, says a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, the Minister of Finance proposes to introduce a surtax equivalent to five times the amount of the customs duty on goods of hostile belligerents, especially German, with a view to preventing their entry into Russia.

Part of Soldier's Pay Held Back

Discipline and Men's Interests will Be Served, Says Militia Department

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—It has been found necessary in the interests of discipline and of the men themselves to withhold a portion of the pay of the troops on overseas service until their return to Canada. This statement was issued by the militia department today.

From the beginning of the year, therefore, 50 per cent. of the pay of the rank and file is withheld from those who have not made any assignment of pay.

As regards those who have assigned less than 50 per cent. of their pay, the difference only between the portion assigned and 50 per cent. of their pay is being withheld.

The pay so withheld will be paid to the men in Canada at the termination of their engagement, but the cases of men invalided home, the overseas paymaster in London is authorized to issue it before the soldiers sails, if the latter so desires.

PASSENGERS CRAWLED ASHORE FROM BOAT

River Steamer was Caught in Ice Shoves and Could Not be Released

QUEBEC, Jan. 20.—The river steamer Pilot, formerly on the ferry service between Quebec and Levis, is fast aground since early Wednesday night on the shoals of Red Island, at the entrance of the Saguenay River. She was on her way from Tadousac to Fraserville with mails and passengers when she was caught in the ice shoves The crew and passengers, in a blinding snowstorm, managed to creep ashore where they were rescued by men from the light house, who, contrary to custom, winter there this year.

The steamers Chaplain and Mahone have made unsuccessful attempts to reach the vessel, but so far have been unable to reach her. The pilot is reported lost.

Ships Destroyed During December

(Canadian Press Special)
BERLIN, Jan. 22.—The Overseas News Agency says competent German authorities state that during the month of December twenty-four ships, among which were one British Auxiliary cruiser, and two British transports, with total tonnage of 104,764 were destroyed by Allies fleet of warships.

Reliable reports about the ships destroyed by mines and collisions are still lacking and the real losses will probably total 130,000 tons.

The above despatch reads as if the German authorities were making the claim that the Allies are sinking their own ships.

4 PER CENT. ON DEPOSITS

Ald. Laponite Advocates Legislation at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Ald. Lapointe, who sits in the Commons for St. James division of Montreal, is advocating legislation this session making it permissable for banks to raise interest rates on savings deposits to 4 per cent, and also fixing the rate of interest on deposits in Post Offices and other Government savings banks at 4 per cent. He has placed on the order paper a resolution to that effect. In view of the fact that the Government is now paying 5 per cent. interest on Government loans, Mr. Lapointe believes the Government's savings banks and the banks generally throughout the country should be required, or at least allowed, to pay at least 4 per cent. on the deposits of the people.

Fugitive Spy Will Give in If Protected

Doesn't Want to Fall Into the Hands of Britain

SENDS NOTE TO THE POLICE

Igcatius Lincoln, Former M. P., Would Save His Neck

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Captain William M. Offley, chief of the local bureau of investigation of the department of justice, to-day received a letter from Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, the confessed German spy, who escaped from a United States deputy marshal last Saturday, in which the writer offered to surrender himself at once if guaranteed immunity from prosecution on the forgery charge which caused his arrest last August.

Captain Offley declined to make public Lincoln's letter, adding that the essential part was the conditional offer to surrender.

The forgery charge upon which Lincoln was arrested was preferred by the British consulate here, and he was being held in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, pending his extradition to England to stand trial. Lincoln escaped from Deputy Francis Johnson while they were in a Brooklyn restaurant.

Fears Execution

Lincoln, a Hungarian by birth, but a naturalized Englishman, and a former member of the British Parliament, contended after his arrest that the British authorities did not wish to try him on the forgery charge, but to execute him for his former espionage work in behalf of the German war Intelligence office. In view of this, it is suspected that his offer to surrender is conditional upon a guarantee from the United States government that the recent order for his extradition would be revoked.

The receipt of the letter spurred the various department of justice agents to redouble their efforts to catch Lincoln, who declared, in a letter published in a New York newspaper that he was not in hiding.

FOR PROHIBITION IN WAR TIME ONLY

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Dominion-wide prohibition during war time is advocated in a resolution of which H. P. Stevens, Conservative member for Vancouver, has given notice.

While the resolution is somewhat different from that proposed by the Dominion Alliance, it is calculated to produce practically the same result, except that it does not cover also the suggested period of three years after the war.

Mr. Stevens will move:

"That at this time, when the Empire is at war, the conservation of the wealth and the promotion of efficiency of our nation would be materially aided by the prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, and in the opinion of this House legislation should be enacted forthwith."

Russian Princess Now a Prisoner

(Canadian Press Special)
LONDON, Jan. 22.—In a speech at Petrograd recently, Sir George Buchanan, British Ambassador, referred to a certain lady, whose name is familiar to you all, who made an attempt to persuade Russia that England had already made peace overtures to Germany. This woman is Princess Marie Vassil-Tohiskoff, a member of a noble Russian family. She is said to be the morganatic wife of Prince Liechtendstein, former Austrian Ambassador to Russia. She sent a letter to M. Rodzianko, president of the Duma, offering her services in opening peace negotiations, between the Russian and Central Empires, and the contents of the letter was turned over to the Minister of the Interior. The Princess, apparently impatient of delay, went to St. Petersburg where she was arrested and sent a prisoner to one of her estates in the south of Russia.

CANADIANS CONTROL THE NEUTRAL ZONE

Enemy's Patrols Avoid "No Man's Land"—Snipers are Busy—Patrick Riel of Winnipeg is Killed

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has received the following official communique from the Canadian general representative in France:

Canadian General Headquarters in France, via London, Jan. 2?—During the period of Jan. 7-18 there has been no material change in the general situation in front of the Canadian corps. The weather has shown decided improvement and there have been several days of brilliant sunshine.

The outstanding feature of the period has been our artillery activity. Our guns have maintained their superiority. On the fronts of both the first and second divisions we have successfully bombarded German machine gun emplacements, mine shafts and trenches. Combined shoots have been carried out by our field batteries and heavy artillery against various fortified points in the enemy line.

Scored Direct Hits

An aeroplane ranging for one of our batteries reported that a direct hit on an emplacement of an enemy eight-inch gun caused serious damage. On Jan. 7 our siege batteries registered several direct hits on an enemy mine shaft. Timber and corrugated iron were seen to fly in all directions.

On the same day [illegible] heavy projectiles were dropped into the German fire trench, causing great havoc, and on the 14th instant, our first artillery brigade completely demolished a German machine gun emplacement. On several occasions the enemy has bombarded sections of our front line with trench mortar bombs. Our retaliation has been effective. On the afternoon of the 14th, in front of our second division, we destroyed by trench mortars, fire a hundred yards of overhead cover, which consisted of quarter-inch steel plates and a row of sandbags covered with clay. The enemy had been engaged on this work for some time and had only completed it the previous night. At another point on the same afternoon, a breach of 20 feet was made clean through the enemy parapet, by our mortar shells.

On the 15th a German wiring party of over 50 men was observed and promptly dispersed by our machine gun and rifle fire.

Control "No Man's Land."

Our patrols have been active and have maintained an upper hand in "No Man's Land." On one occasion a German patrol approached our trenches, but was detected and speedily driven off. With this exception the absence of the enemy's patrols has been most marked.

"On Jan. 17 an officer's patrol discovered an enemy listening post, and although heavily fired on, succeeded in driving back the occupants towards their own trenches.

Our snipers in both divisions have done excellent work. At 11 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 15, Lieut. J. H. McLaurin and Sniper Gillies of our 16th Canadian Scottish Battalion, occupied an old German listening post and from there fired at and killed three of the enemy, of whom one was an officer.

Sniper Patrick Riel of our 8th Winnipeg Rifles Battalion was killed by shell fire on Jan. 14. He was one of the best snipers of our second infantry brigade and had been with the 8th Battalion since its formation in August, 1914. He had 29 Germans to his credit. Riel was a relative of the famous rebel, Louis Riel, and came from Port Arthur, Ont.

GERMANY SPEAKS OF PEACE WITH BELGIUM

(Canadian Press Special)
LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Frankfort Zeitung, in discussing the possibility of a separate peace between Germany and Belgium, says that as long as Belgium has not signed the London agreement regarding the making of a separate peace, she is free to do as her interests command. Belgium has untill now been considered as an object of exchange, and sensible Belgians ought to be told not to wait too long or Belgium will be considered as a good prize.

THE DUKE OPENS MONTREAL CAMPAIGN

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—The Duke of Connaught today formally opened the 1916 whirlwind campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the patriotic fund in a week. His Royal Highness delivered an address at the Canadian Club luncheon at the Windsor hotel urging general support to the movement.

The campaign will include tag days, house to house calls and every other known form of raising money in a hurry.

The Duke returns to Ottawa tonight after reviewing a number of military units training here.

(Canadian Press Special)

Obstacles have come up, and a portion of the Montenegrin army has refused to lay down its arms, but negotiations are still in progress.

Owing to the inclement weather and the fact that the roads in this vicinity are at present not in the best condition for travel either by wheels or runner vehicles there was not a large attendance upon the market this morning. Good prices were realized for all articles of produce offered for sale and especially for dressed fowls. The ruling price for butter was from 33c. to 35c. per pound; fresh eggs from 34c. to 35c. per dozen; chickens from $1 to $2.00 per pair, ducks $1.75 and $2.00 per pair and geese $2 each. Potatoes were rather a scarce product and sold at from $1.65 to $1.75 per bag

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal Can.

Another 20 Cent Jump in Flour

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Flour reached its highest altitude yesterday when its price soared to $7.10 a barrel, an increase of 20 cents since the last raise in the latter part of December.

There is every prospect of a still further increase which may affect the price of bread.

Local bakers are still standing by their old prices though any further increase may cause them to reciprocate with an advance in the price of bread.

There has been an increase of 60 cents a barrel in the price of flour within the past six weeks.

That is why once a mother has used them for her little ones she would use nothing else. C.P.R. Asks Men For Grant To Patriotic Fund

Four Day's Pay to Aid Dependents Of Men At the Front

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—The C.P.R. asks employees to give four days' pay to the patriotic fund. The following appeal on behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has been telegraphed today as a "23" message, so as to reach every employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The "23" message has precedence over all others. The officers and employees of the company responded in a very generous manner to an appeal from the President for the contribution of one day's pay towards the Canadian Patriotic Fund, which was inaugurated to care for the wives, children and dependents of men who so nobly volunteered to serve their country. At that time Canada had an army of thirty-three thousand men, while at present there are over two hundred thousand either on the firing line or in training, and this huge force will be increased ere long to five hundred thousand men. With such a gigantic increase in our army the demands on the patriotic fund will be almost overwhelming. It is therefore a most sacred as well as a most patriotic duty of all Canadians to replenish the patriotic fund in order that the dependents of the nation and empire may have the comforts and necessaries of life. While well aware that great numbers of officers and employees of the company have made and are making regular donations to the patriotic fund, the Canadian Pacific does not hesitate to make a further urgent appeal to its officers and employees to once again come to the rescue of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Knowing the generosity and patriotism of the officers and employees, we feel certain they will willingly participate in another specific donation by each contributing one day's pay during the months of February, May, August and November. It is left, however, to each officer and employee to decide conscientiously whether he or she can bear the heavier burden now called for, but the company feels assured that all who can possibly do so will respond to this appeal. Form for subscription will be furnished to employees, and when properly signed the amounts will be deducted on the pay rolls for the months designated.

The Agonies Of Neuralgia

A NERVE TROUBLE, ALWAYS DUE TO WEAK, WATERY BLOOD

Only those who have been attacked with neuralgia can form the faintest idea of what its victims suffer. A tingling of the tender skin, a sharp sudden stab from some angry nerve; then piercing paroxysms of pain that is neuralgia. The cause of the trouble is disordered nerves, due to weak, watery blood The cure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make new, rich, red blood, and thus sooth and strengthen the disordered nerves and cure neuralgia. Mr. Louis Martin, Mildmay, Ont., says:—"I am writing to let you know the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me Two years ago I was a physical wreck. My nerves were all unstrung and I suffered tortures from neuralgia, in the head and throughout the nervous system generally. I was almost unfit for work, and only managed to get along with the greatest difficulty. I doctored for about five months and in this time took over forty dollars worth of medicine without any benefit. More. I was actually growing worse, and finally had to take to my bed. My nerves got so bad that I could not turn over in bed without help and the pain was something awful. As I am a farmer you can easily see that necessary work was being neglected, so I sent for a brother who was in Alberta, to come and take charge of the work. When my brother arrived he at once urged me to try Dr Williams' Pink Pills, telling me of some cures that had come under his observation. I got half a dozen boxes and before they were all gone there was no doubt they were helping me. Altogether I used nine boxes of the Pills and by that time I was a well man, and it is impossible to say how thankful I was for my release from pain."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

$850,000 SUIT LOST BY CANADIAN PACIFIC

DENVER, Jan. 21.—Cable advices were received in Denver from London to-day that McIlwee Brothers, tunnel contractors of this city, had won their suit in the Privy Council against the Canadian Pacific Railroad for $850,000 for work done in constructing the Rogers Pass tunnel through the Selkirk Mountains, in British Columbia. Through Foley Brothers and Welch & Stewart the Canadian Pacific contracted on December 18, 1913, with J. A McIlwee & Sons for the latter to drive a five-mile tunnel through the Selkirks. In addition to the price for the work, the Canadian Pacific, it is stated, agreed to pay McIlwees a bonus of $1,000 for every foot of the tunnel bored each month in excess of 900 feet. By the rapidity of their work the McIlwees in nine months, it is claimed, earned a bonus of $215,000. Then the railroad company, according to the contractors, took the contract away from them. The McIlwees sued for breach of contract, and were awarded $527,000 by the Supreme Court of British Columbia. The railroad then appealed the suit to the Dominion Court of Appeals. That body increased the award to the contractors to $850,000.

About Baby

IV.

THE best indication of proper development is a right increase in weight coupled with increase in muscular strength.

At five months Baby should be able to hold his head erect.

At seven months he will be able to sit up for a while.

When ten months he crawls, pulls himself up or stands by a chair.

Do not encourage a child to walk before he does so of his own accord.

The 'Allenburys' Foods Nos. 1, 2 and 3 provide the right nourishment for Baby step by step, and promote sturdy growth and sound development.

155th Gives Social Dance

A most successful dance was given by the wives of the officers of the 155th Battalion, C.E.F., in Ramsay's last evening in aid of the regiment. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and softly shaded lights and a splendid orchestra under the able leadership of Bandmaster Hinchey helped greatly to make the evening a perfect success.

At nine o'clock the bugle sounded the Reveillé and the guests were received by Mrs. A. P. Allen, wearing a gown of black and silver with red poppies, Mrs. J. V. Doyle in a Spanish dress of black and gold, Mrs. B. L. Hyman in black velvet and duchesse lace, Mrs. H. W. Wrightmyer in old rose crepe de chine, Mrs. H. L. Wallace in blue ninon, and Mrs. Sanford in black tulle with red roses. The ladies were kindly assisted by Misses R. Allen, G. Burton, K. Elliott, M. Vermilyea, A. McGie, M. Waters, M. Hamilton and H. Vermilyea.

Those who danced in the set of honor were as follows:

Lt.-Col. Adams	Mrs. Hyman
Major Allen	Mrs. Doyle
Major Wallbridge	Miss Hamilton
Capt. Williams	Mrs. Allen
Capt. Doyle	Mrs. Wallace
Capt. Hyman	Miss Allen
Capt. Gilroy	Miss McGie
Capt. Wrightmyer	Miss Burton

A great deal of credit is due the ladies of the regiment as a handsome sum was realized for the regiment. At supper time Lieut. Sanford, on behalf of Col. Adams, thanked the ladies, the orchestra, and Mr. Ramsay, who so kindly gave the hall.

Is Life Worth Living?
It Depends Upon the Liver.

Wrong living is the cause of most physical ills and generally stomach and liver are first to suffer.

Tea and coffee drinking is a very common cause of digestive disorder, but it usually takes the user some time to fully realize it. Fact is—some people drink tea or coffee with seeming impunity, but when disturbances of the digestive organs result in headache, biliousness, irritability, and other common symptoms of caffeine poisoning, it's time for the tea or coffee drinker to look to his table beverage for the true cause.

For any tea or coffee drinker who finds that his health is wrong, but doesn't know just why, it's a good idea to quit both the tea and coffee and use

—the pure food-drink

Made of wheat and a small amount of molasses, Postum has a rich, snappy flavour, yet contains no caffeine (the drug in tea and coffee) nor other harmful element.

There are two forms of Postum. The original Postum Cereal must be boiled: Instant Postum is soluble in boiling water and can be made in the cup at table. Both kinds are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

A change from tea or coffee to Postum is a good move toward right living.

This is the 535th day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

GERMANY DEPRESSED.

Reports to the effect that the Germans are slowly starving are constantly being published in the press. They have been appearing since the first months of the war. It is pointed out that the Central Empires are virtually isolated, being shut off from sea communication with the outside world. This blockade undoubtedly has had a most depressing effect on the enemy, but as with all blockades, there has been a leakage, and a big one. It must not be forgotten, either, that the enemy lands produce great crops of foodstuffs, and the Governments have bestirred themselves to see that every available acre is put to use. So there has been food enough so far to go around, although the distibution has had to be controlled by Government regulation. The foe has had to husband his resources to a degree never before attempted by any power. And the situation is becoming more difficult all the time. The perfecting of the blockade should make things well-nigh intolerable in the isolated lands.

Whatever Berlin may say to the contrary, the citizens of Germany are beginning to feel the hand of war heavily upon them. Their manhood wealth is dwindling rapidly. A shortage of human material to keep the wheels of industry moving is becoming more and more apparent. There is no reserve to draw upon, unless other nations are enticed into the game of death on their side. With the decline in men there is a decline in other necessary material. It could not be otherwise with war-making on such a tremendous scale. The question is, how long can the fight be kept up against opponents some of whom have not yet begun to draw upon their reserves.

The New York World has had a representative in Germany for many months in the person of Mr. Gustav C. Roeder, a member of its staff for a quarter of a century. In a recent article Mr. Roeder stated that a great change had come over Berlin of late. Eight months ago one could hardly notice that a war was on. Today it is different. The people have come to realize what the war means. They are no longer the happy-go-lucky care-free crowd. They are stern, severely so. They are no longer a smiling crowd. They are very, very, solemn indeed. They profess to be confident of victory in the field and are determined not to yield; but they have their doubts about whether those at home can avoid collapse. The losses have been terrible, and mourning women can be seen everywhere. All know that hundreds of thousands of lives must be sacrificed before the end is in sight. Industry is upset. Iron money is in circulation, because the nickel is needed for war purposes. Silver and paper are the only other tender in use, there being as low as one mark notes in paper. Gold is never used, and is forbidden to be exported. The Government is hoarding it all. It is a sad state the Germans find themselves in, and Mr. Roeder says many of them fear the nation's nerves will be unable to stand the strain of three more years of war.

The Allies have their worries, but they are mild as compared with Germany's. They have the world to draw on for supplies, besides their own resources. There is neither shortage of food, nor lack of money, nor other materials. Their reserves are enormous. United to the end, they should win the war by making the necessary sacrifices.

MANITOBA'S PROHIBITORY BILL.

The bill to prohibit the retail sale within the province of alcholic beverages which the Norris Government has introduced in the Manitoba Legislature is a revival of an old enactment. Before 1900 there had been a pronounced demand for a law to stop the traffic in intoxicants so far as was in the power of a legislature of a province. The Government of the day, of which Mr. Hugh John Macdonald was the head, prepared a bill which in due time was adopted and became a law of the province. The measure was a strong one. It prohibited the sale or the keeping of liquor for sale by any but druggists licensed under the act. It did not presume to prevent a man from keeping a supply for personal use within his own dwelling, and it had to make provision for the use of alcohol or alcoholic substances in manufactures and for medicinal purposes; but to obtain the goods for such use a procedure akin to that required in connection with the purchase of poisons had to be followed. A penalty was provided against any physician who would give a scription or order for liquor without due reason. Clubs or societies were forbidden to keep intoxicants on their premises. Inspectors were to be appointed to enforce the act, and in order to make convictions easy certain rules of evidence held to be important in the trial of men accused of crime were abrogated. The fact that, in the opinion of the magistrate, on hearing evidence, a sale was about to take place was sufficient for a conviction. The presence of a beer pump on a subject's premises was made evidence sufficient to ensure conviction. The penalties began at $200 and might go up to $1,000, with imprisonment for from three to six months, and neither inspectors, magistrates nor judges had power to remit, suspend or compromise a penalty. The severity was felt to be necessary, probably in view of the fact that in the ordinary state of public opinion infractions would not be held in serious disesteem. The act of 1900 was challenged in the courts, but it was held to be within the power of the legislature of a province. It failed, however, It was submitted by referendum to the judgment of the people in 1902, and was condemned, probably to the satisfaction of some who helped to make it law. The revived measure, now on the way to be put on the statute books, is also to be submitted to the people, possibly with some who are supporting it hoping that again it will meet with failure. Of the result, however, no one outside of the province can speak. There has been evident in Manitoba of late a strong opinion in favor of ending the business of making and selling alcoholic beverages. The sincerity of some prominent in the discussion is open to doubt, but their presence in the ranks of the "drys" is proof that they think the "drys" are a powerful body. Manitoba may be on the verge of inaugurating an experiment of unusual interest.

The rapid-fires may rattle
A regiment to death;
The howitzers in battle
May blow a hell-born breath.
But here at home
By Knicky's dome
One volley hits the ears—
The choo-ahchoo-ahchoochoochoo.

Pooh! for the dumdum volley
Bah! for the bomb's alarms!
Tush! for the Gallypolly
Arbitrament of arms!
They are as mild
As some sweet child
Beside the thing one fears—
The choo-ahchoo-ahchoochoochoo,
Of the Grippy Grenadiers!

There where all men are maddened,
Where trenches take their toll,
Your heart may meet a bad end,
Blown outward with your soul
But as my cough
Blows my head off,
I give, instead of cheers,
The choo-ahchoo-ahchoochoochoo,
Of the Grippy Grenadiers!

O weary-eyed battalions,
Who nasal trumpets blow!
You wear no King's medallions
For fighting with the foe.
Yet hope that dies
Now fills our eyes
With more than Europe's tears,
Hark to the choo-ahchoochoochoo
Of the Grippy Grenadiers!

Author of "The Chorus Girl," etc.

"It was getting dark when five hours later Sir John awoke, and quickly making his toilet, he found his way to the dining-car, where he discovered Miss Berington sipping a cup of coffee and smoking a cigarette. They chatted together for half an hour, then he led her back to the compartment and wished her good night.

"You are not to think of getting up to-morrow morning until you're called. I have given the steward full instructions."

"I feel dreadfully guilty," she said, giving him her hand.

"I feel very happy," he replied, taking it.

As the door closed he again noticed the man he had seen staring through the window that afternoon. He was standing a little ways off in the corner, loking at Vessie with the same cynical smile on his lips.

Taking a newspaper from his pocket, Sir John planted himself with his back to the window, facing the wagon-lit. Having temporarily taken Miss Berington under his protection, he suddenly realized the full weight of his responsibilities.

Though dinner was waiting and he was hungry, he had no intention of moving away until the stranger with the unpleasant smile had taken his departure. It seemed more than likely to Sir John that he was a train-thief—or something worse.

CHAPTER II.

"Thief! Stop Thief"

The express train from Dover was nearing London. Sir John Vessie was nodding in an armchair of the Pullman car. The journey was practically over, and there was regret in his heart.

As a rule he welcomed the lights of London on his return from abroad; but now, as he raised himself and looked with sleepy eyes out of the window, a sigh escaped his lips, followed by a shiver of repulsion.

London, looking gray and desolate, in spite of the fleeting vision he occasionally caught of crowded streets and glaring lights.

In less than ten minutes the train would crawl into Charing Cross Station; he would drive to the Hotel Regent, and the following afternoon he would go down to his place in Gloucester, where his wife and family would be waiting to welcome him.

Again he sighed. Of course he was glad of the prospect of going home. He would find a great deal of work waiting for him on the estate. But it would be just the usual routine.

An interview with the head steward, a walk through the grounds with the head gardener. A long conversation with the head gamekeeper about arrangements to be made for shooting season. A list of guests to be drawn up—men he would have to invite to kill his partridges because later in the year they invited him to kill their pheasants. This was his life.

It was suddenly occurring to Sir John that this life which he had lived for the past fifteen years was really exceedingly monotonous.

He had been doing the same thing with extraordinary regularity, acting almost automatically. Indeed, he did everything that was expected of him. He was popular. He wondered vaguely whether he were loved.

And then he jerked himself into an upright position in his armchair and rubbed his eyes.

Seated at the other end of the Pullman, he saw the same sinister-featured man who had haunted him on the express-train from Homburg—the man with the bald head and black mustache. Vaguely he irritated Sir John. He felt somehow that he was partly responsible for his having lost sight of Miss Myra Berrington.

Everything had gone off quite satisfactorily until they boarded the steamer at Ostend. Then Miss Berrington had gone below to lie down—and he had not seen her since. Of course, she was on the train somewhere but he had searched each Pullman car in vain.

The porter who looked after his luggage had picked up her dressing-case and placed it with his own suit-case beside him in the compartment. He would have to find her to restore her property.

In his heart he was rather glad of the mistake the porter had made. It was a perfecaly natural one, because the dressing-case had accompanied his hand luggage throughout the journey, and when Miss Berrington had gone below on the boat she had forgotten to take it with her.

The train drew into Charing Cross Station and stopped. A porter seized his suit-case and rugs. Vessie gave him his baggage check, and then, taking Miss Berrington's dressing-case in his hand, he walked the length of the train searching for her.

To his consternation, he failed to find her anywhere. When the luggage was ready for examination, he searched the crowd surrounding it. In some mysterious way she had disappeared. She could not have boarded the train at Dover at all. Perhaps, missing her dressing-case, she had stayed behind to look for it.

His luggage was passed by the customs and put on to a taxicab. But still he waited. He lingered about until the platform was practically deserted. Then he drove to the Hotel Regent—where he always put up when his town house was closed.

He had, of course, telegraphed for rooms, and the suite he usually occupied was waiting for him—a large bedroom on the third floor and a small one used for a dressing-room adjoining. He left his heavy baggage in charge of the hall porter, and had his suit-case, rugs, and Miss Berrington's dressing-case sent up to his apartments. He remembered that she had told him she was putting up at a hotel in London.

It was just possible that she, too, patronized the Hotel Regent. He enquired at the bureau, and, after searching, the clerk told him that he had received a telegram from some one called Berrington, engaging a room for that night. But no one of that name had, as yet, arrived.

Vessie felt mightily relieved. The dainty dressing-case, with its unknown contents, had become a grave responsibility. Moreover, the unusual beauty and charm of its owner had haunted him for the past twelve hours.

He was quite conscious now that he had been playing the part of Don Quixote. For the first time in his life ramance had gently thrown her dream-woven garment across his shoulders. He owned frankly to himself that he wanted to see Miss Berrington again, to hear her voice, to take her hand before the cloak fell from his shoulders and he retired to his country estate to take up the threads of his conventional life.

Vessie knew that henceforth life would never be quite the same for him. He felt like a truant schoolboy who had climbed the great stone wall surrounding his playground, and had looked into a wonderful garden—a garden in which boys of his class were forbidden to play.

In case Miss Berrington should arrive, he gave implicit instructions to the clerk.

"Tell her that her dressing-case is safe in my possession. You had better give her the number of my rooms. Say I am exceedingly sorry we missed each other at Dover. I searched for her everywhere."

After a light meal he retired for the night. He found that the porter had placed her dressing-case in the sitting-room, and his own suit-case in the room adjoining it.

He turned the dressing-case over and looked at it almost sentimentally. Her initials were stamped in small gold letters on the face. After a moment's hesitation he left it where it had been placed. Going into the bedroom, he unlocked his suitcase, undressed, and, switching off the lights, went to bed.

He quickly fell into a deep sleep.

It might have been only a handful of minutes, it might have been an hour or two later, when he awoke with a start. Just for a moment he could not recollect where he was. He sat upright, blinking his eyes in the darkness and listening. He fancied he was still on the express-train, that he had overslept himself, and that Miss Berrington was waiting to use the wagon-lit.

Presently he heard sounds of some one moving about stealthily. Automatically he stretched out his hand and fumbled for the electric-light switch, and as he did so he remembered where he was. He slipped out of bed and stood quite still, listening.

Again he heard a stealthy movement and creaking. It seemed to proceed from the other end of the room, from the sitting-room adjoining. In an instant it flashed across his mind that he had left Miss Berrington's dressing-case there! He took a few steps forward on tiptoe, then stopped short. The sitting-room door was ajar. He fancied he saw a light.

Perhaps the porter who had placed the dressing-case there was a hotel thief...... And then suddenly he remembered the sinister-looking man who had haunted him ever since he left Homburg......

Some instinct had warned him that his presence outside the door of the wagon-lit was a menace to Miss Berrington. Vessie remembered, too, that he had seen him cross the vestibule of the hotel just when he was giving instruction to the clerk at the bureau.

Vessie took another step forward, again fumbling with one hand for the electric-light switch. He blamed himself for not noting more carefully its position before turning the lights out. He stumbled over something and nearly fell. At the same moment the light gleaming faintly beneath the door of the other room disappeared.

The thief had done his work and was making off. In a flash Vessie realized the awkwardness of his position if Miss Berrington's dressing-case was stolen while in his possession.

He leaped forward.

For an instant his progress was arrested by a sound like that of a revolver-shot. He reached the door of the adjoining room and flung it open. He could see nothing, but he knew that there was some one in the room. He stumbled forward with outstretched hands, groping like a blind man, yet prepared to come to grips with the unseen person.

He was perfectly certain now that a thief was in the room. And the object of the theft wos Myra Berrington's dressing-case. A sense of his responsibility struck him like a cold wave.

He was somewhere in the middle of the room now, his eyes straining to pierce the darkness. The flapping of the window-blind caused him to turn his head an instant. He remembered leaving the window wide open; perhaps the thief had entered that way.

Suddenly a faint gleam of light pierced the blackness. The door leading to the corridor was slowly opening. Then, against the beam of light, he saw the outline of a tall, dark figure—the gleam of a white hand and in its grasp Myra Berrington's dressing-case.

He hurled himself forward with a hoarse cry: "Thief! Stop, thief!"

Sir John reached the door just in time. It closed noisily as he brought the full weight of his body to bear upon it. At the same instant a shriek echoed through the room. Sir John felt an ice-cold hand at his throat. He seized it and forced it back; then, flinging his arms around the thief, he lifted him right off his feet and flung him onto the ground. The body struck the floor. Sir John waited a moment in case the man should attempt to rise. The figure on the floor lay quite still.

Sir John commenced to grope along the wall beside the door for the electriclight switch. He found it, and the rom became instantly illuminated. Footsteps sounded in the corridor outside. His shout of "Thief!" and the struggle had been overheard.

He bent over the prostrate figure on the ground. He was lying huddled up. It looked shapeless, sexless, sinister. Sir John turned it over, and then he started back with a cry of horror. His eyes protruded; his face became like putty.

He staggered against the door just as some one outside commenced to knock loudly upon it. Quick as lightning he turned the key. He stretched out his hand for the electric-light switch. And the room was plunged in darkness. But even then Sir John covered his face. For it was a woman he had seen lying unconscious at his feet. It was Myra Berrington!

And the knocking outside the door was redoubled. A voice demanded admitance.

We must not let these Belgian Children Starve

Their fathers are with King Albert in the trenches—or dead. Their mothers, destitute and probably homeless, are striving hard but helplessly to save these children on whom Belgium's future depends.

Nearly 2,000,000 old men, women and children in Belgium are absolutely dependent on help from Britain and America. Unless we feed them, hundreds of thousands must starve to death! The has saved them so far. Administered by a wonderfully efficient neutral Commission, it has for more than a year now provided food for nearly all the Seven Million Belgians still in the country. Those who have money pay for it, but there is a steadily growing number who must be fed free.

For this at least $2,500,000 is needed monthly in contributions. Great Britain, burdened as she is, is giving all she can. The United States has responded generously, and her business men are running the Commission as public relief was never handled before. Are we in Canada, prosperous and protected from the horrors of invasion, to enjoy the plenty that has blessed us while our heroic Allies starve?

SCHOOL BOARD IN FINAL SESSION

Business For Past Year Cleaned Up—Matters of More or Less Importance Brought Forward and Desposed Of

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening for the purpose of winding up the business of the past year. It was 8.30 when business was' commenced, owing to the non-arrival of members. During the whole session there was just enough members present to form a quorum. They were as follows:

Messrs. J. Elliott, J. B. Ives, B. Mallory, S. S. Moore, L. C. Pascoe, C. M. Reid, W. C. Reid, J. J. Wims, A. E. Bailey, G. T Woodley and A. McGie.

On motion Mr. Mallory was voted to the chair in the absence of the chairman, Col. Ponton, owing to illness.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A number of communications were read and laid upon the table for consideration.

Mr. S. A. Gardiner, truant and supply officer, wrote that he would return to the city in April—Received and filed.

A request was made for the use of the assembly room of Queen Alexandra school once a week for the bugle band in connection with Cadet Corp of the school.

On motion the request was granted.

Reports

The finance recommended the payment of a number of accounts.

The Board went into committee of the whole on communications, reports, etc. Mr. Woodley in the chair.

The various items in the Finance Committee's report, were adopted without discussion.

Truancy Report

Mr. W. H. Wrightmyer, Agent of the Children's Aid Society, reported that he had looked after 150 complaints the past year, and also investigated 158 cases of truancy. There was no child under 14 years employed during school hours.

Mr. H. J. Clarke, School Inspector, reported that during 1915, there were enrolled 186 pupils which was the largest number ever enrolled and an increase of 51 over 1914. All the available pupils were evidently registered. The average attendance during the year had been good.

A communication from Chairman Ponton re. the necessity of providing addition to the assembly room and more rooms being provided at Grier street school was referred to the next Board meeting.

After Mr. Elliott had spoken on the matter, it was decided to allow the Canadian Club of the city, the use of the Assembly room at the High school once a month, for the holding of meetings.

A request was made by officers of the 155th Bat. for the use during certain hours of the day, of the gymnasium premises in connection with the High school, for class purposes.

Mr. Elliott said a class in connection with the 155th was being formed. They need a building and he moved that the old parish hall building be granted so long as the class does not interfere with the High school Cadet Corp practice.

On motion the request was granted after Mr. Wims had spoken strongly in favor of it.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Mr C. J. Panter addressed the Board in reference to a concern he represented, which made a preparation for cleaning floors, etc. It had been used in several schools in this district and he had testimonials in regards to its merits. Mr. Pascoe said that the preparation was excellent. Mr. C. M. Reid stated the preparation had been used in the Ritchie store, and it was satisfactory.

Mr. Bailey said the preparation had been used in a room in Queen Mary school, and if it was not too expensive he would be favorable to its use in all of the schools.

On motion the matter was referred to the Supply Committee.

On motion School Inspector Clarke was appointed as a member of the Library Board.

Mr. A. E. Thrasher was on motion appointed a member of the Promotion Examination Board.

Retiring Chairman

Mr. C. M. Reid moved, seconded by Mr. Woodley, that a vote of thanks expressive of the Board's appreciation of the valued services rendered during the year by the Chairman, Col. Ponton be tendered to him.

The mover spoke briefly and appropriately to the matron which was unanimously adopted.

Mr. W. C. Reid being called upon, stated he was retiring voluntarily from the Board, after having been a member for some years. His association with the Board had been most pleasant and a worthy representative was following him. He wished all the members a happy and prosperous year.

Mr. P. J. Wims, who has been the representative on the Board the past year from the Separate School Board, stated that at present he could not say whether he would be reappointed or not. All members of the Board were honorable gentlemen and every courtesy had been extended to him.

Mr. Elliott suggested that the Secretary of the Board write to the Separate School Board requesting that body to reappoint Mr. Wims.

The minutes of the session being taken as read, the Board adjourned sine die.

PALM BEACH SEWING BEE

PALM BEACH, Flo., Jan. 20.—Starting out this morning with the slogan that a million little babies in France and Belgium this winter are without enough covering to cover the poor little naked bodies of ten per cent of their number, Mrs. Edward M. Paddleford, of New York, who is spending the season at the Breakers, had by noon organized in their interest a Red Cross auxiliary among the leading society women here. They wired the New York, branch of the Red Cross for materials which will be rushed down immediately by express and pledged themselves to give their personal services throughout their stay here sewing for these infants. The hotel management turned one of the large reception-rooms, known as the Blue Room, over to them, and there will be a sewing bee there daily.

In Separation Suit Mrs. J. B. Elwell Says Her Husband Has Made $500,000 Out of the Game

New York, Jan. 21.—Joseph R. Elwell, a noted authority on bridge whist, according to an affidavit submitted yesterday in the Supreme Court in the suit of his wife, Helen D. Elwell, for separation, has gained $500,000 through the teaching and practice of the game in which he so excels. Mrs. Elwell avers that on one night in Newport he gathered in $30,000 in a card game.

Mrs. Elwell revealed her story in the great profits of a specialty in her application for $5,000 a year alimony. A private settlement was made outside of court.

Mr. Elwell is the author of five standard works on whist, the best known of which is 'Elwell on Bridge,' and the others deal with auction, advanced bridge, practice bridge, and tournament hands. Mrs. Elwell declared that from these his royalties have been from $5,000 to $7,000 a year. According to her estimate his services as a teacher to well-known persons of society brought him a large annual income, which at one time amounted to $18,000 from that source alone.

Coming in contact as he did with persons of influence in the financial community, Mrs. Elwell declared that her husband obtained valuable advance information and won large sums in speculating in stocks and bonds.

"He is also," she set forth, "a most successful card player, having often cleaned up from $1,000 to $10,000 in a night. On occasions he has netted bigger sums. I have known him to gather in as high as $30,000 in an evening."

Mrs. Elwell said she and her husband were married in 1900, and that about four years ago he abandoned her. Their expenses, before their separation, ran from $20,000 to $30,000 a year. They spent the summers in Southampton or Newport, paid as high as $1,800 for a cottage during the season, and employed four servants and a chauffeur. Her application stated that he lives now in luxury and pays $1,300 for his apartment and that he has a $7,000 automobile.

She was surprised, she said a few months ago, to receive from him deeds for $40,000 worth of property, which he wished her to sign. Mrs. Elwell declared that her husband has $100,000 in securities of which she knows, and that his total wealth easily amounts to half a million dollars. She said he was a member of the New York Whist Club, the Apawamis Club and the Studio Club, and also of the Travellers' Club of Paris, and that his personal expenses are large.

Before he abandoned her in 1911, Mrs. Elwell said that her husband agreed to pay the rent of the $1,800 apartment in which they lived, and to give her $250 a month. This he reduced to $175, and then she brought the proceedings for separation.

Justice Newburger ordered Mr. Elwell to pay his wife $500 in cash to pay accumulated debts, $200 a month for the support of herself and child, and $500 in counsel fees. Mrs. Elwell is also to sign the deeds for certain property which the defendant desires to sell. The parties in the suit met after the hearing and through their attorneys, W. Gibbes Whaley, appearing for the wife, and John F. McIntyre, for the defendant, an amicable settlement was reached. Mr. Elwell is at 166 West Seventy-Second Street and Mrs. Elwell lives in East Eighty-First Street.

Mr. Elwell is still teaching and after business hours many Wall Street men drift uptown to the whist clubs to sit at the feet of the expert. His fees are $10 an hour for four persons and when he was busiest, Mr. Elwell averaged about six hours of instruction a day.

Many Changes In C.P.R. Staff

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21.—A railway with such interests and so many ramifications as the C. P. R., requires in the more responsible positions officials who have held posts at different points in the system, and therefore a constant flux and change of agents and general agents. With the organization of the Canadian Pacific ocean services particularly in the Orient, there has been an unusually large number of changes in the Passenger Department, all with the object of strengthing the system and educating the officers to every phase of business which they may have to handle

A new passenger agency has been established at Buffalo with L. B. Hart, formerly of the New York office, as general agent. G. M. Jackson, goes from the railway at San Fancisco on the ocean service at Yokohoma, where his title is General Agent of the Passenger Department

A.J. Blainsdell, goes from St. Louis to Shanghai. A. C. Shaw has left Winnipeg to take up new duties in the Passenger Traffic Department, at Montreal. G. A. Walton, formerly of Chicago, has taken Mr. Shaw's place as General Passenger Agent at Winnipeg. T. J. Wall, formerly General Agent, Passenger Department, at Minneapolis, is transferred to Chicago and is succeded at Minneapolis by R. S. Elworthy, formerly of Chicago. M. C. Murphy, District Passenger Agent at Toronto, changes on Feby. 1st with W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agt. at St. John. All these changes mean a host of other changes which enable men who might otherwise be confined to the experience of one office to have the opportunity of other work which gives them a wider knowledge of traffic conditions over the whole system.

ASSISTANCE RENDERED

By the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Owing to the heavy drain upon the live stock of the various warring countries of Europe, they have been forced to go abroad for supplies. The longer the war lasts the greater will be this demand. Moreover, when peace is restored, these countries will require large numbers of the various classes of animals to replenish their studs, herds and flocks. It should be borne in mind, however, that the buyers who come to this country after the war will require better animals than have been bought during war time, as they will be used largely for breeding purposes.

With this end in view, the best of the females and particularly the young stock should be kept for breeding purposes. Breeders should not fail to raise all the live stock possible at this time, in order that the country may be able to supply a large number of the animals that are certain to be needed by the warring countries. At present, however, there is an unequal distribution of live stock in the country. In certain sections there is a heavy surplus, with a corresponding scarcity in other parts. During the past year hundreds of young cattle from our Prairie Provinces have gone to the United States as stockers and feeders. These should have been kept at home, particularly the females. Sections of the West are reported as being in need of good draught horses, particularly draught mares; while, in sections of Ontario there is an over supply of this particular class.

In order to remedy these conditions the Minister of Agriculture, through the Live Stock Branch, has decided to grant liberal aid to breeders who wish to secure good breeding stock. The conditions under which aid will be given are as follows:

In the event of a number of farmers in any district of Canada wishing to co-operate for the purchase of breeding stock in carload lots from some distant section of the country, the Department will pay the travelling expenses of their duly appointed representative during the time required to effect the purchase and transport the shipment to its destination.

Should it be desired, the Live Stock Commissioner will nominate a suitable person who will be directed to accompany this representative and assist him as far as possible in buying and shipping the animals.

Persons wishing to take advantage of this offer should make full arrangements with the Live Stock Commissioner as to place and time of purchase before sending out their representative.

WORRY Upsets the NERVES

Far more women than men suffer from nervous disorders. And little wonder, when you come to think of the thousand causes of worry and anxiety which come daily to the woman in the home.

Particularly to those who are nervously energetic the many demands of society, the numberless details of home life, and the exacting attention required by the children, sooner or later wear on the nervous system.

You begin to worry, and worry upsets the nerves. The more irritable the nerves become the more you worry. And thus is formed a vicious circle, and there is no end to your troubles. Since the nervous system holds in control all the functions of the body there soon arises a thousand little ills to make life a burden.

Nervous headaches, spells of indigestion, irritable temper and attacks of the blues tend to make you feel miserable. You cannot rest by day or sleep at nights, and what reserve force you have rapidly disappears.

It may not be convenient for you to get away for a change and a rest, but there is within your reach Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and there never was found a nerve restorative which could be compared to it.

Use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and you will soon be able to take a cheerful view of life, enjoy your daily work and forget to worry. For with good health comes new energy and strength, new hope and courage, happiness and success.

Women everywhere are praising this great food cure, because it lifts them out of this terrible nervous, irritable condition, and by its reconstructive influence enables the bodily organs to properly perform their natural functions.

MUSIC & DRAMA

SCOTT'S PALACE THEATRE.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home," which was presented at Scott's Palace Theatre last evening was an excellent production and well deserving of the good patronage it received. It is a story of the British War Office secret service and well entrenched German spy system. It is interesting from start to finish and the clever work of the secret service gains the admiration of the entire audience.

This play is supplemented by a series of clever pen pictures that keep the audience roaring with laughter. The management are to be congratulated upon the production.

The management has promised a new and advanced style of entertainment, and the Strand Musical Comedy Co. is said to be a worthy exponent of the new epoch in popular price musical comedy with many new popular musical numbers and comedy. The Strand Musical Comedy has for its comedian in chief Felix O'Martin, who is known throughout Canada as the most amusing of Irish comedians. His talents will be particularly well displayed, not only in his characterization of the Irishman but in his exceptionally clever dancing. He is supported by an exceedingly clever chorus of 10 pretty girls who are not only singers but also clever dancers. Each and every one of the musical numbers is a distinct hit. They will present that merry musical comedy, "The College Widow." A number of specialties will be introduced by Bert Shaw and the Moran Sisters, who are known throughout Canada for their clever piano playing and dancing. Mr. Shaw has played the largest vaudeville stages in America and is noted for his trick piano playing, and the Moran Sisters for their clever dancing. If you want to spend an enjoyable evening and laugh until your sides ache, do not fail to see this production next week. 1t

Griffin Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, January 26th and 27th.

The manificent elaboration of Geo. Klein's splendid photo-drama production "Quo Vadis" has attracted widespread attention all over America and not only revived tremendous interest in Sienkiewicz's famous novel which it so admirably visualizes, but also has aroused a very considerable curiosity as to the habits and customs of the Romans during the time of Nero.

The early scenes showing some of the Imperial banquets and feasts are so pretentious that many inquiries have been received from spectators for further details. According to the most authentic reports Nero and his degree and their feasts were important functions of their lives.

The following description of one of Nero's feasts some 2,000 years ago, is taken from an authentic history of the world the "chatty Petronius" having originally described the affair. To begin with, the banquet was considered incomplete in those days that did not offer a "surprise," the dinners constantly anticipating some novelty during this meal, and providing novelties was one of Nero's best accomplishments.

"As soon as the guests reclined," runs the history, a retinue of Egyptian slaves entered and washed the reveler's hands and feet in snow water. A great salver was then brought in, in the midst of which stood a bronze ass bearing silver panniers filled with black and white olives. On his back sat old Silenus pouring wine from a sack. Sausages were set in a gridiron attached to the pannier, under which, in imitation of live coals, were heaped plums and red pomegranate kernels. On the edge of the tray were oysters and snails set in a natural way among the vegetables with which they were to be eaten. In the revelation a hen of carved wood was introduced. She sat with outspread wings covering a nestful of peacock's eggs, and these were served to the guests. On being broken, each egg revealed what appeared to be an unhatched chick, but which proved to be a baccafico done in egg sauce.

The dishes of each course were removed to the music of a chant, frequently the attendants were boxed for breaking the rythm by stopping to pick up a fallen dish. The wine served in the next course was a hundred years old. At one point in the banquet the dishes were of the most ordinary pattern and vulgar finish, but these, on being lifeted, proved to be only covers for the real treasures which are concealed beneath them. A fat hare was converted into a pegasus by the addition of wings.

When the carver came he performed his duty to musical accompaniment keeping perfect time. When the great wild boar was brought in he bore on his huge tusks two baskets of palm twigs filled with dates. By the side of the huge creature lay eight pigs done up in paste by the confectioner. Further on in the banquet the ceiling opened overhead and down came a silver hoop bearing alabaster phials of perfume, coronets and other keepsakes for the guests. When the banqueters reached forth and took the fruit, which a figure of Vertummus, standing in the midst of the table, carried in his bosom, they were sprinkled with little jets of saffron water.

And so caprice followed caprice to the end of the magnificent revel until curiosity could no longer be excited and then the gourmand, who had consumed the treasure of a state, retired and slept. Seats on sale at Doyle's Prices 10c. 15c. and 25c.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses

A FREE PRESCRIPTION
You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says; after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me.' A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to J. S. McKeown's drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a 2-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a Food, Not a Fraud.

Many so-called cereal foods are frauds. To prove it, try to live entirely upon them for a few days. Many live entirely upon Roman Meal. A recent letter from California says: Dear Dr. Jackson: A friend of mine has lived upon Roman Meal for thirteen months. His case had been pronounced hopeless. He is now in perfect health." No fraud here. Roman Meal is scientifically balanced by an expert dietitian. It's the perfect food, and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor. Make it in porridge, pancakes, gems. Y.M.C.A. Work At the Front

This has been a military year. The flower of manhood of the British Empire has donned khaki, and the Young Men's Christian Association, as the servant of all men in need, has followed the colors to the trench, the desert, the hospital and the prison camp.

This is the concluding sentence of of the National Report for India, prepared by Paul R. Danner, and follows a vivd description of the work of the Y.M.C.A. men among not only the Indian troops that were sent to France, but the "terriers" from England that replaced them in India, the internment camps there, and the soldiers that to-day are awaiting relief in beleaguered Kut-El-Amara.

"Perhaps no troops fighting in any zone of the war to-day have greater difficulties to contend with than those up the Persian Gulf in Mesopotamia, all of whom have gone from India. Burning heat, biting sand and feverish marsh strike down more men than the bullets of the enemy Turk and the treacherous Arab. To labor for these British soldiers, five Y.M.C.A. men were sent up the Tigris and were stationed at first at Busra, and at Amara; following the troops on their fight to Bagdad."

So far as Canadian soldiers are concerned, there are nearly thirty special Y.M.C.A. representatives overseas who are devoting their whole time to the work, and 47 centres in Canada where there are winter camps located in which the Y.M.C.A.'s are engaged in physical, social and spiritual service.

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhœa.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

and a fourth-rate navy. It is absurd to suppose that they would be cowardly enough to stand bullying from a nation which cannot bully, because it has nothing to bully with. To say to Great Britain and her Allies that we purpose putting an embargo on munitions of war contrary to our traditional policy unless they change their blockade, which seems to be wonderfully effective because it stops every ship—which the Civil War blockade did not do—and expect them to sit down in a fight which they believe to be for the liberty and independence of the world against a new German Empire, revamped and revarnished, is absurd. What would follow if we did? Commercial non-intercourse. Then what would become of cotton? Cut off the British, French and Italian markets, and their dependencies, and cotton would not be worth four cents the week after next.

"I dislike arguing a great international question from the standpoint of special interests, though it be my own interests. I do not think the fact that I might or might not be bankrupted by this war temporarily is a sufficient reason for undertaking to let German or English or French or Russian or Italian soldiers kill American boys summoned to the colors.

"I have come to the conclusion that the forces making for peace and liberty and honor and contract-keeping and righteousness have got somehow to whip the forces that are fighting for the other thing and I would hurl foul scorn if I ever came to the conclusion that I had no right to fight for liberty and righteousness and national independence against world domination and somebody's place in the sun if it became necessary to fight—and I am no combatant either."

BELLEVILLE HORSE BREAKS TWO RECORDS

Dayspring, Owned by W. Parks. Steps Three Fastest Heats Over Ice in Montreal

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—Special—Dayspring, owned by W. Parks of Belleville and driven by Nat Ray, established two world's records at Mount Royal track this afternoon, the opening day of the initial ice meeting of the Black River Jockey Club. Dayspring stepped the fastest mile that has ever been recorded over an ice track, pacing the distance in 2.10 3-4, while the previous heat was paced by him in 2.13¼; 2.10 3-4 is a full second better than the previous record, while the time for the three heats is the best that has ever been shown on ice.

Dayspring is a great pacer and his performance was a most creditable one, he being given a clever drive by the one-time famous steeplechase rider. Dayspring drew the pole position for the first heat and won the race in straight heats. He was taken along at a fast clip in the initial dash, stepping to the half-mile in 1.07, with Fred Hal his nearest opponent. At the three-quarter pole the winner drew away again to win by a neck.

In the second heat Dayspring went to the half in much faster time, stepping the distance in 1.05, with Fred Hal on equal terms with him passing the half-way mark. Fred Hal assumed the lead going to the three-quarter pole, but under a clever drive Dayspring came again in the stretch and won by a neck, while Fred Hal went off his feet and was beaten for the place by Billy M.

In stepping this heat the world's record was lowered for the second time. The fractional time for the heat was 33¼, 1.05, 1.37 3-4, 2.10 3-4. In the final heat Dayspring went to the front shortly after being sent away and won in handy style.

Picton 13; 33rd 2.

Picton, Jan. 21.—Picton defeated the 33rd Battery O.H.A. intermediate team of Kingston here tonight by 13 to 2. The locals led throughout. They outplayed and outmanouvred the soldiers in every stage of the game.

In the second period the soldiers got past Scott, who played his first game tonight after arriving home from England on Wednesday. He was tendered a rousing reception by the local fans. The third period was slow and uninteresting.

Procured Liquor For Soldiers

John Gibson, who is known to many in Belleville as "Black Jack," was this morning before Magistrate Masson convicted of selling liquor without a license. It appears that yesterday afternoon, Gibson secured a bottle of whiskey for a soldier and gave it to him. In court the accused stated that he had got the liquor for the man because he represented that he was sick. A fine of $300 and $2.50 costs was imposed, or in default 3 months in the county jail at hard labor. Gibson went to jail as he was unable to pay the fine.

Arthur Mitchell, of this city, was also charged with a similar offence. He was given money to purchase a bottle of liquor for a soldier and did so. When confronted with the charge he pleaded guilty and was fined $300 and costs, or in default three months in jail. Not being able to pay the fine he will serve out the sentence.

BIG GERMAN ATTACK ON WESTERN FRONT

Broke Through French First Line Trenches But Were Soon Dislodged by Counter Attacks

LINES PIERCED BETWEEN ARRAS AND LENS

Strong German Forces Captured Trenches on Front of Several Hundred Yards—Ground Recovered Except About 200 Yards

PARIS, Jan. 23.—(Special.)—The following official communication was issued by the War Office to-night:

"In Belgium the fire of our artillery was directed on the enemy works in the region of Nieuport.

The Attack

"This morning, after the explosion of mines and a violent bombardment, the Germans carried out an attack on part of our front to the west of the road between Arras and Lens, in the region of Neuville St. Vaast. The enemy was able to penetrate on a front of several hundred metres into our first line trench and as far as the supporting trench. Our counter-attacks, delivered immediately, broke down the effort of the enemy and dislodged him from the ground which he had captured.

Hold 200 Yards

"The enemy occupied in the afternoon only about 200 yards of an advanced trench, forming a salient of our lines. Our curtain of fire and the fire of our machine guns resulted in considerable losses to the Germans.

"Between Soissons and Rheims our trench guns seriously damaged the enemy organizations at the Cholera Farm and on the plateau of Vauvierc, and exploded a munitions depot to the east of Rheims.

"In Champagne our artillery seriously damaged the enemy trenches in the region of Maisons de Champagne."

What Enemy Claims

Berlin, Jan. 23.3—The official statement to-day follows:

"Near Neuville, north of Arras, the Germans, after successful mining operations, occupied an advanced position of the enemy, 250 yards long, and captured 71 Frenchmen.

"In the Argonne the Germans occupied a section of a trench after a short engagement with hand-grenades.

"Military establishments east of Belfort were bombarded."

17-Inch Guns On Hun Ships

Section of British Press Agitated Over Fleet Armament

LONDON, January 22.—The Daily News gives prominence to an article suggesting that the Germans are preparing a naval surprise for Great Britain. The article says the Germans are arming their new battleships with 17-inch guns. The Daily News adds that it is believed the shells thrown into Dunkirk some time ago were fired by 17-inch naval guns.

The Daily Mail asserts that it knows "upon the highest authority" that the statement made by the Daily News regarding the 17-inch naval gun is true.

The writer of the Daily News article expresses fear that the British will be caught napping. He recalls that Germany and Austria concealed the overwhelming powers of the howitzers, which demolished the Belgian and Russian fortresses. Experts of the Allied nations had pooh-poohed them, but the experts were proved to be wrong.

The writer asks anxiously whether Britain has an effective answer to the German 17-inch gun. He infers that the new German battleship Hindenburg is armed with the guns and expresses the conviction that there is a reasonable probability, if not certainty, that sooner or later a German battleship squadron armed with 17-inch guns will appear in the North Sea.

"It is obvious," he adds, "that a Hindenburg armed with 17-inch guns will outclass an Invincible (the modern British battleship type) armed with smaller guns, as absolutely as the Invincible outclassed Admiral von Spee's ships off the Kalkland Islands."

Chicago Girl Commits Suicide

(Canadian Press Special)

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Minnine Werner, aged 24, a stenographer, employed by the Railway Age Gazette plunged from the sixteenth floor of the Transportation building on Dearborn street today. The fall was broken by landing on a truck laden with paper boxes, but her skull was fractured and she received internal injuries and the doctors say she will probably die. An eye witness said he saw the girl raise the window and climb on to the ledge.

BETHLEHEM'S OUTPUT IS TO BE INCREASED

It Will be Turning Out 40,000 Shells Daily For the Allies In Short Time

(From Our New York Financial Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Bethlehem Steel Company is now turning out 30,000 shells daily for the Allies, it was made known here to-day. Necessary enlargements and improvements are being made so that the output may be increased to 40,000 shells daily. It is understood that the plant will be in a position to ship an extra ten thousand shells daily within several weeks.

The company is in excellent financial condition, and this is what has made Mr. Schwab so successful in obtaining large orders from the Allies; they know that he can carry out his contracts. The company has about $45,000,000 cash and securities in its treasury.

Mr. Schwab is charging off all the investments he makes in ordnance plants and is at the same time expanding his domestic steel plant. His intention is to control the structural steel trade of the Atlantic seaboard.

Austrians Take Two Seaports

Seek to Encircle Remnant of Montenegrin Army

1,500 SERBS SURRENDER ?

Foe Persists in Story That Montenegrins Are Also Laying Down Their Arms—Fierce Battle in Progress For Three Days South of Scutari

PARIS, Jan. 23.—(Special.)—The Austrians in their encircling movement on the remnant of the Montenegrin army have occupied the seaports of Antivari and Dulcigno.

These are Montenegro's two seaports on the Adriatic; Antivari being fourteen miles northwest of Scutari and Dulcigna crowning the rocky peninsula of Kudilie, twelve miles southwest of Scutari.

The Austrian official statement which publishes this information in Vienna to-night also states that the Montenegrins continue to lay down their arms "at numerous places," and that "on the northeastern front of Montenegro more than 1,500 Serbians have surrendered during the last few days."

Furious Battle in Progress

Meanwhile a report from Rome states that a fierce battle between the Montenegrins and Austrians has been in progress for three days to the south of Scutari. Prince Mirko is leading the Monenegrins under tragic conditions, says The Tribuna. His army, in immediate danger of being surrounded, is making desperate effects to join the advancing forces of Serbians from the south.

If the Montenegrins do not succeed in holding back the Austrians they will attempt to escape to the mountains, says The Tribuna, and there continue a guerrilla war in the hope that aid from the allies will at last come to them from the sea.

The Manchester Courier was purchased by Lord Northcliffe in 1904, but it was found impossible to rejuvenate the veteran journal, Northcliffe's name recently disappearing from the front of the dying enterprise.

Turks Routed By the Russians

Third Turkish Army in Caucasus Defeated in Important Battle

YEAR'S GREATEST VICTORY

Unexpected Attack by Russians Proves to be Irresistable—Greater Victory Than Sari Kamysh

PETROGRAD, Jan. 23.—Special—The defeat of the 3rd Turkish Army in the Caucasus, resulting in its retirement upon Erzerum, is regarded here as a greater victory than that at Sari Kamysh a year ago, when the same troops were so demoralized that they were only recently enabled to resume the offensive.

The entire 11th Corps and parts of the 9th and 10th of the Turkish army were engaged in the battle in neighborhood of Lake Tortum, according to the military authorities here. Behind these were concentrated the reserves from the 9th and the garrison of the Erzerum fortress. In spite of the most skilful handling of the Turkish division, however, they were unable to withstand the sudden and unexpected onrush of the Russians against the centre.

Kut-El-Amara Sees All-Day Battle

Heavy Fighting Between British Relieving Force and Turks

WEATHER EXTREMELY BAD

Incessant Rain Causes Cessation of Hostilities—Casualties Are Very Heavy

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Heavy fighting occurred on Friday, participated in by the British army, which is attempting to reach Kut-el-Amara and the Turks. Essin, seven miles from Kut-el-Amara, was the scene of the conflicts. The British were unable to drive the Turks from their positions.

The following official statement on the Mesopotamian campaign was given out to-day, under yesterday's date:

"Sir Percy (the new Commander in Mesopotamia) reports that General Aylmer attacked the Turkish position at Essin on Friday. Fierce fighting continued through the day, with varying success. The weather throughout was atrocious, a pouring rain rendering movements of troops extremely difficult.

"Owing to the floods it was impossible to renew the attack on Saturday, and General Aylmer took up a position 1,300 yards from the trenches.

"The weather continues very bad, with incessant rain. No details regarding the casualties have been received, but they are reported to have been very heavy on both sides."

Plan to Save Irish Babies

Lady Aberdeen Starts a Movement To Raise $50,000 Here

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—At a meeting here to-day in honor of the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen it was announced by Lady Aberdeen in behalf of Lord Aberdeen and herself that they had begun a campaign to raise $50,000 in the United States, to help save Irish babies from starvation and lack of proper medical attention. The war and other causes had made the care of Irish babies imperative if the race was to be perpetuated, said Lady Aberdeen. There was a tremendous infant mortality and a decreasing birth rate. The movement in this country, she said, would be under the auspices of the Women's National Health Association.

A letter from Cardinal Gibbons to Lady Aberdeen indorsing the movement was read at the meeting. Cardinal Gibbons said:

My Dear Lady Aberdeen—I am happy to learn of the great and good work which you have accomplished in Ireland, through co-operation with the Women's National Health Association, in combating disease, and therefore promoting the success and happiness of that beloved country. It is especially gratifying to know of the determined and successful efforts that have been made against tuberculosis, the toll of which is in so large measure in every country unnecessary.

I sincerely hope that your efforts to continue this merciful work will meet with a most hearty response from all sides and that the happy results of the future will even surpass those of the past.

Praying God to bless this undertaking and all who support it, I am,

Very faithfully yours,

J. CARD. GIBBONS.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen will leave Washington in a few days to tour Eastern and Southern States in the interest of the movement. They will go as far west as Chicago. It is expected that John D. Crimmins will be Chairman and Treasurer of the New York Committee.

Germany Again Fines Brussels

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 23.— The Echo Belge states that Gen. von Bissing, Military Governor of Belgium, has fined the city of Brussels 500,000 marks ($125,000) because the inhabitants have not revealed the name of the assassins of Oels Berode, the informer whose testimony convicted Miss Edith Cavell.

The town of Sharbeck, near Brussels, where Deroche's body was found, was also fined 50,000 marks ($12,500), the newspaper says.

GERMAN AIR RAID ON ENGLISH COAST

Two Visits Are Made to Coast of Kent—One Man is Killed—Raid by Moonlight

AEROPLANES ARE USED FOR FIRST TIME

First Attack From the Air Made Early Sunday Morning—Second Shortly Before Noon

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—Via wireless—The following announcement was made by the admiralty to-day: "A German naval aeroplane during the night of January twenty-second and twenty-third, dropped bombs on the station, barracks and docks of Dover."

LONDON, Jan. 22.—German aircraft paid two visits to the Kentish coast to-day. The first raid occurred at 1 o'clock this morning, while the second came shortly after noon. One man was killed in the first attack. The material damage was insignificant. No damage was done in the second raid, and no casualties are reported.

It is claimed by many here that large numbers of people actually saw the air raid, and that the raiders actually reached the city without, however, doing damage within its boundaries.

The War Office issued the following report this evening:

"Following an erial attack on east coast of Kent in the early hours of the morning, two hostile aeroplanes made a second attack in the same locality shortly after noon to-day.

"After coming under a heavy fire the raiders disappeared, pursued by our naval and military machines.

"The enemy effected no damage. No casualties are reported."

Raid by Moonlight

An official statement issued earlier in the day said:

"Taking advantage of the bright moonlight, a hostile aeroplane visited the east coast of Kent at 1 o'clock this morning.

"After dropping nine incendiary bombs in rapid succession the eroplane disappeared out over the North Sea.

"No naval or military damage was done, but private property suffered, the incendiary bombs causing several fires, all of which were extinguished by 2 a.m.

"According to reports made after the raid the following civilian casualties occurred:

"One man killed, and two men, one woman and three children slightly injured."

Could Not Reach London

The county of Kent forms the south-easternmost portion of England, to the south of the Thames. It includes part of the city of London, but the wording of the official statement indicates that the aeroplane did not reach the city. The point nearest London on the eastern coast of Kent is some fifty miles from the centre of the city.

A point of interest in the official account of the raid is the statement that it was made by an aeroplane. Heretofore Germany has relied principally on Zeppelins for aerial attacks on England. Of late, however, there has been much discussion in England of a new type of German aeroplane, the Fokker, which has been said to excell the aircraft of the allies. English newspapers stated last week that the British airmen were outpowered and outengined.

Harold J. Tenant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, replied to this criticism in the House of Commons, ascerting that the Fokker was well adapted to defensive operations, but was incapable of making long flights.

GERMANS ISSUE OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Air Fights Reported on Different Fronts—Admit Attack on Monastir

(Canadian Press Special)

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—(wireless).—The War Office issued the following statement today. "Western front. There has been lively artillery and aeroplane actions. An enemy squadron bombarded Metz where the bombs fell on the Bishop's dwelling and on a house in the Hospital court. Two civilians were killed and eight wounded. One aeroplane was shot down and its inmates made prisoners.

"German aviators have bombarded railroad stations and military establishments behind the enemy's front. In several air engagements the Germans had the upper hand.

"At the eastern front, the German artillery shelled and set on fire a Russian railroad train, north of Dvinsk.

"On the Balkan front, an enemy air squadron, coming from Greek soil, bombarded Monastir. There were several casualties in killed and wounded among the inhabitants."

Russia And Her Religion

"Russia and Her Religion," was the subject discussed last night at Christ Church by the rector, Rev. Dr. Blagrave. A large congregation was present and all were edified by the discourse. After the usual evening and special prayers had been said and appropriate hymns rendered, the rector delivered his discourse. In his opening remarks he said it was a great comfort to know that all nations who are engaged in the present war on the side of the Allies were practically all Christian nations. The Japanese were for some time engaged in this conflict and rendered practicable services for the Allies. They are a people of high enlightment and they are well versed in the ethics of the Christian religion. The question is often asked, What is the religion of Russia? This is a great country with a population upwards of 190 millions and with ammunition and arms are able to stand this war for years and not feel it. It is virtually a country with an inexhaustible population. The divine then in an explicit manner traced the religious views of Russia in centuries which has passed, and demonstrated conclusively that it is at present a Christian country. The people are not Pagans but Christians; they accepted Christianity when it was presented to them in the proper light and spirit, and the nation as a whole became a Christian nation. What is known to-day as the Christian Orthodox Church is the universal religion of Russia. However ritualistic or even superstitious they may be they neverthless have a truthful religion. It is a religion of simple trust and faith in a supreme being, and he (the speaker) would much prefer the religion of Russia than that of Germany. We can trust a people that have such a faith as the Russians have. Their religion embodies devotion, sacrifice and faith. Press forward in faith, is the motto of the people. We thank God that a missionary church brought this Christianity to Russia and that the people accepted it and are living it out. Theirs is an implicit trust in God.

DEATH OF AGED LADY

At an early hour on Sunday morning Mrs. Nancy Ryan, widow of the late Mr. James Ryan of Huntingdon Township, passed away at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Chapman of Thurlow. An attack of LaGrippe was the cause of death. Deceased was one of the oldest residents of Hastings County, being in her 96th year. Mrs. Ryan had virtually spent all her life in this county. For many years she had been a member of the Methodist church. Her husband preceded her to the tomb several years ago. Four daughters survive, namely Mrs. Henry A. Rowe of Sidney, Mrs. S. C. Dennison of Napanee, Mrs. Robert Chapman and Miss Susan Ryan of Thurlow.

AFTER SICKNESS
HOW TO RECOVER STRENGTH

So many Belleville people are asking how to recover their strength after sickness that we are publishing this information for their benefit.

After grippe, pleurisy, pneumonia or any illness what you need is new strength and richer blood.

The most certain way to get this is by taking Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation (without oil). It creates strength, improves the blood, sharpens the appetite and restores the entire system to a healthy robust condition.

North Adams, Mass.—"After a long illness of pneumonia I was left in a weakened, delicate condition, and for a long time had searched for a body-builder and strength creator. I was attracted by an advertisement of Vinol, and tried a bottle, and soon noticed a vast improvement. I continued its use for a while, and am now as able bodied and strong as any man in town." Samuel Wood, North Adams, Mass.

Try a bottle of Vinol. Your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

FATHER BERNARD VAUGHAN

"Wonderous Peace of Unity."

"Let the peace of God rule in your heart," (Col. iii., 15). We are fighting to-day an enemy in whose heart there seems to rule the fiend of hate. His hymn ever on his lips is hate. It is all too hateful for words. Turn from the enemy on earth to our Friend in Heaven. From Heaven there comes the canticle of peace and of praise—"Glory to God in the highest and peace to men on earth." Yes, but bear in mind, "to men of good-will." Peace is the harmony of order resulting from dissimilar elements or notes. Thus in the music of song there is harmony sung out of notes dissimilar. In the arched rainbow, too, you see the harmony of color resulting from the blend of many and varied tones. To-day among the British people, made up of so many sections, classes and masses, we recognize a wondrous peace of unity. In our united front against a common enemy we have, anyhow for the moment, forgotten our class distinction and our conflicting interests. To-day there is a harmony of peace such as is rarely to be found in a community made up of so many sections. This is one of the good things which God, who is all-mighty and all-loving, has drawn out of this life-and-death struggle, mis-called warfare. We cannot come to terms of peace with an enemy whose pride it is that he puts hate where we put love; but we must be at peace with God, with our neighbor, and with ourselves. Dwell at home in this three-fold peace while you fight the super-beast within you, and the super-man without you. Give neither any quarter, but dictate to both your terms of peace, which shall be unconditional surrender. There is something far worse than war, and that is peace with an enemy who would reduce civilization to brutalism, would Pan-Prussianise the world, which in theory means the pan-paganism of the world, and in practice the pan-brutalism of it. Remember Belgium and Poland, the Armenians and Servians, and be satisfied. We must, first of all, be at peace with God and ourselves, and then press on the fight abroad till we can dictate such terms of peace as shall assure the world that it shall be lasting and righteous, giving glory to God on high and to man on earth repose and rest from strife and struggle for existence.

Spent Countless Nights Unable to Rest or Sleep

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition — By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularly.

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from many thousands of women. It is the story of exhausted nerves, of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches and loss of energy and vigor.

But there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was so bad I thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. But if you are willing to feed back your exhausted nerves to health and strength you can depend absolutely on this great food cure to produce the desired results. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Belgium, January 1st, 1916.

E. Guss Porter, Esq., K.C., M.P.,
Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Dear Mr. Porter:—

I wish to thank you ever so much for the parcel you so kindly sent me. It was unfortunately held up at the base too long to reach me by Christmas, but it arrived a couple days later and I can assure you the contents were thoroughly enjoyed, not only by myself but by my friends, Pat and Ted Yeomans. The three of us are at present living together in a little shack. The people of Belleville and elsewhere have been extremely kind to us boys out here in devoting so much of their time to making and sending comforts and I'm sure I voice the sentiments of all when I say that our Christmas has been made most merry and bright by their kindness.

I am enclosing a copy of our Christmas programme and menu which may be interesting in view of the fact that it was carried out while the Battery was in action.

With kindest regards to Mrs. Porter and Roger, and with many wishes for a happy New Year, I am, sir,

Respectfully yours,

Feet of a Cat.

There is nothing especially striking about the feet of a cat except its ability always to land on them. Hold a young cat by its feet a short distance from the ground for a few seconds and then let go. The cat's back, being heavier than its feet, should strike the ground first. But it doesn't. Just as the cat is being let go it gives a quick upward thrust with its chest, and as the feet are freed they swing under it so it lands on them. In the case of the young cat that has never experienced this before it doesn't know that it is going to be dropped. If it were a long drop there would be time to think, but in the short drop the cat must act, and act immediately. In fact, it is really forehanded. The natural conclusion, then, is that this faculty in the cat is located in its feet. It is inherent in them.

Same, but Different.

USE OF OLIVE OIL.

Reasons Why It Should Have More Prominence In Cooking.

Americans are not, generally speaking, liberal enough in the use of olive oil. It should occupy a more prominent place in cooking.

Any olive oil left in the pan after frying can be filtered through cheesecloth and kept in a cool place for future use. Olive oil can be used repeatedly. It should be hot before the article to be fried is placed in the pan.

Olive oil is capable of having the temperature raised to over 600 degrees before it burns. Butter burns at a little over 200, suet at about 300 and lard at 235. It will be seen that butter is a poor frying medium, as food must be kept at too low a temperature or it scorches, while with oil the high degree quickly coats the outside of the article with a crust that prevents the oil from penetrating.

Rub the preserving kettle with olive oil to prevent fruit from burning.

Use olive oil in recipes when possible where butter is called for. It is especially delicious in soft gingerbread, salad dressing and baked beans.

A Strange Case of Trio

Story Told by a Red Cross Nurse.

By EILEEN BRENNAN

Soon after the breaking out of the great world's war I left my home to go abroad to engage in Red Cross work, spending nearly a year in that service. Shortly before returning for recuperation—for I was entirely incapacitated—I stopped one day to rest in the cottage of a peasant. The only occupant was a young woman about twenty-two years of age, whom I took for a maiden. She was dressed in what mourning she could afford, which was not much. She told me that she wore it for a lover.

Two photographs hung side by side on the wall. Each represented a fine looking young man in the uniform of a French soldier. One of the pictures was wreathed in flowers.

"Is that," I asked, pointing to the one decorated, "a picture of your lover?"

"Yes, madame."

"And the other?"

"That is my husband."

I looked at her surprised.

"I presume you married for some other reason than love?"

"No, madame; I love my husband."

"And your lover?"

"I love him, too, though he is dead."

"I see. He died. You gave your heart to another who lives."

"No, madame. I married one lover, giving him my heart. Then the other lover died, and I gave him my heart too."

"And was not your husband jealous?"

"No, madame; he loves Henri as much as I."

Hearing a stamping on the floor behind, I turned and saw a man with a wooden support for a missing leg.

"This is my husband," said the woman. "He will tell you why we both love one who loved me. Tell her, Victor."

She placed a chair in position for the poor fellow, who had evidently not long been without his missing leg; arranged his underpinning so that it would give him the least discomfort, filled a pipe with tobacco and poured out a glass of red wine for him. Taking a sip of the wine, he looked at the picture that was decorated, evidently drinking to it. Then he told me the story:

"Henri and Clochette and I were brought up together, playmates and schoolmates. Henri and I were chums and loved each other, and when we grew to manhood we both loved Clochette, but neither knew that of the other. I did not suspect that Henri loved her, for he was a very undemonstrative man and did not tell his secrets. But I have believed since his death that he loved her from boyhood. Whether he suspected that I loved her I do not know to this day.

"One day I told Henri that Clochette was my betrothed. I fancied I saw a pallor stealing over his face, but it disappeared so soon that I thought little about it. Afterward Clochette told me that he had proposed to her the day before I asked her to be my wife. I can now see what a shock my announcement must have been to him.

"But neither of us could have Clochette then, for suddenly the war broke out, and Henri and I were both called to the colors, going to the front in the same regiment. By this time I had learned that Henri had met with a great disappointment in losing Clochette, and I told him the day we were entrained for the front that in case I was killed it was my wish that he should marry Clochette; that I had expressed this wish to her and she had promised me she would accede to it.

"You see, madame, by this time I made it the interest of Henri that I should be killed. Had he been a villain he could have shot me in battle, and no one but himself would have known that he was a murderer. But I knew he was not that kind of man.

"Henri and I joined that army which extended southeastward through Belgium and along the border of France and were in the battles occurring while we were being driven back toward Paris. Then came the battle of the Marne and the subsequent fighting for the possession of Calais. During all this time neither Henri nor I received a scratch. When later we were struck Henri received his death wound and I lost my leg.

"You remember, madame, when late in September, in the second year of the war, we and the British, after four weeks sending a storm of missiles against the German trenches, moved forward along the whole line. Well, in that movement, in which it seemed to us and our enemies as if the end of the world had come, Henri advanced with the rest, and, being not only in the same regiment, but in the same company, we were near together. Once through the horrible surroundings, when I was stumbling over dead and wounded, the din of 10,000 thunderstorms beating on my eardrums, I caught sight of Henri. His eyes were momentarily fixed on me as if fearful that I would never come out of the tempest alive.

"We followed the retreating foe too fast for the rest of the line, and a number of us were cut off. Henri and I took refuge in a deserted trench. It was not a time for taking prisoners. In the first place, the enemy, as well as ourselves, were war mad, and in the second there was no way of bringing prisoners behind the lines. It became evident that Henri and I must leave our hiding place and get back to our men or be shot down.

"But the changes were so rapid that before we could make up our minds to take our chances in flight a gentle breeze from the southeast wafted a noxious cloud upon us that drove us down into the very bottom of the trench and held us there with our faces buried, our eyes closed, in the soil. Then the enemy charged upon our men, and down came the bodies of those who were shot while crossing the trench, burying us under a pile of dead and wounded.

"To be thus crushed was no better than to inhale a noxious gas, and, struggling against our covering, we reached a point where we could look about us. The gas had been blown to our own trenches and had been followed by a bayonet charge of the enemy, who had been thinned to nothingness by rapid fire guns.

"'Let us run for it,' I said to my chum.

"'No,' replied Henri. 'We would never make our lines. Do you see the enemy tumbling into those trenches not a hundred yards from us? We would have to run the gantlet of their rifles. Let us stay where we are for the present. Our men may push forward and cover us.'

"There was not now a living man in the trench where we were, though there were many dead. And yet I cannot be certain of this, for there was such a din that if there were wounded I could not hear them groan. It seemed that Satan had brought hell with him to the air as well as on the land, for, being exhausted, I lay down in the trench, and there above me I saw two aeroplanes carrying on the fight far above the heads of those murdering one another on the land. I dared not rise to get any other view, for above the trench missiles were flying so thick that not a spear of wheat would have been left standing if in the way.

"Presently the firing from our lines died down, and we heard orders given in the enemy's ranks indicating that they were about to make a charge. We knew that we must go down in that rush if we remained where we were and we must get out. There was a possibility that we might reach our lines alive, though we could not hope to do so unhit.

"'Come,' said Henri; 'we must be off. Something tells me that I shall be killed and that you will be saved. If I can do anything to insure your being spared to Clochette I shall die content. Go.'

"He pushed me out of the trench, and we ran as swiftly as our legs would carry us toward our men. During that brief flight I was conscious that Henri was running directly behind me, covering me with his body. What could I do to prevent this? Nothing. To stop and protest would only have brought death to us both. I ran on till I came within a few yards of our lines; then one of my legs was knocked from under me, and I fell. I was conscious of being picked up and carried away, but after that for some time knew nothing.

"When I came back to consciousness I asked if Henri had escaped. I was told that he had protected me from the enemy's fire till just before I fell, when he was shot through the body. Then a surgeon came and amputated my leg.

"And now you see me with a life before me that has been given Clochette by Henri. Do you wonder that we decorate his picture with flowers? Do you wonder that Clochette loves him dead as well as she loves me living? What use for me to say that I would rather have"—

The sentence was not finished, for his wife put her arms around her husband and stopped the words with a kiss.

"Now, madame," said the wife, "you understand how it is possible for an honest woman to have a lover and a husband. How could I help loving the man who gave his life that my dear husband might be returned to me?"

She brought out some simple cakes that she had made with her own hands and poured a glass of wine for each of us. We stood, about to quaff the wine, when both the husband and the wife turned to the picture of the man who had died that they might be happy with each other, and I joined them in drinking to his memory.

The episode revealed to me how imperfect is language. There are no words to express how a woman can have a lover and a husband without reproach. And yet here was a case. I left the couple not only with respect, but with heartfelt sympathy and thankfulness that the poor mutilated soldier had such a woman to cheer him.

Incidents I saw during my ministry moved me more than this, for I took the last message of many a dying soldier, but no episode affected me in the same way. There was in the sacrifice as well as in the situation something unique. And who can tell how many such sacrifices, worthy of angels have occurred in that war where the fiend reigned supreme? Well may we wonder how it can come about that the manhood of many nations is going down into the earth, and for what! Who knows?

The acquaintance I had formed, the story I had heard, seemed to me a fit climax to my ministrations to war victims. I left the couple with but one comfort—that if the man must go mutilated through life there was one to give him a happiness that perhaps would balance his misfortune. In bidding them goodby I breathed a prayer for that "federation of the world" which will pass judgment on the nations' quarrels instead of leaving them to be settled as they have been settled since the world began.

Good evening! Did you do your "bit?"

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL.

The Ottawa Journal, in noticing passing events in Ottawa, says:

Col. Landry, the Speaker of the Senate, gave the first of his sessional dinners last evening (Jan. 21st), and the most notable guest was Sir Mackenzie Bowell. He was in the best of form and kept up a constant fire of conversation and repartee with those around him. Sir Mackenzie is looking fresher and better than ever, and when dinner was over insisted upon helping one of his younger confreres upstairs.

RANDOM SHOTS.

The Hon. Mr. Pugsley, the most vulnerable member of the Opposition, made a vicious attack upon the Government and upon those who had had contracts for the supply of munitions of war. Among other things he charged that Sir Henry Pellatt was a director in one of the firms who was pocketing large profits. The Ottawa Journal says:

"Two days ago Mr. Pugsley stated that a certain firm had made a profit on munitions of 100 per cent. He thought Sir Henry Pellatt was a director. It turns out that Sir Henry is not, but, says Mr. Meighen, Hon. George P. Graham is. Mr. Pugsley had described this as "a hideous example."

Unintentionally this one member of the late Laurier Government described his own colleague in the late Government with being "a hideous example" of extorting a 100 per cent. out of the poor taxpayers of the Dominion in supplying munitions of war. It is but one of the vicious attacks by unprincipled politicians of the Pugsley type.

AFTER THE WAR.

Dr. George R. Parkin, organizing representative of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, delivered an address the other day before the Hull Luncheon Club in England, which ought to stimulate leaders of thought throughout the Empire to a full sense of their responsibilities after the war is over. He said many things that have been said before but which bear repeating. Taking it for granted that the Allies are going to win he pointed out that when the war is over, if the victory is to be lasting, the people of Great Britain and of the dominions overseas must give convincing proof that they hold the Empire not merely for their own selfish interests, but for the good of the world. He thought this would not be an easy task.

Dr. Parkin explained what must now be plain to all, that the future of the world is hanging on the issue of the great struggle in Europe. After the war is over, he said, one-quarter of the land area of the world would be found under the British flag, and quite one-quarter of the world's population. He hoped that Great Britain would have established a naval supremacy such as had never been known before, and in this connection he drew attention to the fact that the British people would find themselves with a military organization such as they had never known in the United Kingdom, which would last at any rate for about ten years and could be relied upon. This was the Empire to which they had to apply their ideals and to which other ideals would be applied if the Allied arms were not successful. It was a tremendous responsibility. Germany had imagined that she was attacking a decadent race, but the war, he was convinced, would purify and elevate the nation. Much of the "rubbish of life" would be consumed in the terrible furnace of the war, and the increased sense of responsibility would go far to remove danger in the future.

The statesmen of the Empire must take a very broad view of the situation if our race is to reap the full benefit of the glorious victory which must sooner or later crown British arms. Here in Canada great problems will arise and we must grapple with them with foresight and skill. Canada, like the United States, is reaping a tremendous harvest from the war that is offset only by the casualties among the Canadian troops at the front. The war has given Canadians a new idea of the Dominion's wealth and of its resources which have yet to be developed. Not long ago The Round Table estimated the available wealth of Canada at ten billions of dollars—which, with the national income, is equal to that of the United Kingdom at the close of the Napoleonic wars. When the war is over Canada is likely to be much stronger in some ways than at the outbreak of hostilities in 1914. Financial experts already are pointing out that it is ceasing to be a debtor nation and that it may with profit lend its surplus to Great Britain. The Round Table says that in doing so, Canada would be "merely foregoing the immediate enjoyment of her profits and building up for herself a reserve abroad which would be very useful to her after the war."

Germany did not count on the dominions giving such aid to the Empire as they already have given; nor did she realize that by precipitating the war she would be stimulating the development of Britain's overseas possessions. But she has done that very thing, and although the nation is fighting an enemy who has brushed aside all ideals of chivalry, all the laws of civilization, British ideals must triumph in the end. Then and only then will the freedom of the world be assured. Having made this freedom possible it will be more than ever necessary for the Empire's leaders to guide the nation with wisdom and care. In no part of the Empire must the responsibility be underestimated.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO OUR DOLLAR.

The average individual is perplexed because the Canadian dollar does not buy as much as it did years ago, nor does it buy now as much as it did one year ago. In 1899 the goods then purchasable by one dollar to-day will cost $1.49. A year ago they cost $1.35. A record of prices kept officially enables The Financial Post to determine with accuracy the purchasing power of the dollar.

In July, 1914, the purchasing power had been reduced by 25.7 per cent., and in October, 1915, by 32.73 per cent., as compared with prices in 1899, so that at the dates named the equivalent value of one dollar in goods was 74 cents and 67 cents respectively.

For the same reason that the baker now gives less daily bread for a dollar, the investor wants more for lending a dollar. This is shown by the fact that the Dominion and Provincial Governments and other borrowers have had to pay more for loans in the last few years than they had around 1900.

On the basis of the present purchasing power of the Canadian dollar, an investor who bought a 30-year bond in 1899, making a similar purchase today would expect something like the following increase in the rate of interest:

4% in 1899 should expect 5.95% now.
6% in 1899 should expect 8.93% now.

The following table illustrates some fluctuations in the investment value of the Canadian dollar between 1905, 1910, 1914, and October, 1915, on the basis of the average wholesale price of commodities, as ascertained by the Department of Labor:

4% in 1905 equivalent to 5.20% now.
5% in 1905 equivalent to 6.50% now.
6% in 1905 equivalent to 7.80% now.
4% in 1910 equivalent to 4.78% now.
5% in 1910 equivalent to 5.98% now.
6% in 1910 equivalent to 7.17% now.
4% in 1914 equivalent to 4.42% now.
5% in 1914 equivalent to 5.54% now.
6% in 1914 equivalent to 6.63% now.

This is another illustration that gold is not wealth in itself, but simply a commodity like wheat or coal, and derives its value chiefly because it is a good means of exchange of other commodities, fairly easy to handle and hard to get except by some such exchange. Capital is symbolized by gold and demands its wages equally with labor—an increase in time of stress, a decrease when times are slack.—Financial Post of Canada.

"I have only one object—the salvation of the country. After that I shall disappear." So declares General Joffre. Another fine example of Cincinnatus going back to the plough.

One of the good results of the war so far as Canada is concerned promises to be the refining of all nickel in this country.

When one considers all that has happened in Mexico since Porfirio Diaz was driven out of it, one must admit that the old man, despot though he may have been, knew how to govern a turbulent people and was the best sort of a ruler for country like Mexico.

Britain is now more interested in winning the war than in obtaining peace. In Germany the reverse is true.

It doesn't look as though that Russian offensive was any false alarm.

We may expect reports of the capture of Villa for the next six months; by that time he may have another army.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, Jan. 24, 1868.

The tone of the French press as well as that of Prussia is eminently peaceful.

The value of the imports at the port of Montreal for the year 1867, amounted to the sum of $28,378,118, showing a decrease of $12,203 from the sum in 1866.

MONTENEGRO

They rose to where their sovran eagle sails,
They kept their faith, their freedom, on the height,
Chaste, frugal, savage, arm'd by day and night
Against the Turk; whose inroad nowhere scales
Their headlong passes, but his footstep fails,
And red with blood the Crescent reels from fight
Before their dauntless hundreds, in prone flight
By thousands down the crags and thro' the vales
O smallest among peoples! rough rock-throne
Of freedom! warriors beating back the swarm
Of Turkish Islam for five hundred years,
Great Tsernogora; never since thine own
Black ridges drew the cloud and broke the storm
Has breathed a race of mightier mountaineers.

The Senate.

The death of Senator Riley, of British Columbia, leaves nine vacancies in the Upper Chamber, so that when they are filled the present Liberal majority will be reduced to eight. Very shortly, therefore, we will have absolute assurance that there will no longer be any such national disgrace and national calamity as occurred when the Naval Bill was defeated—a defeat for which the Laurier Liberal Senate was so shockingly to blame.—Kingston Standard.

White Slave Law and Blackmail.

A mischievous side of the Mann law is emphasized in the report from New York of the uncovering of a system of organized blackmail which has already mulcted victims of something like a quarter of a million dollars. Perhaps the victims, or most of them, are not very deserving of sympathy, and people who misconduct themselves are often exposed to blackmail even when exposure involves only disgrace and social ostracism. But the blackmailer is obviously helped by a law which arbitrarily under certain conditions makes a felony of what is in itself but a misdemeanor. In so far as the Mann Act was intended to break up interstate traffic in women it was a useful measure in a world-wide campaign, which was well under way when the war interrupted international reforms. In so far as the law is stretched beyond that legitimate purpose it has worked much evil and no good that the state could not accomplish for themselves. A trial of its workings only strengthens the case for amendment by Congress.—Springfield Republican.

A Progressive Government.

In his address to the Civic Improvement League, Mr. Hanna forecasted the early creation of a Ministry of Municipal Affairs in the Ontario Government. There is great need of a Department to supervise town-planning, regulate municipal borrowing and standardize municipal expenditures and accounting. Mr. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works, favors the establishment of a Department of Labor to improve the social and economic conditions of the wage-earning classes, as recommended by the Commission on Unemployment. The experience of other countries proves that effective reforms in this field can be obtained only through centralized direction and control. A Department of Public Highways has just been established with a view to the steady improvement of country roads throughout the Province. Good roads, municipal reform and the reduction of recurrent unemployment are three requisites for a happier and more prosperous commonwealth. The Hearst Government is abreast, and means to keep abreast, of the times.—Toronto News.

The Better Judge.

Some years ago the Oldham amateurs were producing one of Handel's oratorios, under the personal tuition and conductorship of the late Sir Charles Halle. Among the orchestra was the famous and gigantic bassoon player, George Seel of Ashton-under-Lyne. At the first rehearsal Halle went to George and, indicating several bars for the bassoon, told him not to play them on the night of the performance. George was inwardly boiling with indignation, but said nothing. On the night of the performance George played the banned music.

When the affair was over Halle went up to Seel in a great rage and, pointing to the notes, said, "I told you to leave them out, didn't I?"

"Aye, you did," said George, "but Handel towd me to put them in, an' he were a better judge than you."—London Answers.

Siamese Earth Eaters.

The Lastians of Siam actually eat and enjoy earth. It has never been discovered where these peculiar people contracted this habit, though it is generally believed that it probably came about in the time of a famine, when there was nothing else to be had.

However, the habit has now got such a hold upon them that old and young, rich and poor alike, indulge freely in its consumption. It is preferred when it has been acquired from the vicinity of waters so that it carries with it a taste of fish. It is made into a pasty substance and smothered into the ground in a hot fire. It can be obtained at markets and at stores and is served at dinners and at big functions of any description. In some parts of the Kongo earth is sold in the shape of apples and oranges and is given out in various colors—yellow, brown, gray and even pink, which is looked upon as a very delectable luxury.

GREAT SEAL OF CHARLES II.

Impression of One First Used by Monarch Found on State Papers.

There has just been discovered in a volume of the Clarendon State Papers at the Bodleian Library an almost perfect impression of the first Great Seal of Charles II.

The discovery, says the Bodleian Quarterly Record, supplies a gap in the series of Great Seals of England—otherwise complete except for the fourth seal of Henry VI. for French affairs—and has a special historical interest of its own. The Royal Seal of Charles I., captured at Oxford in 1646, had been defaced in Parliament that year, and its Parliamentary rival continued in sole use until the King's execution. In January, 1649, Parliament appointed a committee to take order for the framing of a new Great Seal, and in February this new Seal of the Commonwealth was brought into the House, and the old one broken up. Meanwhile the Prince of Wales, then an exile at The Hague, assumed the title of King of England and took steps to provide himself with a Great Seal of his own.

Clarendon informs us that this first Great Seal of Charles II. was lost in the defeat at Worcester, September, 1651. The British Museum charter, which was hitherto the sole evidence for its use, is dated September 18, 1649; the Bodleian example is attached to letters patent of Charles II. (on vellum) granted to Sir Edward Hyde and Francis Lord Cottington on May 10 of the same year, constituting them the King's plenipotentiaries in Spain. That it was made at The Hague is in every way probable, and it is natural to suppose that Charles II. issued orders for making a new Great Seal of England upon receiving news of his father's death.

The seal is in dark yellow wax and its diameter is exactly six inches. A portion of the obverse is missing. The impression is sharp and clear over the greater part of the surface, but there is a double imprint (due to a kind of side slip) over one side on both obverse and reverse. The obverse shows the King enthroned, wearing the mantle and collar of the Garter; the head is missing. Outside the throne are, on the dexter side a lion supporting between his forepaws a banner of St. George; on the sinister side a unicorn gorged and chained, holding a banner of St. Andrew. The reverse shows the King in Roman armor, on a prancing horse. In the field are the royal arms, encircled with an inscribed Garter; on the other side is a double rose ensigned with a crown. Between the horse's legions is a lion standing.

The legend is: "Carolos II. Dei Gratia Magnae Britanniæ Franciæ et Hiberniæ Rex Fidei Defensor."

Regimental Peculiarities.

The red and white feather worn by the Northumberland Fusiliers keeps ever green in regimental historic records the memory of the desperate fight at St. Lucia in 1778 when the men of the regiment plucked the buckles from the hats of the slain French soldiers and decorated their own with them.

The Golucestershire Regiment enjoys the distinction of wearing the "Sphinx" on the back as well as the front of their headdress. This honor was granted to them to commemorate the gallantry of the 1st Battalion (the old 28th Foot), when Colonel Paget ordered the third or rear rank to face about, and in this way they beat off the enveloping attack of the French column at Alexandria.

The Coldstream Guards took their name from the little village of Coldstream, near the borders of Scotland. They were originally known as the Coldstreamers, which is the correct way to speak of them, and not as the Coldstreams. The regiment was first raised by Monk, the "King Maker," from among the hardy borderers, who followed him anywhere and everywhere, caring very little whether they fought for Cromwell or King Charles. When the former died Monk marched the Coldstreamers to London and restored King Charles.

How a Reprieve is Arranged.

Nominally the power of reprieve and pardon belongs to the Royal prerogative. At one time it was actively exercised by the Sovereign; but now, although the act is carried out in the Sovereign's name, and with the Royal signature, the responsibility rests entirely with the Home Secretary in England, the Lord-Lieutenant in Ireland, and the Secretary of State in Scotland.

The decision is sent to the governor of the jail, who is responsible for the man after he leaves the court, and by him it is rapidly communicated to the felon in the cell. If it be an adverse decision the news is broken to him as gently as possible. When a reprieve comes the convict is summoned to the governor's room, and when he gets that order he knows at once that his prayer has been heard. The governor may say a kind word or congratulate him; but the real business is to read out the letter of the Home Secretary to the man as he stands between two warders at the other side of the table.

Historic Inn Closed.

"The Three Pigeons," one of England's oldest and most famous inns, and the sole existing tavern of Elizabethan times, was closed a few days ago by the Middlesex Licensing Justices, in accordance with a movement inaugurated some time ago by the temperance leaders to restrict the number of licensed inns.

"The Three Pigeons" was used as a background for the low comedy scenes in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," and Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," and is alluded to in Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend." The inn, perhaps, has had more literary associations than any other English tavern.

That Serbia, a country of 3,000,000 population, has fewer than 200 doctors is a surprising revelation of the war.

RUSKIN IN THE KITCHEN.

How He Prepared Coffee for His Guest.

Ruskin not only preached the gospel of efficiency, says the Youth's Companion, but when the exigencies of the occasion demanded he practised it also. In her entertaining book of reminiscences, "Thirteen Years of a Busy Woman's Life," Mrs. Alec Tweedie says that her father, Doctor Harley, a well known London physician, was a great friend of Ruskin's and often staid at Brantwood. One night Ruskin asked Doctor Harley whether he liked tea or coffee before he got up.

"A cup of tea," he replied.

"Why don't you choose coffee?"

"Well, to tell the truth, I have lived so much abroad that I don't fancy English coffee; it is generally so badly made."

His host said nothing. The next morning Doctor Harley was awakened, and a strong smell of coffee permeated the room. Turning to a servant, he asked, 'Is that my cup of tea?"

"No, sir, it is Mr. Ruskin's coffee."

"Mr. Ruskin's coffee! What do you mean?"

"The master was up early. He roasted the coffee himself, he ground the coffee himself, and he made the coffee himself, and he hopes you will like it."

Mayoral Curiosities.

There are several modern Dick Whittingtons among the new lord mayors and mayors of England and Wales. Councillor Charles Thomas, the new Mayor of Newport began life as a pitboy at Barnsley Colliery, while Councillor George Nicholls, who is the new Mayor of Peterborough, started work as a farm laborer, afterwards working as a navvy and helping to excavate Tilbury Docks.

Among other mayoral curiosities it might be mentioned that Alderman, William James Hughes, the Mayor of Sandwich, who is elected mayor for the thirteenth time, was presented with a black wand in accordance with an ancient custom which commemorates the death of a Danish Mayor of Sandwich, who, in A.D. 840, was killed in the battle of the Danes at Bloody Point, in the Sandwich haven.

The old custom of "weighing in" the mayor is still kept up at High Wycombe, Bucks, and Councillor John Gomm, the new mayor, submitted himself to the ordeal of the scales, while the only working journalist in the kingdom to be elected mayor is Alderman J. T. Raby, Fellow of the Institute of Journalists, who fills the mayoral chair of Lichfield.

Christening Beliefs.

There are many superstitions in England connected with the manner in which baby is carried into church for the baptismal service. It is supposed to affect the character and disposition in after-life. The nurse, or whoever carries him or her, should enter the church with the right foot, stepping briskly and dancing the baby in her arms, so that the little one shall grow up cheerful and light-hearted.

Another old-fashioned theory is that if a boy is baptized in the water previously used for a girl he will grow up feeble and effeminate; while if the case is reversed the baby girl will grow up lacking in womanly attributes. In every country white is employed for all baby garments, but where a little color is introduced the superstitious mother takes care that it is a lucky shade. Red is said to be a lucky color, pink and blue are also favorable, but green, the color of jealousy, and yellow symbolize strife.

Content With the Garter.

Lord Dufferin's story of the French stationmaster who approached him with a request that he would obtain for him a British decoration of some sort is worth re-telling. Most of the Royalties who had, so to speak, passed through his hands had conferred on him various stars and crosses, but, though he had several times been responsible for the safety and comfort of the British Sovereign, he had received no decoration in return.

"But most of our orders are given for military distinction or to civil servants," Lord Dufferin explained, soothingly. "For example, the Bath, the Star of India, and so forth."

The stationmaster looked very glum.

"There is, however,' his lordship continued, "one order that is given for no particular merit or service—the Order of the Garter."

"Ah, well," said the stationmaster, "I suppose I must be content with that!"

Why Hindu Poet Avoids Japan.

A traveler returned from India to Japan, according to the East and West News, tells why Sir Rabindranath Tagore gave up his proposed visit to the land of the Rising Sun. First, he says, because the Hindu poet, like other poets, "changes his mind frequently; second, because his tenants are suffering from want of food; third, he has become incensed at a Japanese who abused Tagore's confidence, pretending to be an admirer of the poet's most refined works, and all the while insanely addicted to London music hall songs. "He sings for hours in private, but at the top of his voice," the poet is reported to have said, with a withering expression of scorn, "what he calls 'Tippulaly!'"

Devant's Greeting.

Mr. David Devant, the famous conjurer, is now giving his wonderful performance at the leading halls and throughout the country. He sends this special message for Lord Derby's recruits:

"Dear Boys,—Lord Derby will surprise the enemy more than any conjurer when he shows them what he has up his sleeve. You are going forward like real Britons in the cause of Right, and your spirit will act like magic. Good luck and God speed you each and every one!"

HIGH POWER GUNS

Long Range Weapons That Are Used in Land Warfare.

TYPES OF HEAVY ORDNANCE.

Field and Siege Guns, Howitzers and Mortars Are Very Much Akin, and It Is Difficult to Say Just Where One Ends and the Other Begins.

There is no sharp and distinct understanding on the part of the average person as to the difference or distinction between the field gun, the siege gun, the howitzer and the mortar. The precise line of distinction or mark of distinction between these classes of weapons might be difficult even for an ordnance technician to define. It is certainly difficult for a layman to tell just where the gun ends and the howitzer begins, or where the howitzer ends and the mortar begins.

Considered in a broad and general way, the special purpose of the gun was and is to destroy other guns in march or in position, to destroy troops in the open and to batter down objects behind which troops find shelter. The projectile of the gun by high powder pressure was given a high velocity and a relatively flat trajectory, which means that the shot passing from the gun to the target did not rise high above the earth or above a line joining gun and target. To withstand the powder pressure required for this work the gun was heavy in relation to the weight of the projectile. From the fact that the shot traveled in a path relatively of slight curve, its slope of fall or its angle of fall was not steep. It would go through a stone wall, or perhaps smash it, or would go deep into a dirt embankment, but it was not easy to put a shot inside a narrow deep trench, or to plant a shot so close behind an embankment as to kill men sheltered there.

The shot from the gun was good at penetration, but ineffective in searching the rear of cover. To accomplish that purpose another style of gun was devised. The pressure per square inch of powder chamber was decreased, the angle of elevation of the gun was increased, the angle of departure of the shot wsa greatly increased and the shot after reaching the summit of its path fell so steeply that if the range were known and the practice good the shot would land in a trench or fall so close behind an embankment or parapet that men would find no shelter there.

This being possible by a reduction of powder pressure per square inch of chamber surface and consequent reduction in the speed of the projectile, it was found that the weight of the gun in relation to the weight of the projectile could be diminished, thus increasing its mobility or the facility with which it could be moved from place to place.

It was found that the barrel of this gun could be very much shortened, thus effecting a saving in weight. But in making the changes in this gun instead of absolutely decreasing its weight the gunmakers enlarged its bore and increased the size of its projectile, thus increasing its efficiency. This type of gun, though not in the narrow and technical sense a "gun," is ordnance and an element of artillery and was given the specific name "howitzer."

The mortar was a gun that could give a higher angle of fire and a more plunging fire than a howitzer. It was a very short piece of ordnance, fired from a platform and held down by ropes. Forts and mortar boats used it for getting a high angle of fire and a more plunging fire with larger shell than could be had using a howitzer. The range used to be obtained by varying the power charge. At this day mortars weighing at least four tons, fitted with an elevating device and range scale and with recoil and counter recoil or recuperator devices, are hauled around on wheels, set down on a platform also carried on wheels, and producing vertical fire with a high explosive shell weighing 250 pounds with or without a delay action fuse.

The field gun for the purpose of firing over ridges, getting at troops on the reverse slope of ridges or across hills, giving to shrapnel the proper slope of fall for effective distribution and keeping the load light on the horses has veered away from the gun as developed in ship and fortress artillery and in the direction of the howitzer-like properties. Field guns have had their trails split that the breech may be further depressed, thus giving them a higher angle of fire designed for use against air craft, and in effecting a useful compromise between power and mobility the trajectory of shots from this gun is high and the slope of fall quite steep.

Guns of high power—high powder pressure, high velocity and long range—have been built to give vertical fire or nearly vertical elevation against aeroplanes or dirigibles.

So, as announced, it is not an easy question to decide just where gun, howitzer and mortar divide.

Now He Knows.

CHAPTER III.

With an effort Sir John Vessie pulled himself together. The instinct of self-preservation came to his aid, forcing him to action.

With one hand pressed against the wall, he stepped over the unconscious figure at his feet. The white, upturned face gleamed in the darkness. A thought struck him that perhaps she was dead. He had used all his strength when he had thrown her. Trembling from head to foot, he crept into his bedroom and shut the door. Turning on the light, he found his dressing-gown and put it on.

He had no definite idea of what he was going to do or say. The knocking outside had to be silenced, some explanation given.

His brain was in a whirl. Reason had deserted him. He wondered if it were not all some dreadful nighmare—everything that had happened since he boarded the train at Homburg.

Automatically he drew back the bolt and opened the door leading into the corridor. The manager was standing outside, behind him a couple of servants, and a third person whom Sir John recognized with a throb of vague fear. The man with the black mustache and a bald head who had haunted him right through his journey.

He was now a part of this dreadful nightmare. The manager stepped into the room and, after glancing round, looked at Sir John. Then he beckoned to one of the servants, the fireman on night duty.

"Hope we are not disturbing you, Sir John, but the fireman reported hearing a disturbance in one of these rooms; a shriek for help."

The fireman stepped forward and touched his cap. "Sounded like a woman's voice, sir. And I heard a man shout 'Thief!' twice."

"I think you must have made a mistake," Vessie said, speaking very deliberately. "I was asleep until a moment ago."

He was conscious of listening to his own voice, of wondering what he was going to say next.

"That's very funny," the manager said, stroking his chin. "I suppose you've looked. There's no one in your sitting-room?"

Sir John stepped back. "When I first heard the knocking I went in there. There was a row going on in the street—I believe that awoke me—a woman cried out or something. I always leave my windows wide open."

The fireman looked unconvinced. "I certainly heard some one shout out 'Thief!' very distinctly."

"So did I."

Sir John turned round quickly at the sound of another voice. The sinister man with the black mustache had spoken. He was standing close to the sitting-room door.

"I dare say it was some one in the street, though," he continued, looking at Sir John. "You say you heard voices outside?"

Vessie nodded. "Undoubtedly; but I was half asleep and didn't pay much attention."

The manager moved toward the door. "I am very sorry we have troubled you, Sir John. But these jewel robberies we've had lately in London make one nervous," he laughed pleasantly. "And we have a very well-known actress staying in the hotel to-night. I believe she came over in the same boat as you did, Sir John."

The stranger with the black mustacho was the last to leave the room. He glanced over his shoulder as Vessie shut the door.

"I should think you will be glad to get home and be certain of an undisturbed night's rest, Sir John," he said meaningly.

Vessie closed the door, bolted and locked it. He stood quite still for a few moments, breathing heavily. He listened until the footstep outside had died away. Then he crossed the room and noiselessly opened the sitting-room door. He listened before entering. His heart was racing like the engine of a motor-car. His body broke out into cold a sweat as he turned on the light.

Myra Berrington was still lying on the floor; her eyes closed, but her face did not look quite such a ghastly color. Across the forehead, beneath the crown of red-brown hair, a drop of blood slowly trickled. Sir John bathed her hands and face with cold water, then fetching his flask, he forced some spirit between her lips.

Presently he saw her eyelids flicker, and a prayer of gratitude rose to his lips. A few moments later her eyes opened, and she looked at him.

"What has happened?" she asked faintly.

She made an effort to rise. Lifting her up, Vessie helped her into the armchair. She put her hand up to her forehead as if trying to remember.

"It's all right,' Sir John whispered; 'It's all right, Miss Berrington. Wait until you have recovered—then—I'll help you back to your own room."

With an effort she rose to her feet, refusing Sir John's assistance. When he tried to touch her she pushed him away. He watched her anxiously, terrified lest she faint, afraid to speak, not knowing what to say. She looked at the dressing case still lying on the floor; then she looked at Sir John. He was still trembling from head to foot.

"I remember now," she whispered. "I came to fetch my dressing case. The clerk at the bureau told me I would find it in No. 42."

"Yes. I—I—" Sir John hesitated. How was he to explain?

"The door was open. I saw my dressing-case standing on the table by the window; I entered—the wind must have blown the door to. Just as I was groping for the light some one came into the room, seized me, struck me, and threw me down."

Sir John rung his hands impotently He was terrified lest some one was still hanging around the corridor outside—lest their voices were heard.

"Miss Berrington, I implore you, wait until to-morrow. If you are sufficiently recovered, go to your own room. Don't speak of what's happened to any one. To-morrow I will explain."

"It was you!" She pointed her finger at him condemningly. "This is a plot, a trick—"

"Miss Berrington!"

There was a short silence, which to Vessie seemed an eternity. Stooping down, Myra Berrington picked up her dressing case.

"Open the door!"

He obeyed, looking at her imploringly. "You must let me see you to-morrow and explain everything. I was asleep in the next room. I heard a noise in here! I came in—in the darkness I mistook you for a thief!"

She looked at him scornfully and laughed. "You thought I was a thief. There is a proverb, 'Set a thief to catch a thief.' Perhaps you'll explain to-morrow what my dressing-case was dong in your possession?"

She swept out of the room before Sir John could stop her. He dared not follow. Slowly Sir John closed and locked the door. What she thought, what she believed, he dared not consider. He had no very clear conception of what had happened himself.

He felt guilty of some hideous crime. Fate had suddenly tripped him up, and he was floundering helplessly in a dreadful quagmire which threatened to engulf him.

A church clock struck the hour. Vessie lit a cigar and tried to steady his nerves. It was all a terrible mistake, yet quite explicable. The hotel clerk with whom he had left the message had blundered. Miss Berrington had no right to walk into any room the door of which she found open, even though she was in search of her dressing-case.

How did he know that there had not been some ulterior motive behind her action? How did he know that she was not a thief, one of those thieves who stole honor, reputation—

Yet if she refused to accept his explanation in the morning? Of course, he might have to offer her some recompense. If the affairs got into the newspaper, became public property!

He rose from his chair with a shiver, pulled the blind back from the window and looked out. A pale gray light was stealing over the roofs and spires of the city in the east. Some fifty miles away his wife was sleeping peacefully in the old Tudor mansion in Sussex. His wife and family. He had to consider them as well as himself.

No breath of scandal had ever touched his name. Every single man and woman and child on his estate looked upon him almost in the light of a little god. He could do no wrong.

His nerves were on edge. Everything seemed exaggerated and abnormal. Switching off the light he crept into bed and lay down. For a long time he tossed to and fro, but at last sleep came.

It was half-past eight when he awoke with a start. He felt more himself after a cold plunge; and the whole affair of the previous night seemed more like a bad dream than ever.

Yet he was conscious of both looking forward to, and dreading, his interview with the beautiful Myra Berrington.

The clocks were striking ten as he made his way toward the restaurant.

Sih John was crossing the corner of the lounge when suddenly he stopped dead. Some one had spoken his name. He gazed about him. The lounge was deserted. On his right, the telephone room. The voice he had heard came from one of the telephone boxes. He stood still and listened. Again he heard his name—from a woman's lips!

The voice was Myra Berrington's voice; there could be no mistake. Like all actresses, she had a remarkably clear and penetrating voice. Vessie had thought it beautiful the first time he heard it on the express train. Now—now it somehow fed the flames of suspicion and made him feel afraid—of what, he scarcely knew.

He started forward. At box No. 3 he saw Miss Berrington seated before the telephone. Her back was toward him. She had failed to close the door properly; it was swinging partly open. Sir John had no intention of eavesdropping, but he listened.

And then, like a lightning flash, he knew what was happening. Myra Berrington was telephoning to Lady Vessie! She had rung up his wife at Napperly Hall in Sussex. With what object? he asked himself, momentarily paralyzed and bereft of action. There could be only one object—revenge, blackmail!

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

Dr. Yates' Trousers.

St. Catharine's was the first Cambridge college to produce a don who dared to stagger humanity by wearing trousers. He was Dr. Lowther Yates, "a large, square man from Cumberland," suspected of radical opinions, who was master of "Cat's" during the closing years of the eighteenth century. As Yates, when vice chancellor, walked in procession to the university church, wearing trousers instead of the orthodox knee breeches, somebody shouted from a window:

Gadzoons, gadzoons,
Lowther Yates in Pantaloons!

The profane impromptu poet was captured and proved to be Yates' own nephew. "Gadzoons" was a Cumbrian expletive with which Yates was wont to express intense astonishment.—Westminster Gazette.

Luck.

Luck is the main difference between failure and success. It rises like some mysterious fairy from the chaos of events and crowns its victors with an apparently hopeless ignorance of justice.

Luck must be a woman; no man could be so fickle, so fantastic in a choice of favorites.

Luck, however, has one great virtue. Although she will desert the gambler as suddenly as she came to him, she is likely to be faithful to those of her proteges who are the steadiest workers. She appears to be on the side of the biggest battalions

A Disturbing Sound.

"There is no excuse for a man being run down by a motorcar. All he has to do is to keep his wits about him."

"Of course," replied the recent victim in sarcastic tones. "There is nothing more conducive to rational thinking than a loud 'honk' heard unexpectedly in one's rear."

Opened Her Eyes.

Clara—Can it be, Dolly, that you are to marry Mr. Smith after saying to me repeatedly that you could not endure him? Dolly—The truth is, Clara, dear, that until I heard that his aunt had died, leaving him a fortune, I was deceived in my own feelings toward him.—London Telegraph.

The Orang Outang.

To protect itself from the rain the orang outang crooks its arms over its head. The hair on the orang's upper arm points downward, while on the lower arm it points upward, the apparent purpose being to shed the rain like a thatch.

ROUGH MUSIC.

An Evildoer's Medicine, One Dose of Which Is Usually Enough.

There are more ways than one to punish evildoers. Did you ever hear of chastising a wife beater by means of "rough music?" No, this is not a reference to the phonograph record which the children have played with. It is even worse. It has been in use in the southern counties of England for at least four centuries, and it is so effective that it is likely to persist for several centuries to come. The one disadvantage of this method of punishment is that it punishes the victim quite as much as it does the guilty party. It is inflicted on men and women alike, but it is most merciless when it is directed against the henpecked husband.

When it is the consensus of opinion in the village that a man or woman has been guilty of conduct unbecoming a decent, self respecting burgher the neighbors assemble at the home of one of them, equipped with tin pans, fire shovels, pokers, kettles, pairs of iron potlids, cow horns and anything else that will make a hideous noise, and march in silence to the house of the offender. Suddenly they break forth with a raucous, deafening din. When the rest of the village has been aroused and there is a sufficiently large audience the wit of the "rough music band" lays the charge against the offender in verses that are not usually distinguished for refinement and consideration. After this has been done the band marches to every tavern in town, where the charges are repeated. One such punishment, as a rule, is sufficient.

RAIN FROM A CLEAR SKY.

An Alleged Phenomenon Linked With the Falling of Dew.

In English dictionaries we find the word serein defined as a fine rain which sometimes falls from a clear sky shortly after sunset. The word is French, but has become the international designation in meteorological works for this alleged phenomenon, which is always described as quite rare.

Has the phenomenon a real existence?

The fact that a stereotyped description of it has been passed on from one meteorological writer to another since the latter part of the eighteenth century is by no means conclusive evidence on this point, for science has perpetuated many myths by the process of reiteration.

Professor Gustav Hellmann, in a recent publication of the Russian Meteorological institute, sees in the conception of the serein merely the survival of the old fashioned belief that evening dew falls from the (clear) sky, and he finds that the serein of early French writers was identical with that "evening dampness" which was supposed to be injurious to human health.

It still remains possible that rain may sometimes fall from a clear sky, though this is not likely to be a phenomenon peculiar to the early evening. Some cases can be explained as due to the oblique falling of raindrops, carried horizontally by the wind, when the clouds from which they came have passed away.

Maeterlinck on Medicine.

M. Maeterlinck might almost be described as a poet in spite of himself. Had the desire of his heart been attained, he would have been a doctor. Some years ago he confessed to his early ambitions in a letter addressed to a French medical journal. "I never commenced the study of medicine," he wrote. "I did my duty in conforming with the family tradition which ordains that the eldest son shall be an avocat. I shall regret to my last day that I obeyed those traditions and consecrated my most precious years to the vainest of sciences. All my instincts, all my inclinations, attached me to the study of medicine, which I am more than ever convinced is the most beautiful key which gives access to the great realities of life."—London Spectator.

Youthful Genius.

Pascal wrote treatises on acoustics at twelve, at which age he was busily occupied in constructing elaborate circulating machines, and at sixteen he published his treatise on "Conic Sections," which Descartes refused to believe was not the work of a great master. John Stuart Mill was studying Greek at three, had practically mastered the language at seven and a year later was acting as schoolmaster to his younger brothers and sisters. John Ruskin actually produced a manuscript work in three volumes before he reached his seventh birthday.

Goldfish.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of goldfish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about and go around and around until fairly worn out.

Worse Yet.

"Why is it nobody likes Tom?"

"Oh, he's one of these 'I told you so' fellows."

"How about Bill?"

"He's worse yet. He's one of the 'I could have told you if I'd wanted to' variety."—Exchange.

Club Prognostications.

"I think it will rain before I get home."

"I know it will storm when I get there."—Baltimore American.

The Unarmed Pirate

How She Plundered Was a Mystery.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Lieutenant Wickersham, in command of the United States gunboat Zac Taylor, cruising in the Malay archipelago, received a wireless order from the admiral to look out for a pirate vessel that had been doing a lot of damage to shipping in the South China sea. No well defined location for the pirate was given, since it was not known. Probably the order was sent to every United States vessel cruising in that region.

The second day after receipt of the order the watch on the Taylor reported to the officer of the deck that a ship was to be seen on the starboard quarter. She was changing her course very frequently. She did not look at all like a pirate, but on account of her mysterious actions the watch thought it his duty to report her.

The commander of the Taylor ordered the ship's course changed toward the vessel in question. No sooner had this been done than the other exhibited a clean pair of heels, evidently in flight. When the gunboat came close enough to the fugitive to discern what she was like Wickersham was surprised to see a very ordinary looking vessel, as unlike a pirate as possible. There were no ports for guns or any other evidence of a capacity for fighting. About dusk the stranger ran close into shore. She was still too far for those on the gunboat to see what was doing on board of her, but since the anchor chains could be heard rattling in the hawse pipes Wickersham did not give himself any uneasiness as to her getting away from him.

By the time the Taylor had come near the vessel night had fallen, and since the latter craft showed no light the gunboat felt obliged to stand off. However, Wickersham, suspecting that she might escape him under cover of the darkness, sent a boat in command of Ensign Throckmorton to reconnoiter. The party was gone an hour. When it returned Throckmorton made a very singular report.

He had found the vessel deserted. On her were all sorts of plunder, showing that she was undoubtedly a pirate. There was no cargo unless about a thousand barrels of oil might be considered such, but it seemed rather that this might have been for fuel. And yet the furnace was constructed for coal, of which there was a scant supply.

Wickersham was puzzled. Never had be heard of a pirate unarmed, unmanned, before. Nevertheless there was abundant evidence that the vessel was the one he had been ordered to look out for. The fact that she had fled when he gave chase was alone sufficient to condemn her. As for her crew, they had doubtless gone ashore under cover of darkness.

It did not seem that there was any need to take further action till morning. The anchor of the pirate being on the bottom, there being no crew aboard to raise it and the shore to which they must have gone being eight or ten miles distant, the lieutenant decided to let the matter rest for the night and the next day go aboard the craft himself and make a personal examination. So he turned in, leaving the executive officer in charge.

When the first faint light appeared in the east the commander was awakened to be informed that the pirate had disappeared. Jumping out of his bunk, he put on a dressing gown and slippers and hurried on deck. The vessel certainly was not where she had been the night before, but the day had broken, and the man in the crow's nest reported her or a vessel very like her on the horizon. Wickersham, after bringing a glass to bear on her, pronounced her the pirate and gave orders to get up the anchor and make chase immediately.

The pirate was standing eastward along the tenth parallel of latitude, evidently making for the open sea. The gunboat managed to keep her in sight and make a small gain. During the day the lieutenant made inquiries among the crew to learn if any one had heard any sound during the night. One man said that he fancied he had heard an anchor chain being carefully slipped through a hawse pipe. He had called the attention of the officer of the deck to it, but since the officer had heard nothing himself he paid no attention to the man's report. Nevertheless Wickersham made up his mind that the pirate had slipped her anchor and sailed away without it.

The mystery worked on the men, some of whom were ignorant and superstitious, and knots were constantly gathering to discuss the strange craft, the opinion being occasionally expressed that the ship was a phantom. But this did not reach the ears of the commander, who would have taken means to quash it.

During the day a wireless message was flashed by the admiral asking if the Taylor had seen anything of the pirate. Wickersham asked for information as to the vessel that he was ordered to capture. The answer was that the admiral had no description of her. It had been reported that several vessels due at Chinese ports had not come in. The weather had been fine, therefore there was no suspicion that they had been wrecked by storm. It Englishman, who was known to be a pirate, had bought a vessel at Canton, and it was supposed that he had fitted her up for piratical purposes. It looked as if he had captured the missing vessels and sunk them with all on board.

This information did not relieve Wickersham's perplexity. If the vessel he was chasing was the one Dixon had purchased, how had he been able to capture ships, plunder them and sink them without any armament? Nevertheless that this had been done was evident from the valuables found on the deserted unarmed ship which was now fleeing before the Taylor.

Toward the close of the second day of the chase the island of Formosa was sighted, and Wickersham began to fear that his prey would escape him by putting into some indentation or inlet along the Formosan coast. The commander of the fugitive vessel ran to within a few miles of shore, but did not put in, evidently waiting for dark in order that his pursuer might not be able to see him when he left the open water. However, reaching a convenient point for hiding, he ran into it while there was still sufficient light for Wickersham to see him.

The fact of his doing so set the lieutenant thinking. Might she not have paused in her flight, when she could have kept on, for a purpose? The fact that so many vessels had disappeared suggested that the pirate had some newfangled device for wrecking them. Might she not come out during the night and practice it on the Taylor? As soon as it was dark, taking a position off where the pirate had put in, Wickersham dropped his anchor and ordered every light on the ship put out. He would not even permit a lamp to be left burning, though covered. He resolved to remain awake during the night, ready for any emergency. However, about midnight, becoming drowsy, he went to sleep in a hammock, having given orders to be called should anything unusual occur. About 2 o'clock he was awakened and told that voices had been heard near the gunboat. Springing up, he went on deck and listened. His hearing was very acute, and he was sure that he heard a sound of oars which had been imperfectly muffled. He ordered a gun to be loaded on each of the four quarters, ready to be fired. Some of his subordinates wondered what he expected to shoot at, while the more superstitious of the crew began to fear that there was something supernatural about.

But the lieutenant ordered every man to keep perfectly silent and remained on watch himself. When the first ray of light came he descried a boat pulling directly toward the Taylor. It was a mile away, and a cable's length behind it the water seemed disturbed, as though some obstacle was moving through it. Then suddenly the lieutenant rushed to the gun that pointed toward the coming boat and stood with the lanyard in his hand, peering into the breaking darkness. Others on the deck were able to descry the moving boat, but not the object disturbing the water behind it.

Nevertheless in a few minutes all could see something that caused a cold chill to run down their spines. It was the periscope of a submarine. From it every eye was turned to their commander, who was carefully sighting the piece near which he stood. Calling to his next in command to come to him, without taking his eye off the periscope, he resigned the lanyard to him, with orders to pull it when he gave the order. When the periscope came within a hundred yards of the Taylor it slowed down and began to settle in the water.

"Fire!"

There was an explosion, and the periscope careened, showing evidence of being wrecked, then disappeared. In a few minutes the surface of the water was covered by oil. Wickersham gave a sigh of relief, which was re-echoed by every man on the Taylor.

The men in the boat turned and were pulling away lustily when a well aimed shot from another gun sent her to the bottom, leaving her crew, some dead, some wounded and some unhurt, floating on the water.

"Man a boat!" cried Wickersham.

A boat was soon pulling to the men struggling in the water. They were picked up and brought on to the Taylor. One of them was Dixon. This was his story:

He had been using the vessel he had bought to carry plunder which was secured by means of a submarine he kept with him. He would put a torpedo into a vessel, then while she was sinking board her and secure what valuables he could find. His boarding party was well armed, but seldom needed to use their weapons. After gathering the plunder he would leave the vessel and her crew to go down together, taking pains that no person lived to tell the tale. Believing that the Taylor would eventually get him, Dixon had resolved to torpedo her. Unfortunately for him, the night was dark, and he was unable to find her till daylight revealed him to his intended prey.

Wickersham reported the facts to the admiral, who directed him to hang the few pirates he had captured. The order was obeyed while the Taylor was making for the plunder ship, which was overhauled. The men, supposing that the Taylor would surely be torpedoed, took little care and did not see the gunboat until she was well on them. Then they tried to escape in boats, but were all captured and served the same punishment as the others.

The admiral's order to hang the pirates without trial enabled him to hush the matter up, which course he deemed advisable, and, although reported to Washington, the matter never got into the newspapers.

President Wilson is doing his best to keep out of the war, but we are doubtful of the ultimate result. Mrs. Pankhurst has arrived on this side.

Life in England is a queer mixture these days, but it has its compensation since the girl tram conductors came on the scene.

Notes on Good Form Calling

Calls, as far as the city is concerned, have passed almost into the land of oblivion. In the rush and bustle of metropolitan life few women and still fewer men find time to pay this social duty, though there are certain calls which cannot be neglected by those who pride themselves on good manners. Dinner calls must be numbered among these. To dine formally at the home of some hostess and then not pay her the compliment of a call within two weeks is a rudeness which should not be perpetrated under any circumstances.

Calls of condolence and congratulation must be observed, too, though these may take the form of leaving cards only, if one so desires.

But it is not this sort of call we are discussing today; it is the call paid to a newcomer to a community, a great many of which will be paid at just this season of the year, when a good many householders have changed their residence.

In the city no one in the new neighborhood pays the slightest attention to the newcomer. Every one is occupied with his own business and has no time to pay attention to the stranger other than to note just what kind of furniture is moved into the vacant apartment. But in the suburbs it is different. There sociability is more in evidence, and the advent of a newcomer is noted with interest.

It would seem that to make a first call upon a newcomer is very easy of accomplishment; that it is a plain rule of etiquette followed on both sides—on the side of the caller and on that of the one called upon. But here the side issues are constantly arising, simply because there is a deviation from the recognized rule on the part of the one or the other, or maybe on the part of both.

Occasionally a calling acquaintance is not established between the resident and the newcomer subsequent to the interchange of first calls. The difference in social position often accounts for this, joined to individual personality on either side, which renders anything like friendship almost impossible.

Another phase in this wide issuing subject occurs when a first call is made by an extremely vivacious woman who takes the matter of the return call being made entirely into her own hands, thus preventing things taking their own course. On her departure she will perhaps say: "You must come and see me. I am generally at home at half past 4. You must come and have tea with me." This casual invitation is taken seriously, and instead of a formal call being returned the recipient of it takes for granted that she is expected to come to tea with her new neighbor and therefore presents herself at the usual tea hours, half past 4, not asking if Mrs. G. is at home, but merely saying, "Mrs. G. expects me," and is much disconcerted when informed that Mrs. G. is not at home. Therefore she leaves cards, one of her own and one of her husband's, and returns home.

Matters between the two women are now at a deadlock. They have exchanged first calls, it is true, but the newcomer considers that she has been very cavalierly treated and is supposed to resent it and stand on her dignity. The resident is so accustomed to say the same thing to each of her new acquaintances that she never gives the matter a thought and does not think it worth while to refer to it at subsequent meetings, only wonders a little why this or that lady is so cool in her manner toward her.

THE WITCH HAT.

Another Variation of the Tall Hat So Very Popular.

A velvet brim, a pressed silk beaver crown and a rakish bow and band of novelty ribbon are the distinctive points about this modish hat. The fifth and latest variation of the tall crown is the Tipperary. This shape comes in all becoming colors, especially black.

A JAUNTY CHAPEAU.

Banana Nut Salad.

Allow a banana for each person and a tablespoonful of nuts for each banana. Peel the skin from one side of the banana, lift it out carefully, dip in salad dressing and roll in the chopped nuts; put a tablespoonful of salad dressing in the skin before returning the banana, sprinkle with more nuts; place on a lettuce leaf or an individual plate.

For the Children

A Queer Marine Animal Is the Dugong or Sea Cow.

One of the strangest of animals is the dugout, or sea cow. In general appearance the dugong resembles the familiar seal but has no hair on the body and is more nearly related to the porpoises and whales; nevertheless it is a warm blooded animal. The present specimen is nearly seven feet long and is the only one of its kind known to be preserved in any museum of the western hemisphere.

This animal is found on the shores of the Indian ocean, fifteen degrees on each side of the equator, from East Africa to Australia, and also in the Red sea. It is a marine animal which never ascends the rivers, its food consisting chiefly of seaweed and the algae found in the water. Years ago it was reported to have been found in large herds of several hundred individuals and to have been so fearless as to allow itself to be touched with the hand of man.

The flesh of the young dugong has been compared with pork, beef and veal, but the old animals are tougher and not so highly prized. The skin is smooth and thick; the upper lip is large and thick and covers prominent incisors, forming a kind of snout, something like the trunk of an elephant cut short across. The eyes are very small and are supplied with a third lid, which closes horizontally across the eye.

To its habit of raising its round head out of the water and of its great affection for its young, which it carries under the fore fin, seems to have arisen the legend of the mermaid, in allusion to which the name sirenia was given to this order of mammals.

Cause of Freckles.

Are you freckled? Those little brown spots we call freckles are seen on the skins of some people, especially after they have been exposed to the sun. If you went to the country the past summer or played out of doors a great deal you probably have freckles.

Freckles come on the hands and face because those parts of the skin are unprotected by clothes. Some people have more freckles than others. For some people the freckles disappear in a short time, while they stay on others for a long time.

The freckles are the result of the sun's action on cells of the skin, which cause those cells to produce coloring matter which remains there for a time.

Exchange.

To play this game one player is blindfolded and stands in the center. The other players sit in chairs in a circle around him. The players are numbered consecutively from one to the highest number playing.

The game starts with the blindfolded player calling out two numbers, whereupon the players with these numbers must exchange places, the blindfolded player trying to catch one of the players, so as to obtain one of the chairs.

In this game no player must go outside of the circle, but any other device may be used to escape capture, such as stooping, creeping, etc.

Estimating a Crowd.

Did you ever try to estimate the number of people in an audience or in a street throng? If you did the chances are that you came no nearer to the truth than did the man who bet there were a billion beans in a bushel. The theaters seem commodious, and they are all that is needed in some respect, but there is probably not one person in twenty who, if he did not know the number of seats, could guess within 500 of the actual capacity.—Columbus Dispatch.

BROADNESS.

To love the public, to study universal good, to promote the interest of the whole world as far as lies in our power, is the height of goodness and makes that temper which we call divine.—Shaftesbury.

Children's Place In The Home

It is a vexed question in many families as to whether the children should help in the home. Should they be called upon to contribute at all to the general comfort? Should they, in short, take all and give nothing in the way of service? In the old days girls were always supposed to busy themselves to a certain extent with the affairs of the home. They were taught by their mothers or other female relatives to take a pride in housewifery.

The boys, on the other hand, were concerned with outside things. They did contribute to the comfort of the home. They provided the larder with the necessary food, they protected the home and indeed did all that there was to be done outside the walls, being in turn waited on by the women indoors.

But we have changed all that. In very many homes nowadays we find that neither boys nor girls ever lift a finger to do a share of the work that has to be done by some one. The excuse is that they are at school; then they have their home work to do or they must go out.

There are many excuses, but in few cases would it be impossible for the children to do at least a small share of the work. Many people will exclaim here, "Oh, but what need can there be for the children to help in the home where there are good servants kept?" Of course in poor homes, where there is no maid or only one maid, it is different.

But it is not a question of poverty or wealth, this of helping in the home. The essential fact that we have to remember is that children, both boys and girls, are the better for sharing in that work which makes for the common weal. This is something that we are only too apt to overlook. Working, not for oneself, but that all may benefit, has an elevating influence.

If boys and girls are trained to do a little in order that others may benefit they will have started their life's work with the right perspective. Unfortunately too many of us are concerned from our cradles with what will benefit ourselves, and ourselves only. We forget that our actions are bound to react on others.

We are all familiar with the bored child. This fact should serve to show us that there is something wrong with the way that our children are being brought up. Why is the child dull? Why is he bored? The answer is, "Because he has not had any work to do." If there has been the allotted task to perform the time for recreation is valued.

"All work and no play" is a familiar saying which we might occasionally invert, for it would explain the reason for the school holidays being times of trial to the parents and servants in so many homes.

Where there are pets kept these provide a certain amount of work for their owners, but many parents take even this labor off the children's shoulders. It is one thing to see that the animals are properly tended, but it is quite another matter to take the entire responsibility of them off those who have elected to keep them. In doing this we are harming our children and making them reckless and unreliable. In training them only to make work and never to do it in the home we are denying them one of the finest lessons of life. Helping in the home engenders a love for home and thought for others—lessons which, learned in youth, will never be forgotten through the longest life.

"THE FINEST TRIP I HAVE EVER HAD IN ANY LAND."

JUNCTION OF BULKLEY AND SKEENA RIVERS, BRITISH COLUMBIA, ON LINE OF G.T.P.

The following account of a trip through the "Norway of America," the Rocky Mountains and virgin wilderness of Northern Ontario, is from the pen of a well-known gentleman now in his eighty-fifth year.

After a five weeks' visit to some members of my family, on their fruit ranch in the State of Washington, I started out for Seattle on my return trip to Toronto. On arriving at Seattle I found the fine steamship "Prince George," on which I was to travel to Prince Rupert, ready at her dock. I was located in a very comfortable stateroom, and we left punctually at 9.30 a.m.

We arrived at Victoria at 1.15 in the afternoon, and stayed there long enough to see this beautiful "Capital of British Columbia," situated on the Southern Point of Vancouver Island. The narrows near Vancouver City were very interesting with the rugged mountain peaks and sharp pointed rocks nearby, and the swift tidal flow of water in which you can see at certain seasons of the year hundreds of salmon.

The stay at Vancouver allowed time for some social calls, and soon after midnight the "Prince George" started on her voyage north. I was up before six o'clock next morning, in time to get a view of the Coast Range of mountains on the mainland at close quarters. Vancouver Island is nearly 300 miles long, and we coasted along these shores, wild and rugged, and heavily timbered, and thick with fallen trees and underbrush. The mountains, I should judge, were from three thousand to five thousand feet high, with innumerable little bays all the way. The channel or sound between Vancouver Island and the Coast Range is only about one and one-half miles wide, and the views from the deck of the vessel are interesting and at times grand. Salmon canneries and sawmills are dotted along the shores. Occasionally we saw whales spout alongside, and schools of porpoises, while a big seal popped up his head to have a look around. The day was bright, and, taking it all together, it was the finest trip I have ever had in any land, and I predict that the Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship Company will have to put on this route daily steamships to accommodate the crowd of tourists that will inevitably flock to this region to enjoy the magnificent scenery. The trip is free from all discomforts, the waters threaded being sheltered by Vancouver Island and other small islands. The steamships are models of the latest type of Atlantic greyhound, have a speed of 18½ knots an hour, are beautifully fitted up, while the food was delicious and well served.

We docked at Prince Rupert at 6 o'clock in the morning. Our train left about four hours later, eastbound, over the new line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. I did not leave the Observation Car all day, so fascinating was the scenery. The track lay alongside the Skeena River, and I could see the Coast Range of mountains on either side. We went along so smoothly that this splendidly constructed railway might have been fifty years old. Next morning we were at Prince George, and we followed the Fraser River with mountains on both sides five thousand to seven thousand feet high, lovely gorges here and there, and for miles the most glorious coloring I have ever seen. The young poplar trees were turning a rich golden yellow, and these, with an occasional spruce, added to the beauty of the landscape. For miles this solid bed of coloring continued, reminding me of the purple heather-clad mountains of Scotland and Wales, but even more brilliant. We had a passing view of Mount Robson, the highest mountain in the Canadian Rockies. We saw the ribbed sides of the giant up to his shoulders, about 10,000 feet, the crest of the peak, up another 3,700 feet, being hidden in clouds.

Mount Robson is the centrepiece of Mount Robson Park, a beautiful reserve under the control of the British Columbia Government. East of this, and just across the boundary line of Alberta, lies Jasper Park, a national reserve which has a most picturesque lake, declared by travellers to exceed in beauty any similar lake in the Canadian Rockies. Jasper Park will be a great attraction to travellers over this splendid road, to break their journey and to enjoy Alpine scenery of the finest character. We passed through Jasper Park at the end of our second day's rail journey from Prince Rupert. Next morning we were in Edmonton, and in the fine city of Saskatoon in the evening.

From Winnipeg east over the new Transcontinental line the country was very interesting to me, with its many settlements, around which were located the clearings of new farms. Passing through the northern parts of old Ontario, via North Bay and Muskoka Lakes, with charming lake and wooded scenery, we arrived at Toronto at 12.05 noon on time, five days after leaving the Pacific Ocean at Prince Rupert. Thus ended one of the most enjoyable trips I have ever experienced.

HISTORICAL REPORT

Presented to the Ontario Bar Association by Chairman W. N. Ponton

Belleville, January 8th, 1916.

To the President and Members of the Ontario Bar Association:

Your Historical Committee begs to report that attention has been so focussed and concentrated upon the men who are making modern history in "the far flung battle line," that it has been difficult to stimulate interest in the archives of the past But there is among all of us an increasing realization that the glorious historical traditions of the past are being revived, that the gallant chivalry of the men of the Inns of Court which in days of old, of storm and stress rallied men for England and Empire service, has again found expression in many a roll of honour, and this time, members of the bar, solicitors and students at law of Canada are (with those of sister Dominions) exemplifying the unity of the community, and forgetting fees and the mere earning of a living, are living a life devoted to King and Country, men behind the flag as well as men behind the gun—leaders of their battalions and platoons and doing noble duty with their comrades, all fighting not merely for hearths and homes but also for the perfect law of liberty

It is historically significant too, to note in what a large share, the responsibility of state craft, the administration of complicated conditions, has fallen upon members of our profession. An analysis of the men of light and leading all over the Empire, will illustrate how members of the bar and the judiciary have risen to the occasion, with unflinching purpose and stable equilibrium.

A paper is in course of preparation on Magna Charta, and its relations to the dominions over seas, another centenary of that great charter having passed in 1915.

A paper on the history of Notaries Public, their responsible and honourable office, is being prepared, and with special reference to the astonishing revelations of the past few years, nearly every Ontario Gazette of 1915 containing the appointment of some non-professional man as a notary public. It is safe to surmise that not one out of 100 of them will have any idea of the office other than as a means of getting fees and diverting them from our already much encroached upon profession.

As part of your Committee's work, our old standby, Lt. Co. J. E. Farewell, K.C., the Veteran Crown Attorney of Ontario, will read a notable paper on personal reminiscences of interesting trials of bygone days, into which he will infuse his genial personality.

The development of the Legal History of the Province, owes much to the wonderful spirit of research of Mr. Justice Riddell, whose arduous "labours of love" have found expression not merely at home but also through the United States, establishing a standard, and promoting a better understanding among men of common origin, and similar aspiration. We append a list of his addresses and articles, and expect for our next meeting a paper from his facile and erudite pen.

Respectfully submitted,
W. N. PONTON
Chairman of Historical Committee

AT GRIFFIN'S

No amusement spectacle that has yet been devised for the pleasure of the people of this day and age can approach in massive grandeur, dramatic intensity and impressive beauty George Kleine's remarkable photo-drama "Quo Vadis" which has created such a sensation at the Astor Theatre in New York City, in Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and a dozen other important amusement centers and is announced for a brief engagement in this city for 2 nights, commencing Jan. 26, Griffin Opera House, with daily matinees. Seats on sale at Doyle's. Prices 10, 15 and 25c.

Many grandfathers and fathers will remember the thrill of joy they experienced while watching "Dad" in the "Father and the Boys," put one over on his sons, who thought him booked for the grave and away too slow for the modern life. Although a grand old memory of the legitimate stage, this is its first filmization, and the old play hardly knows itself in its new movie dressing. Digby Bell, one of the most experienced and versatile of stage artists, handles the leads with trained hands, and is a great factor in its potency. In addition to the above special 5 act—Geo. Ade Comedy, 3 other photoplays including western comedy and adventure photoplays will also be presented at Griffin's Palace Theatre tonight and Tuesday matinee and night.

A splendid program of photoplays has been arranged for exhibition at Griffin's Opera House to-night and Tuesday. The feature film play offering being a gripping 3-act Essanay drama entitled "Caught" with the popular screen stars Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn in the stellar roles, in addition to the above offering, five other quality pictures, including some good comedies, will also be presented.

Why Water Quenches Thirst.

Thirst, a word of Anglo-Saxon origin and akin to the Latin torreo and our torrid or parched, describes a peculiar sensation of dryness and heat located in the tongue and throat. Artificial thirst may be produced by the passage of a current of air over the mucous membrane of these parts, but normal thirst is the consequence of a lack of liquid in the system. The agony of extreme thirst is due to the fact that all the tissues sympathize in this distress. It is then as a refreshing relief that a supply of water comes to thirsting lips, replacing what has been lost, cooling the parched palate, and rapidly removing the craving which has depressed the system. In short, water quenches thirst just because it supplies what at the moment is wanting and is most eagerly desired, so that Solomon could properly compare the gift of "cold waters to a thirsty soul" to the advent of good news. Thirst is to some extent appeased by the injection of water into the blood or body, though no fluid touches the part to which the sensation is referred.

The Things That Come Hard.

"I am happy because it is so easy for me to write," said a beginner to one of the great masters of French prose.

"Go home and pray," said the master, "that it may come hard."

It is so of writing, so of thinking, so of life. The easy thing is barely worth doing. The hard thing is worth doing, though the end be failure. A goal, to make which one fairly tugs at life and yet misses, is better than a victory softly won.

So often the man who speaks easily tells us least, while the sparing words one wrenches from a taciturn speaker are imbedded in thought. Shakespeare said that Gratiano talked more than any other man in all Venice. But he compared his speech to a bushel of chaff in which lay hidden a single grain of wheat and that not worth the finding.

Wandering of Minor Planets.

The "mislaying" of the minor planets is sometimes due to their actually failing to keep their appointments at the places where, according to calculation, they ought to be. An instance is the case of No. 153, otherwise known as Hilda. Dr. Palisa discovered her in 1875 and calculated her orbit. But attempts to find her again failed, and she was almost given up as lost until Dr. Palisa found her again in 1879—a long way, however, from where she had been expected. The discrepancy was caused by the effect upon Hilda of the attraction of Jupiter, of whom she is a comparatively near neighbor. For these little planets are scattered over a wide belt. Hilda gets within 33,000,000 miles of the orbit of Jupiter, and Aethra at times actually comes nearer to the sun than Mars ever does. —London Chronicle.

Dreams That Were.

The dunce has disappeared from the schools and is not even pointed out in the streets as erstwhile.

And the dear old man who used to drop in a few hours before supper and decline to remove his topcoat because he had but a few minutes to stop and who lingered until he was invited to eat, when he accepted, and who remained until 10 o'clock in the evening and then remarked that it was time for him "to be shovin' up the creek."

And the fine old gentleman who came in from the farm carrying a change in a pair of saddlebags. When did you ever see a pair of these bags?

And the gracious lady, the neighbor, who never baked anything good that she didn't send some over to your house? Eh?

LEGION OF HONOR.

The French Order, Its Ranks and Its Limits of Membership.

The Legion of Honor is a French order for the recognition of military and civil merit, instituted by Napoleon while consul May 19, 1802, and inaugurated July 11, 1804. The decoration originally consisted of a star containing the portrait of Napoleon surrounded by a wreath of oak and laurel, with the legend, "Napoleon Empereur des Francais;" on the reverse was the French eagle with a thunderbolt in his talons and the legend, "Honneur et Patrie."

The order has been remodeled several times, the last occasion being subsequent to the downfall of the second empire. There are now five ranks or classes—ordinary chevaliers or knights, officers, commanders, grand officers, grand crosses. The profuse granting of the decoration of the order latterly brought the institution into discredit, and the number of chevaliers is now restricted to 25,000, the officers to 4,000, the commanders to 1,000, the grand officers to 200 and the grand crosses to seventy.

The star now bears a figure emblematic of the republic, with the inscription, "Republique Francaise, 1870;" on the reverse two flags, with the inscription, "Honneur et Patrie.".

Telephone Church Service.

Residents on the island of Guernsey, in the English channel, are enabled to listen to church service in their homes any Sunday evening at a charge of about 10 cents. Policemen and firemen, as well as lighthouse keepers and other government employees, who are prevented by their occupation from going to church, are furnished the telephone service free of charge. At Platte Fougere lighthouse station sometimes as many as eight persons sit down together to hear the telephone service from a church five miles away.

SKATING

The world's greatest skater, Oscar Mathieson, of Christiania, Norway, will be seen in American rinks this winter. Mathieson put Christiania on the map before the Ford peacemakers ever thought of going abroad. He will meet some of the speediest skaters of the United States and Canada during his tour.

ROLLER SKATING

A world's record for roller skating is claimed for Anton Eglington of Chicago, who skated 15 miles in 42:16 2-5 in a sanctioned race in that city on January 7th. The former record was 15:04 2-5 made five years ago.

BASEBALL.

IN THE BARROW CIRCUIT

The affairs of the Toronto International League club are in a somewhat indefinite state. No southern training camp has yet been engaged, no tour of exhibition games arranged, and no manager appointed. These details have usually been attended to by this time of the year.

President Barrow of the league has sent out a call for a meeting of the clubs at New York on Monday. Immediately after this gathering President McCaffery will set to work to whip matters into shape for the season. There are at least a score of applications for the post of manager. In spite of the recent denial that Joe Birmingham had applied for the position, the ex-Cleveland leader is now being seriously considered. So also is Frank Shaugnessy of Ottawa. There are several other desirable applicants whose qualifications will be inquired into.

At Monday's meeting of the league in New York the unsettled conditions at Buffalo, Baltimore and Richmond will engage the attention of the magnates. The defunct Federal Leaguers who operated in International territory are not making the path of Barrow and his cohorts any too rosy.

Various interests are in the market for the Newark franchise, including syndicates headed by James A. Price, Pat T. Powers and Arthur Irwin. Barrow has set a valuation of $25,000 on the property.

CUBS SOLD

The Chicago National League club is no longer a West Side institution. Its future home will be the Federal League park on the North Side, the official transfer taking place Thursday afternoon. The scenes were laid in the Vice-President's office of the Corn Exchange Bank, and the principal role, that of delivering a certified check for $500,000 to bank officials, was enacted by Charles H. Weeghman, former Federal League mogul, who now becomes President of the combined Cub-Whale outfits.

Weeghman announced that Roger Bresnahan's contract will be taken care of. Joe Tinker announced that he had sold Infielder Walter Keating to the St. Joseph club. Keating came to the Cubs in the fall of 1913. He was drafted from the Columbus club, in the South Atlantic League. He showed a lot of class as a fielder, but did not hit enough to become a regular in the big show. He was carried throughout the 1914 season, but last year was "framed" to Rochester, in the International League.

Amendment of the rules regarding the laying out of a baseball diamond is in prospect, according to a statement by J. Heydler, secretary of the National League. According to Mr. Heydler many of the big league diamonds are incorrectly laid out, due to the failure of ground-keepers to understand the measurements, which were given in feet, inches and fractions of an inch. It is planned to simplify the method of stating the measurements.

DOG RACE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Jan. 21.—Taking the leaders' place in the harness when the big grey-hound collapsed, Frank Dixon dragged his dog team three blocks to the finish line last night and won a 54 mile dog sled race from Anchorage to Old Knick and return.

His time was eight hours and fourteen minutes.

Walter Howard, the favorite, was a close second.

GENERAL SPORTS

A bantamweight title isn't much to fight about, but a pair of bantams do more fighting in a round than a pair of heavyweights do in a year.

It may be true, as Jim Corbett repeats that Tom Cowler is a coming champion, but there is a suspicion that he will be a long time coming.

It isn't what you used to be; it's what you are to-day. A benefit for Kid Lavigne, former lightweight champion, drew only 800 persons and $1,500.

HOCKEY

The game between Belleville Intermediates and the Aberdeens of Ottawa, that was expected would be played to-night, has been called off.

DEFAULTED GAMES

On account of military and other reasons, the 33rd Battery team of Kingston, in the O.H.A. intermediate series, have defaulted their remaining games.

ICE RACING

A great deal of interest has been aroused in local circles over the performances of Paddy R., a former Shannonville horse, who beat the world's ice record in Toronto a short time ago, and Dayspring, owned by W. Parks of Belleville, who in turn beat that record in Montreal on Friday. These two horses met in Toronto and each won two heats and the race was laid over until the following day, Paddy R. winning out. They are expected to meet again in Ottawa during the coming week and an exciting race is anticipated. Both horses have their supporters but Dayspring is generally conceded to be the better horse. This may prove to be only loyalty to a local horse and only time will tell.

GERMANS MAKE VIOLENT ATTACK ON WEST FRONT

French and Belgians Repulse Strongest Attack Huns Are Able To Lunge—Regain All Lost Ground

GERMANS MAKE GREAT CLAIM OF VICTORY

Official Reports Say Claims Are Falsified—French and Belgians Hold All Ground Gained

PARIS, Jan. 24.—An extremely violent bombardment by the Germans of the Belgian line at the mouth of the Yser was reported tonight by the War Office. No less than 20,000 shells were expended by the German batteries in an attempt to smash the Belgian defences.

Final reports of the action had not reached the War Office at the hour when the midnight communique was issued. First reports stated that the German infantry attempted to debouch from their trenches, but the attack was broken up by the fire from the Franco-Belgian batteries.

This activity, coupled with reports of an action farther south along the Yser Canal, indicates preparations for a new effort to press through, with Calais as the objective. At Hetsas some German detachments tried to cross the canal, but the Belgian and French infantry, backed by the fire of the machine guns and artillery, repulsed the attackers.

A TERRIFIC BOMBARDMENT.

Paris, Jan. 24.—The following official communication was issued by the War Office tonight:

"In Belgium, near the mouth of the Yser, in the region of Nieuport, the enemy carried out an extremely violent bombardment, in the course of which he fired not less than twenty thousand shells, according to our first reports.

"The German infantry attempted in vain to attack, but was prevented by our curtain of fire, and was not able to set out from his trenches, with the exception of a few groups, which our fire immediately dispersed.

BIG ALCOHOL ORDER BY THE FRENCH

Taken in 100-Pound Lots For Artillery Use

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 24.—A $1,000,000 plant of the United States Alcohol Company, now under construction at Curtiss Bay, upon its completion in the latter part of March, will be operated principally in the output of a $25,000,000 order for an alcohol product for the French Government. Subsidiary plants controlled by the company must be pressed into service in order to fill the order in time.

That the deal has been consummated through the banking agency of J. P. Morgan & Son became known today.

The distillery, which is, or will be, one of the largest in the country, recently closed a deal for 120,000,000 pounds of alcohol product. The preparation, it is said, is used in 100-pound lots for the firing of the large French artillery pieces.

BRIGHTON, Jan. 24.—A squad of 27 men of the 139th Battalion are now drilling in Brighton. Since the beginning of the war, Brighton has enlisted about one in every twenty-seven of population, besides subscribing generously to the Patriotic fund, Red Cross and other patriotic schemes.

This year a movement was organized to raise a war fund to cover all a guaranteed income of $600 a month for all purposes. From this income will be paid a regular monthly sum to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Red Cross, and the Women's Institute.

Motor Expedition For Mesopotamia

MILAN, Jan. 24.—According to news received here from Constantinople, the Germans plan to organize a gigantic motor expedition to Mesopotamia, sending a large army composed of Turks and Bulgarians commanded by German and Austrian officers to attack the British forces which are threatening Bagdad.

All the motor cars available in Constantinople are being concentrated, and the army is being formed from troops released at the Dardanelles and new levies from Syria.

The expedition will be conducted on the same scale as the invasion of Belgium. Three thousand motor cars will be employed.

Quantities of floating mines will be set adrift in the Tigris, and submarines sent forward in parts will be assembled and launched for the destruction of the British transports and gunboats in the Tigris.

Why Save Only Irish Babies

LONDON, Jan. 24—Commenting on the Washington report that Lord and Lady Aberdeen announce that they are going to tour the United States for the purpose of raising $50,000 to save the lives of Irish babies, among whom the mortality owing to lack of necessaries and general conditions of war is very great, the Liberal Star says:

"This reads like another war baby myth. Ireland is no more distressed by the war than England. On the contrary, as an agricultural country, she has been doing uncommonly well, and in any case one would like to know what authority Lord and Lady Aberdeen have for appointing themselves beggars extraordinary to America."

C. S. HYMAN'S HOME ROBBED OF JEWELRY

Nearly Six Thousand Dollars Worth was Taken by Burglars

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 24.—"Idlewilde" on Grand avenue, the residence of Hon. C. S. Hyman, president of the Hyman Tanning Co., Limited, and ex-minister of public works in the Dominion Cabinet, was burglarized some time last night between 8 and 11.30 with a loss of nearly $60,000 in jewelry and $155 in gold.

Mr. Hyman was out at the time, Mrs. Hyman being in the house alone with the servants. An upstairs window had been forced open and a jimmy was found by the detectives.

Among the jewels stolen were two diamond rings valued at $500 belonging to Mrs. Hyman and a $500 diamond solitaire belonging to Mr. Hyman.

British And Russ Nearly Together

Ten Days Would Make Forces Meet If No Mishaps Occur—Turks Being Beaten Back

BOUND TO HAVE HARD FIGHT

But Will Be Happy Day When Two Forces Meet—Will Encircle Turks and Assure Victory

PETROGRAD, Jan. 24.—The Russian troops in western Persia are now so near to the British force at Kut-el-Amara that if there were no difficulties in the way it might be possible in Mesopotamia before spring and eftance, but the way lies through a mountainous country, and it does not seem possible to hope that the Russians and British will meet soon, for obviously there is a good deal of fighting still to be done.

Foe Fails in Pass

The Germans, with the Turks and their Persian sympathizers, are doing their utmost to keep the wedge between the Russians and Gen. Aylmer's forces. They have mustered energy for an attack at Kandelan Pass which has been repelled. Now in addition to the bands which have fled westward from Hamadan to Kermanshah they have secured the aid of the tribes of Luristan, a little province which lies just south of the Hamadan-Kermanshah road.

News has been received in Teheran that Nizame Sultaneh, Governor of Luristan, who had formed at the instance of the Persian oGvernment an armed force to put down brigandage among the Lurs, has gone over with his force to our enemy, but there is every reason to believe his resistance will be overcome and the British and Russian forces will at last join forces in Mesopotamia before srping and effectively bar the way of the Turks and the Germans to southern Persia. The complete and thorough collapse of the third Turkish army before Erzerum is another factor that greatly hinders the situation in Asiatic Turkey. It will be a happy day when the British and Russian forces begin to fight side by side, and it ought to contribute to a better understanding of Britain in Russia.

A Hard Fight Yet

The Times notes that the Turks appear to have stopped the Russian advance in this district, and it fears a Russian setback if Turkish reports of the retaking of Assadabad from the Russians are correct, as this would threaten the Russian occupation of Hamadan from more than one direction.

Judge Carman Dies Suddenly

Former Belleville Man Stricken With Heart Failure at St. Kitts

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 24.—While awaiting the arrival of a street car this afternoon, Robert Baldwin Carman, County Judge of Lincoln, was stricken with an attack of heart failure. He was carried into the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway office, where he breathed his last in a few moments.

Judge Carman had presided at the County Court to-day, continuing until 2.15, going afterwards to his home for lunch, after arranging an appointment with Mr. Cummings of the law firm of Ingersoll & Kingstone for a trip to Merriton. He was conversing with Mr. Cummings when the summons came, falling with a word on his lips.

He was born in Iroquois, Ont., in 1843. In 1872 he married Miss Cecilia Hulet, who survives him. In 1879 he was appointed Deputy Judge of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and in 1883 he became Junior Judge, with residence at Cornwall.

In 1900 he was appointed County Judge of Lincoln, removing to St. Catharines, and four years later accepted the additional duties of local Master-in-Chancery. He was a veteran of the Fenian Raid of 1866.

Two brothers and one sister survive: Rev. A. Carman, D.D., General Superintendent of Methodist church for many years; Dr. Philip Carman, Sirdar, B.C., and Mrs. Allan Redmond, Iroquois.

Aeroplanes Drop Bombs on Dunkirk—Cargo Confiscated

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Jan. 25.—King Nicholas, of Montenegro, with the members of his family and his staff arrived in Lyons last night.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A British official report from Dunkirk states that two aeroplanes dropped bombs on Dunkirk about six o'clock this morning. It is added that a German seaplane was forced to the water by a British machine northeast of Nieuport about eight o'clock this morning.

(Canadian Press Special)

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A statement given out today by the British Press Bureau says that among the cargo found aboard the Swedish steamship Urna, from New York to Gothenburg, and Copenhagen, are goods described on the bill of lading as fifteen cases of hammers sent from the United States to the Danish forwarding agent. They were found on examination to consist of fifteen cases, each containing bags of copper, brass and apparently aluminum filings and turnings. The consignee does not know for whom the alleged hammers are intended and the goods have been placed in the prize court.

BRITISH SHIP SINKS IN MIDDLE ATLANTIC

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 24.—After a battle with the elements lasting more than a week the British steamer Pollentia sank in mid-Atlantic tonight. All on board were saved. News of her loss was flashed here by wireless from the Italian liner Guiseppi Verdi, which rescued the crew.

To-night, shortly after dark, the men aboard, alarmed at the rapid filling of the disabled ship, flashed signals to the Verdi, whose boats immediately responded.

A high sea was running, and the men manning the Verdi's boats were able to reach the Britisher only after a hard struggle.

When all were at last safely aboard the Verdi the Pollentia, which had been left wallowing in the trough of the sea, was seen to give a violent lurch and then disappear beneath the waves.

Germans Make Attack on French

Heavy Attack Launched on Lines Near Arras—1,500 Yard Front Bombarded

NO GAIN MADE BY ENEMY

Expelled From Every Position Gained Within a Few Hours—Impenetrable Front on West

(Canadian Press Special)

PARIS, Jan. 25.—Afternoon statement in Belgium last night the German and French artillery branches continued to demonstrate their activity in the region of Nieuport. Further details confirm previous reports that the attack of the enemy delivered yesterday near the mouth of the Ysper river was checked by the fire of our guns, the Germans were unable to come out except at a single point where several groups were successful in penetrating into our first line of trenches. They were, however, immediately driven out after very spirited fighting.

These caused the Germans perceptible losses. In the Artois section a movement on the part of the enemy yesterday against our positions east of Neuvelle at Vaast which really in complete failed was resumed in the end of the day in greater strength. After a further series of explosions the mines, accompanied by very violent bombardment the Germans delivered an attack along a front of 1,500 yards, in an angle made by roadway from Arras to Lenze with the road from Neuville St. Vaast to the Loos. They were driven back to their lines by our fire. At two points where our trenches had been shattered by mine explosions they were successful in occupying certain craters but from most of these they were almost immediately expelled.

French Drop Bombs on Metz

PARIS, Jan. 24.—In the official report to-night occurs the following:—

"On January 23 two of our groups of aeroplanes, comprising twenty-four machines, bombarded the railway stations and barracks at Metz. One hundred and thirty bombs were launched against the objects designated. The bombarding aeroplanes were escorted by two protecting squadrons, the pilots of which during the trip engaged in ten combats with Fokkers and Aviatiks.

"Our aeroplanes were violently cannonaded along the whole of their course, but returned undamaged, except one only, which was obliged to make a landing to the southeast of Metz."

CITY OF SCUTARI FALLS TO THE AUSTRIAN ENEMY

Serbs Retire to the South With All Arms—No Peace in Sight Yet For Montenegro

AUSTRIANS CLAIM IMPORTANT VICTORY

News of Scutari's Occupation Taken in London as Confirmation Of Statement That no Seperate Peace Negotiations Are Proceeding

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Austrian occupation of Scutari appears to confirm previous statements that no negotiations are now proceeding between Austria and Montenegro, as according to the reports concerning the original Austrian offers of peace it was understood that the Montenegrins were to hold Scutari as compensation for Austria's occupation of Mount Lovcen.

Telegrams from Vienna assert that no negotiations are possible until the Montenegrins have surrendered their arms, but the situation is so obscure that Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had to admit in the House of Commons to-day that the Government had no actual knowledge of the present state of affairs.

DESPERATE BATTLE.

The occupation of Scutari, according to Italian reports, followed a desperate battle that had been raging for the last two days, the Montenegrins making their final violent resistance on the Tarabosch Mountains before Scutari. However, as they must have had but little artillery, most of their guns having been previously captured by the Austrians, they virtually had no means of making an effective resistance. The Austrians in their invasion are now in possession of all the ports and towns of Montenegro and in addition the most important trading towns of Albania.

Most of the Berlin newspapers discuss editorially this morning that the Montenegro peace move was merely a ruse to obtain time to improve the military position. These reports have been received here from Italian sources and the newspapers without exception refuse to give credence to them.

AUSTRIA'S OFFICIAL REPORT

The text of the Austrian statement follows:

"Scutari has been occupied by Austro-Hungarian troops. Several thousand Serbians who formed the garrison retired towards the south without resistance.

"Austro-Hungarians also have occupied Niksic, Danilograd and Podgoritza.

"The disarming of the country has been carried on up to the present without friction. At several places the Montenegrins have not even waited until the Austro-Hungarians appeared but have laid down their arms before the arrival of the troops in order to return to their homes. At other places a majority of those disarmed prefer internment to being sent home.

"The population generally has received our troops in a friendly manner and in some instances with ceremony. Riots such as occurred at Podgoritza ceased as soon as the first Austro-Hungarian detachment appeared."

PORT HOPE, Jan. 24.—The bake shop and residence of Mr. Albert Hugh, Sullivan St., was almost totally destroyed by fire about 8.30 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Hugh has an insurance of $1,000 but this will not nearly cover his loss.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

Many Matters Brought Up and Discussed Before Civic Body—Duties of City Engineer And Assessor to be Inquired Into

The City Council met in regular session last evening, the members present being: Mayor Ketcheson, Aldermen St. Charles, Whalen, Smith, Woodley, Deacon, Duckworth, Earle and Platt.

During the session some matters of more or less importance were disposed of. Committees were appointed to look into the work being performed at present by the city engineer and also to look into the work of the assessor. The question of interswitching was spoken of, also the matter of the building of a C.P.R. freight shed and its probable location. Ald. Deacon suggested that an effort be made to have the rolling mills again in operation.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the inaugural meeting a deputation from the Belleville Poultry Association was heard.

Mr. Wm. Thomson explained the object of the visit of the deputation to the Council. The Poultry Association had recently held their fourth annual exhibit. The Association appeared before the Council and asked for a grant of $100. The prize list was increasing and in consequence more money was necessary to pay same.

Mr. J. V. Truiasch said the Association this year had to purchase more coops and the outlay was greater in consequence this year.

Mayor Ketcheson informed the deputation that the Council would consider favorably the request made and deal with the matter as liberally as possible.

Ald. Woodley said the matter would be considered by the Executive Committee.

The Council was thanked for hearing the deputation.

On motion the council went into committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc.; Ald. Whalen in the chair.

The reports of the various Civic Committees recommending the payments of a number of accounts were adopted.

The following recommendation was adopted: that the treasurer be authorized to deduct the amount of $84.00 per month from the contract price paid to McCoy Bros. for the supplying of horses and drivers to the fire department, as the drivers are now paid by the city.

Communications

Mr. T. Hogan wrote the Council that he would clean out the Grier street drain for $3.—Referred to Public Works Committee.

A communication was received asking the Council to remit the Provincial war tax levy.

The officers of the 80th Battalion asked permission to flood a rink near the Armouries twice a week without having to pay for the water.

On motion the request was unanimously granted.

A statement was presented by Mr. W. H. Patterson re extra work done on the Victoria Avenue pavement, and asking the Council to grant him 80 per cent. of the money.—Referred to the Executive Committee.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Inquiries

Ald. Smith—Can the waste of water be avoided at the tank. It was overflowing.

Ald. Deacon—This was the first intimation he had of a leakage, and he would have same attended to.

Ald. Woodley—It is caused by the tank overflowing, which can be stopped at the pumphouse.

Ald. Platt—As this is to be a year of economy, is it necessary to keep the city engineer engaged at present? Was he busy at the present time?

Mayor Ketcheson—The city engineer is engaged in making a map for assessment purpose and some sewer work has to be done, also some contracts to be settled.

Ald. Woodley said he could not say at present that the services of the engineer could be dispensed with.

Ald. Duckworth said he could not see what necessity there was for two men being engaged now and it was a matter the Council should investigate.

Mayor Ketcheson—Find out what the city engineer has to do and report at the next committee meeting.

Ald. Earle said he had heard that the city engineer did private business as well as the city work.

Ald. Deacon said that the city engineer was manager of the water works department and only a paltry salary of $300 per year was paid him for this service. He thought that one man could be manager of the water works and gas department. He could never see why the city engineer should be manager of the water works department.

The matter was allowed to lay in abeyance until the order of motions was reached.

Ald. Deacon—The coroner's jury in the recent fatal accident at the G. T. R. Canifton crossing, in their verdict stated the bill boards near the track were a menace to the travelling public. Could they not be removed, or have the city no authority to do so?

Ald. Whalen—The bill boards in question are on private property. He would like to have the jury's verdict sent to the Board of Railway Commissioners.

Ald. Deacon—The Rolling Mills have been closed up for a year and a half. Could not something be done to get the mills reopened.

Mayor Ketcheson—The horse shoe department is running. It might be of use to write to headquarters at Hamilton to see if the mills would resume work and he would do so.

Introduction of Bylaws

Ald. Woodley introduced a bylaw to authorize the borrowing of $75,000 for current expenditure for the year.

After the bylaw had been read a first time the Council went into committee of the whole on bylaws; Ald. Earle in the chair.

The bylaw was passed through its various stages and numbered 2010.

Motions

Moved by Ald. St. Charles, seconded by Ald. Earle, that the city clerk be requested to write the different manufacturers of fire hose and get prices and submit same at next committee meeting of the Council.—Carried.

Ald. Whalen moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the Council request the Board of Health to have the lane in rear of the Tabernacle church placed in a sanitary condition, also that the board walk be replaced.

The mover spoke in support of motion, stating at present the lane was in an unsanitary condition.

Ald. Platt—Could not this matter be left with the city engineer, as the walk would have to be attended to by him.

Ald. Woodley thought it would be a good plan to have a roadway through there. Ex-Mayor Wills at one time offered to give a piece of land for a roadway, but some other land necessary to complete the road was not secured because an exorbitant price was asked for it.

The motion carried.

Ald. Woodley moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the treasurer be authorized to remit to the Provincial Treasurer the war tax which the city was liable for.—Carried.

Ald. Deacon moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the opinion of the city solicitor be secured to ascertain if the bill boards near the G. T. R. Canifton crossing, reported as a menace, can legally be removed, and if so steps be taken by the Public Works Committee.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Duckworth, seconded by Ald. Earle, that the chairman of water works, the chairman of public works and the mover be a committee to ascertain if the services of the city engineer is required at present and to report at next committee meeting.

Moved by Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Woodley, that the Provincial Government be memoralized to amend the Act whereby municipalities making patriotic grants may issue debentures for a period of 20 years instead of 10 at present.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Platt, that the chairman of market and city property, the chairman of public works, the chairman of light and the chairman of printing and stationary be a committee to investigate complaints made in regard to the assessment, to consider the feasibility of improving the city assessment if found advisable and report to the Council.—Carried.

Unfinished Business

Under this head Ald. Duckworth said there was great difficulty in securing a suitable carters' stand. He thought some arrangement might be made with the market leasee, where a portion of the market square might be utilized.

Ald. Deacon—We might have different stands in the city where two or three carters could stand.

The matter was left in abeyance.

Auditors' Report

Ald. Woodley said it was impossible for him to get any satisfaction from the two city auditors who were engaged last year. They have not completed their work, and state they had been unable to get certain information from the city treasurer.

Mayor Ketcheson—One of them stated to him (the speaker) there had been difficulty in getting some information from the treasurer. At the committee meeting it might be possible to have the auditors presen explain matters.

Speech of B. R. Hepburn M.P.

From the Official Debates of the 21st of January

On the 21st inst., when the House of Commons met at 3 p.m., Mr. Bernard R. Hepburn (Prince Edward), rose and said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege. On the 18th instant, the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Pugsley) made certain observations in this House regarding my connection with shell contracts. On that particular evening I was not present in the Chamber, and I regret very much that the hon. gentleman did not tell me he was going to speak in regard to myself, or I would have made an extra effort to be present. On the following day I was out of the city and had not had an opportunity to bring the matter to the attention of the House until to-day. On page 76 of Hansard the hon. member for St. John is reported as saying:

People came here from all parts of Canada, politicians, canvassing agents committee men, influential people from different sections of the country, all clamouring for orders for shells, and among others my good friend the gentleman to whom I have referred, the member for Prince Edward County, obtained for his company a large order. His company is not engaged in the manufacture of steel. He owns a planing mill, I understand, and is engaged in the manufacture of wooden ware. I could understand if he had limited his application to shell boxes that would have been a worthy ambition which could have been fulfilled by the utilizing of his machinery. But he got an order for shells, and the people of Picton naturally supposed it would mean the creation of a local industry which might have justified him in pressing upon the Shell Committee and the Minister of Militia that he was right in using his influence to secure this order so as to enable a steel plant to be erected in my hon. friend's home town.

It is quite true that the firm of Hepburn Brothers, Limited, obtained an order for the forging and machining of shells. My brothers and myself, and my father before me, operated steamboats on the Great Lakes and river St. Lawrence for many years. In connection with what business we have maintained and operated a machine shop at Picton. We have known General Bertram, formerly chairman of the Shell Committee, for many, many years, and have transacted to our mutual satisfaction no inconsiderable amount of business with his firm. We applied to the Shell Committee for a contract for the forging and machining of shells. We were awarded a contract, not because I am a member of Parliament, but because General Bertram and the committee knew that we had a plant and could complete any contract we undertook. We believed at that time that, with certain modifications and additions, we could utilize our plant at Picton. After having obtained the order—at a price in the fixing of which we had no part, but which was at the uniform rate given to all producers of shells for the same work at that time in Eastern Canada—we discovered, on the report of a competent engineer from Montreal, that our plant at Picton could not economically be utilized in fulfilling the contract. I then obtained further expert advice, as a result of which, having regard to the point at which billets were being manufactured, and having regard also to the fact that Montreal was the labour market of Eastern Canada, we located the plant at Montreal, where we have since forged and machined shells to the satisfaction of the committee and its member for St. John will at least do me the justice of withdrawing the imputation which he has made against me on the floor of this House as being a middle man.

Mr. Pugsley: I have too much respect and too much regard for my hon. friend to be willing even to appear to do him an injustice. I was not finding any fault with him—not at all. The Minister of Labour may laugh, but it was with gentlemen occupying positions similar to that occupied by him—members of this Government—that I was finding fault, and with the Shell Committee. I dealt with my hon. friend's firm as a firm that was not engaged in the manufacture of steel, my point being that the Shell Committee had given orders to many people who had no plant, no machinery, and no experience in steel manufacturing work. I made a statement also which my hon. friend says is true; that the work was not established in Picton, but in the east end of Montreal. As I explained, my hon. friend denies only the statement that I made that he was a go-between or middleman. If my hon. friend says that that is not the position he occupied. I cheerfully accept his statement, and withdraw the statement which I made to the effect that he was a go-between or middleman. But that does not at all interfere with the argument which I was making; that the Government and the Shell Committee were to be condemned for the practice that they pursued of letting out shell contracts to people who had no plant capable of manufacturing such munitions.

The Inventor Says "Don't Stir It."

Dr. Jackson, the inventor of Roman Meal, says it should not be stirred while cooking. Stirring spoils flavor and destroys granulation of the porridge, one of the most valuable features of this food in the relief of indigestion.

For early breakfast make porridge while getting evening meal. Stir into boiling water, cook in double boiler or another basin for half an hour. Next morning, first thing, light gas under boiler and allow boiler to set in boiling water while you are dressing. By the time you are dressed and the table set, breakfast is ready. Follow directions, on package and it's delicious, nutritious, and relieves constipation.

Red Cross News

The doctrine of unpreparedness has few followers even in the countries which are not actively engaged in hostilities. Exceedingly cynical indeed must be any country, which can calmly contemplate the sufferings of millions of wounded men, with no thought of organizing medical assistance.

The annual report of the Portuguese Red Cross shows that Portugal is conscious of its obligations in this matter. Since the outbreak of war the Central Committee at Lisbon has occupied itself especially with the formation of provincial branches. The number of these is now twenty-five. Their administration, as in Canada, is completely autonomous. Each branch begins its labours by the formation of a hospital unit, composed of 4 doctors, 6 trained nurses, 48 litter bearers, and in addition provided with the regulation material for the transport and surgical treatment of wounded

The chief work of the Portuguese Society has been the establishment, at Lisbon, of a Nurses Training School with a hospital annex. This hospital, which bears the name "Casa de Saude da Cduz Vermelha" or "Hospital of the Red Cross," is situated in the suburbs of Lisbon, near the Zoological garden, on the sloops of a hill from which there is an immense and splendid panorama. It is surrounded by gardens with an area of over 300,000 square feet, and has a capacity of 100 beds.

Through this and other ways much has been done to put the Red Cross work on a firm footing in the republic of Portugal. There, as elsewhere, it is realized that a country which keeps out of the world current of Red Cross activity, is a country which incurs an extreme national discredit.

INCENDIARY BOMBS.

Terrific Heat of Thermite, the Stuff With Which They Are Filled.

Incendiary bombs are one of the most fearful engines of modern warfare. The reason they throw out such a terrific heat is because they are filled with thermite.

Thermite is so hot when it is fired that it will melt iron and steel with the greatest ease and even burn its way through granite.

This marvelous substance was discovered in 1902. It is really a mixture of coarsely powdered aluminum and oxide of iron. It can't be fired by itself, but has to be started by another mixture consisting of finely powdered aluminum and barium peroxide.

The wonderful heating power of this terrible substance has been made use of all over the world in iron and steel welding. Steel joints are welded solidly together in a few moments by placing a little thermite round the joint and firing it.

The thermite mixture is as safe to handle or store as sawdust—safer, in fact. Only the special mixture or a very high temperature indeed will set it on fire. If necessary the two substances from which thermite is made can be taken separately and mixed when required, and there is no danger whatever in aluminum powder or oxide of iron, which is, practically speaking, iron rust, yet the mixture makes up one of the hottest substances known.—Pearson's Weekly.

ORKNEY ISLANDERS.

Proud of Their Norse Descent and Prefer Scenery to Trees.

Miss Elinor Root, who has been visiting in the little known Orkney islands, tells us that the natives are very proud of their Norse origin, indignantly repudiating the idea that their forbears were Scottish.

"People do not speak here with nearly so broad an accent as the people in Scotland," Miss Root remarked to her hostess, "and I notice the names do not sound Scotch—Cutt, Twatt, Flett, Cursitor, and so on. How is that?"

My hostess stiffened visibly.

"They are not Scotch. We are not Scotch. We did not come from Scotland. Have ye never heard of the Norsemen from beyond the seas? We are the descendants of them. We are not of Scotch blood. Ye do not call the Irish English; ye're not to call us Scotch!"

"I beg your pardon," I returned humbly, and to change the subject plunged into the theme of afforestation. The venture was an unfortunate one, as trees refuse to grow in the islands.

"Trees spoil the scenery," declared my hostess. "We would not have them if we could. If ye go to the southland ye cannot see anything of the scenery for the trees. We like to see scenery."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Evidently Some Mistake.

Some time ago a party named Brown had a dream, and the thing so impressed him that he gave a detailed account of it to several of his friends.

"By the way, Jim," he remarked to an acquaintance one afternoon, "did I tell you about the dream I had the other night?"

"No, I don't think you did," responded the other. "What was it about?"

"I dreamed that I was in heaven," answered Brown, with a reflective expression. "On one side there was a piano playing. On the other there was a cornet. Not far away there was a phonograph, while just beyond against there was a vio"—

"You must have been mistaken, old man," impressively broke in the other. "That wasn't heaven."

Life of a Turkish Woman.

The Turkish women are to be counted among the most industrious women of the earth. They certainly do a vast amount of work. They make carpets, screens for doors, workbags, horse clothing and blankets. A Turkish girl makes all the kibitka, or tent domestic carpets, and other household requisites before she is married. If she gets married without completing this task it is expected that she will by her own labor refund the money which her parents have given as her dowry. This dowry usually consists of 100 sheep and a certain amount of money, which a bridegroom either pays down in a lump sum to the parents of the bride to collect his friends for a succession of horse races and other sports. An important part is to decorate a camel with the handsomest trappings, which are sent to the bride's tent. On this she goes forth to receive congratulations of her relatives and friends. It is on this she is carried away by the female relatives of the bridegroom. She and her attendants feign to resist the act by throwing raw oats at the other women.

Jonathan Wild.

Nothing in the way of thieving is likely to disturb the record of Jonathan Wild, thief taker and receiver of stolen goods, who did such a flourishing business with his lost property office in the Old Bailey two centuries ago. He organized his thieves into gangs, allotting them to the different main roads to London, to churches, theaters and public functions, while a special brigade was trained for domestic service. Wild's practice when receiving stolen goods was, if possible, to inform the person who had been robbed that they had been detained by a dealer and would be restored on payment of commission. Other stolen property was warehoused, and a staff of mechanics was kept for altering watches and jewelry, which were conveyed to the continent by his own vessel. A trifling matter of the restoration of some stolen lace proved his downfall, and he was hanged at Tyburn on May 24, 1725.—London Tatler.

Lazy Tropical Laborers.

The most considerate employers of tropical labor agree with the most inconsiderate in saying that in general it is useless to attempt to spur the natives by any motive beyond the actual demands of food and shelter. Kindness and consideration on the part of the employer undoubtedly promote faithfulness, but they seem rarely to arouse ambition or energy.

It is literally true in Guatemala, for instance, that the more a native is paid the less he will work. If one day's pay will buy two days' food he will work half the time; if the pay is increased so that one day's pay will buy food for three days he will work one-third of the time. The experiment has been tried again and again, and there is practically universal agreement as to its result.—Professor Ellsworth Huntington in Journal of Race Development.

Our Oldest Wooden House.

What is said to be the oldest wooden house now standing in this country is to be seen at Dedham, Mass. It is known as the Fairbanks house and was erected 279 years ago of white pine, the walls being of logs. It has been continuously occupied and is still in good condition and quite comfortable, a testimonial to the durability of white pine as a building material.—

How He Lost the Cook.

"Well, where's that cook?" demanded his wife. "Don't tell me that she wasn't on the train."

"She was on the train," timidly explained the commuter, "but I got to playing cards and a Lonelyville man won her at whist."

That He Could Depend on Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Cure Many of the Common Ills of Life

Living eighteen miles from a drug store Mr. Carr found it necessary to keep in the house some treatment to regulate the action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

To the habit of keeping these important organs active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, when required, he attributes the good health of his large family.

Here, surely, is evidence of the value of these pills as a family medicine to protect the members of the family who use it from the common ills so many of which arises from constipation of the bowels and torpid condition of the liver and kidneys.

Mr. James Carr, Maynooth, Ont., writes:—"About 19 years ago I received an envelope containing two of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I was doctoring at the time with two doctors, and as they did me no good I used the Pills, and by the time I had finished one box I was cured of the pain in the back and shoulders.

"We have great confidence in Dr. Chase's Medicines. I have a family of ten children and have never had a doctor in the house for any of them. We live eighteen miles from a drug store and find that these Pills cure nearly all the ordinary ills by regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels. That we are all well and sound I attribute to their use and I have recommended them to hundreds and given away many a box because I believe there is no medicine so good."

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the system of poisons and remove the cause of biliousness, headaches, backache, lumbago, kidney disease and rheumatism. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

THE CHAMPION PERVERTERS OF FACTS.

If there is one Member of Parliament who excels all his fellows in the perversion of facts and in drawing evil and dishonest inferences from slight events, it is the Hon. William Pugsley, M.P. for St. John, New Brunswick, familiarly known as "Sweet William," the result of a constant smile upon his countenance when dealing in a vicious manner with any question which he thinks will victimize a political opponent. Sophistry, innuendo and misrepresentation of facts, when dealing with political opponents, are the particular traits in his political life.

An example is to be found in a two hours' speech delivered by him the other day in the House of Commons when discussing the Address delivered by the Governor-General on the opening of the present session of Parliament.

His subject was principally the Shell Committee and their conduct in awarding contracts for the manufacture of munitions of war. Political favoritism, overcharges, middlemen, and a variety of other crimes were laid at their door. Among the charges hurled at Members of Parliament, was one charging Mr. Hepburn, Conservative member for the County oif Prince Edward, with having played the part of a "middleman" in securing a shell contract in which he was personally interested, while having no means himself of manufacturing shells, which charge he had to withdraw, declaring that he thought too much of the member for Prince Edward to do him an injustice, but had been informed so and so, and upon that Grit gossip made the charge, which he had, when Mr. Hepburn made his explanation, to swallow. That, however, was not a difficult task for a political throat of his dimensions.

A full report of the attack upon Mr. Hepburn, copied from Hansard, will be found in to-day's issue of The Intelligencer, a careful reading of which will give evidence of Pugsley's powers for special pleading when trying, after making a charge, to explain that he did not mean what he said in casting reflections upon the member for Prince Edward, intending it for the members of the Shell Committee.

Such are the tactics of "Sweet William," a former Minister of Public Works in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government.

He did not confine his attacks upon Mr. Hepburn, which he had to withdraw, but charged Sir Henry Pellatt with having an interest in a manufacturing company in the County of Renfrew which had secured a contract for the manufacture of shells. This charge his late colleague, the Hon. George P. Graham at once denied, by flatly singing out "No!" declaring Sir Henry had no interest in the company, nor had he interested himself in any way in securing the Refrew company a contract. The fact is, it was the Hon. George P. Graham, Pugsley's former colleague in the Laurier Government, who was the director in the company that "Sweet William" insinuated had received contracts improperly by political middlemen's influence. His only retraction, though he had been unintentionally pummeling by insinuation his own colleague, was that he had been so informed, and smiled at Mr. Graham, who was sitting beside him. Graham, knowing his man, gave little heed to what he said.

His next charge was that no Liberals in St. John, N.B., his own constituency, could get a contract, and challenged contradiction. His colleague for St. John, the Hon. Mr. Hazen, at once gave the name of a firm composed of the most prominent Liberal politicians in the city of St. John, who had received contracts, and were busily at work manufacturing munitions of war.

This did not in the least disconcert the Laurier Liberal critic. He went on as shamelessly as if he had not falsified a single fact. Liberals must be proud of him!

NICKEL REFINING.

It is a certainty that nickel ought to be refined in Canada. In addition to the economic reason for this, there has since the beginning of the war been a military reason. With special pleasure, therefore, do we hail the news that the International Nickel Company is about to establish a refinery on the Atlantic seaboard of Canada, which will complete the process of turning the raw material from Canadian mines into its final form.

Canada produces about 35 per cent. of the nickel output of the world. One of its chief uses is in toughening the steel used in the armor-plating of war vessels, and the manufacture of large guns and armor-piercing projectiles. At the outbreak of the war, it was, of course, important that no nickel should go to Germany. Happily the Dominion Government was able to make an arrangement with the International Nickel Company, by which the entire output of its refineries at Bayonne, New Jersey (fronting New York harbor), was placed under the supervision of a Canadian official, so that there was more than the word of the company to guarantee its satisfactory destination. The arrangement was approved by the British Government, and fault has never been found with the way it has worked. Hence the military reason for a transfer of the operation of refining from the United States to Canada has largely disappeared.

But the economic reason is as strong as ever. Nickel matte, a partially prepared product of the mines, is of very much less value than the perfected nickel. It is desirable that Canadian labor should get the benefit of the difference in value. For this reason it might have been well if long ago the Dominion Government had placed an export duty on nickel matte, sufficient to compel the completion of the manufacture on Canadian soil. Whenever this idea came under serious consideration, however, the International Nickel Company, which owns most of the Canadian mines, argued that the existing arrangement was the most advantageous for all concerned, and that the increase in the cost of the completed article, if it were produced wholly in Canada, would be such as to militate greatly against the success of the enterprise. Some light on this aspect of the matter is now, for the first time, given in a statement in an Ottawa despatch evidently based on technical information supplied by the manufacturers.

Mother's Cough!

It distresses you as much as her! Why continue to treat it by dosing the stomach (which is not ailing) with cough mixtures, syrups, tonics, and the like? You will never cure lung troubles by dosing the stomach. The Peps way is entirely different. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach—which is not ailing.

Peps contain no morphia, laudanum, nor any of the poisons which are found in many of the old-fashioned syrups. Peps are, therefore, best for aged people and for young children. Peps do not disorder the stomach; they sweeten the breath, are pleasant to take, and are the latest and best that science can offer for the treatment of coughs, colds, bronchitis and allied lung troubles. 50c. all druggists and stores, or for price from Peps Co., Toronto. Peps

"The establishment of a plant in Canada," we are told, "will be a considerable economic problem, as it will entail increased cost of sulphur, free oils, coke, nitre cake, fire brick, fire clay, magnesite brick, and coal. Until now the refining has been done at Bayonne, New Jersey, adjacent to the great oil refineries and chemical plants. In the ordinary process the ore mined in the mines in the Sudbury district is transported to the smelter at Copper Cliff, and is there smelted by successive stages into a product known as copper-nickel matte, containing approximately 55 per cent. of nickel, 25 per cent. copper, and 25 per cent. sulphur. All of this matte has been shipped to the Bayonne refinery, where the nickel and copper have been separated from each other, the copper being advanced to the form of electrolyte copper and sold in the market."

There is no thought of abandoning the American part of the industry. The International Nickel Company, with a capital of $62,000,000, owns 100,000 acres of nickel lands, including the town of Copper Cliff, where it has a great smelting plant. In New Jersey it has plants worth millions of dollars, and employing more than a thousand men. The Canadian refinery which will probably be in operation at the close of the war, is evidently intended to be a supplemental affair, to meet the Canadian demand for a share in the most profitable part of the business. Canada might still insist on getting the whole industry, and to this end might use her power to impose an export duty on nickel matte. But the Dominion Government, we are sure, has no desire to be unreasonable. Nickel now enters largely into structural material for bridges, into marine engines and propellor shafts, into all sorts of railway materials, etc., etc., as well as into a vast number of lines of manufacturing trades. If it really can be produced more economically in the United States than here, let water seek its level. The Canadian plant will at least demonstrate what can be done within the borders of this country. If to balance any increased cost of refining there are compensating advantages, the company will be sure to find them.

SPOKE OUT PLAINLY.

It is gratifying to learn that there is one senator at Washington who is not afraid even to use the word "conscription" in talking about unpreparedness. That man is New York State Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr. He said before the National Civic Federation: "Our whole military history has been a distressing spectacle of waste in lives and money. For a century we have relied on the volunteer system. I, for one, have no confidence in the efficiency of a volunteer system for raising an army—not even for efficient intervention in Mexico."

Senator Wadsworth added that sending out men to fight without training was little short of murder—a thought that sane men have been trying to drill into the heads of self-sufficient congressmen and Presidents ever since the time of Light Horse Harry Lee of Revolutionary fame.

Most of the great men at Washington refer to "conscription" as if it had only to be mentioned to be abhorred. Yet the principle of conscription is recognized in our constitution and was the basis of our earliest military legislation, says the Buffalo Express. The old law required every citizen to keep himself always supplied, at his own expense, with a certain amount of military equipment and to get out and drill a certain number of times a year. That much-derided general training system had for its principal fault that it did not require enough training. But it was conscription and it did not cause any such political storm as to justify our modern office-holders in trembling with fear at the word. On the contrary, it was rather popular, as conscription is today in Australia and Switzerland.

Again, the principle of conscription exists today in the land-grant colleges, where all students are required to drill. Nor does it turn any scared and indignant youths away from those colleges.

If these politicians as a class were less afraid to face facts and speak the truth, they would find the people willing enough to listen and to approve sound arguments. There will be ten men in that state to admire Senator Wadsworth for daring to speak out plainly what he believed ought to be said to every man who will consign him to political oblivion for mentioning the awful word "conscription."

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, Jan. 25, 1868.

A man who had been suffering from delirium tremens was lying on the floor in front of the fire-place of an inn, in Alton, Ont., and some young men coming in laid some shavings around his body and he was burned to death.

A little girl in Lindsay fell, smashed in her skull like an egg-shell, and is likely to recover.

A fire was discovered between two and three o'clock this morning, in the carriage shop occupied by the Messrs. Collings. The building was totally destroyed. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

No Terms.

The elusive Mr. Lincoln is able to send messages to the secret service, but the authorities are unable to lay their hands on him. No terms should be made with him. His surrender must be unconditional and then there must be a rigid investigation into the circumstances of his escape.—Buffalo Express.

Rumania.

Great Britain has bought up the bulk of the Rumanian grain crop, at a cost of £10,000,000. It is not meant, of course, for her own consumption, or for the western allies. All the grain they need can be had from Canada and the United States, and there is no way whereby Rumanian grain could reach them. The principal object must be to prevent that grain getting money expended is not lost, as when expended on shells. It is a mere investment, for the grain is worth the money. A ready customer for it can be found in Russia, and if she is not prepared to pay for it at once, England can wait. The purchase is simply a military and economic coup which reflects the greatest credit on British sagacity. One of its effects will be to render easier the maintenance of neutrality by Rumania. Sympathy and commercial interest will not be pulling two different ways.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Paper Trade.

Sweden is quite angry now, because Great Britain is intercepting and searching some of her mail matter from the United States. That the scrutiny is justified is seen in the fact that on one vessel 135 pounds of postal parcels contained 1,375 pounds of sheet rubber—all sent to agents in Gothenburg, but of course intended for shipment into Germany. Having begun to retaliate, Sweden is now prohibiting the export of wood pulp. This is meant to be a severe blow to the British press, nine-tenths of whose supply of paper comes from Scandinavian raw material. But what Great Britain cannot get from Sweden, she can get from Canada. The British Empire is self-contained in nearly everything. In Newfoundland the Harmsworths have invested vast sums in paper mills, and are getting thence nearly all the paper they consume. The same principle can be applied elsewhere. Throughout Canada, or the United States too for that matter, papermakers will be glad to get orders from England. And when once a business of this kind is started, and its feasibility demonstrated, British inertia turns in its favor, and it is likely to become permanent.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Poets' Corner

Canada.

My Canada, my North Country,
Enthroned above thy lakes,
Where every maple leaf that blows
Its memory in me wakes.

It was but yesterday I saw
Thy regiments march past,
And underneath each uniform
A heart was beating fast.

The boys I went to school with,
Now far beyond the sea;
It was but yesterday they knelt
Beside some mother's knee.

To-day I watch thy regiments
As they are marching by
To see just one familiar face,
The glance from one bright eye.

My country, if I give thee all,
What have I cause to grieve?
Shall I not count myself more blest
To give than to receive?

Dear comrades, when your mother called
From far across the sea
Each heart leaped up to say its prayer
Beside that mother's knee.

I hear the sound of marching feet—
The troops are home again,
And many a heart is filled with joy
And many a heart with pain.

And each Canadian footfall
Is dearer to me far
Than tread of all the martial hosts
That ever went to war.

As from a foreign country,
Where God their souls will keep,
I hear the echo of that prayer—
"I lay me down to sleep."

RAYS FROM THE SUN.

They Become Light to Us Only Upon Striking Our Atmosphere.

The rays of light that reach us from the sun are not light in themselves. For instance, to show what is meant, suppose you were placed out in empty space, facing so that you would look sidewise at the light rays passing from the sun to the earth. You would not see them at all. You could only see them if you looked directly at the sun, so that the rays would enter your eyes and, striking upon the retina, produce there the impression of light.

The rays passing by and not entering your eyes would be invisible because in open space there is no medium like the atmosphere to scatter the rays in all directions and thus produce an illumination all around.

The sky at night is full of passing sunbeams and star beams, a vast and inextricable web of radiations, but they lie beyond the limits of the atmosphere, and only those are transformed into light which by reflection from a planet in the case of sunbeams or by coming straight into the eye from a star directly affect the nerves of vision. —Garrett P. Serviss.

Too Tired.

Frank lives in Eastern avenue. A few days ago his companion George caught his clothing on a picket fence. He was held fast, his feet a foot or two from the ground. He pleaded with Frank to release him or run for help, but Frank refused.

"Why don't you go and help George?" his mother inquired from the front porch.

"I'm just too tired," said Frank. "Yesterday I wanted him to 'shoo' my dog out of his yard, and he wouldn't do it 'cause he said he was tired. I'm just as tired as he was."

Proof Against Wasp Stings.

A Scottish naturalist in a paper on the habits of wasps tells how a blackbird will stand at the side of a hanging wasps' nest and deliberately tear it in pieces in order to get at the larvae, apparently undisturbed by the swarm of angry insects, whose vicious stings instantly put to flight the human curiosity seeker who ventures near to

HUMAN CURIOSITY.

An Evil and a Bore at Times, but, on the Whole, a Grand Quality.

Humanity has never been able to satisfy itself as to whether curiosity be a virtue or a vice. When inconvenient it is labeled as a vice; when it leads to discovery or adds to knowledge it is applauded as a virtue of the highest order. Certainly it is an instinct deeply ingrained in human nature. On it the whole of the progressive steps of childhood's career are based. The first intelligent expression of the infant is wonder; this quickly develops into active curiosity, until life becomes an enthralling and breathless voyage of discovery. Its possession is the great distinction between youth and the purlieus of age. Youth is passed when the sensation of adventure is ended, when, instead of boundless expectation and of curiosity that penetrates into all the corners of existence, a man is content to take things as they are, when eagerness gives way to complacency and questioning to the cynicism of experience.

Human curiosity may be stifled, but mercifully it never can be killed. In its best form it raises man above the level of the rest of creation; it becomes the desire to know, to penetrate to the root of things, to ascend to the stars and wrest from them their secrets, to solve the problems of the past, the present and the future. At its worst it may be low and vulgar, unworthy prying into matters which concern us not, the desire to apprehend evil as well as good, a curiosity that is morbid and unwholesome; but, taking it all in all, it is an excellent stimulant to progress.—London Academy.

AN ARAB LEGEND.

Story of the Covetous Man Who Went a Step Too Far.

The Arabs tell a story to show how a mean man's philosophy overshoots itself. Under the reign of the first caliph there was a merchant of Bagdad equally rich and avaricious.

One day he bargained with a porter to carry home for him a basket of porcelain vases for 10 paras. As they went along he said to the man: "My friend, you are young, and I am old. You can still earn plenty. Strike a para from your hire." "Willingly," replied the porter. This request was repeated again and again, until, when they reached the house, the porter had only a single para to receive.

As they went upstairs the merchant said, "If you will resign the last para I will give you three pieces of advice." "Be it so," said the porter. "Well, then," said the merchant, "if any one tells you it is better to be fasting than feasting do not believe him. If any one tells you it is better to be poor than rich do not believe him. If any one tells you it is better to walk than ride in your carriage do not believe him."

"My dear sir," replied the astonished porter, "I knew these things before. But if you will listen to me I will give you such advice as you never heard before." The merchant turned around, and the porter, throwing the basket down the staircase, said, "If any one tells you that one of your vases is unbroken do not believe him."

Seeing an Eclipse.

In December, 1870, a solar eclipse occurred, the partial phases of which M. Flammarion observed in Paris while the enemy's shells were dropping in the besieged city. The total phase of the eclipse was visible in North Africa, and Bismarck, being aware that before the war arrangements had been made for Professor Janssen to go to Africa to make scientific observations of totality on behalf of the Paris observatory, sent a message into the city offering the scientist a safe conduct.

This was politely refused by Professor Janssen, says the London Standard, but, nevertheless, he went to Africa to see the phenomenon, leaving Paris by way of the air in a balloon, thanks in large measure to the assistance of M. Flammarion in making the necessary arrangements for the aerial voyage.

Without Prejudice.

A party of young men and women, members of a sketching club, were motoring along a country road. Just within the fence on the left grew innumerable graceful stalks, each bearing globes of pale green that shaded into gray and purple.

"How enchanting!" exclaimed one young woman.

"Do tell us," said another young woman, equally enthusiastic, to a gardener standing near, "what those beau-oo-tiful things are."

"Them? Them's onions gone to seed.'

IDENTIFYING CRIMINALS.

The System Devised by Bertillon and the Way It Is Worked.

Any malefactor who gets into the clutches of the law nowadays is a marked man for life if he runs up against the Bertillon system, which is a scientific method devised by M. Alphonse Bertillon for the identification of criminals. Bertillon was born in Paris in 1853. Certain measurements are taken from every convicted person, and these physical records of prisoners are kept on cards, any one of which can readily be found by an elaborate system of classification.

The measurements are taken on the left side of the subject, as they are less liable to alterations than are those on the right side. The determination of the convict's height is taken always at the same hours, because the stature may be as much as half an inch greater after a night's sleep than it is in the evening. The color of the iris of the eye and the characteristic lines made by the print of the finger are also recorded.

The following measurements are made: The length and width of head; the length of the left foot and of the middle and little fingers of the left hand; the stature of the whole body, as well as the length of its upper and lower portions; the span of the outstretched arms; the length and breadth of the left ear and the length of the left arm.

DIDN'T QUITE DODGE.

When the Elder Booth Tried to Escape a Man Who Bored Him.

Thomas R. Gould admired the elder Booth almost to adoration. The most minute and instructive account that exists of Booth's acting was written by him—a book called "The Tragedian"—and Gould's marble bust of Booth, a noble work of art (made before the comedian Flynn broke Booth's nose with a pewter pot), is the best likeness of that great actor. But Gould's assiduous personal attentions to Booth became wearisome to that eccentric man and vexed him. Peculiar discretion is sometimes requisite to those who would praise and please eminent persons. Booth, when acting in Boston, customarily lodged at an old hotel called the Albion, situated in Tremont street, at the northwest corner of Court street.

"One day," said Edwin, "my father dashed into the bedroom where I was sitting and, almost breathless, with haste, exclaimed: 'Gould! Coming up! Say I'm out,' and literally dived underneath the bed. I received Mr. Gould, who seemed surprised not to find my father (I think he had seen him rushing upstairs), and he talked with me for several minutes. Then there was a moment of silence, and my father, becoming impatient, thrust his head out from under the bed, inquiring as he did so:

"'Is that infernal bore gone yet?' Imagine the effect!"

The Voracious Cormorant.

How a cormorant dives for sea trout and gets them is told by a writer: "I had the cormorant under observation only for the space of four or five minutes, and during that short period it had captured four sea trout, all of considerable size. After being under water for a few seconds the bird would reappear with a sea trout wriggling in its bill. But in spite of the victim's desperate efforts to escape it was deftly swallowed, and after a few gulps the cormorant would resume its fishing operations. One of the sea trout gave it considerable trouble, however, for the fish struggled violently for some moments, but was deftly placed so that its head pointed down its captor's throat, and thus its own struggles assisted the bird to swallow it."

Early History of Rubber.

Rubber is first known to history as a plaything. It was during Columbus' second voyage that Herrera observed that the inhabitants of Haiti played a game with balls "made of the gum of a tree." Even as early as the beginning of the seventeenth century, however, the Spaniards used rubber to waterproof their cloaks, but the fact attracted no attention in the old world, and it was not until the eighteenth century that the rubber industry began. Early writers mention an oil extracted from rubber which was taken medicinally with cocoa.

CHAPTER III.—Continued

He hardly dared admit the dreadful thought that flashed across his mind. A blind rage seized him. He was goaded by a sense of injustice as well as by a reasonable fear.

He spoke as he pulled wide open the door of the box. Miss Berrington started, looked up, saw him, and smiled. Then she spoke in the transmitter of the telephone again:

"It's all right, Lady Vessie; here is Sir John. He will speak to you himself."

She turned to Vessie. "Your wife wants you, Sir John," she said quietly.

The truth stood clear and vivid now. If Vessie would, he could not hide it from himself. Myra Berrington stood before him in her true colors—an adventuress, a—

He tried to seize the receiver of the telephone in one hand, while with the other he seized Miss Berrington.

"Stand back," he cried hoarsely. "I know what you want now. This is blackmail!"

As Sir John Vessie flung that one ugly word at Myra Berrington she rose to her feet with a startled cry, her head thrown back, her fists clenched. For a moment it looked as though she were going to strike him. Vessie stepped back.

"How dare you, Sir John?" Her voice vibrated with passion. "How dare you make such an accusation. And just after what has happened—after what I suffered at your hands last night."

Vessie had spoken without thinking. He thought—the truth had come to him in a flash—Myra Berrington could not be acting! If she were, then it was superb.

He moistened his lips. "You must admit, if it isn't blackmail it looks very like it! What were you saying to my wife over the telephone? What right had you to ring her up?"

He pointed a trembling finger at the instrument as he spoke. The receiver was waving to and fro. The mouthpiece was gaping at him. With another start of horror he realized that Lady Vessie at the other end of the wire could probably hear every word they were saying. With a smothered oath he darted forward to seize the instrument and speak to her, again trying to push Miss Berrington aside, to force her out of the telephone-box.

But Miss Berrington realized his intention. She was quicker. Picking the instrument up she stepped back, holding it well out of reach. For a moment it looked as though Sir John were going to struggle for its possession.

"If you touch me I shall call for help," she whispered under her breath.

Vessie stopped, paralyzed with horror. "Hang up the receiver," he said imploringly.

He could picture his wife at the other end of the wire, seated in his study, straining her ears to try and hear what was happening; catching, perhaps, odd words here and there, recognizing his voice—then the voice of a strange woman.

For the moment he was concerned. He was altogether in Myra Berrington's power now.

"I apologize. I spoke without thinking," he stammered. "You must admit the situation was extraordinary—and after what happened last night."

Myra looked at him and laughed. The color had returned to her cheeks now; they were red as peonies. The big blue eyes shone with a dangerous light.

"Put the instrument down again. Let me speak to Lady Vessie," he pleaded; "or replace the receiver."

Still Myra Berrington smiled.

"Prove your honesty, prove that I was wrong, by doing as I ask." Vessie never raised his voice above a whisper.

Very slowly Myra turned toward the telephone, still keeping her eyes on Sir John's face. Then she held the receiver to her ear. Vessie clasped his hands together, watching her with bloodshot eyes and gaping jaws.

Lady Vessie was speaking again. He could see that by the expression on Myra Berrington's face. Every second that passed seemed like eternity.

What was his wife saying? He moistened his lips: "Let me speak to her. Let me explain—"

Myra smiled vindictively and shook her head: "It is too late!"

CHAPTER IV.

The Hawk Circles.

Suddenly Myra Berrington replaced the receiver with a click. The line was disconnected. Sir John gave a sigh of relief. He drew his hand across his forehead.

She looked at him still smilng. A strangely subtle smile. He tried to interpret it. He was torn in twain. He had doubted her honesty, now he was doubting his own. For he did not trust himself. He was afraid lest this woman's beauty had in the first place ensnared him; lest, being overcome by it, his judgment was influenced, his sense of right and wrong distorted.

"I think you had better go, Sir John, after what you've said; further conversation between us is impossible." Her voice was strangely cold and emotionless.

Vessie partly recovered his dignity. He bowed and walked toward the door leading to the lounge. Before he reached it Myra Berrington's voice stopped him.

"Just before you forced your way into the telephone box, where I was seated, I was on the point of ringing up a friend of mine. The clerk at the hotel exchange switched me onto a trunk call for you—Sir John Vessie. Before I could ring off or explain the call came through. Lady Vessie spoke to me. I was holding the line when you burst into the box and accused me of blackmail; you, of all people, to dare make such an accusation!"

Vessie tried to speak, but she held up a long white finger and stopped him.

"You have my explanation, which, doubtless, you may like to make to Lady Vessie herself when she questions you. Don't forget before you leave the hotel to-day that you have both an explanation and an apology to make me for the extraordinary affair of last night."

Again Sir John bowed, and retired. At least he was going to have an opportunity of explaining to Miss Berrington the dreadful contretemps of the previous evening. That was some consolation. But he was not satisfied. He still felt suspicious. What had Miss Berrington said to his wife?

Vessie had plenty to do before going down to Sussex, and several appointments to keep in the city, yet he did not hurry over his breakfast. With every minute that passed he began to realize more fully that he who had walked scatheless through life under an obligation to no living soul, fearing neither man nor woman, trusted by all, might now find himself in rather a tight corner.

Miss Berrington was breakfasting at a little table only a few yards away. She was wearing the same gown in which she had traveled and the same smart little French hat. Vessie found himself staring at her. The fascination now was akin to what the rat feels before the golden-eyed serpent makes a meal off him!

His breakfast almost untasted, he rose. As he passed her table he paused for an instant.

"You will find me outside near the entrance—the sooner the better."

She merely bowed, and Sir John feeling that every one, including the waiters, were staring at him, that already the affair of the previous night had got about, that perhaps his name was being linked with hers, that one of them was already suspected of being a criminal, walked unsteadily into the lounge.

He made his way to the bureau. The clerk who had booked his rooms was absent. The day clerk was on duty now. He opened the register of guests. Miss Berrington's name immediately preceded his. She had been the last to arrive. Against his name were the numbers of his rooms: 41 and 42.

It was no use questioning the clerk on duty. He dared not question the manager. While he stood at the desk trying to make up his mind what attitude he should take in his interview with Myra Berrington, a young man entered the hotel, and, going straight up to the bureau, stood beside him. Vessie was unconscious of his presence until he spoke, then he looked up quickly. For the young man asked for Miss Myra Berrington.

The clerk called a page boy, to whom the man gave his card. Vessie glanced at it: 'Mr. Ralph Humphry.'

He was a tall, slim man, rather pale, with thick, light brown hair, dark eyes, and a determined mouth. A keen, clever face. He wore a blue suit and a light Homburg hat. In one hand he held a large bunch of red roses. Sir John did not move away, he still pretended to be interested in the register.

Presently he realized that the young man was looking over his shoulder. He turned the page and shut the book guiltily.

But still he did not move. Under his hand there was evidence, damning evidence, of his guilt.

The page-boy returned and spoke to Mr. Humphry.

"Miss Berrington will be with you in one moment, sir."

Still Vessie did not move. One of the clerks asked if he was in need of anything; he shook his head. "No—I shall be leaving about midday, I expect. Room 41." He raised his voice slightly.

He fancied this young man glanced at him. A moment later he turned away and commenced to walk impatiently up and down the lounge. Vessie watched him, now and then glancing toward the doors of the restaurant. At last they opened and he saw Miss Berrington come slowly down the lounge.

The young man turned in his walk and saw her too, and in half a dozen strides was by her side.

A CLEVER RUSE

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

One morning in autumn, while taking an outing in my touring car, I came upon an auto standing in the road which had evidently broken down. A man was attempting to find the break, while a woman sat in the car. I pulled up beside the couple and asked if there was anything I could do for them.

"My wife," said the man, "was going to the railroad station at Montrose to catch a train, but this mishap has delayed us. Since you are going in the opposite direction from Montrose, I conclude you will pass through Waterton."

To this I nodded assent.

"A train passes through Waterton at 3 o'clock. If you would kindly carry my wife to that station she would be in time."

"I would be pleased to take you both. There is plenty of room in my car."

"Thank you very much, but I must remain with my machine and secure a workman to fix it or get it towed to a garage."

During this brief dialogue the woman, who was veiled, remained in the car without saying a word. After my offer the man went to her and said something in a low tone. What it was I did not hear, but she appeared to give a ready assent to it, for she got out of the car; the man took up a suit case and put both her and the case in my auto. Having shut the door and given her a pressure of the hand, he nodded to me to proceed, and I started on.

It was sufficiently late in the season for fur rugs, and the lady pulled them up to her chin. She partly removed her veil, and I saw that she was young and quite pretty. But when she put on a pair of dust goggles there was very little of her face exposed. We had not gone far before we met an auto coming at a furious pace. In it were two men, the driver and another. As they passed us they slowed down, and one of them called out something that I did not hear, but the other, who was driving, turned on full speed, and they were soon lost in a cloud of dust.

We reached Waterton in half an hour, and what was my surprise to see the lady's husband standing on the station platform. He cast a quick glance at the coming train, then at my car, evidently gauging the distance of each, anxious that we should be in time. I put on full speed and reached the platform just as the train was pulling out. The man seized the suit case, which seemed to concern him more than his wife, and both hurried to the train, climbing on when it was in motion.

My route thenceforth led me back a few miles from Waterton on the road I had come to a crossroad on which I was to change direction. As I rode along I wondered how the man I had left with the broken down auto could have reached the Waterton station ahead of me. I had not had time to ask him this or what he had done with his car.

I had nearly reached the crossroad when I saw coming a car with four men in it dragging another car. By this time I had become a bit suspicious that there might be something wrong with the couple I had assisted and that possibly I might have been helping undeserving persons. Seeing the auto dragged along caused me to refrain from letting it be known what I had been doing. When the men came to a point opposite me one of them, looking hard at me, said:

"See here, young fellow, who was that woman you were driving toward Waterton awhile ago?"

I recognized him as the chauffeur of the auto I had met after taking in the lady. There was nothing to do but to tell the whole story, which was listened to with eager attention. When I had finished the man who had asked the question said to me, evidently much chagrined:

"You have helped a precious pair of thieves to get away with a big lot of plunder. You have done it either as a confederate or a fool."

"You're the fool, Simmonds," said another. "I wanted you to stop 'em, but you wouldn't wait."

"I didn't dream the woman would come back to meet us," said the other.

"It was a mighty clever trick," put in one of the others.

"Gentlemen," I said, "will you oblige me by explaining what has happened?"

This was the explanation: A butler and a lady's maid had got away with $50,000 worth of jewels. They had taken one of the autos belonging to their master and made for a station on a railroad. Being missed, they were followed by the men in the auto I had met. Their machine had broken down, and had I not assisted them they would have been captured. It was a stroke of genius on the butler's part to send the maid back to the Waterton station without him. Soon after I left him he captured a machine at the point of a pistol and made for Waterton by a cut-off that I knew nothing about.

In time the jewels were recovered, but the precious pair succeeded in keeping out of jail. I had some difficulty in clearing myself from a charge of having been accessory to the crime, but I told a straight story and furnished proofs of my respectability. This satisfied the judge, who, after giving me a long lecture on the stupidity I had displayed, kindly discharged me. It is easy for a judge on the bench to be wise.

Of Minor Importance.

"Our little Jane is becoming a more serious problem every day. I've had to get three new school dresses for her and lengthen out two skirts and buy a new school hat and school shoes and no end of other things. She keeps me busy most of the time."

"And how is she coming on in her studies?"

"Studies! Mercy, I've had no time to ask her!"

Presence of Mind.

Watching her house burn down, the woman suddenly bethought her that she had written out a check and left it lying on her desk. Fortunately she could remember the number of it—281. With rare presence of mind she at once called up the bank. "Please stop payment on check numbered 281!" she directed, with the crisp brevity characteristic of those balanced souls who know exactly what they want.

STORM AND WEATHER FORECASTS FOR FEBRUARY

BY HICKS

A regular storm period is central on January the 30th, extending from January the 28th to February 4th. Astronomic causes and things to expect.

The moon is farthest south on January 30th, it is in perigee, or nearest the earth on February 1st, and in conjunction with sun and earth, or at new moon, on the 3rd. The moon will be in eclipse with the sun on the 3rd. This indicates violent electric activities. These things call for active to dangerous storms, during the last two days of January, and up to the 4th of February. By the 29th of January a low and rapidly falling barometer will be noted in western extremes, and storms of rain and thunder will organize in western and southern directions, and during the last two days of January and up to February the 4th, storms of wide sweep and marked violence will pass from western parts of the country over almost the entire continent. These storms will be over the central Mississippi Valley by Februray 1st, with rising barometer, northwest gales and a cold wave starting from the northwest. By the 1st to the 3rd, the actual storms of rain and snow will reach the eastern states and the Atlantic seaboard, and the high barometer and blizzardous snow and winds will be close on their heels rushing eastward and southward. Keep these general facts in mind, and as the period comes on consult your barometer, note the temperature, the direction of the winds, and the formation and movement of clouds, and you will not be overtaken or surprised by any kind of storms or weather changes. Tropical or West India hurricanes, with possible tornadoes in the extreme gulf states, would not be unnatural, any time during the last two days of January, and the first three to four days in February. Two to four days of severe cold, generally over the country, will attend and follow after the storms of this period. If you will give the least intelligent attention to the matter, you may know in advance just when the storms and changes will reach your locality, and whether or not they promise to be violent and dangerous.

A reactionary storm period is central on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the 4th, 5th and 6th. The moon is on the celestial equator on the 6th. Mercury is at inferior conjunction with earth and sun on the 5th, and Uranus is also in conjunction with sun and earth on the 5th. From these and other astronomic causes that might be mentioned, it is safe to say that many disturbances in the way of storms and erratic changes are probable at this time. A sudden rise of temperature on and touching the 6th, with squalls and thunder gusts in many isolated localities, would be in conformity to the existing astronomic conditons at the time. See February earthquake forecasts. A reaction to cold, fair weather will follow from about the 6th to the 9th.

A regular storm period is central on the 10th, covering Tuesday the 8th, to Sunday the 13th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

The moon is in quadrature, or at first quarter, on the 10th, and at extreme north declination and in apogee on the 13th. The planet Mars is in opposition, or nearest the earth for this year, on the 10th. The regular Vulcan period, is, of course, the foundation of this period, accentuated, perhaps by a solstice excitement of the planet Venus, in very close conjunction with the great planet Jupiter. As we enter this period we are to expect a decided change to warmer, beginning in the west and attended by falling barometer and growing cloudiness During the 9th to about the 11th, these conditions will advance into the great central valleys, breaking into storms of wind and rain. Meantime, rising barometer and change to snow and colder will appear west and north. From about the 11th to 13th the storm center will pass from central regions to the Atlantic seaboard, with the high barometer, snow and change to much colder following the storms into the extreme east and south. Thus, during the same period, we have the same storm period, we have the three phases of storm and weather passing in rotational order from west to east across the continent: First, warmer, threatening weather, with falling barometer, cloudiness and rain; second, change of winds westward, snow, rising barometer; third, colder and clearing weather with winds from the west and north. Knowing that this is almost an infallible order of storm movements, and weather changes, any intelligent school boy or girl should be able, with the assistance of these forecasts, to figure out, with practical precision, what day, if not what hour, when the changing phases of storm and weather will strike his or her own locality. Not only so, but with a reliable barometer at hand, also a companion Hygrometer, any one should be able to say whether or not approaching storms are going to prove violent, or be attended by heavy or little snow or rainfall.

A reactionary storm period will run its course on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 15th to the 18th. This period will be affected by the first stages of the March, or Vernal equinox of the earth, by the opening of the mercury equinox, and by the moon's opposition to earth and sun, near the celestial equator.. Our readers will remember that the Vernal equinox is often felt in violent West India storms as early as the middle of February, and those who are exposed to the fury of such storms, along the south Atlantic and Gulf regions especially should not be unmindful of possible danger at this period. Storms of this period will reach their crisis within forty-eight hours of sunset on the 18th. Rain may be expected during the opening stage of this period, or along the eastern rim of the advancing low barometer; but rain will turn to snow, over central to northern sections, in the general swing eastward of the storm center, causing snow and sleet, as the rising barometer, westerly winds and change to colder follow up the warm and rainy areas. Should equatorial storms, with wide and intense low barometeric depressions appear in the far south, at this reactionary period, blizzards, driven by high boreal winds from the northwest, all followed by a great cold wave, may be expected on and not far from the 18th.

A regular storm period is central on the 22nd, extending over Sunday the 20th, to Friday, the 25th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

The disturbing periods of Vulcan and Mercury have their centers together on the 22nd. The Mercury period, as may be seen by the storm diagram, extends from the 17th to the end of the month. Meantime the earth's nerval equinoctial perturbation is increasing in force. The moon is on the celestial equator on the 20th, on its way to south declination. All these facts indicate very active, if not violent, disturbances during this period. Sudden change to much warmer will appear in the west, attended by falling barometer, with possibly rain and thunder storms, as early as the 20th. Your barometer, if you will heed it, will plainly warn you of the approach and intensity of these storms, and of the time they will arrive at your locality, in their eastward sweep across the country. Wind, rain and thunder will be succeeded by snow and sleet and changes to very cold; all these phases touching progressively, during successive days of the period, in all parts of the country. Danger of equinoctial storms in the south should be apprehended during and about this period. Do not be caught napping out over the northwest. Watchfulness and preparation will do you no harm, even if dangerous storms do not materialize; if they should appear lack of caution and readiness will exact of you their toll of suffering and loss and death.

Some of our most violent storms, ending in furious blizzards, follow the full moon when it falls on or near the celestial equator, and this fact promises to prolong and greatly intensify the storms and other disturbances occuring on or about the 18th, so that a prolonged spell of stormy and hard winter weather will most probably run into, and continue throughout the regular storm period, 20th to 25th. We repeat that there is danger of very severe equinoctial storms in the south with destructive snow, sleet and cold over most interior parts of the country from about the 18th to the 25th of Februray. A cold wave, far-reaching and destructive, will be the sequel, or wind up of these great and general disturbances.

We have often called attention to the fact the planet Mercury is the "sleet god," and that almost one hundred per cent. of our great sleet storms fall within the compass of the Mercury equinoctial braces. At such times the periods begin warm and rainy, but later turn to freezing, until everything becomes coated and burdened with ice. This will prove one of those periods, and we predict that those who have charge of telephone and telegraph and electric wires, had better "stand up and take notice."

A reactionary storm period is central on the last three days of February. The moon is at last quarter on the 26th, at extreme declination south on the 27th, in perigee on the 29th. These days will bring return of low barometer, southerly winds, warmer weather, general rains. As we enter March, storms of rain, turning to sleet and snow will be disappearing eastward with cold, clearing weather following closely in their rear.

Coconaut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months

Tom Lawrence's Christmas Gift

It Was Given at a Later Christmas to Tom's Son.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

It was Christmas morning. Tommy Lawrence, aged seven, had remained awake so long the evening before, watching for Santa Claus to come down the chimney, that he awakened late. Half opening his eyes, he looked dreamily at the ceiling and closed them again. A sound came up from below that caused him to open them again and listen intently, a sound that he had never heard before in that house.

"Bowwow!"

A dog! There could be no mistake—a sure, certain dog. Tommy's eyes lighted with a glad expectancy. Could it be that for a Christmas present he was to have a little pet barker? Of all things, he craved a real live pet, and of all live pets a dog. He gave a kick. The covers went over the foot board, and he bounded out of bed. He was looking for the first piece of clothing to put on when—

"Bow-wow-wow! Bow-wow-wow wow-wow!"

This was too much for him. He opened the door and ran downstairs in his nightie. In the dining room he found his brother, Fred, a boy of fourteen, teasing a pup. Tommy stood looking from the boy to the dog in expectant wonder. Just then his father came into the room.

"Hello, Tom!" he exclaimed. "You down already? You weren't expected However, the secret is out, and I may as well tell you that this little puppy is to be your principal Christmas gift. What do you think of him?"

What Tom thought of the dog he could not possibly express in words, so he said nothing; but, going to the dog, he laid a hand on him. Then he patted him. Then he put both arms around him and drew his cheek against his own. Finally Tom asked:

"What's his name?"

"Oh, since he is your dog you shall give him his name. What do you think of Spot?"

"I don't know," replied Tommy, still apparently lost in wonder whether it could really be true that he had a pet dog.

"Or Trip?"

"If, he's a hunting dog," suggested Fred, "I think Pointer a good name."

"Suppose we make it Wad?" said the father. "When I was a boy and we didn't have cartridges we used to ram wadding down into the barrel of the gun to keep the powder and shot in place. Which shall it be, Tom, Spot or Trip or Pointer or Wad?"

Tom couldn't possibly decide so momentous a question on such short notice, but somehow the family fell to calling the dog Wad, and his little master made it Waddie. The Lawrence home stood in the center of large grounds, and Waddie had plenty of room to roam—that is, he would have when the weather warmed up, for, being nothing but a puppy, he needed to be kept warm. He was a thoroughbred, and Tommy was obliged for awhile to yield in the matter of his treatment and his diet to others. Tom would have fed him on cake and candy had he been permitted, with an occasional feast of some highly seasoned meat. He was much distressed when told that his pet must for the present have nothing but milk.

Tom and Wad grew up together. Tom regarded Christmas as the dog's birthday, and it was celebrated accordingly. Every Christmas a cake was made and at dinner a candle for each one of Wad's birthdays put into the icing. Tom ate the cake, and Wad was given some choice bones that had been saved for the purpose. As soon as the dog was old enough to be trained to hunt he was taken out by a competent person and taught the art of assisting the huntsman. This gave Tom a desire to have a gun that he might utilize his dog, and when he was twelve years old his father consented that he should have one and accompany an experienced sportsman on a hunt. The second season it was found impossible to prevent Tom's going out with his dog and his gun unattended.

After that, when Christmas approached, Tom insisted on going to where there was some kind of game that he might increase the variety of the viands for the Christmas dinner. His hunting ceased about the 1st of November and was resumed a few days before Christmas. When, on a crisp December morning, Tom went out, with his gun, his game bag and his cartridge belt strapped about him, and called, Wad, the dog, seeing the paraphernalia, went wild with joy.

When Tom was eighteen years old and in the prime of his youth Wad was about twelve and growing very old for a dog. Still he was a beautiful animal and had always been coveted for his pure blood. He had been stolen several times, but had either found a way to get back to his master or had been returned for a reward. One day, in his old age, he disappeared, and, when several weeks had passed and he had not returned, his master reluctantly gave him up, thinking that he had met with some injury which, on account of old age, perhaps had finished him.

One morning Tom was looking over the pictures of fashionable women in a newspaper, and his attention was arrested by a picture of a pretty girl standing beside a dog. Underneath was printed, "Miss Irene Fleetwood and Her Prize Winner."

"If that isn't Wad," remarked Tom to himself, "it must be his brother. It seems that if I should call him he would jump for me."

There was a short paragraph about Miss Fleetwood and her dog, giving her address. Tom cut it out, with the picture, placing the former in his portemonnaie and the latter on his mantel. There was something in the face and figure of the girl that charmed him, and he never went into his room without standing for awhile over her picture. The dog, too, was a favorite object of inspection. The more Tom looked at the dog and studied the color marking the more he was impressed with the belief that he was Wad. Quite likely he had been stolen and sold to his present mistress.

One day Tom's curiosity led him to walk by the address given in the newspaper and inspect Miss Fleetwood's home. He found it a handsome stone front residence, with costly lace curtains in the windows. The truth is, he was as much interested in catching a glimpse of Miss Fleetwood as of the dog. He saw nothing of either on that occasion; but, finding that the house was not far out of his way on going to the business part of the town, —he now lived in the city—he frequently made his passages by that route. On one occasion while passing he saw the dog standing with his forepaws on a window sill looking out wistfully as if he desired to be free. Tom could not divert himself of the belief that he was Wad. Presently this belief was confirmed. The dog caught sight of Tom and straightway began to quiver with excitement, rubbing his nose on the windowpane as if he would force his way through. Tom stood looking till he feared his presence would be noticed; then he went on.

What should he do? It was probable that the lady had become possessed of the dog by purchase, Wad having been stolen. Should Tom claim him?—He felt rather like making the dog the means of an introduction to his mistress.

Tom finally determined on a course to pursue. Having looked into the occupancy of the houses opposite Miss Fleetwood's, he found that lodgings were to be had in one of them and engaged a room overlooking the street. He usually occupied it about the time a lady would be likely to go out in the morning or the afternoon. He saw Miss Fleetwood go out frequently, sometimes in an auto, which she drove herself, but nothing of Wad. He usually went to his point of observation in his own auto, leaving it standing by the curb while on watch.

One crisp cold morning he saw Miss Fleetwood come out of his house, leading the dog by a leash to her auto, and, placing him in the seat beside her, she drove away. In a jiffy Tom was down and out. Springing into his car, he turned on the power and followed the lady. She was evidently out for a spin, for she proceeded on a road leading to the open country. Presently Tom gave a signal that he was about to pass her, and she gave him room.

He had scarcely drawn up beside her when Wad gave a succession of joyful barks, and, before his mistress could interfere with his movements, he jumped from her side and ran beside the passing car, barking vociferously. Tom for awhile pretended not to notice him, then looked down at him with no appearance of especial interest, while the lady's interest was pronounced. She motioned for Tom to slow up. He did so, and both came to a stop.

"I would like to get my dog back into my car," she said.

"Suppose you call him?" replied Tom.

The girl opened the car door and called to the dog to come to her. Instead, he tried to climb into Tom's car.

"Will you kindly tell me," said Tom, "how you came by that dog?"

"I bought him."

"Well, you bought stolen property. He has been my dog for many years. He was a Christmas present to me when he was a puppy."

The young lady demurred. "Come, Beauty," she said; "that's a good dog: come."

Beauty, as she called him, paid no attention to her. He was sitting on his haunches looking wistfully up at Tom and wagging his tail.

"He is a perfect witness," said Tom, "to the truth of my story. I am not going to take him away from you, but if you are willing that he should return to me I will reimburse you for your pecuniary loss."

It was finally decided between the two that they should return to the lady's home. Tom put Wad into her car, but he wouldn't stay there, and she finally consented that he should ride with Tom. When they reached their destination Tom and the girl and the dog went into the house, where Tom offered to give up his claim. But Miss Fleetwood, convinced that he belonged to Tom, relinquished the right to him, refusing compensation, and Tom took him home with him. Tom not only regained his property, but formed an acquaintance on which he had set his heart. He also in time won the girl.

Wad lived to a very old age. In fact he lived to be given at Christmas to Tom's oldest son, aged four, but died that night, the boy having given him an overfeeding of plum pudding.

THE YOLK OF AN EGG.

It is Good Predigested Food, While the White is Not.

It has long been known that many persons cannot eat even perfectly fresh eggs without suffering all the symptoms of violent poisoning.

The egg has two parts—the yolk inside and the white outside. The white is the part of the egg that the chicken is made of—the part that makes the bones, the feathers and the flesh. The yolk, however, is what the chicken lives on. It is a dinner basket placed there by nature for the infant chicken. It is a little lunch put up for the young life within the egg to support it until it gets out of the shell, for the chicken must eat inside the shell as well as outside, and the yolk is a little bundle of predigested food that nature has prepared for the chicken to eat before it emerges into the world.

Thus we see that the yolk is food, whereas the white of the egg never was intended to be eaten. Really it is not fit to be eaten. It has some food value, it is true. It can be utilized under some circumstances, but it is not good food. The yolk is the only part of the egg that really is wholesome food. It is digested very quickly, too, recent investigations showing that the yolk is digested entirely in the stomach. There is some fat in the yolk, there is some protein in the yolk and some carbohydrate in the yolk, and all are digested in the stomach.

The fat of the yolk is of a peculiar kind. It is more readily digested in the stomach than any other fat, although other emulsified fats are also to some degree digested in the stomach

First Talking Machine.

The recording of vibrations of a membrane was first accomplished by Leon Scott in 1857, by the invention of what he called a "phonautograph." This is regarded as the precursor of the modern phonograph. The actual reproduction of sound was first achieved by Thomas Alva Edison in 1876 and first patented by him in 1877, the patent being dated in January of that year. There had been, of course, several experiments and improvements between. The first method of recording vibrations of a tuning fork on the surface of a drum was discovered by Thomas Young in 1807. Alexander Graham Bell and S. Tainter patented the graphophone in 1885. Emile Berliner patented the gramophone in 1887

THE SQUEEZE PLAY.

Its Success Hangs on the Batter Hitting the Ball to the Ground.

The squeeze play is one of the prettiest in baseball when successful. When it fails no play makes a ball team look more foolish. The play is best worked with one out, a runner on third and a run needed to either tie or win the game. Many of the best base runners when about to make the play create the impression that there is no intention of pulling it by taking only a fair lead off the base and standing still. The very moment the pitcher starts his movement the man on third tears for the plate.

If in any way the intention to use the play is tipped off or foreseen it is an easy matter for the catcher to break it up by calling for a waste ball that is so wide of the plate that it is impossible for the batter to bunt it. It is an easy matter to touch the base runner out and make the team trying the squeeze appear ridiculous. But a successful completion of the play usually puts the team in the field in the air and makes them look equally foolish.

The squeeze play does not call for a hard hitter or a good hitter, but it does call for a man with a good eye, a fellow who invariably hits the ball, even though it may not go safe. If the batsman bunts the ball in the air an easy double play is usually the result. If he is able to keep the ball on fair ground there is seldom a chance to stop the run at the plate. It is not necessary to have a fast man on third to make this play, for most of the play depends on the ability of the batsman to keep the ball on the ground.

UNDER AN AVALANCHE.

A Remarkable Experience and Rescue in the Italian Alps.

Human beings occasionally live through incredibly long imprisonments after their dwellings have been overwhelmed by avalanches. On March 19, 1755, avalanches buried the village of Bergemoletto, in the Italian Alps, and on April 25 three women were dug out alive from a stable in which they had been immured for thirty-seven days in the dark beneath the mass of snow which lay forty-two feet higher than the roof. With them had been buried a little boy, six goats, a donkey and some hens.

The child, the donkey and the fowls soon died, but the goats helped the women to survive, their milk supplementing the thirty or forty cakes and the pocketful of chestnuts upon which they depended for food. Hope of finding the women alive had been abandoned when far in April the brother of one had a dream in which she appealed to him for rescue.

The weather then at last made excavation possible, and the women were restored to the world and presently to health.

MUSIC & DRAMA

Frederick Palmer, the only officially accredited representative of the entire press of America with the British Forces on the Continent, and author of "My Yeor Of The War" will portray with moving pictures and thrilling narratives, the Great World War as seen by him at close range, at Griffin's Opera House, Monday evening, Jan. 31st. Frederick Palmer is being received in all the towns and cities that he visits, with the most hearty reception. His exceptional knowledge and ability to portray the events which he had the opportunity of witnessing, makes his entertainment exceptionally interesting. This concert will be one of the events of the season, and he is sure to receive just as warm a reception in Belleville as at any other place. Belleville has shown the most wonderful spirit regarding this war, both as regards sending soldiers and all the many necessaries that bring comforts to those across the seas.

Mr. Palmer is coming here under the auspices of the 80th Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., and will be assisted by an orchestra of 18 pieces, under the leadership of Lieut. H. A. Stares, Mus. Bach.

—Seats will be $1.00, 75c., 50c and 25c. Plan will be opened at Doyle's Drug store on Thursday at 9 p.m.

THE STRAND MUSICAL CO.

A crowded house greeted the Strand Musical Co. on their first appearance in this city at Scott's Palace Theatre last night, and although owing to the fact that it was necessary to coach a new piano player for the occasion, the play was rather late in starting, the crowd seemed well pleased with the performance. Their music is rather difficult to handle and requires considerable practice which was not possible with last night's performance.

Felix Martin in an Irish character and Al Lanons as an Italian, are certainly stars and kept a rapid fire comedy going all the time.

The chorus was good and worked well in spite of heavy colds.

The entire performance was clean and humorous, nothing that would be in any way objectionable being used.

The concensus of opinion was that the show was as good as has been seen in this city for some time at the price of admission.

DID NERO BURN ROME ?

Interesting questions aroused by that potent photodrama "Quo Vadis," which is to be presented at Griffin's Opera House tomorrow and Thursday matinee and night.

George Kleine's glorious photodrama production "Quo Vadis" has aroused a great deal of discussion among readers and students of history and many have broken into print on the subject. The particular incidents of interest and doubt also, are the setting on fire of Rome and the persecution of the Christians. According to Mr. Kleine's photo-drama production of Sienkiewicz's novel "Quo Vadis," Nero was a despicable character, an incendiary and a brute of the most horrible description. However, according to the most reliable historic authorities he was not quite so bad as he is pictured on the screen. Tacitus whose annals were written shortly after the episodes occurred is loath to blame Nero altogether for the burning of Rome although he admits it might have been so, as "Nero was infected with the desire to shine as a constructor" and "caused the city to be fired in order to clear the ground that he might build a new Rome." Tacitus makes it perfectly plain that improvements Nero had sought to make had been bitterly opposed by the property owners of a certain class and that they never became reconciled to the changes made after the fire, although they were all, admittedly, vastly beneficial hygenically and otherwise.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

should get some definite idea where the C.P.R. Company intended to erect their freight sheds. He had heard that it would be located near South George street. A meeting of citizens should be called to discuss this important matter as it was important to the citizens.

Mayor Ketcheson—I understand the company have purchased land in West Belleville for the purpose of building a shed.

Ald. Woodley—Such is the case and the company have deeds of certain lands in West Belleville.

City Engineer Evans—A map has been prepared showing the building to be erected in West Belleville.

Interswitching

Mayor Ketcheson—A letter has been received by me from the Railway Board relative to interswitching. The plan as shown for interswitching is a feasible one. This was an importand matter and should be decided upon. The work would not be done until spring.

Ald. Earle—Is there anything being done in reference to the subway proposition?

Mayor Ketcheson—The subway matter is a serious question and will probably not be further considered until the war is over.

At this stage the Council adjourned and the members viewed a map prepared in reference to interswitching and where it was proposed to have the interswitching located.

The matter will be taken up in committee.

Annual Report Of Fire Chief Brown

Chief Brown, of the Belleville Fire Department, presented at the council meeting last night, a report for the year 1915. He referred to the lamented death of the late dearly beloved Chief Campbell, whose fatal illness was caused by the disastrous fire which destroyed the Palace Theatre and damaging other adjoining buildings entailing a loss of $13,487.50.

He (Chief Brown) took charge of the Department on February 2nd, 1915, and from that date to the end of December, there occurred 59 fires, 10 false alarms and 4 grass fires. The loss to property aggregated during this period, $16,111.70 the lowest loss being $1.25, and the highest $3700.

In accordance with my duties, I inspected thoroughly the premises of all Front street stores and on the whole found conditions not as bad as I expected. In some cases I gave orders for immediate changes to conform to the strict requirements of the fire laws.

For many years there has existed a fine spirit of co-operation and good feeling between the press, the police, the city council, the individual members of the Department and the citizens generally, which has been of real benefit in this important branch of the public service. It shall be my earnest endeavor to make the Department under the new conditions second to none in efficiency in the Province of Ontario.

I would call your attention to a request made by the late chief for 500 feet more of hose, as its need is urgent and should be attended to at once.

In conclusion I would like to express my appreciation of Chief Newton and the police force who have on all occassions co-operated with me and my men in a practicable and kindly spirit, that was both beneficial and agreeable.

I also desire to thank the mayor and the members of last year's council and the popular and efficient fire chairman for the honor conferred upon me and many generous favors.

PRISONERS OBJECT TO SERVICE FOR THEMSELVES

Report of U. S. Ambassador on British Prisoners in Germany

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Official Press Bureau made public last night correspondence between Ambassador Gerard at Berlin and Ambassador Page at London concerning conditions in the interment camp at Ruhleben, Germany. Commenting on his visits at the camp, Ambassador Gerard says: es:

"The British civilians who have been interned are averse to working for themselves. Wages are paid to certain prisoners for doing fatigue work. Those averse to manual labor sit in deck chairs, listen to concerts, attend the cinema and theatrical performances and play tennis, golf, cricket, football, hockey, etc.

"The British taxpayer is paying a large sum in wages because the Ruhleben prisoners are unwilling to do the fatigue work of the camp.

"On the other hand, captured British soldiers who have been fighting in the trenches are compelled to work in the camps. Some of them are not properly clothed."

Mr. Gerard says the soldiers have no luxuries like the interned civilians, whose lot is in striking contrast.

WOMAN INNKEEPER FINED FOR ILLEGALITY

WHITBY, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Mary Wilson, late proprietor of the Queen's Hotel here, was fined $20 and costs for permitting liquor to be taken off the premises in a bottle, and was found guilty of permitting the late Robert Hall, a prohibited person, to loiter on the premises; sentence for this was deferred. Her son, Allie Gates, was convicted of selling liquor to the late Robert Hall, who was killed while intoxicated. Gates did not appear, as he has enlisted and is at Kingston. Sentence was not passed on him.

FRENCH CANADIANS ARE SHOWING THEIR HANDS

Bilingualism Bound to Forge Ahead, Says Senator Landry

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—A French-Canadian majority in Ontario was the possibility considered by Senator Philippe Landry in the course of an address on bilingualism at the Monument Nationale last night.

Senator Landry said that if the English-speaking residents of Ontario do not allow bilingual schools in the districts where the French-speaking inhabitants are in the majority, the next generation might still see the Province become bilingual. The reason would be that the Province had become French-Canadian. In New Ontario especially the numbers of their compatriots had increased to such an extent that he was sure they would be able to elect a French-Canadian member to the Dominion Parliament at the next election.

Washington Rejects Huns' New Proposal

Complications Arising From Lusitania's Sinking Not Straightened Out

ONE MORE U. S. NOTE

Germany to be Held to "Strict Accountability," So 'Tis Said

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. — The United States is understood to have rejected as being partially unsatisfactory Germany's latest proposal in the Lusitania negotiations. Secretary of State Lansing, with the approval of President Wilson, is said to have so informed Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, during a conference late today, at the State Department.

The ambassador will confer again with the secretary tomorrow. It is understood he will then submit another confidential tentative proposal for a settlement, having embodied in it the requirements of the United States.

After being considered by the President and Mr. Lansing, the matter, unless present plans miscarry, will be transmitted to Berlin for the approval or rejection of the German Government.

Five or six days may elapse before it is known whether the Berlin foreign office will assume a view which coincides with that of the administration.

It was stated by excellent authority that the United States insists upon holding the German Government to "a strict accountability" for the loss of more than one hundred lives and desires that the Berlin Government admit in effect that it is liable according to law for the lives of neutrals lost in the commission of an act against a vessel of the enemy.

Decisive Victory For Conscription

Bill Passes Its Third Reading in British House of Commons 383 to 36

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The military service bill passed the third reading in the House of Commons to-night by a vote of 383 to 36.

The bill was immediately sent to the House of Lords and given its first reading. The second reading will be taken in the House of Lords on Wednesday, and Parliament will be prorogued on Friday.

The fact that the minority against the bill was virtually only a third of that on its first reading is considered a great triumph for Premier Asquith and for Andrew Bonar Law, who directed its course, and although tonight's debate showed that many Labor members are still suspicious, there is no doubt that general opposition to the measure has diminished enormously since its introduction, and that the feeling of the country is strongly with the Government.

Mr. Bonar Law, in his speech winding up the debate, remarked on the wonderful change since the first reading of the bill, which, he said, was a compromise between those who thought that it went not far enough and those who believed it went too far.

AIR RAID IS FOILED BY THE BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A German aeroplane passed over Dover at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A British official announcement, issued tonight, says it was engaged by all the anti-aircraft guns and pursued by two British machines.

This was the third venture of the kind in two days, in the other visits bombs having been dropped on the docks, barracks and station at Dover, and on the aviation sheds at Hougham near Dover, according to Berlin.

Tonight's French official statement says: "A group of 32 French aeroplanes bombarded the enemy cantonments at Glevgell and Monastir. On the latter town more than 200 bombs were dropped by our machines."

Bishop Fallon Takes Issue With Prohibition

Stylos Campaign Dangerous Attempt to Regulate All Conduct By Statute

MENACE TO LIBERTY

Declares Principle is Same as That Involved in War Against Germans

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 25.—Bishop Fallon, head of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London, today issued a statement to the press in which he expressed opposition to the campaign now on for province-wide prohibition.

"I am opposed to the principle of prohibition in regard to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors," runs the statement. "I regard the present agitation in Ontario as a dangerous invitation to the state to meddlesomely interfere with the rights of the citizen and as an equally dangerous attempt to regulate all human conduct by statute. We are threatened with a multiplication of the functions of the state that will grievously narrow the circle of individual rights."

He adds that the very principle for the vindication and safeguarding of which the British Empire is now engaged in its conflict with Germany, is "precisely the principle which, in my opinion, is menaced by the present attempt to force the enactment of prohibition legislation."

So impressed was he with the need of men, and yet more men, for the defence of the Empire, that he simply turned the key in his office door and went to make one of Canada's five hundred thousand. He left a good practice, but in going away yesterday he said he did not know German law and did not want to learn it, much less to practise it.

INTERIM REPLY HANDED THE AMERICAN EMBASSY

Formal Answer to be Made When French Government Approves Britain's Attitude

GERMANY HAS BEEN ABUSING PRIVILEGES

A Published List of Goods Found in Mail Bags Tells the Tale—Will Rely on Postal Conventions at Hague For Justification

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Foreign Office handed the American embassy today an interim reply to the American Protest made last month against the detension of mails, stating formal answer will be made as soon as the French Government has signified its approval of Britain's attitude. It is understood a formal reply will show that the Germans have been abusing the privileges of first class mails and the British Government will rely on postal conventions adopted at the Hague for justification of its measures.

The Foreign Office published today a list of goods found in mail-bags of three Dutch steamers, Frisia, Tubantio, and Ryndam. The list includes gold jewelery, drugs, dyes, rubber samples (amounting in one case to 75 pounds) and wool. Mail on the Ryndam was sixty per cent, newspapers, thrity per cent. propaganda literature and ten per cent. goods.

London Looks For Serious Attempt to Break Through Lines of Allies

MUCH BOMBARDING ON

British and French Heavily Shell German Works in Belgium

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The morning papers emphasize the renewal of heavy fighting on the western front. They believe that there was a serious German attempt to break through the French lines close to the Flanders coast on Monday, and predict that German activity in the west will probably reach its highest effort on Thursday, when the German Emperor celebrates his 57th birthday.

The operations of today on the fronts in France and Belgium were practically confined to heavy shelling of the German positions at several points. British and French batteries bombarded the works of the Germans established southwest of Boesinghe in Belgium, doing serious damage to them. Several German batteries were silenced by French batteries in Artois and a German heavy battery which attempted to destroy a bridge at Berry-au-Bac was caught under the fire of a French heavy calibre gun and damaged. German positions in the Vosges were also heavily shelled.

The British guns bombarded the German lines at Ovillers-la-Boiselle, Le Bridoux and Boesinghe, exploding a store of bombs near the last-named place. Aircraft have been active on both sides with the British aviators maintaining their supremacy.

Urge New Effort to Draw U.S. Settlers

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—Representatives of Canadian colonization companies with headquarters in Canada and the United States called on Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, today and asked that energetic steps be taken by the government to combat the campaign now in progress in the United States against emigration to Canada, particularly with reference to land settlement in the west.

They asked that an effective publicity campaign be carried on in American papers, pointing out the advantage of land settlement in Canada, and deprecating the stories of conscription that have been published in a section of the American press.

Dr. Roche pointed out that the government was now advertising in four thousand different papers in the United States, and that in addition a meeting of the government's agents would be held at Chicago next Friday and Saturday, at which he himself would be present, and at which a progressive propaganda would be considered.

KINGSTON

The new depot batteries will be known as follows: Queen's battery will be known as the 50th battery, the 32nd battery will be continued as the 51st battery, the 33rd battery will be continued as the 52nd battery, the 34th battery will be continued as the 53rd battery. With "C" battery as a depot battery for the R.C.H.A., the city will have five batteries of artillery after the present batteries have gone overseas.

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O., has returned from an inspection tour of the 77th Batalion at Ottawa, and the 130th at Perth. He conducted examinations for the former battalion.

Major H. R. Wilson, D.A.A., and Q.M.G., has just received word that his brother Capt. D. D. Wilson had transferred to the 3rd Pioneer Battalion from the Dental Corps, which was taken to mean his early departure from England to France. Two other brothers of the popular staff-major are also in uniform. Capt. J. M. Wilson, Assistant Director of Dental Services is on the divisional staff and the fourth brother is Staff-Sergt. H. B. Wilson who is in the Chief Paymaster's office in London. All are true soldiers and doing good work in their positions. The family is from Belleville.

There is an opinion in military circles, although nothing official can be learned, that the 59th, 77th and 80th Battalions will be going overseas in the near future and used as reinforcements for the 3rd Canadian Division. The War Office has accepted the third division and reinforcements for it will have to be sent from now on. The 59th Battalion was raised in Kingston but is now at Gananoque, Brockville and Cornwall. The 77th Battalion has always been at Ottawa and the 80th was raised at Barriefield camp but is now at Belleville.

It is published that a movement is on foot, the object of which is to obtain the popular sentiment regarding prohibition. Accredited representatives of the movement may be permitted to enter barracks and quarters (with the permission of the commanding officers concerned) for the purpose of approaching troops regarding the subject.

Before the war broke out the Kingston Salvation Army Corps had thirty members with its band. There are now six members left of the thirty, the remainder are wearing khaki in Canada, in France and in England, and to keep the band together women members are being trained to fill the men's places. The twenty-four who have enlisted are distributed as follows: One with No. 1 Field Ambulance in France, one with the 38th Battalion at Bermuda, six with the 59th Battalion at Brockville, two with the 21st Battalion in France and fourteen with the 146th Battalion. There are twelve women being trained for the work and in the near future Kingston will have almost wholly a womans' band.

BELLEVILLE

The strength of the 109th Battalion, Lindsay, is now over 700.

Band Master Hinchey of the 155th Battalion, expects to begin band practice next week.

About 30 men enlisted in the 155th Battalion yesterday.

Col. Adams, Major Allen and staff of the 155th Battalion, left to-day for Picton.

How to Rid the Skin of Objectionable Hairs
(Aids to Beauty)
A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

Highly Successful Enterainment

The Ladies' Aid of the Tabernacle Church are to be heartily congratulated on the splendid success of the unique entertainment given by them on Tuesday evening. The lecture room of the church was crowded to its utmost capacity with an attentive and appreciative audience. Every feature of the evening was in excellent taste, full of interest, and exceptionally well rendered.

The subject of the evening, "The Minister's Bride," a character sketch in five scenes, representing old-time costumes, conversations, solos, choruses and readings, afforded the finest scope for the exercise of the splendid variety of talent displayed by the artists engaged. The subject matter combined much original wit and humor with much ripe wisdom and common sense and throughout was wholesome and uplifting in moral tone and suggestion.

The "Minister" was personated by Mr. W. D. Reid with exceptional ability, with an ease and freedom of delivery and manner that brought distinction to himself and delight to all, while Mrs. Singer so graced the position of the "Minister's Bride" as to win the hearts of the entire audience as well as "most" of her husband's congregation.

Mrs. F. Nicholson as Mrs. Charity, Mrs. J. O. R. McCurdy as Mrs. Ann Sharp, and Mrs. C. W. Moat as Mrs. Jane Crab were the very embodiment of the respective characters they represented, while Mr. Alf. Burke in the character of Joe Crab, the henpecked husband, won the sympathy of all.

Mrs. A. Cole, in the character of "Mrs. Better-days," and Mrs. E. Fenn as "Mrs. See-good" proved oil on the troubled waters and cast a mantle of charity over all. Miss Verna Coleman in the role of "Miranda Meek" and Mr. Percy Mastin as "Jim Curtis," figured prominently in a humorous parsonage wedding. "Molly Charity" and "Amos Wright" were cleverly impersonated in a case of match making by Mrs. H. Moorman and Mr. A. W. Rowland.

Mrs. Duff as "Jane Heather" excelled herself in her Highland costume and her Scotch song, "Angus McDonald." This being leap year the idea was aptly and appropriately presented by Mrs. Burton Asselstine as "Jerusha Hopkins" in her leap year reading.

Miss Ruth Snell as "Miss Jones," the modest young woman, and Mr. E. A. Ridley as "Ephraim Snellgrove," the bashful young man, furnished a rich vein of humor to the evening.

Mr. Harry Moorman, in the role of "Robert Spence," the fast young man from the city, under the kindly Christian counsel of the minister and the timely solo by the "Minister's Bride," suddenly turned into a young man of new aims and promise.

Miss Helen Moore as "Maid," played her part nobly, with her quaint costume and her meek and responsive manner, while Miss Florence Davis as "Sarah Ann Smith," graced the position of accompanist of the evening and added largely to the finish of the programme by her choice selection of music.

The singing of the National Anthem closed a very bright, pleasant and profitable evening.

WARDEN-ELECT NUGENT

Mr. William H. Nugent, warden elect of Hastings county, is a gentleman who is well known in the county and by his affable manner has endeared himself to a large circle of friends. On December 25th, 1871, Christmas Day, Mr. Nugent was born at Coe Hill, Wallaston township, where he has resided all his life, excepting six years, when he was a resident at Uncle Sam's domains. For a period of 13 years the warden was clerk of Wallaston township, and for the past 6 years had been the efficient Reeve discharging his duties in a manner creditable to the municipality and himself. In religion, Mr. Nugent is an Anglican and in politics a Conservative. He is a member of two secret societies namely, the Masons and Orangemen and in these societies has occupied positions of trust. The Warden in 1894 was married to Miss Virginia Clark, of Coe Hill, and his only son, Lt. W. T. Nugent has enlisted for overseas service. That Warden Nugent will fulfill the office to which he has been elected with honor to the county and to the entire satisfaction of the county, there can not be the slighted doubt. With Mr. Nugent's numerous friends in Hastings county the Intelligencer joins in congratulations upon the honorable position he has been selected to fill.

Annual Report Of City Engineer

His Worship the Mayor and Members of the Municipal Council of the City of Belleville.

Gentlemen:

I beg to submit the following report on Public Works constructed during the year 1915.

SYNOPSIS OF REPORT.

Eleven thousand seven hundred and seventy-one square feet of sidewalk was constructed during 1915, costing 35 cents per square foot. This cost includes rent of cement mixer and interest, as well as the cost of labor and material.

PAVEMENTS.

A new Tarvia pavement has been laid on Forin street as petitioned for by the residents on this street. It is a substantial pavement and has been well built.

Victoria Avenue has also been paved from the east side of Charles Street to the Grand Trunk tracks on Pinnacle street. The grade of the hill has been lowered, and facilities to take care of the surface water put in, and proper gutters built, so that the surface water will not in future run down the sidewalk on Victoria Avenue hill as it has done each spring hitherto. The pavement was put down under petition from the residents.

I have studied the paving question carefully, and have come to the conclusion that the oiled macadam pavements such as we put down last year from the Upper Bridge to the Grand Trunk Station, and on Foster Avenue and Albert Streets, is the cheapest and best for residential streets that can be laid for the money. Five miles can be built for the same price as one mile of Tarvia or Rocmac pavement. When properly oiled twice a year I believe a good oiled macadam will last nearly as long as either of the above pavements, and the repair bill will not be much greater. The centre of the roadway must be a continuous sheet of macadam without any breaks, and it must have sufficient crown to shed the water quickly, and should be oiled with heavy road oil applied hot at least twice a year.

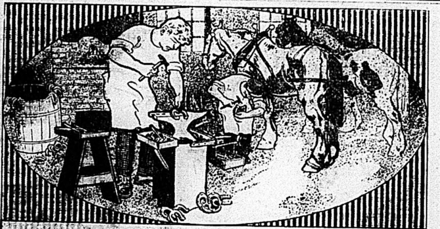
We laid last year on Station street 14,600 square yards at a cost of 18 cents per square yard; on Foster Avenue 4,200 square yards at a cost of 16½ cents per square yard. On Albert Street 2,341 square yards at a cost of 17½ cents per square yard; on North Front street 3,316 square yards at a cost of 18 8/10 cents per square yard. I would suggest that the main thoroughfares of the city be built with oiled macadam providing that petitions are received from the property owners to construct such work. The cost will not be more than 20 cents per square yard, which would mean that the owner of a 66 foot lot would pay $22 down or $2.50 per year for ten years, with a further amount of $2.00 per year for oiling. This is less than is paid for watering the street, and the water soon ruins the roadway—while oiling preserves it.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. W. EVANS,

City Engineer.



Backache

The artist sketched this picture from life in a Toronto blacksmith shop, in order to get the correct pose of the smith at the anvil and shoeing a horse. Is it any wonder that the blacksmith's greatest troubles are backache and derangements of the kidneys? The constant strain on the muscles of the back and kidneys interferes with the filtering action of these organs. The uric acid poisons left in the blood cause pains and aches, backache and rheumatism, and such serious diseases as Bright's disease and hardening of the arteries result.

But it is not the blacksmith alone who is tortured by backache, for there are many occupations in which the continuous strain on the back leads to much suffering, and also to serious disease

Blacksmiths have always been strong in their praise of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by telling others of the good results accomplished by this treatment have added much to its popularity among farmers and horsemen generally.

Being direct and prompt in their action, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appeal to the man of action. The liver is awakened, the bowels aroused and the kidneys strengthened by the influence of this medicine. The filtering and excretory organs lose no time in cleansing the system of the poisonous matter which gives rise to pain and disease. Constipation is overcome, kidney derangements corrected, digestion improved, and you feel fine. Put them to the test when you are feeling out of sorts. Let them prove their value. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

This is the 539th day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

A CLEAR CASE.

When Senator Choquette stated recently in the Senate that Great Britain might have avoided war by putting herself on the side of Russia and France against the Triple Alliance, he expressed an opinion that had been offered before, says the Daily Mail of Montreal. The Daily Mail felt surprise that the Senator had not seen and appreciated the British side of the case, as this is stated in the British official White Paper and analyzed with intelligent approval by such competent observers as Hon. James M. Beck, of the United States, Dr. E. J. Dillon, the famous journalist, and many others.

In the British White Paper, it is on record that, at the time war was in the balance, Russia's Foreign Minister, M. Sazonoff, pressed Sir George Buchanan, for an announcement by Great Britain that she would support Russia and France against Germany. Sir George replied that it would be a mistake to think "that the cause of peace could be promoted by our telling the German Government that they would have to deal with us as well as Russia and France if they supported Austria by force of arms. Their attitude would merely be stiffened by such a menace, and we could only induce her to use her influence at Vienna to avert war by approaching her in the capacity of a friend who was anxious to preserve peace. His Excellency must not, if our efforts were to be successful, do anything to precipitate a conflict. In these circumstances I trusted that the Russian Government would defer the mobilization ukase as long as possible, and that troops would not be allowed to cross the frontier even when it was issued." This is the substance, word for word, of a despatch sent by the British Ambassador at Petrograd to Sir Edward Grey, dated July 27.

In his admirable work, "A Scrap of Paper," Dr. Dillon commends the policy of Sir Edward Grey in unqualified terms. His authority to speak will not be questioned by any student of European affairs, for his knowledge of all those political questions concerned in the present war is recognized as probably greater than that of any other writer of his time. He says, regarding Sir George Buchanan's despatch:

That was a statesmanlike view, and coupled with the earnest request made by our Government to M. Sazonoff that he would have mobilization delayed as long as possible, it affords signal proof that Great Britain marched perseveringly and with steadfast tread along the road that led to peace, and strenuously exerted herself to draw all other Powers after her. That is the answer to the allegations now made by the German Government and its organs that Great Britain provoked the war. Sir Edward Grey's exertions to hinder the collision were strenuous and persistent. They failed, and could not but fail, seeing that Austria and Germany had bound themselves to carry out a set aggressive plan, and were not open either to argument or suasion.

Great Britain was not bound by her engagements under the Triple Entente to join either side of a possible European war. She was therefore, in a position to offer arbitration to Austria and Germany, and Sir Edward Grey took the initiative in doing so. It is impossible to doubt that had Britain announced common cause with France and Russia, the door would have been closed finally on arbitration, and the only alternative was war. Germany would have received an opportunity to make her favorite excuse that she was menaced and, in her excited state, would have made war at once. But Sir Edward Grey retained an admirable, disinterested poise. He branded Germany before the world as the aggressor by giving her an opportunity up to the very last to avoid the war by arbitration. He kept the machinery for arbitration ready, and had Germany not deliberately turned her back on it, this war would have been avoided.

The case is so clear, and has been set forth so often by so many competent authorities, that it is almost incredible that a member of the Senate of Canada should not have acquainted himself with the facts.

THAT BI-LINGUAL QUESTION

There seems to be a wilful ignorance among the people of Quebec on the question of teaching the French language in the public schools of Ontario. As evidence of this fact, Mr. J. G. Scott, a prominent citizen of the city of Quebec, has issued and circulated a letter setting forth the liberality of the French of that Province in the management of educational affairs, particularly in the teaching of English in their schools, and pleading for greater concessions being accorded to the French in Ontario.

A perusal of Mr. Scott's letter will convince the reader that he knows very little of the subject upon which he ventures an opinion, and asks for concessions. A contemporary, dealing with the subject matter of this circular, aptly says:

Such utterances by an English Canadian doing business in a large way among the French people have their profitable side. This is perhaps an additional reason for venturing a hasty opinion. Still it is no justification. No reasonable man, however friendly to the French language, can reach any such conclusion as that of Mr. Scott if he knows the facts of the case. Not being familiar with them, adverse criticism is a piece of assurance which approaches insolence.

On an indefinite number of occasions The Daily News has cited the requirements of the Department of Education with respect to bilingual schools. Here they are again. In a district where French is the prevailing language, the children may be taught in French for two years, at the same time receiving instruction in English. After that period has elapsed the children will know English well enough to follow instruction in that language. At the same time one hour a day may be devoted to the teaching of French reading, grammar and composition. By hearing English continuously at school and French continuously at home, the children will become truly bi-lingual.

Does this system work? The agitators declare that it must not be tried. They know it will work. Their aspiration is not to have real bi-lingual schools, but French schools, where English will be crowded out of sight altogether. They ask for the old system which, on the best of authority, was turning out pupils illiterate in two languages. In support of their violent and unreasoning demands they declare that this Province is seeking to destroy the French language, to rob the children of their mother tongue and snatch them from the arms of their Church. By insistent iteration of these empty and absurd charges they begin to believe them, and thus influence certain languid-minded English-Canadians in their neighborhood to issue foolish statements on subjects concerning which their information is wholly erroneous.

A Call to Canadians.

The call that is now being made for further needed subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund is deserving of the careful attention of every Canadian. It is absolutely necessary that additional money shall be raised in order to save those dependent upon the men who volunteer from want, and the progress of the new campaign to raise a sufficient sum will be watched with anxious eyes from the trenches in Northern France.

Active in the work of furthering the cause of the Patriotic Fund is His Royal Highness, the Governor-General. It is as a soldier who has done his duty, during a lengthy absence from the elaborate comforts of home, that His Highness comes before the people of Canada to-day. By his ceaseless activity in the interests of the Canadian soldiers, by exertions which would have tried the stamina of a much younger man, the Duke of Connaught has endeared himself to the Canadian people. He has travelled thousands of miles, faced most unfavorable weather conditions, and worked as hard as any man in the ranks to fit Canada's enlisted heroes for the trials of battlefield and camp. He has set an example that is already one of the proud traditions of Canadian history.

To Canadians who have followed the course pursued by His Royal Highness since the war began, the fact that he is sponsor for the appeal of the Patriotic Fund lends additional force to the conditions under which the appeal is issued. Canada owes it to the Royal leader that the wives and families of the soldiers whom he represents to-day shall not suffer by reason of the patriotic self-sacrifice of fathers and husbands.—Montreal Mail.

The Ottawa Free Press (Liberal) has become the champion of the old Shells Committee. It wants the new committee dissolved, or at least the chairman changed from Flavelle to Bertram, if the whole shell business of Canada is not to be dished. What is behind all this?—Kingston Whig.

It is said that 80 per cent. of the young men who attend the churches have enlisted. That is pretty good. The churches, then, are not the places for the recruiting meetings. The men the recruiting officers seek are not to be found there in large numbers.—Kingston Whig.

AN APPALLING LACK IN EVERYDAY LIFE

Great Need of Awakening on the Subject of Justice.

Neglect of the Principle of Justice Very Manifest in Christendom To-day—God's People Should Cultivate This Principle Carefully — Their Responsibility Great—Justice the Foundation of Character —Love the Superstructure.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 23.—Pastor Russell delivered a very impressive discourse here today. His text was, "Awake to righteousness and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame." (1 Corinthians 15:34.) He said in part:

This exhortation is not addressed to the world of sinners, but to Christians, as are all of the Apostolic writings. If we were to translate the text a little differently, it might better give the Apostle's thought. For instance, "Awake to a proper appreciation of justice. Do not sin against justice in your lives; for some have not a knowledge of God respecting justice, the principles of righteousness. And this is to your shame."

We who are in the School of Christ recognize that the Lord is teaching us and is preparing us for a great work in the future. The work of the Church during the incoming Age is, according to the Bible, to be kings, priests, and judges, to be God's representatives in the Messianic Kingdom. As kings, they will be sharers with our Lord Jesus in the ruling of the world. As priests, they share in the work of healing, instructing, and sympathizing with the world. As judges, they will administer justice, will give stripes or rewards to mankind, during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign. Manifestly, therefore, it is proper that whoever hopes to be of these kings, priests, and judges should now attain the qualifications of heart and mind which will make him competent for the work; for we may be very sure that God will not appoint any who are not properly qualified.

It is for this reason that God has been calling His Church out from the world during the last nineteen hundred years, and has been giving us the glorious instructions of our Lord Jesus and the Apostles and of the Law and the Prophets. All these things have been for our upbuilding in those qualities of heart and mind which will fit us for the great service to which God has called us.

But God is not testing His children according to their imperfect bodies; for He knows that we cannot do the things which we would. He is dealings with our spirits, our minds. Through the transforming influences of His Word, He is giving us a new mind; and it is this new mind which He receives into His family. This becomes the New Creature. (Romans 12: 1, 2; 2 Corinthians 5: 17.) We accept a new will, the will of God, instead of our own wills, and the Divine arrangements instead of our own plans and purposes. Thus God is dealing with us as His children, according to this new relationship into which we have come by faith and obedience; and through Christ our Lord we are reckoned perfect in God's sight.

The Knowledge of God's Will.

But how can we be perfect in will when our bodies are imperfect? We answer, as did the Apostle, "To will is present with me, but how to perform I find not." (Romans 7:18.) He did not always succeed in carrying out his will for righteousness. So it is with every one who seeks to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. We all know how to WILL right, but how to DO right is the problem.

Gradually we learn that God will not judge us according to the imperfections of our flesh; for so long as we remain faithful, these blemishes are covered with the robe of Christ's imputed righteousness. Therefore we do our best to show our Heavenly Father that we are trying hard to do right in every act, word, and thought. And since He expects every member of His family to have a perfect will, it becomes a personal question as to what is the will of God for us. So we seek diligently to prove "what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

To prove what is God's will means to come to a knowledge of His will, to demonstrate it for ourselves. If we are faithful, we are progressing in this more and more as the days go by. At first we had a little knowledge, and this we put into practice. As we grew in grace and in knowledge, we became better acquainted with the will of God; and it was for us to put this increased knowledge into practice also. This knowledge of the will of God we obtained, not in any supernatural way, but through the study of the Bible.

Whoever has come into the family of God has given up his own will and accepted instead God's will. Whoever has not given up his own will to the Lord is not His child. As the Apostle declares, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Romans 8:9.) The spirit of Christ was the spirit of full surrender to the Father's will; and as we come to this same condition, we give up our own wills and take instead the Divine will. This we do because it is the proper course for all who desire to follow in our Redeemer's steps, and because our own wills have proved to be unsatisfactory to ourselves. Our minds and our bodies are so imperfect that we have frequently gotten into difficulty through doing our own will. Therefore we are glad to know and to do the will of God, especially since we see that it is so gracious a will.

During the present time it is the will of God that His children shall have trials, difficulties, and polishings, in order that these experiences may develop in us a Godlikeness of character, a crystalization of character, that will render us fit to be used of God in the great work which He has appointed to the Lord Jesus, that we might thus become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord in that Heavenly Kingdom which is designed of the Father for the blessing of all the families of the earth.

Justice First, Then Love.

Sometimes Christian people see the doctrine of love in the Bible, and forget that there is a lesson which precedes love. This primary lesson is the one to which we draw your attention to-day. It is the lesson of justice—righteousness. Our text really signifies, "Awake to justice!" We must all learn to distinguish right from wrong and to practise what is just, right. Justice is righteousness.

The Law of God was given to the Israelites at Mount Sinai to show what justice means. They were not asked to do anything more than justice. "Thou shalt not kill," said the Law; for to take another's life is wrong, except when God's own Law demands it. "Thou shalt not steal." To do so is wrong, unjust. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." To do so would be an injustice.

Thus we see that the Law of God given to the children of Israel amounted to this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind, and strength; and thy neighbour as thyself." To do justice to your neighbor as you wish that neighbor to do justice to you is the essence of the Law of God given to the Jews for their treatment of others.

Did God give this same Law to the Church? Yes, so far as the spirit of the Law is concerned. God's Law is over all of His creatures. But during the Law Dispensation there was a special Law Covenant which God had made with Natural Israel. No others have ever been under that Law Covenant. The Jew who could keep that Law perfectly could live forever; and, having everlasting life at his command, he might have the opportunity of becoming a part of that great antitypical Spiritual Israel which was to bless all the families of the earth. This our Lord Jesus did. Moreover, in His statement of the Divine Law to Spiritual Israel, He "has magnified the Law and made it honorable" by showing how far-reaching and comprehensive are its requirements.

No intelligent person will question the propriety of dealing justly with every one in the world. This subject has many ramifications in all the affairs of our daily life. The principle of justice enters into every transaction, even the most trivial. It applies not only to our dealings with the world at large, but with every member of our own family. The principle of justice must be recognized with our own as well as with others. If all might get this thought of the Golden Rule fixed in the mind, if each one could awake to righteousness, to justice, the whole world would be revolutionized.

Practical Application of Justice.

If this principle of justice were recognized and followed, men would not be shooting one another to-day over in Europe. On the contrary, they would be doing something better, something good one toward another, just as they would wish others to do toward them. But men are not living up to this standard of righteousness, of justice. It is entirely ignored by governments and by individuals. The general excuse for violating the Golden Rule is, "It would never do for us to grant to others what we would expect for ourselves; for others would take advantage of us; they would not do their part; they would not reciprocate." Say the British, "It would not do for us to practice the Golden Rule toward the Germans; for we do not know what they would do to us." The Germans advance the same kind of argument.

This course of conduct is not the fear of God, but the fear of man; it ignores the fear of God. God says that if Christians are afraid of men and of nations and of what these may do, we are carnal, are living according to the flesh, are like the unbelieving world. How shall we who have come into relationship with God through the Lord Jesus Christ, we who have given our lives to Him, do under such circumstances? Shall we say that we fear to trust this principle of justice in our lives, that we do not dare to carry it out in every word, thought, and act? Are we afraid to trust God and to obey Him?

God did not say that we were to observe the Golden Rule whenever others observed it toward us, and to ignore it whenever others failed to observe it toward us. On the contrary, we are to practise it on every occasion, regardless of what others do. Then we shall know that all things shall work together for good toward us, because we shall be in line with God and His arrangements. He has power to overrule in all of life's affairs. The very least that we must do is to give justice to one another; and to do so will mean a great blessing to our own characters.

Whoever is violating the principle of justice, the Golden Rule, in his home or in the Church of Christ, or in business or social relations should, if he is a Christian, examine the matter earnestly and prayerfully, and "awake to righteousness [justice], and sin not." Thus to do violence to justice is sin; and so far as our knowledge goes, it is a sin that prevails everywhere. Many have not a proper appreciation of this fact. They do not see that justice is the very foundation of all character, of all right living. It is the foundation of the Throne of God. (Psalm 89:14.) In vain does anyone practice love to his fellow creatures or even toward God while he is at the same time violating the principle of justice toward that one. Only after we have rendered justice are we at liberty to practise love toward another. Then we may do as much as we are able along the line of love. Justice first, love afterwards.

Responsibility of God's People.

Those who are children of God are expecting shortly to be made the judges of the world. As the Apostle says, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Corinthians 6:2,3.) Moreover, God is seeking now to develop in our hearts and lives, in our characters, those principles which He desires. Therefore, unless we are just in our very hearts, unless we appreciate this principle of justice and rejoice to practise it, we shall not be fit for the Kingdom. We should not be unjust even to an animal. Every creature has its rights; and we should give each creature the rights which belong to it. The results are with God. Thus doing, shall we not be preparing our minds, our hearts, for the glorious condition which the Lord has in store for His faithful children?

We are not to think that the Kingdom of God is to be given on the basis of mercy or favor. There will be neither mercy nor favor in connection with the bestowal of the Heavenly reward. God shows mercy in connection with our sins and the weaknesses against which we are striving; but He will not allow in that Kingdom one individual whose character is not suitable. Those whom He approves for joint-heirs and rulers with our Lord Jesus must represent the principles of righteousness and must know how to apply those principles now. Whoever is not disposed to justice to such an extent as to be willing to suffer loss rather than do an injustice will not have a share in the Kingdom.

The Bible everywhere pictures God as the great Representative of Justice. If we receive a place in the Kingdom, it will be apportioned us on the basis of works, on the basis of our growth in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Lord Jesus. If we have been justified by faith in Jesus' blood, if we then have made a covenant with God, and have been begotten of His Holy Spirit, He wishes to see us go on to perfection as New Creatures. We are not to think that our Heavenly Father is uninterested in us, and that He will coldly and indifferently judge us. On the contrary, we are to remember our Lord's assurance, "The Father Himself loveth you."—John 14:21.

Some Dearer Than Others.

This is a very beautiful text—"The Father Himself loveth you." This is not said of the world. We know that God has a love for the world—"God so loved the world that He gave His Only-Begotten Son" to die for them. But our Lord is here declaring God's love for the Church, who are as dear to Him as "the apple of His eye." (Zechariah 2:8.) Just as we protect our eye lest anything should hurt it, so Jesus and His Church are very, very precious to their Heavenly Father.

From the very moment that God accepts any as His child and begets that one with His Holy Spirit, from that moment He especially loves him. He has appointed our Lord Jesus, our Redeemer, to be our Elder Brother, to take charge of us as the sons of God. He is the Head over this House of Sons, as St. Paul points out. (Hebrews 3:5, 6.) The Father loves us in much the same way that an earthly parent loves his children, and for the same reason. Yet as an earthly father may find a difference in the degree of his love toward his several children, so with God. Some are very dear children, because they are very dutiful, very obedient. So in proportion as we are zealous to do our Father's will, we have more of His love.

While the Father loves the spiritual babe, yet He does not expect as much of the babe as of the grown child. As we develop, therefore, the Father's love increases. He wishes to see us so earnest that we will seek to know what things are written in His Book, and that we will develop a character like His own. Jesus said, "Be ye like unto your Father in Hea-a character like the Father's, and we are to become like that dear Son.

In conclusion, let us remember that if we are true, loyal children of God, all our blemishes are covered by the robe of Christ's righteousness; and if we are doing with our might what our hands find to do in this great matter of justice, dealing with all along the lines of the Golden Rule, we are showing the Father that we appreciate this principle as the foundation of his Government. Upon this sure foundation we shall build a superstructure of love. Thus shall we be blessed and made ready for the Kingdom.

"Awake to righteousness, and sin not." Does not the Apostle's injunction imply that some are not fully awake to the importance of this principle of justice? We think that this is the thought; that very few have been awake to the practise of the Golden Rule. To our understanding the great Judge is now at the door, and the final testings are very near at hand. If we are hoping to enter into the Kingdom there is little time left for character-making. This is a very solemn thought. Therefore we should take the greatest pains to find out what God requires of those who are to be kings, priests, and judges in the Messianic Kingdom, in order that we may be amongst those who will make their calling and election sure, that we may have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Then we shall see Him as He is, and shall share His glory.

POWER OF ELOQUENCE.

A Scotch Preacher Who Proved Himself a Real Spellbinder.

The magic power of eloquence to hold an audience bound as by a spell is commonly credited to the political stump speaker. But that some of this gift of fascination is to be found in the pulpit the Rev. Dr. Currier makes clear in his book, "Nine Great Preachers." To show the importance of the voice and manner in delivering the message he tells the following story of the preaching of the Rev. Dr. Guthrie of Scotland:

Guthrie possessed to an eminent degree the power of apt, impressive illustration. Joined to the witchery of his voice, it sometimes amounted to a power of enchantment. His auditors were then spellbound by it.

An amusing instance is presented in the conduct of a Highland cattle drover one day in Guthrie's congregation in Free St. John's. The man stood throughout the service in one of the crowded aisles within a few yards of the pulpit. From the first he was riveted, a pinch of snuff every now and then evincing his satisfaction. Toward the end of the sermon and just as the preacher was commencing a prolonged illustration, the stranger applied to his horn mull.

Arrested, however, he stood motionless, his hand raised with the snuff between his fingers, his head thrown back, his eyes and mouth wide open. The instant the passage was finished, and before the audience had time to recover their breath, the drover applied the snuff with gusto to his nostrils, and, forgetting in his excitement alike the place and the occasion, returned his head to the crowd behind and exclaimed, "Na, sirs, I never heard the like of that!"

That's Different.

"I know her father does not like me. He wants me to go to work in his factory."

"Well, why don't you prove your worth by going? Then there will be wedding bells and a happy ending."

"I don't know about that! It's a dynamite factory."

CHAPTER IV.—Continued

He took both her hands and raised one to his lips. Miss Berrington buried her face in the roses. Her cheeks reflected the color of their petals. Vessie wished he could hear what they were saying. Their attitude and the expression on the young man's face suggested that they were lovers.

Perhaps Ralph Humphry was her husband. Vessie tried to find some consolation in the idea, but failed.

He saw them walk arm in arm to a secluded seat beneath a palm-tree. He moved his position slightly so that he could see them through the branching leaves. It was obvious that they were deeply interested in one another. The young man was talking rapidly, eagerly.

Then a voice, already unpleasantly familiar, assailed his ears:

"Good morning, sir. Hope you didn't suffer from any further disturbance last night?"

He turned quickly. The sinister man with the bald head and the black mustache was facing him.

Vessie nodded curtly. "I passed a very good night, thank you."

Deliberately pushing aside Sir John, the man glanced down the register; then, strolling across to one of the writing-tables, he sat down and commenced to scribble a note. It was brief. He read it over, slipped it into an envelope which he addressed. Beckoning to a page boy, he gave it to him.

Sir John Vessie walked away.

The page boy carried the letter which had been given to him across the lounge and gave it to Miss Berrington. She took it looked at the writing, turned it over, then with a shrug of her shoulders, laid it on her lap. She had seen Sir John crossing the lounge; she guessed it came from him.

"Go on, you were telling me about the theatre," she said to Ralph Humphry.

He waited until the page boy had disappeared, then he drew his chair still closer.

"Don't you want to open your letter?"

Myra shook her head. "Oh, it's nothing; probably some journalist wants to interview me, or some tradesman wants to present me with a pair of corsets, or an inventor wants his tooth-paste advertised." She made a little moue with her red lips and sighed. "Isn't it awful? An actress in the present day gets inundated with offers for everything except an engagement."

Humphry smiled and took her hand. He caressed the long white fingers lovingly.

"Don't be silly, Ralph," she whispered. "Remember you're in public."

"Hang it all, I haven't seen you for three months."

Business first, pleasure after," she said firmly. "Now what about the theatre?"

"Well, I've got one," Humphry said, and there was a note of triumph in his voice. "Couldn't have found one more suitable for my play. It's the Ingenue. Of course they want a thousand pounds down—six weeks' rent in advance. I told them that would be all right. Between us we can scrape together fifteen hundred, can't we? You told me so before you went away."

Myra raised the roses to her face. "A thousand pounds is rather a lot of money to put down isn't it, Ralph?"

"Not when one is putting on a certainty," he replied with boyish enthusiasm. "Don't think I am cock-sure of my play. It's of you I'm thinking. You will make the play. We agreed to take the plunge. It's all or nothing. It's worth it, Myra, isn't it? If I had five thousand or fifty thousand I'd risk the lot on you."

She raised her eyes to his. And there was nothing but love and gratitude in them now. Quite different from those into which Sir John Vessie had looked.

There was a short silence. Myra again glanced round the lounge. She wondered where Vessie had disappeared. Perhaps he had run away!"

"Ralph," she said softly, "I have a confession to make."

"I have thousands," he laughed, "and I never make 'em. I don't want to hear it. You insisted we should talk business. There are half a dozen people after the Ingenue. I promised the manageemnt that it should have our decision to-day, and a check at the end of the week at latest. It's all right, isn't it?"

Myra lay back in her chair and crossed her knees. She had half a mind to send for Sir John Vessie and introduce him to Raplh Humphry. Of course, she would have to tell the latter of their meeting on the Homburg express—and what had happened since.

But the one dreadful word Vessie had hurled at her was still drumming in her ears, drumming with a strange persistence: "Blackmail! Blackmail!"

A hideous word. A repulsive thing. A crime! What could have put such an idea into Sir John's head? Myra could read most men like an open book, and the moment she had set eyes on Sir John she had summed him up fairly correctly. She knew she had made use of him from the first mainly with the idea that he might be still more useful later on. And she knew now that a series of strange events and an almost tragic mistake had placed him in her power. To what extent he was in her power she he had lost his head and made use of conjectured until the moment when that dreadful word—blackmail.

"Well, why don't you speak?" Her lover's voice recalled her. She looked at him, looked into the honest brown eyes, and she blushed. Strange thoughts had been creeping, unasked, unexpectedly into her brain. She was ashamed to think.

"I made a fool of myself in Homburg," she said abruptly.

"Myra!"

"Oh, I haven't fallen in love," she said with a forced laugh, "or anything silly of that sort. It's something worse."

Humphry shook his head. "As long as you love me nothing else matters. We will make our fortunes over this season at the Ingenue. I bet you within three months we shall be able to marry."

Myra looked at her lover and there was desperation in her eyes. "Look here, Ralph, you have got to have the truth. I couldn't hide it from you if I would. I was greedy. I felt fifteen hundred pounds was not a big enough capital on which to start. I gambled with it at Homburg—thought I could double it. Instead, I lost it."

Ralph Humphry rose from his seat, his lips apart. With an effort he controlled himself and sat down again. "Lost it? All of it?"

She shook her head. Her eyes were full now. "About seven hundred pounds. I am so ashamed of myself."

He swallowed hastily and forced a smile to his lips. "It's all right, old girl. I'll set to and write some more of my cheap books. It only means waiting another year or two. Don't worry.

Careless as to who saw her, Myra bent toward him and laid her hands on his shoulders. "You are brave. You ought to hate me. A selfish, silly little fool, that's all I am. I've ruined your chances and my own."

"It's all right, dear," he said unsteadily.

"Listen, Ralph." She crept a little closer. "Something happened to me coming from Homburg. Something happened last night. I'll tell you one day. It was all a mistake. It's quite ridiculous, in a way, though it might have been a tragedy. But something good may come out of it. Almost at once." She glanced round the lounge. "I want you to go now. I'll meet you for dinner to-night, if you like, at the Savoy. Perhaps I'll have—better news for you then. But leave me now, there's a dear, and don't ask any more questions. You've been a brick."

There were tears in her eyes. Ralph Humphry rose.

"Right you are. I'll go if you wish it. I'll look in at the Ingenue and ask them to hold on for a bit. I'm afraid it's not much use." He took her hand and kissed it again. "To-night at the Savoy, half past seven."

Myra Berrington watched him cross the lounge. She waved her hand to him as he passed through the folding doors. Then she picked up the letter the page boy had given her. She felt sure it was from Sir John Vessie. She opened it and read the contents.

"It will be to your advantage to see me for a few minutes before you take leave of Sir John Vessie—before you hear his explantion. I shall expect you in half an hour's time at 29a Escott street, Soho, Flat H. Ring the bell twice. I was the first to hear the cry of 'Thief!' and the screams for help last night. And I traveled with you on the train from Homburg. For your own sake do not fail to come.—S. D."

She scrunched the letter up in her hand. Her face went deathly white. As she raised her head she saw standing beside her a few feet away the man with a black mustache and a bald head.

Hair Dressing that Makes Women's Hair Grow Radiant

Women of Canada are demanding a perfect hair tonic, one that is daintily perfumed, that is not sticky or greasy, and that will make the hair grow profusely and give it a lustre that attracts admiration.

Like their clever sisters in Paris, they have learned that a woman with scant, dull, lifeless hair grows old all too soon.

Since the introduction of Parisian Sage into Canada druggists in every town are recommending Parisian Sage because they know that it will do exactly what the makers say it will do.

Besides being a hair grower and beautifier, Parisian Sage is rigidly guaranteed to stop itching scalp, to stop hair from falling, and to banish every trace of dandruff, or money back.

Parisian Sage causes the hair to grow strong, vigorous, and lustrous because it kills the dandruff germs that infest the hair roots, which is the basis of all scalp and hair diseases, and also because it furnishes natural nourishment to the weakened and run-down hair tubes.

Parisian Sage is sold by druggists everywhere for only 50 cents a large bottle. It is fully guaranteed

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

ROADS IN CHINA.

They Remind One Very Much of the Snakes in Ireland.

BECAUSE THERE ARE NONE.

What Apologies There Are For Them Are a Great Deal Like the Bed of a Stone Quarry—The Torture That Goes With a Trip In a Peking Cart.

Describing the roads, or, rather, the lack of roads, in China and the torture that is undergone by the tourist who, used to the luxurious modes of travel we may employ, trusts himself to the uncertain joys of a trip in a Peking chair, a writer in the Wide World Magazine says:

"Now, a Peking cart is a very venerable mode of progression. When our ancestors were lightly dressed in woad and had no conception of any wheeled vehicle the Chinese lady was paying her calls in the back of a Peking cart, the seat of honour under the tilt, well out of sight of the passers by, while her servant sat in front, the place of comfort, if such a word can be applied to anything pertaining to a Peking cart.

"In spite of its long and aristocratic record if there is any mode of progression more wearying and uncomfortable I have not met it. It is simply a springless board set on a couple of wheels with a wagon tilt of blue cotton over it and a place for heavy luggage behind. The Chinaman sits on the floor and does not seem to mind, but the ordinary westerner, like myself packs his bedding and all the cushions he can beg or borrow around him and then resigns himself to his fate.

"The Peking cart has one advantage people will tell you—it has nothing to break in it. But there are moments when it would be a mighty relief if something did break, for if the wood work holds together as it tosses you from side to side you yourself are one sore, bruised mass. No; I cannot recommend a Peking cart, even on the smoothest road.

"And the roads in China are not smooth. We all know the description of the snakes in Ireland. 'There are none,' and much the same might be said about the roads in China. There are so called roads, certainly, upon which the people move about, but I have seldom met one that was any better than the surrounding country, and very, very often on this journey I met roads where it was ease and luxury to move off them on to the neighboring plowed field.

"The recipe for a road there in the north seems to be: Take a piece of the country that is really too bad to plow or to use for any agricultural purpose whatever, that a mountain torrent, in fact, has given up as too much for the water, upset a stone wall over it—a stone wall with good, large stones in it—take care they never for a moment lie evenly, and you have your road.

"Leaving Peking for the eastern tombs, you go for the first two or three hours along a paved way of magnificent porportions planned and laid out as a highway should be. The great stones with which it is paved were probably put there by slave labor, how many hundred years ago I do not know, but the blocks are uneven now, some of them are gone altogether, though how a huge block of stone could possibly disappear passes my understanding, and whenever the carter could he took the cart down beside the road, where at least the dust made a cushion for the nail studded wheels, and the jarring and the jolting were not quite so terrible.

"It takes as long to get beyond the environs of Peking in a cart as it does to get out of London in a motorcar. First we passed through the Babylonish gate, and the great walls were behind us; then, outside the city, all looking dusty, dirty and khaki colored in the brilliant sunshine, were numerous small houses, and the wayside was lined with booths on which were things for sale.

"Along the roadway came an endless array of people, clad for the most part in blue cotton—men walking, men with loads slung from a bamboo across their shoulders, donkeys laden with baskets or sacks of grain, with fat Chinese on their backs. There were Peking carts, there were mules, there were ponies, and this busy throng is almost the same as it was a couple of thousand years ago.

"But it was a long, long while before I could feel I was really in the country. There was the khaki colored land, there were the khaki colored houses, built of mud apparently, with graceful tiled roofs, and blue clad people everywhere and everywhere at work.

"Always the fields were most beautifully tilled. There were no fences. The Chinese are too civilized to need fences, and when you see stone walls it is only because, since they can't be dropped off the planet into space, the stones must be disposed of somehow."

Paris For Politeness.

Translated rather crudely and literally, this is the notice in a Paris trolley car: "Messieurs the passengers descending from the carriage are urged (literally "prayed"), before renouncing the shelter which the carriage they are about to quit offers them, to assure themselves, as a preliminary, that no carriage coming in the opposite direction is in proximity."

Hope for the best, but work hard for the result.

Culture.

Culture is a slow process. It comes from long and close contacts. It is the fruit of reflection, of travail of soul and of mind. Grappling with something until the very essence of it has been extracted is a first step. Thus the tastes of essences is learned, and once learned lesser distillations do not satisfy. Then follows a growing power to discriminate, to distinguish nice values, to judge of quality, to answer to beauty, to feel the need, that what you have, though it may be little, may still be the real thing. This is culture. It is not baggage, like diplomas and degrees. It is not things seen and heard, miles traveled or books read. These are the materials for culture. They contribute to it only when they are absorbed by the mind and as really lost in it as water and lime, phosphates and ammonia must be lost in the soil if they are to enrich it and enable it to increase its yield.—Ida M. Tarbell in Woman's Home Companion.

The Battle of Chalons.

There have been so many bloody battles it is perhaps impossible to say with absolute certainty which of them all was the bloodiest, but the balance of the evidence seems to be in favor of the battle of Chalons, France, fought A. D. 451 between the Huns, under Attila, and the Romans, Goths and Franks, under the command of Aetius, the most renowned captain of his day. At the head of his 500,000 savages Attila was having everything his own way, and it looked as if Aryan civilization was destined to fall before the Tartar despotism, when suddenly, like a bolt out of the blue, Aetius fell upon the barbaric hordes and Europe was saved. It is estimated that 400,000 of the barbarians were left dead on the field.

Baked Apple Pudding.

Peel, core and cut eight apples the same as for apple sauce, put them into a stewpan with just enough water to keep them from burning and stew until they are reduced to a pulp. Weigh the pulp and to every half pound add half a pound of sugar, six ounces of butter, the rind of one lemon and six well beaten eggs. Beat these ingredients all together. Line a pudding dish with puff paste, fill with the mixture and bake half an hour. The butter should be added last; then the pudding is ready for the oven.

How to Fringe.

When fringing a table cover or anything with deep fringe first tear it up as deep as you want the fringe at intervals of a finger or so all the way across the end; then fringe out these short pieces one by one, which is a much easier way than pulling out a long thread every time, having it break and being obliged to hunt for the end with pin or needle.

YES—IT IS POSSIBLE TO STOP RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a tormenting and stubborn malady. In some cases it yields to treatment which is without avail in other cases.

The darting pains, lame muscles or stiffened joints only disappear by gradually expelling the uric acid, and so many thousands have been relieved by the blood-enriching oil-food in Scott's Emulsion that you should give it a faithful trial. Scott's Emulsion acts as a powerful blood-purifier by increasing the red corpuscles and it strengthens the organs to carry off the acids which cause the trouble.

Try Scott's Emulsion. It cannot harm. It has helped thousands and may be exactly what you need. No drugs.

Chasing Subs. Is Real Sport

The king of our sailors' outdoor sports just now is "chasing" submarines, says an Old Country magazine. The crews of the chasers are experts at the game.

Now, every submarine makes what the experts call a "surface wave." Even at 60 feet deep she leaves a distinct path, and 60 feet is pretty deep for any submarine to venture. Besides this plain track, there are also innumerable bubbles of air and blobules of oil continually escaping to the surface plain indication to the observant eye of a submarine hovering below.

All right—the "chaser catches the "surface wave." This spells the end for the submarine, unless a storm comes up or a fog falls. For it is merely the business of the speedier motor boat to keep above the wave, and the time has got to come when the submarine must bob up and get her bearings or see what she can see. It is all over in ten seconds.

Aeroplanes have a winning way with them, too. It is their custom to fly as slowly as possible over the shallow waters around the British coast and spy out German submarines resting on the bottom, a regular trick of theirs.

And here the aeroplane has shown its great usefulness. The shallow water that surrounds the coastlines makes it possible for the aviator to spy out the submarine as she lies, blind and immobile, on the bottom, even 100 feet deep. He notes the position and notifies the nearest patrol boat, which speed to the spot. Now it is only a case of waiting for the submarine to rise. You know the rest if you have read thus far.

Mines are anchored from the bottom at about the cruising distance of a submarine from the surface. One hit is enough. Nothing ever comes up to tell the tale. Months after, perhaps, in Germany another submarine is listed as missing—yes, missing until the sea shall give up its dead.

"Gumming the eye" is another sport. A tanker merely steams around in concentric circles at a spot on the sea frequented by submarines, and the oil gets on the glass of the periscope and shuts out the view. Then the boat must open up and let a man out on deck to clean the periscope. If a "chaser" happens to be around the submarine doesn't get a chance to submerge—of its own accord.

Canada And The Red Cross

Statistics of the Austrian Red Cross Canada's Record Can Stand Comparison

The International Red Cross bulletin gives some interesting facts about the working of the Austrian Red Cross. Up to the end of April 1915, the cash receipts amounted to 16,300,000 Kronen. Over 7,000,000 of this came from Vienna alone, and over one million was contributed from abroad, presumably for the most part from America. All accounts are inspected and the expenditure is controlled by a committee of financial experts.

Canada's contribution of approximately $6,000,000 to Red Cross Funds, considering population, bears more than favourable comparison with this Austrian contribution of $8,000,000.

An interesting item in the Austrian Society's activities is its maintenance of 3 hospital ships and 12 hospital trains. However, anything like a complete report of the Red Cross in Austria in unobtainable so that one is liable to estimate with what completeness Austria copes with its Red Cross obligation which must be of extraordinary magnitude. Brief as is this information about a hostile Red Cross Society, it should serve as a stimulus to our own Canadian Society which in the relief of the wounded should acquit itself honourably in this world Red Cross rivalry.

Those Red Cross Socks Again

There seem to be people in the country who delight in spreading any tale however unfounded, which is calculated to injure the Red Cross or any other society which is engaged in patriotic work. The absurd sock story which has been so often refuted persists in cropping up here and there throughout the whole country.

A very vigorous refutation of this baseless lie is written by Sergeant R. S. Simmons in a letter to his father in London, Ont.

"As to having to pay anything" states Sergeant Simmons, "for an article from the Red Cross or any other society, it is all utter rot. We are well fed and well clothed and it costs us nothing. These stories are nothing but damnable lies circulated by men who have never been in the firing line or are too cowardly to stand in the firing line."

Thousands of other letters could be printed substantiating this denial. People who take such stories seriously are either very incredulous or else very anxious to grasp at any straw for an excuse to escape their Red Cross duty. There is not the least doubt that the Red Cross funds are well administered.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a moment the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the tricksy elf-like second part, and the glory of the close.

At the County Council proceedings yesterday afternoon, Dr. Clinton, who is a Government Medical Health Officer, addressed the members briefly. He referred to the fact that after February 1st local medical health officers and local Boards of Health would be able to procure free from the Government laboratory anti-toxine serums, and it was essential that the offer should be accepted. Every precaution, Dr. Clinton stated, should be taken to protect the rising generation from infectious disease. Now was the time to take care of the children.

How to Save Your Eyes

TRY THIS FREE PRESCRIPTION

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to J. S. McKeown druggist, or to the nearest wideawake drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvelously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

HASTINGS COUNTY COUNCIL HOLD RED-HOT MEETING

by Mr. Vermilyea, that Mr. G. L. Sills be Warden for 1916.

Mr. Montgomery moved, seconded by Mr. Gray, that Mr. W. H. Nugent, be Warden for 1916.

Mr. Vermilyea said he was afraid that progress would not be made in the Council if the arrangement which had been in vogue for some years, namely that a Conservative be Warden one year and a Liberal the next year, was broken. For years in the Council the Conservatives elected one as their Warden and then for a period of 9 years the Liberal being in power elected one of their number as Warden. In the year 1888 he proposed a change, namely that a Conservative be Warden one year and a Liberal the next year. If we want unanimity in the Council politics should be eliminated. What the majority wants to do now is to kick the minority out. Last year the Conservatives had the Wardenship and the Chairmanship of all committees but one, and had a majority of the members of the committee. We take the bitter dose with the best spirit we can. This is what we have to do. We ought to have the Wardenship every other year. He would like to see a true British spirit exhibited amongst the members. When the alternative system was in vogue a different spirit prevailed than in former years. He hoped for the sake of harmony that justice would prevail.

Mr. Montgomery said there were good arguments on both sides of the question. The Conservatives were in a large majority in the Council, and considered that having such a majority they were entitled to the Wardenship for two years. He did not wish to do anything but what was fair. He was an aspirant for the position but had been defeated in caucus.

Mr. Vermilyea suggested that the election of Warden be delayed until to-morrow morning and in the meantime the members get together with a view to obtaining a satisfactory arrangement. He made a motion to that effect.

Mr. C. H. Ketcheson said the Council should not be divided on party line. He did not desire to do anything wrong to the minority. There were in the Council at present 20 Conservatives and 10 Reformers, and he would favor the Reformers being recognized in committees. Nothing had been done to coerce the Reformers. He had no objection to the matter being postponed.

Mr. Vermilyea—If for 25 years there had been harmony it should not be overthrown at present. He wanted the kindest of feelings existing between all members of the Council.

Mr. Clare said that the members come to the Council to do the business of the county, and not for political purpose. He felt it would be a serious mistake to upset a long standing agreement which has existed in the Council. Other things than politics should be considered in the Council. He would favor the continuing of the system that has been in vogue for several years. British fair play is all that is asked for. There were competent men on both sides of politics in the Council and the person nominated in accordance with the old agreement was in every way competent of fulfilling the position. He would second Mr. Vermilyea's motion.

Mr. McLaren suggested that a caucus might be held and the matter setted to-day.

Mr. R. P. Coulter—We would be just as near a verdict on the morrow as we are to-day. Last year the Conservatives notified the Reformers that if they had 18 or more members they would nominate a Conservative for Warden and we have done so. There was no use delaying the matter until to-morrow. Four years ago Mr. Vermilyea introduced politics in the Council and he was doing so to-day. He was a Britisher and all he wanted was British fair play.

Mr. Vermilyea said the party principles should not be applied, as it is proposed to apply it to-day. The Reformers last year did make a proposition that whatever party was in the majority that party should have the Wardenship 3 years out of 5.

Mr. Rollins said he would agree to all things that are fair, but it was unreasonable to ask us to remain to an agreement that was made years ago. The proposition made to-day he considered was fair. He did not think the Conservatives who were 2 to 1 in Council were asking too much to name the Warden for this year.

Mr. G. L. Sills said he had the honor of being nominated for the Wardenship. The Council should come to some understanding as to the composition of the committee. An old agreement is being broken up and before it is broken some understanding as to equality of the personnel of Committees should be agreed upon. He was agreeable to any adjustment.

The motion of Mr. Vermilyea to delay the selection of a Warden was defeated.

Mr. Gunter said that for 10 years the Conservatives had been in power and had not usurped their power. All the Conservatives wanted was a fair representative according to numbers.

Mr. Montgomery suggested that a new agreement be entered into. The Conservatives should have the Wardenship this year.

Mr. Jordison was in favor of an agreement between the parties being made and make it so that it would be satisfactory to both parties.

Mr. Vermilyea strongly resented the remarks that he had brought politics into the Council.

Upon a vote being taken Mr. Nugent was elected Warden by a vote of 19 to 9.

Mr. Nugent upon taking the chair, said that words failed to express his feelings for the honor which had been conferred upon him by electing him Warden. He appreciated the honor and sincerely thanked those who had supported him for that position. He was pleased to see so many of the old members back in the Council and he would extend a hearty welcome to the new members. He was sorry that there had been such a debate and would also be sorry if it had caused any hard feelings. He had not taken part in the debate on account of being a candidate for Wardenship. He would do all that was in his power to create harmony in the Council proceedings. He had served on several committees and he did not know politically what the members were. There would be some matters of importance to be attended to at this session. A communication from Mr. McLean, Government paid commissioner, intimated that the County would receive 40 per cent for new permanent road work, and 20 per cent. for maintenance or repair work. In conclusion he would ask all members to work together in harmony for the county's welfare. (Applause).

Council adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Wednesday, January 26.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

MUSIC & DRAMA

"QUO VADIS" TO-NIGHT

George Kleine's glorious photo-drama production "Quo Vadis" which established a record run of six months at the Astor Theatre in New York City, has exercised a potent influence in all circles of society, religious and educational. Large theatre parties were formed from various schools and colleges and in several instances Sunday Schools attended the performances in a body. The lessons taught by these wonderful pictures are both impressive and inspiring. Mr. Kleine's production which is the only bona fide and important production of "Quo Vadis" is announced for exhibition at Griffin's Opera House tonight and Thursday matinee and night.

"BROKEN COIN" TONIGHT

The many followers of the great photo-play serial "The Broken Coin" will be pleased to hear that the 11th episode is to be presented at Griffin's Palace Theatre to-night and Thursday matinee and night. The title of this episode which contains many thrilling and unique moments, is "The Clash of Arms". The popular Belleville favorites William Garwood and Violet Mersereau will also be presented on the same programme in the unusually interesting 2 act Rex Film play entitled "Copper." Besides the above special offerings two highly amusing comedies will also be presented.

FREDERICK PALMER'S LECTURE AT GRIFFIN'S ON THE 31ST JANUARY

There are a great number of people in this city who have only heard of this great man, who have had to make their impressions of him by his interesting articles appearing in the Daily Press.

It now falls to their lot to be able to hear as well as see him at Griffin's on the 31st inst., where he appears under the auspices of the 80th "Overseas" Battalion.

His book "My Year of The Great War," which has recently appeared, has filled us on this side with a proper perspective of the way that The Great Nations are carrying on this war. It has also filled a long felt want in the homes of the men who have "Gone Over."

Just a word now in regard to the personality of this man. As a general rule, persons who are placed in the same relative position as Mr. Palmer, do not conduct themselves with the gentleness and yet firmness of this man, who, having been and having seen would be aggressive and prepossessing, not so with Mr. Palmer. He does not flaunt himself on the public, but rather he is the reverse. The press wherever he has given his lectures has been most enthusiastic in its praise of him, and we are sure that the citizens of Belleville will be like those of other cities in their reception of him.

As an added attraction the splendid 18 piece orchestra of the 80th Battalion, under the leadership of Lieut. H. A. Stares, will be in attendance during the lecture. Prices 25c., 50c., 75c., $1.00. Plan opens Thursday at Doyle's Drug Store.

WEDDING BELLS

SHARPE—TERRILL

An interesting event at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Terrill, 95 Dundas Street, Tuesday evening, was the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret, to Maynard Sharpe of Wooler, the Rev. A. J. Terrill of Stirling, officiating. The bride wore her travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth, with large black velvet hat. They were attended by the bride's youngest sister, Edith, who wore a suit of dark green garbardine, with large black velvet hat, and Pte. LeRoy Schryver of the 59th Battalion at Brockville. Following a dainty repast the young couple left on the 4.50 G. T. R. going west, spending their honeymoon at Toronto and Welland.

Peace hath its heroes no less than war—as the sufferers from la grippe will freely maintain.

GERMANS TAKEN FROM TUG

Herman Fulkandort and William Warren, German Subjects, Now Interned at St. John, N.B. Preferred Prison Life in Canada to War at Home

Canadian Press Special

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 27.—Herman Fulkandort and William Warren, German subjects, were taken from the American ocean going tug Ramos here, yesterday, and removed to Amherst interment camp. Protest was made, but as the tug had entered here and was leaving for Spencer's Island, Nova Scotia, arrest was legal.

Fulkandort said he preferred to remain a prison in Canada to the end of the war before returning to Germany, whither he had been summoned. His father and three brothers have been killed, and every man from eighteen to forty-five in their little village in Saxony are already at the front.

France Pays Big Price For Use of High Explosive

Lose Four Hundred Guns Crews By Accidental Explosions Inside Weapons

U. S. IS PROFITING BY WAR

Military Observers in Fields of Operations Are Obtaining Valuable Information

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Some of the events of the war, as they bear on the use of heavy mobile artillery, were laid before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to-day by Colonel Charles G. Treat, of the General Staff, and chairman of the board which recently studied the remodelling of the American field artillery system. Following the German system, said Colonel Treat, the General Staff was recommending the adoption of mobile howitzers as large as 16 inches in calibre, while it hoped to profit by French experience and avoid the accidents resulting from high explosive shells detonating before leaving the gun.

"Our military observers with the armies in the European war," said Colonel Treat, "are treated with the greatest consideration and been given every opportunity to get exceptional information. We are receiving information from them of the utmost value, although they will not fully report until their return on matters which might injure the armies to which they are attached.

"The observers have reported, for instance, that the 16-inch guns no

HORSES LOST WHEN FLOE BROKE AWAY

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—Five horses were drowned and a dozen men narrowly escaped with their lives yesterday when during ice-cutting operations on the river near Nun's Island a large floe separated from the main sheet and floated down towards St. Helen's Island. All the men managed to escape from the floe, but the horses perished. The animals seemed to realize their danger as the ice started to move, and they dashed across the ice and into the water. The horses and sleighs belonged to Simeon David, T. Trudeau and M. Leazotte, of St. Lambert.

COUNTY COUNCIL DISCUSSES O'BRIEN BRIDGE REPAIRS

Deputation Air Alleged Grievances on Expenditure—County Engineer and Foreman Defend Work Being Done

Wednesday, Jan. 26th.

Afternoon Session

Council resumed at 2 o'clock.

Mr. J. Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank, addressed the Council. He said the object of his presence was on behalf of the Canadian Club of Belleville to extend to all members of the Council an invitation to attend an address in the assembly room on Thursday night by Archbishop Cody of Toronto. He hoped all members would hear the address. The speaker referred to the county patriotic fund, stating that at present 44 women were being looked after and doubly that number would be receiving aid before this year was over. The various municipalities were doing nobly, as was also the county, but more money would be needed. Mr. Elliott also referred to the Children Aid Shelter and stated the present building had been improved and possibly would do for the next three or four years, and by this move money would be saved.

Rev. C. G. Smith addressed the Council briefly, extending a hearty invitation to the members to attend the address of Archbishop Cody.

On motion the invitation was accepted with thanks.

Warden Nugent thanked the deputation for the kind invitation which would no doubt be accepted by all members.

O'Brien's Bridge Repairs

The remainder of the afternoon session was taken up in a discussion re repairs to O'Brien's bridge, which was prolonged until 6.30.

Warden Nugent, in introducing the matter, suggested that the matter be discussed in a fair manner.

Mr. G. N. Brintnell said there had never previous to the present time been a large expenditure owing to the settling of the piers of O'Brien's bridge. He contended that the work of repairing the pier which had settled on one end, could have been done without the great expense that it has cost the county. Two bridges, he contended, had been lost where the present bridge is, by bungling of county officials. In his opinion the Council should protest the coffer dam now built about the pier. The bridge is to-day from $1000 to $2000 less in value than it was before all the expense had been placed upon it.

Mr. D. Poucher asked why he and others had been asked to appear before the Council.

Mr. Ketcheson said it was to explain some statements which had been made public through the press in regard to repairs to O'Brien's bridge.

Mr. Poucher, continuing, spoke at considerable length, defending what he had written, claiming that they were the facts.

Mr. G. L. Sills said in public he made the statement that the pier could be moved with a crowbar and he, the speaker, moved it with a bar. This was a contradiction to one statement in the paper that the pier had settled on something.

Mr. A. Moore addressed the Council and stated he wrote a letter and did suggest that an investigation be held. He considered the engineering proposition at O'Brien's bridge had cost the county too much money. In his opinion the foundation secured by the Weddell Company was a good foundation. The speaker gave a history of the bridges that had been built where the present bridge is located. If there had been anything wrong in the matter the wrong should be righted.

Mr. McLaren asked Mr. Moore where he obtained the information that he wrote in the papers, that it would cost $20,000 to make the repairs to O'Brien's bridge.

Mr. Moore—It has already cost $10,000 and it looks as if it would cost another $10,000. He had consulted an engineer in the matter. It looked to him a most unreasonable expenditure. He would suggest driving steel piles about the old piles.

Mr. Pearson said he considered

Hamilton Sends Fighting Parson

Assistant Pastor of Centenary Church Qualifies as Lieutenant

HAMILTON, Jan. 26.—Hamilton has a fighting parson, Rev. Charles Morgan, assistant pastor of Centenary church, who has been in full charge since Rev. G. H. Williams accepted the position of chief recruiting officer for the district, has taken out a commission in the Thirteenth Royal Regiment. It is his desire and intention to qualify himself for active service in any capacity in which he may be required, and not merely as a chaplain, and while at present his military duties will not in any way interfere with his ministerial duties he will be qualified when the opportunity offers to join an overseas battalion as a fighting man.

Rev. Mr. Morgan has long been desirous of securing an appointment as chaplain of one of the overseas battalions, but as there did not appear to be much chance of his being accepted in that capacity for some time he decided to prepare himself for service in any other capacity in which he might be required. Accordingly, he applied for a commission in the Thirteenth Royal Regiment, and this morning he was examined by the doctors and accepted. Rev. Mr. Morgan is the first Hamilton minister to offer his services in any capacity other than that of chaplain, although several other ministers, including Rev. Dr. S. Banks Nelson and Rev. W. G. Martin have expressed their willingness to do so.

British In Southern Arabian In Great Danger

Canadian Press Special

BERLIN, via wireless, Jan. 27.—Cologne Colks Zeitung publishes a story purporting to come from Cairo, that the British in southern Arabia are in a dangerous position from Arab attacks, having lost up to December 30th, fifteen thousand killed and twenty thousand wounded. Despatch gives number of British troops now at Aden at twenty thousand.

ARABS ARE ROUTED BY BRITISH FORCES

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Reuter's correspondent at Cairo, in a despatch dealing with General Wallace's victory over the Senussi tribesmen in western Egypt last Sunday, says:

"Four thousand five hundred western Arabs were engaged and driven back three miles. The British casualties were 26 men killed and 74 wounded. The enemy had about 150 men killed and 500 wounded.

Liberals Split With Their Organ

F. B. Carvell Tries to Read Free Press Out of the Party

CALLS IT CONSERVATIVE

Free Press Denies Charge of Conservative Control and Explains Its Attitude

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—The quarrel of the Liberal opposition with the local Liberal organ, the Free Press, grows in bitterness. The continued defence of the old shell committee by the Free Press is galling and hurtful to those Liberal members who are attacking the work of the committee on the floor of Parliament. The Free Press to-day jeers at yesterday's question from Mr. F. B. Carvell as to why the Minister of Marine did not read a complete list of shell contractors. The paper makes the statement that "all this information, in just as complete and detailed a form as Mr. Carvell suggests, was actually supplied to the Liberal Opposition last July," and proceeds to say that men sitting around Messrs. Carvell, Pugsley and MacDonald "are in possession of documents which, though confidential, would at least enlighten them if they seek only for facts."

Mr. Carvell came back at the Free Press this afternoon with the statement that the paper was under Conservative control. This is incorrect, according to information emanating from the Free Press, which is to the effect that the stock was also bought and paid for by the editor and manager of the paper, though a certain portion of the stock is pledged as security for certain advances.

Free Press Statement

The Free Press will say tomorrow with reference to Mr. Carvell's remarks about it:

"All the stock of the Ottawa Free Press is owned by Messrs. Norman Smith and William Findlay, editor and manager, respectively. It was purchased and paid for by them some years ago. A certain portion of the company's stock is held by Mr. Glyn Osler, barrister, formerly of Ottawa, and now of Toronto, but only in the usual way as collateral for a loan. Mr. Osler and clients for whom he may be acting have not the slightest voice in the editorial conduct or business management of the paper, and only to a very limited extent (sufficient to protect their security) have they any control over the company's minutes. The financial obligation can be liquidated at any time convenient to Messrs. Smith and Findlay. The Free Press has been a consistent supporter of the Liberal party during the ten years it has been edited by Mr. Norman Smith, but at the beginning of the war announcement was made that until peace was declared the policy of the paper would be independent of both political parties. The Free Press was the first to advocate the formation of a coalition government. The views of the Free Press on the Bertram shell committee are the views of its editor, and they were communicated to Sir Wilfrid Laurier last July when the criticisms first appeared."

TWO TRAINMEN KILLED IN FREIGHT COLLISION

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Jan. 26.—A pile-up between two freight trains at Pasqua, the junction of the Canadian Pacific Railway main line and the Soo Line, eight miles east of this city last night, resulted in the death of two Canadian Pacific trainmen and serious injury to three more.

R. L. Brown, yard foreman at Pasqua, and his helper, M. Moran, were instantly killed. R. E. Reardon, a stockman of High River, Alta.; Brakeman G. A. Gough and Brakeman M. Wylie were injured.

Must Keep on Killing the Germans

Our Business is to Fight, Says Father Vaughan, Until Victorious

SAVAGES FAIL TO PLAY GAME

If Stories Are Exaggerated Huns Fail to Obey War Lords

LONDON, Jan. 26.—In a speech at the Mansion House yesterday, Father Bernard Vaughn said that if Prussianized Germany would play the game according to the rules laid down by international law, he thought it would command the admiration as well as the respect of Englishmen, but the Germans had failed to play the game.

"Our business," he cried vehemently, "is to keep on killing the Germans. Somebody has to be killed, and do you think we ought to be killed in view of the motive we have gone forth to fight for? I say we have to kill a sufficient number of that tremendous army so as to entitle us to dictate terms of a peace that shall be rooted in a victory to be heard and shouted from Paris to the mammoth metropolis."

Referring to the reports of German atrocities, he said he was sometimes told that the newspapers were exaggerating. His answer was that if the Germans had not done what was charged against them, they were failing to carry out the laws laid down by their war lords—to leave women and children nothing but their eyes to weep with.

Montreal Courts Are Tied Up By the Grippe

MONTREAL, Jan. 26—Montreal has LaGrippe, and the civil courts are almost tied up with the epidemic that prevails here. The acting-Chief Justice, Sir Horace Archibald, has been confined to his house more than a week. He may be on duty next week. Mr. Justice Marechal, one of the new judges, is out of commission, too, while Judges Mercier, Weir, Fortin and Dunlop are very ill, too. Mr. Justice Dunlop is in his 81st year, and his condition is grave.

The hospitals are filled to overflowing with LaGrippe patients, and cots have been placed in the corridors.

U.S. Russian Order Not True

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—"The Munitions Board is officially informed that there is no truth in the statements which have appeared recently to the effect that the Russian Government is negotiating the placing of orders for ten million shrapnel and high-explosive shells in the United States," says a statement issued by the Board tonight.

The Board has recently placed an order for 50,000 boxes for 4.5 brass cartridge cases. Tenders were called for, and the tenders received ranged from $1.22½ per box to $4 per box. The order was placed at the lowest price quoted.

Canadian Press Special

MINDEN, Ont., Jan. 27.—Nathan Carr, who came here from Port Hope six months ago with his wife and six children, was lodged in jail this week, on suspicion of insanity. After examination by doctors yesterday he escaped, but was recaptured, and this morning attempted suicide by slashing himself with a dull knife. He is still alive and will be taken to Lindsay hospital.

COMFORTS FOR TROOPS

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—With regard to the provision of comforts for Canadian troops at the front and in Great Britain there are several voluntary associations which are interesting themselves in this work. Among them are Canadian War Contingent Association and the Canadian Field Comforts Commission. The Government, according to a statement issued to-day, has not organized either of these associations, which are purely of a voluntary character, but it approves of them both and is prepared to facilitate in any way the sending forward of either of these associations anything which is contributed for the comfort of the men at the front or in Great Britain. Neither of these associations is in any other respect an official channel and any impression that either one of them has any official status except as above mentioned is entirely unfounded. The Government appreciates the good work which has been done by both associations and is prepared to assist and co-operate with both of them.

WANTS TO GIVE A MILLION TO BELGIAN RELIEF COMMISSION

American Who Raised a Cargo of Flour, and Saw It Distributed, Praises the Work Highly

Special to The Intelligencer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—"I am able to say without reserve, that although I have had occasion in the past to inspect many methods of public relief in various countries, I have never before seen one that can compare in efficiency thoroughness and wisdom with the system now being employed in Belgium through the combined efforts of the Belgian Relief Commission and the Comite National," said Mr. William C. Edgar on his return from Belgium.

Mr. Edgar adds: "Furthermore, if I had a million or five million dollars placed at my disposal for the relief of the Belgians, I would not hesitate for a moment to put it at the command of this organization, confident that it would employ it to the best advantage of the people, and that not a dollar would be wasted, or misapplied."

It is frankly stated that Mr. Edgar went to Belgium skeptical of the efficiency with which relief was being dispensed, but his own statement above is sufficient to show that he was convinced of the value of the work being done by the Relief Committee.

Mr. Edgar's trip was in the interests of the "Northwestern Miller," of Minneapolis, a publication which raised nearly $600,000, which was applied to the purchasing of flour and sending it to Belgium.

Several of the Belleville boys from the 33rd Battery at Kingston are home on final leave. They expect to receive orders to proceeds overseas in the near future.

ARRESTED HERE

Yesterday afternoon a man named John Edgecoomb was arrested in this city on advice from the Napanee police. The accused is charged with disorderly conduct and instead of waiting for his trial at Napanee came here. Chief Barrett, last evening, took Edgecoomb back to Napanee.

RIVER BREAKING UP

Owing to the mild weather which has prevailed the past few days, the ice in the river is breaking up; which is the earliest period in the memory of some of the oldest inhabitans of the city. The ice is not of any great thickness. No damage has been done up to the present time.

JUMPED THE TRACK

A mail coach on the G. T. R. from Peterborough, jumped the track four miles from Hoards station, yesterday, tearing up the rails and earth, and somewhat shaking up the passengers. The car was stripped of its contents, and left where it had landed, the train continuing on its way, arriving at Belleville three hours late. No one was injured.

THE KHAKI CLUB

The night of this week to members of the two battalions in Belleville, is Wednesday when the weekly programme is "on" at the Khaki Club.

Whatever else is on it can't hope to successfully compete with the club's programme, and if it were only possible to accommodate a few civilians at the club on Wednesdays they would soon be convinced of this fact.

While the club is always crowded from the time the first number is presented till the last one is finished, last night the condition of the streets meant that it was crowded from supper time right on.

The attractive programme was presented by Mrs. Wilmot, Miss Jean Caudwell, Miss Milburn and Mrs. Milburn.

Miss Caudwell sang "Just a weary in for you" and led the choruses of several songs in which the men have heard her before, for she has been most generous with her services. Mrs. Wilmot will be very welcome again judging by the reception her lively and faultlessly rendered numbers received. Among them were the following selections from "To-night's the night" "The Only Way," "They Didn't Believe Me," and "I'd Like to Bring My Mother." Nothing finer than these have been heard since the club opened.

Miss Milburn accompanied her father, whose numbers were Mandalay, the song, and Sons of the Sea. The latter was especially appreciated for the rare expression that only one of Mr. Milburn convictions and feelings, could give to it.

After the usual refreshments another delightful evening closed.

42nd Annual Meeting of the Baptist Church

The 42nd annual meeting of the Victoria Ave. Baptist Church was held last evening in the spacious Sunday School hall of the church. In spite of prevalent sickness and sloppy weather a good number of members and friends of the congregation sat down to the supper tables at 6.30 o'clock and partook of the choice viands provided by the ladies of the Bible class. The pastor, Rev. C. G. Smith, B.D., presided over the business meeting that followed and presented a resume of the year's church work from the spiritual viewpoints Prosperity and progress marked the year 1915, and the members are to be congratulated on their splendid showing. 20 members were added to the church roll, and all the regular services have been well sustained. 20 boys from this church are engaged in the service of King and country, and the ladies are actively engaged in making comforts for the brave soldiers and their dependents.

Receipts from all departments of this church reached the splendid total of $6000.00. Of this amount $535.40 was for missions from the church, school and Young People's and Mission Circle Departments. The church mortgage fund realized the sum of $1,023.27. Special mention was made of the splendid work of Mr. Albert Blackburn as treasurer of the building fund. Mr. Blackburn took this department 6 years ago and has seen the mortgage reduced from $13,000 to $5,200 under his earnest leadership and co-operation of the members of the church. Reference was made to the splendid services rendered by Mr. W. B. Riggs as choir leader, and choir were thanked for their work during 1915. Feeling reference was made to the loss the church sustained in the death of Mrs. Jas. Riggs and Mrs. Isaac Spratt during the past year. They served the church for many years and have passed on to their Heavenly reward. The annual report from each of the churche's departments and societies were read and approved, and reflected a year of prosperity and spiritual effort. The generous services of Mr. Chas. Hart, the efficient church treasurer, was fittingly referred to upon his unanimous re-election to that office. The following officers were elected to serve the church during the year 1916.

Clerk of the Church and Treasurer of the Building Fund—Mr. Albert Blackburn.

Chairman of the Board of Ushers—Mr. W. B. Riggs.

Financial Recording Secretary—Mr. Wm. Nurse.

Church Treasurer—Mr. Chas. A. Hart.

Treasure of Church Mission Funds—Mr. James S. Peck.

Organist and Choir Leader—Mrs. Wm. R. Deeton.

Assistant Choir Leader—Mr. Jack Cookson.

Music Committee—Mrs. Deeton, Mr. Cookson and Miss Forman.

Supt. of Sunday School—Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, B.A.

During the evening Messrs. Albert and Willie Wonnacott played an instrumental duet and Mrs. MacLaurin sang a solo.

PLEASING MUSICALE AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Last night saw oneof the pleasantest gatherings that has been held in the assembly room of the Y. M. C. A. for some time, when the members of the Ladies' Gymnasium class entertained about thirty members of the 80th Battalion.

The programme was a musical one, and introduced a novel method of introducing those present to each other. The guests were seated round the room, ladies and soldiers alternately. At the close of every number on the programme the guests moved to the next chair, first the ladies and then the soldiers. In this way each guest met everyone else in the course of the evening. Among those who contributed to the programme were: Miss Waters, Miss Anderson, Miss McBride, Miss Sinclair, Miss Ketcheson, Miss Yeomans, Mr. Potter and Mr. Chamberlain.

A little pleasure was added to the evening by the chaperones Mrs. Simmons, Mrs. Boyes, Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Ketcheson.

Miss Jones, Miss Knight and Miss Sinclair are to be congratulated on the success of the gathering as the splendid arrangements represented a great deal of time and work on the part of the committee.

15TH RESERVE

Drill to-morrow night, Friday, at 8 o'clock sharp at Armouries. Platoon Drill and Rifle Exercise instruction will be then started.

We must have over ONE HUNDRED of the Reserve in attendance. Lay aside all other matters and be on parade to take up your drill. You may need it long before you expect. It is the duty of every citizen not actually enlisted with the Overseas forces to familiarize himself with the new drill. Instructor Dow and other competent instructors will be on parade to assist in the drill.

Remember men thi is no "Home Guard" independent Corps, but a part of the 15th Battalion under command of Lt.-Col. Barragar. The Reserve is purely a volunteer corps, but is it not better to voluntarily learn your drill than to be compelled to do so later on?

COUNTY COUNCIL DISCUSSES O'BRIEN BRIDGE REPAIRS

money could have been saved in making the repairs to the bridge.

Mr. McLaren—In what way?

Mr. Pearson—The teaming for one thing he considered, had cost too much.

Mr. Vandewater said he was foreman on the repairs at O'Brien's bridge and he considered Messrs. Brintnell and Poucher did not know what they were talking about in their statement through the press. The speaker in company with Mr. L. E. Allen, county engineer, made soundings and went down 26 feet. This was about the pier that had settled. He took exception to Mr. Poucher's statement as to a large quantity of cement being rendered useless, on account of where it was stored. A few sacks, probably 12 sacks, were hardened. The pier had been settling the past three or four years. Some of the piles, there is not the slightest doubt, were broken. That the pier could be easily moved there was not the slightest doubt. As to men being paid for time they did not work such was not the case.

Mr. Vermilyea asked Mr. Vandewater if it was a fact that some of the men working on the bridge had been paid for their services by the county when they were doing other work.

Mr. Vandewater—No.

Mr. Poucher was of the opinion that to build another good arch pier and buckle the two piers together would have been a good thing to do. He thought the repairs could have been made for $500. He would say openly that what is being done to-day was not the proper way to make the repairs. The bridge had already been closed up for months and it looked as if it would be months more before it would again be opened for traffic. This was a great inconvenience to the travelling public. In his opinion the bridge was closed up before it was necessary to close it up.

Mr. L. E. Allen, county engineer, claimed that the action taken by the committee and what had already been done was right. He considered the bridge was rendered unsafe owing to the pier moving. He was surprised that the pier could not be moved so easily as it was moved with a crowbar. He thought the teams and men both did a good day's work. The foreman was instructed to check the timber and cement used in the work. He had heard it stated that everything that had been done up to the presnt was a useless expenditure, but such was not the case. Conditions such as they prevailed were explained to Mr. McLean, Deputy Minister of the Provincial Public Works Department, also Mr. Bishop of Montreal, an expert engineer and their advice had been carired out.

Mr. C. H. Ketcheson considered that the discussion had gone far enough. The Council would not ignore what had been said and the Council could draw its own conclusion in this matter. Every ratepayer has a right to make fair criticism of any work which the Council did.

Mr. D. Poucher thanked the Council for allowing the deputation to be heard in the matter.

After some questions had been asked and replied to, the Council adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Thursday, Jan. 27th.

Morning Session

Council resumed at 10.30; Warden Nugent in the chair.

Minutes of Wednesday's session were read and on motion were confirmed.

Considerable discussion took place in reference to a detailed report presented by the Provincial Government engineer, who made an inspection of the county improved roads. A report was also presented, which showed that it was the intention of the department to cut off considerable mileage of the present system.

Messrs. C. H. Ketcheson and T. Montgomery contended that under the proposed change injustice was being done to Sidney Township and Rawdon Township respectively.

Mr. Clare spoke in favor of the Township of Hungerford being more generously dealt with than the report showed. Some roads were contemplated being disallowed as improved roads, which he considered, was not fair to the township.

Warden Nugent suggested that a strong committee be appointed to present this matter before the proper Government officials, and see if it was not possible to have the report amended to better advantage to the county.

The plan showed that is was proposed to disallow 21½ miles of the present road system and approved of 259 decimal 15 miles.

On motion the report was allowed to lay upon the table for further discussion.

The Council went into committee of the whole on ways and means; Mr. Laycock in the chair.

After some accounts had been passed the committee rose, reported progress and asked leave to sit again.—Granted.

Council adjourned until 2 o'clock.

longer require concrete foundations, but can be fired from a platform which is transported readily on motor tractors. The gun and its carriage make three motor tractor loads and can be assembled for use within an hour and a half. They have observed such guns being transported by motors over very bad roads. One of the troubles we learn the French are having with their high explosive shells, which carry about four times the exploding charges that ours do, is the danger that they will explode in the gun. They have lost about 400 guns and gun crews by accidents of this kind. We are now experimenting and hope to reach their efficiency and avoid this danger.

"Another fact which we have learned is that the high explosive shell is much more effective than the shrapnel in destroying the morale of troops. The shrapnel is likely to cause much heavier casualties, but the terrific explosions of the shells affect the troops so gravely that they will stop a charge or destroy a column much more quickly.

Shrapnel vs. High Explosive

"About fifty per cent. of the artillery which we are recommending for the United States army is of the three-inch type, which can be handled by six horses on almost every type of terrain. We are experimenting and hope to give it a percussion range of 10,000 yards. Owing to the lessons of the war, we expect to provide the guns with about 10 per cent. of shrapnel and 90%. High E. shell instead of 990 per cent. shrapnel as before the war. Our three-inch guns, we believe, are superior to any but the Creusot, and probably are as good as they are. The only superiority claimed for them is in taking up the recoil.

"To go with these guns for high angle fire, we recommend a 3.8 Howitzer. The next pair of guns for longer range that we ask is the 4.7 gun and the 6-inch Howitzer, to have ranges of about 14,000 yards and to carry four times the weight of projectile of the smaller guns. These guns have been built and are being tested. Incidently, we find that motor tractors for them are cheaper than horses. The next type of gun that we ask is the 7.6 Howitzer, which has also been built. We are designing a 9.5 Howitzer and hope to get authorization for 16-inch Howitzers. We are also asking munitions and gun reserves to provide for an army of 1,000,000 men for six months.

"I hope the members of the committee are as impressed as I am with the need of this field artillery. I know that we must have it to have an army that is well balanced, efficient, and able to take care of itself."

Brigadier-General Henry P. McCain, the adjutant general of the army, told the committee that not over 50,000 men a year could be enlisted, in his opinion. He does not approve of relaxing the standards to increase the number, neither does he believe that shortening the term of enlistment would help. Under the present enlistment law, he figures, that in four years from now we would have a reserve of 50,000 or 60,000 men. The War Department has no means for keeping track of these men. But he believed that they would "show up somewhere" in case of war.

"I believe the continental army could be enlisted," he said. "It would be an experiment, but it would appeal to entirely different classes of men, and I think can get the strength asked from men who would not enter either the regular army or the militia."

DRUNKARD SAVED BY A HYMN

Seven years ago an intoxicated man after tottering along Teaneck Road, finally fell on the lawn of Justice T. T. Griggs of Ridgefield Park, Hackensack, N.J., and would have slept there but for a stream of water that was turned on him. Justice Griggs helped to sober the drunkard, gave him something to eat and then listened to his story of how liquor had ruined him. During the recital a young woman in the Justice's home began playing the song "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." The wanderer was overcome and left the house showing deep emotion.

Two days ago an auto stopped in front of Justice Grigg's home and a well dressed man alighted and asked for the Justice. He recalled the incident of seven years ago, spoke of the hymn, and said that he had then and there made up his mind to reform. He said he went to a mission in Harlem, where he was helped and later succeeded in business.

"That little girl's hymn did it," said the caller, who refused to give his name.

One of the most interesting features of the Giant's causeway is "the giant's organ." This huge "instrument" consists of a group of pillars of various lengths set apart on the side of the main cliff. The larger columns being in the center and the smaller ones tapering off on either side after the fashion of organ pipes admirably sustain the idea which the name "giant's organ" conveys.

VALLEYS OF B. C.

Fertile Tracts of Country Are Suitable for Fruit and Mixed Farming

British Columbia is not considered an agricultural province, but, in addition to the acreage already devoted to agricultural purposes, it has hundreds of thousands of highly productive land, favorable in every way to intensive development, lying as latent wealth awaiting transportation facilities. That she can and will supply her own markets in the near future is shown by the rapid development of those fertile valleys of the interior which have been lately tapped by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

During last summer Mr. W. E. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the British Columbia Government, and Mr. W. T. McDonald, live stock commissioner, made a personal investigation of the farm and live stock possibilities of central British Columbia lands, after which a most favorable report was made to the Government. A portion of Mr. Scott's report is quoted as follows:

"There have been many opinions expressed about the lands in Central British Columbia contiguous to the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Our observations led us conclusively to the opinion that this part of the Province is a country the future of which is assured as a stock raising and mixed farming country.

"After leaving Prince Rupert, on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, there is practically no land suitable for agricultural purposes until Terrace is reached, 100 miles from Prince Rupert. Here the Kitsumgallum and Lakelse Valleys extend on each side of the Skeena River. There is probably an area of 250,000 acres of land in these two valleys suitable for agriculture.

"Considerable development has been affected lately in the Kitsumgallum Valley. The clearing here, in comparison with our coast districts, is comparatively light. The soil is very productive, and is well suited for general mixed farming purposes. Dairying, poultry raising, and small fruit and vegetable growing may be prosecuted successfully. The district is particularly well suited for growing strawberries and other small fruits, the quality of the berries being very high and realizing good prices on the Prince Rupert market.

"A very large amount of development work has been undertaken during the past year in the Bulkley Valley. The quality of a large proportion of the land is all that could be desired, and very good crops are raised thereon. Crops of oats promising to run 100 bushels to the acre were seen, and all prospects were most encouraging. Farmers are realizing that the time has arrived when they should develop their lands, and land-clearing operations are in evidence on all sides.

"We were immensely impressed with the enormous extent of good land in the Nechacho Valley, most of which can be cleared at a very low cost indeed. A large number of settlers have gone in there, and on all sides one sees signs of activity. Settlers log houses are springing up in every direction, and considerable energy is being shown by most of them in clearing their lands and getting them into crops. Fields 100 acres in extent in grain were noticed."

Mr. Scott states that there are many tracts of good agricultural land adjacent to Prince George, but that there is also a considerable area of light land which is not well suited for agricultural purposes. Continuing his report he says:

"The wonderful country visited between Hazelton and Prince George has a great future ahead of it now that transportation has been effected. It is a big country with a big future, and, as soon as times improve and conditions right themselves, a big forward movement must take place. The country traversed grows magnificent crops of timothy, oats, and barley. Wheat may also be grown successfully if care is exercised in getting the seed sown as early as possible.

Baby Afflicted With Eczema Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured

The Family Doctor Tried in Vain to Heal the Sores—Another Tribute to This Great Healing Ointment.

It may be interesting to note that Dr. Chase's Ointment was originally compounded to cure a case of eczema on a child. The disease had spread almost over the entire body and defied all the regular treatments for such troubles. The doctor was perplexed, but finally hit on the formula of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and, as many say, "it worked like a charm," healing up the nasty sores and leaving the skin soft and smooth.

That was a good many years ago, and since then many thousands of cases of eczema, both in children and adults, have been cured, until to-day Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized as the standard cure for itching skin diseases.

Mrs. Geo. McNair, River Charles, N. B., writes as follows: "We use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home, and would not wish for anything better for cuts, burns and bruises. A few years ago a friend of mine, whose baby was terribly afflicted with eczema, had her child treated by their own family physician, but the little one got no better. They tried several remedies, but they all proved useless in this case. Upon the advice of a neighbor, they got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and before the first box was used the child was completely cured.

"I can also recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to suffering friends, who I know will be glad to learn of something to relieve their nervous trouble. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

So soothing and healing is Dr. Chase's Ointment that relief from itching and burning comes almost as soon as the ointment is applied. The sores are cleaned by the action of this treatment, and the process of healing is soon begun. By persistent use of the ointment cure is effected. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

This is the 540th day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

THE PRESENT OPPOSITION IN PARLIAMENT.

The utterances and professions of the Opposition in the House of Commons during the debate on the answer to the Governor-General's speech on the opening of the present Parliament, would, if the subjects discussed were not of so serious a character, be provocative of a smile. Yet, when the whole policy of the Opposition, is considered, no smile could be expected except one of contempt. No language can be found too strong or too vicious by Opposition members, from Sir Wilfrid, the chieftain, down to his humblest echoist, in which to ridicule and condemn every expression of opinion in the past that a crisis in the affairs of the nation existed. When the Government asked Parliament for supplies with which to strengthen the Army and Navy, ridicule and contempt was thrown upon the proposition that a crisis existed. Everything was declared to be couleur de rose so far as the nation's relations with Germany were concerned. Any other view was contemptuously hurled back at the members of the Government as "lip loyalty" and an attempt to humbug and deceive the people.

Contrast all this with the utterances of the same gentlemen to-day. They now condemn the same Government for lack of forethought in not having war supplies ready to meet the emergency which existed at the time but which they declared did not exist and that the cry was only a fake. Now they are busy finding fault because, as they allege, the Niobe, that historic old tub, was not kept in repair and properly armed to prevent German ships seeking safety in American ports. The people of Canada must not be surprised if they even hear the voices of these same latter day warrior Saints vociferating condemnation of Sir Robert Borden and his Cabinet as the authors of the present war and the frightful carnage with which it is being prosecuted by the Germans. It would be no more inconsistent than the course now being pursued by them. It is to be regretted that principle and patriotism are not the ruling and guiding motives of these carpers. Instead of misrepresenting the honest endeavors of patriots to aid and assist the nation in bringing the present conflict to a successful ending, they are actuated by one thought only—and that is office.

MR. CARVELL AND THE OTTAWA FREE PRESS.

Private Business Attacked.

F. B. Carvell, M.P. for Carleton, N.B., in a speech delivered by him in the House of Commons on the 25th inst., upon the Address from the Throne, not only dealt with the Shell Committee's conduct in awarding contracts, accusing its members, and individually the members of the Government of nearly every crime in the political calendar, but fell foul of the Ottawa Free Press for daring to say a word in condemnation of the Pugsley harangue against the Shell Committee.

In referring to the Free Press' article commenting adversely upon the utterances of Mr. Pugsley, Mr. Carvell had the indecency to drag in the private business of that journal by insinuating that the publishers did not own a controlling interest in the establishment, but that it was owned by Mr. Glyn Osler, a Tory lawyer of Toronto, which accounted for the Free Press' editorial.

The owners of the Free Press deny this statement and make the following explanation:

"All the stock of the Ottawa Free Press is owned by Messrs. Norman Smith and William Findlay, editor and manager respectively. It was purchased and paid for by them some years ago. A certain portion of the company's stock is held by Mr. Glyn Osler, barrister, formerly of Ottawa and now of Toronto, but only in the usual way as collateral for a loan. Mr. Osler and clients for whom he may be acting have not the slightest voice in the editorial conduct or business management of the paper, and only to a very limited extent sufficient to protect their security have they any control over the company's minutes. The financial obligation can be liquidated at any time convenient to Messrs. Smith and Findlay. The Free Press has been a constant supporter of the Liberal party during the ten years it has been edited by Mr. Norman Smith, but at the beginning of the war announcement was made that until peace was declared the policy of the paper would be independent of both political parties. The Free Press was the first to advocate the formation of a coalition government; the views of the Free Press on the Bertram Shell Committee are the views of its editor, and were communicated to Sir Wilfrid Laurier last July when the article first appeared."

The Free Press has long supported the Liberal (in name only) party, and now learns that it has no right to have an opinion upon any subject other than that dictated by the henchmen of the Grit political combination that governs and controls it, and that no private business is too sacred to escape its fangs, if a political point is to be gained.

THE POWER OF THE PRESIDENT.

It is not generally realized in this country that if President Wilson personally wanted war with Germany he could soon have it. Constitutionally, the United States Congress can, by a majority vote, start a war; and by two-thirds vote bring it to an end. In actual practice, however, the President having full control over the diplomatic correspondence with foreign powers, can, if he chooses, so conduct that correspondence as to make war inevitable. On the other hand, if the President wishes at all costs, he can dispatch his notes with the desired tenor.

Public sentiment, it will be said, would prevent the President bringing about a war with which the people of the United States were not in agreement. Would it? As is well known, public sentiment is largely based on information supplied from official sources and it would be an easy matter to create the necessary feeling by showing how American interests were being trampled on as, let us say, in the case of Venezuela. Here in an obscure boundary dispute, about which neither Britain nor the United States really cared anything, President Cleveland went so far as to commit America to war with Britain if Britain had only seen fit to accept the challenge.

Mr. McKinley, too, could have avoided war with Spain; for, as is known, at the time the United States was making preparations Spain offered concessions that would have made for peace if the United States had wished to regard them in that light.

The President, it is true, has a Cabinet which he is obliged to consult and confer with. But as each Cabinet official is the selection of the President, the latter need not keep them long if they disagree with him. Such is the constitution of the United States.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, Jan. 27, 1868.

The house owned and occupied by Mr. Wm. Radcliff on part of Lot No. 11, 4th concession, Thurlow, was consumed by fire yesterday. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defect in the chimney. Loss about $1,000.

The Sheriffs of the different counties for the Province of Nova Scotia were all re-appointed.

A heavy gale passed over the counties of Scotland yesterday. Houses were unroofed, blown down, etc., and much damage done. Several lives are reported lost.

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result.

Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old.

The Poets' Corner

I'd Like to Go.

It seems to me I'd like to go
Where bells don't ring or whistles blow;
Nor clocks don't strike, nor gongs don't sound,
And I'd have stillness all around—

Not real stillness, but just the trees'
Low whispering, or the hum of bees,
Or brooks' faint babbling over stones
In strangely, softly tangled tones.

Or maybe the cricket or katydid,
Or the songs of birds in hedges hid,
Or just some such sweet songs as these
To fill a tired heart with ease.

If 'tweren't for sight and sound and smell,
I'd like the city pretty well;
But when it comes to getting rest,
I like the country lots the best.

Sometimes it seems to me I must
Just quit the city's din and dust
And get out where the sky is blue—
And, say, now, how does it seem to you?

—Eugene Field.

Current Comment

There is a revival, down at Halifax, of the call for socks for our soldiers at the front.

Of the nine candidates who have passed the second examination for medical degrees at the University of London seven were women. But the the next point is to secure the parchments, after having passed the required degrees. These men folk object to feminine encroachment.

News dispatches tell of an order placed in the United States, from Russia, for 20,000 machine guns. If the quota for our own 86th battalion doesn't precede that, it is "up to" the Militia department to know the reason why. Canadian patience is not made of india-rubber.—Hamilton Spectator. United States is getting too much of the cream.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia says that if the United States makes a good strong bluff England will come to her senses and allow the sacred American cotton to get through to Germany. And yet there are people in the world who insist that all diplomatic difficulties should be settled by open discussion before tribunals like the United States Senate.—Montreal Daily Star.

A Kansas woman wants to be vice-president of the United States. Why not? She would mate or "match" the beautiful femininity of Mr. President Wilson in his diplomatic dealings with the enemies and outragers of humanity, the wholesale slaughterers of United States citizens. When presidential diplomacy puts Uncle Sam in petticoats, why shouldn't a woman fill the merely ornamental position of vice-president.—Peterborough Examiner.

Austria announces officially that no submarine of hers sank the Persia. Germany keeps mum. Everybody is looking at Turkey with expectant eye, and unofficial cables have it that Turkey will shortly acknowledge that the outrage was the work of one of her undersea boats. The Teutonic diplomats have acted wisely in chosing Turkey as the destroyer of the Persia. Whatever nation admits committing the crime is in for a lot of odium, and both Germany and Austria have about all they can stand now.

Germany is apparently preparing for peace as thoroughly as she prepared for war. The recent demand of the Prussian Socialists that Belgium's independence should be restored, may safely be taken as inspired ,or at any rate authorised by the Government. Not a word is printed or shaped in the land of the unhappy Teutons without authority, and if the authorities allowed the demand in question to be circulated it was because it suited their purpose to do so. In other words, they want peace, and are carefully preparing public opinion in their own and other countries for that eventuality.—Montreal Mail.

If Senator Nathaniel Curry has any spare time, after attending to his shell contracts, he may have occasion to enter an action for libel against the Calgary News Telegram, which, in connection with possible inquiries into munition contracts, remarks that "Senator Curry," of the Canada Car Co., and other members of the Upper Chamber engaged on war contracts, happen to be among the Liberal appointees to the Senate." But that is not all. The worst is yet to come. The same journal, in a later issue, informs the public that Senator Curry is a member of the Liberal "Advisory Committee' at Ottawa.—Journal of Commerce. Sometimes one meets with a Liberal who possesses the qualifications for such honors—but not frequently.

HIS HARD TASK.

It Wearied Him, and Yet We All Face the Same Problems.

A friend once asked an aged man what caused him to complain so often at eventide of pain and weariness. "Alas," replied he, "I have every day so much to do. I have two falcons to tame, two hares to keep from running away, two hawks to manage, a serpent to confine, a lion to chain and a sick man to tend and wait upon."

"Well, well," commented his friend, "you are busy indeed! But I didn't know that you had anything to do with a menagerie. How, then, do you make that out?"

"Why," continued the old man, "listen. Two falcons are my eyes, which I must guard diligently; the two hares are my feet, which I must keep from walking in the ways of sin; the two hawks are my hands, which I must train to work that I may provide for myself and those dependent on me as well as for a needy friend occasionally; the serpent is my tongue, which I must keep ever bridled lest it speak unseemly; the lion is my heart, with which I have a continual fight lest evil things come out of it, and the sick man is my whole body, which is always needing my watchfulness and care. All this daily wears out my strength."

CAPTURING A GIRAFFE.

The Animal Is Too Fragile to Snare in Traps or Pitfalls.

Perhaps you have often wondered about the scarcity of giraffes in public zoos. The reason that only a very few menageries can boast of this exhibit is on account of the difficulty in capturing and transporting them.

The long legged and long necked animal, keen of eye and nose and ear, can see, smell and hear a hunter miles away. Hunters cannot employ traps and pitfalls against him. His fragile legs would be crushed in a trap, and both his legs and neck would be broken in a pitfall.

There is only one way to capture a giraffe alive. He must be surrounded and chased until from sheer weariness he staggers helpless into a bamboo inclosure.

Peril lies in shipping the giraffe for his voyage on the sea. The giraffe's legs break very easily. If he slips the fragile underpinnings double under him and snap. In transferring the animal from shore to ship his long, helpless neck may become tangled in the tackle or strike a spar, mast or shroud, in which event it's all over with Mr. Giraffe.

Couldn't Leave.

They were late at the special sale and found a crowd clear out to the doors.

"Isn't it dreadful?" asked No. 1.

"Perfectly awful," replied No. 2.

"Think of cultivated, intelligent women in such a jam as that!"

"How can they endure it?"

"No woman of dignity would be caught in such a mob, and I am going right back home."

"So am I."

"Then come on. Hold on a minute, though. What's that woman saying?"

"Why, that she got three cakes of regular ten cent soap for 15 cents. Oh, Susan, how can we go home?"

"We can't. Take hold of my hand, turn your shoulder to the crowd, and we will push our way in there or die in the attempt."

Temperature of the Earth.

It has been generally believed that the temperature increased at almost a constant rate from the earth's surface toward its center, but this supposition appears to be incorrect in the light of recent experiments. In one mine the average rate of increase in temperature, carried down to 8,000 feet, was one degree for each 250 feet of descent. Various results have been obtained from measurements in other places. No temperature variations were shown between depths of 1,400 feet and 2,300 feet in the Kalgoorlie mines in Australia. These and other observations are considered as indicating that the increase of temperatures with depth in the earth is not governed by any general law.

No Royalties Called "Baby."

One noteworthy feature about royalties is that none has been called "baby." From their earliest years the royal children are always called by their names or possibly by some pet name, but an English prince or princess is never called "baby" either by relatives or by his or her nurses. From the age of five a prince is styled "sir" by his attendants and a princess "madam."—London Standard.

ONCE A BOBBY HIMSELF.

Princess Pat Sergeant Knew Something of the Business in Hand.

A big, in fact an enormous, sergeant of Princess Pat's Canadian contingent managed to dislocate traffice in Coventry street, London, recently, just about theatre time. With a woman and another soldier, he stood on the south side of the street waiting for a chance to get across. The traffic was apparently endless, as Coventry street is probably one of the most congested streets in London at just before 8 o'clock at night. The woman wisely declined to take a chance and dart between the vehicles as they sped on.

After waiting for several minutes and then seeing no apparent hope of a free chance of getting across, the sergeant authoritatively said, "Leave it to me."

He walked into the street with his hand up in a peculiar manner. The traffic instantly stopped. He then beckoned to his two companions, who made their way to the island in the middle.

On the other side of the island the sergeant again held up his hand and the traffic on that side stopped, and the soldier and the woman passed safely to the opposite sidewalk.

Meanwhile the policeman at the top of Haymarket found his traffic all mixed up. Somebody was interfering with his signals and orders.

In a fury he rushed the short distance between his point and the island, where the Canadian sergeant had been running things, and started to unload his congested epithets.

"What the blooming blazes," was as far as his anger got, when he caught sight of the sergeant's face. "Why, Bill, you old scoundrel," was the next phrase uttered in tones of kindly amazement, followed by affectionate handshakes between the two.

The sergeant, it seems, had been traffic policeman at that very spot years ago before he emigrated to western Canada, and the present Bobby was his mate.

While they shook hands and rejoiced at their unexpected meeting, the traffic along Coventry street took care of itself far a few moments.

EXPORTS HAVE GROWN.

Nearly One Hundred Million Added to Dominion's Output.

A decrease of $93,001,317 in imports and an increase of $91,283,933 in exports for the twelve months ended October is shown in a statement published by the Department of Trade and Commerce. These figures do not take into account the movement of gold, which shows a very heavy increase in the export column.

Imports for the twelve months totalled $421,584,000, of which goods to the value of $72,320 came from Great Britain, a drop of $32,700,000 in the imports of British goods. Imports from the United States amounted to $346,570,000, or $74,505,000 less than in the previous twelve months. Exports of merchandise totalled $550,548,000, including $41,455,829 of foreign produce. Exports to Great Britain amounted to $277,527,000, an increase of $73,000,000. To the United States, Canada sold goods to the value of $314,118,000; a rise of nearly $100,000,000. Imports from France dropped from $11,567,000 to $5,700,000, but exports to France increased from $8,940,000 to $27,620,000. To Belgium, Canada sent supplies of various kinds to the amount of nearly a million dollars.

The statement shows that $20,000,000 worth of hams and bacons, or about three times as much as in the previous year, went to Great Britain. It shows also that imports of tea amounted to $8,346,000, a 20 per cent. increase.

Exports of manufactures rose to $130,350,00, an increase of $65,000,000.

Laureate of the Lakes.

William Wilfred Campbell, popularly known as "The Laureate of the Lakes," is both a dramatic and lyric poet and a novelist. He was born at Berlin, Ont., in 1861, receiving his education at Toronto University and Cambridge, Mass. In 1906 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Aberdeen University. He was ordained in the Episcopal Church and was for a time rector of St. Stephens, N. B. In 1891 he entered the Civil Service at Ottawa, and for some years has been attached to the Dominion Archives Bureau with Dr. Doughty. He has written a great deal of verse for English, Canadian, and American magazines, his poem "The Mother" being placed by the Chicago Inter-Ocean among the gems of English literature. The same poem was referred to in Parliament in terms of commendation by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was presented to King Edward in 1906, and was present at the coronation in 1911. Among his best-known works are: Lake Lyrics (1899), The Dread Voyage, poems (1893), Mordred and Hildebrand, tragedies (1895), Political Tragedies (1908). Beyond the Hills of Dream, poems (1899), Collected Verse, Sagas of Vaster Britain (1906), Ian of the Orcades, historical novel (1906), Canada (in collaboration with T. C. Martin (1907), A Beautiful Rebel, historical novel (1909), The Canadian Lake Region (1910). The Scottish-American, reviewing the work of Dr. Campbell, said that as a dramatic poet he stands alone, supreme in his generation.

Logwood May Come Now.

An official announcement has been made by the Trade and Commerce Department that the situation with regard to shipment of logwood and dyes from Jamaica has been at last cleared up. Jamaica has now issued general licenses allowing the shipment of wood chips and extracts to all British, French, and United States ports. Canadian interests have been secured, in so far as is necessary for the obtaining of reasonable requirements from the United States. Logwood is permitted free exportation to Canada.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court has decided that it's libellous to call a man Judas Iscariot. There are a lot of persons getting sensitive these days.

An Authoritative Ruling.

Mr. Sam Kydd, the well-beloved editor-in-chief of The Montreal Gazette, and Mr. E. F. Boddington, another widely-known Canadian newspaperman now on the staff of the Philadelphia Ledger, were "talking shop" as they walked along Craig street in Montreal.

"What would you say is the difference between a journalist and a newspaper man?" asked Mr. Boddington, broaching a point which has never been decided since old Caxton's staff squabbled over it.

"Well," said Mr. Kydd, "I cannot better express my ideas on the matter than by giving a concrete illustration. You see that hole?" pointing to a circular opening in the sidewalk into which a load of coal was being shovelled. "Well, if you or I stepped into that, we would go right through. But if your really truly journalist were to step in, he wouldn't go all the way. His bulging brow and massive brain-pan would refuse to pass through."—Toronto Saturday Night.

One on the Doctor.

Dr. James L. Hughes, of Toronto, tells a good story on himself. He recently made a trip to New York and at the border was interrogated as customary by the United States Immigration Agent, a thorough Irishman:

"Are you an American?" he was asked.

"Yes, and a Canadian, thank God," replied the Doctor.

"Are you remaining in the States long?" was the next query.

"No," was the reply.

"Thank God," said the Immigration Agent.

Canada's Timber Supply.

According to R. H. Campbell, Director of the Dominion Forestry Branch, Canada's present supply of commercial timber has been variously estimated to be between five hundred and seven hundred billion feet, board measure, and to cover an area of approximately 170,000,000 acres. This estimate of quantity and area refers only to timber of commercial value as saw-timber. It does not include pulpwood, firewood, tie and pole material nor small timber of any description, although this has undoubtedly a very large value.

Canadian-Japs Offer Men.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, has received from British Columbia a proposal to organize a regiment of Canadian Japanese for service in Europe. One thousand Japanese who have been naturalized in Canada will be enlisted at once under the proposal and sent overseas.

Not only will the ranks be made up entirely of Canadian Japanese, but the officers also will be naturalized Japanese. The full strength of the regiment will be maintained by enlistments from time to time.

Boy Scouts in Service.

In the Province of Ontario about 1,000 Boy Scouts have enlisted.

Premier an Indian Chief.

The File Hill Indians of Saskatchewan have sent Premier Borden a unique gift, a pair of Indian cuffs with ornamental bead work. Sir Robert, who is honorary chief of the band, always receives a gift from them.

CHAPTER V.

The Hawk Sweeps.

Myra Berrington half rose from her seat. Then a feeling of vertigo seized her. Just for a moment she thought she was going to faint.

When she looked up again the man had disappeared.

With trembling fingers she spread out the letter and read it again: "For your own sake do not fail to come."

A threat disguised as a warning. The letter was written on the hotel notepaper. The writing was peculiar, very thick and angular; rather repulsive.

Myra Berrington was naturally sensitive and impressionable. At that moment her nerves were strung to their utmost tension, and the thick angular writing somehow suggested the trail of a slimy snake across the white page.

It was suddenly seeing the black-mustached man standing so close that had frightened her more than the letter. Her first instinct now was to tear the note up, fling it into the waste-paper basket—and forget it.

She walked across the lounge, looking right and left. The man who had been standing so close to her when she opened the letter had disappeared; he had gone in a flash just as he had come.

For the third time she read the letter. She knew quite well that it had been sent by this man with the black mustache and bald head. She had seen him at Homburg; he had followed her on the train. She had given him not a thought at the time. But now— Now she knew!

She scrunched the letter up into a tiny ball in the palm of her hand, but she did not destroy it. She did not dare. She glanced at the gold watch on her wrist. Five minutes after twelve. At half past twelve he would expect her at Escott Street, Soho. She knew the neighborhood well. It did not tend to relieve her anxiety.

She walked up to the bureau and asked to see the visitors' register. Half a dozen guests had arrived the the previous day, but she could not find a single name which would have fitted onto the initials P.D. She beckoned to one of the clerks and questioned him. She described the man who had sent her the letter.

"He was staying at the hotel last night. I do so much want to know his name, and I can't find it in the register."

Her blue eyes looked appealingly into the eyes of the clerk. He was a Frenchman and susceptible, but he shook his head.

"I know the gentleman to whom madame refers. He was here not ten minutes ago. But he has not registered; he is not staying here."

"I saw him last night—" She stopped abruptly.

The clerk smiled, spread out his hands, and shrugged his shoulders. "He is one of those gentlemen who make use of a hotel as if it were a club. Sometimes he comes day after day; then we may not see him again for a long period."

"And you don't know his name?"

The clerk shook his head. He suggested that M. Alphonse, the head waiter, might know.

Myra hesitated a moment, and her cheeks grew a shade paler. But she asked no further questions, and she hurried across the lounge toward the restaurant.

The head waiter could not help her. He did not even recognize the man she sought in spite of her minute description.

Myra made her way back to the lounge and looked through the glass dors of the smoking-room. She saw Sir John Vessie seated in an armchair, a copy of The Times lying across his knees. A heavy frown furrowed his brow. He was gazing into space. Suddenly he caught sight of her. She saw him start violently. Rising, he pushed open the smoking-room door and joined her.

"Now, Miss Berrington, I am at your service. Let us find a quiet corner somewhere and—come to an understanding."

He was putting a bold face on the matter. He led the way as he spoke toward the seat Myra had lately occuied with her lover.

"What beautiful roses—it's rather late for them, isn't it?"

Myra looked at them and smiled, but her long white hand which held the flowers was trembling nervously.

"I am afraid I must ask you to defer your explanation until this afternoon, Sir John. I have an appointment, a most important one, at half past twelve."

"I have an engagement for eleven, but I cancelled it out of courtesy to you," he replied sharply.

The fingers of Myra Berrington's left hand were working convulsively, twisting and rolling the small sheet of notepaper in the palm. She was inclined to show the letter to Sir John Vessie, to be perfectly frank with him, and to ask his advice. But the tone of his voice stopped her.

He took advantage of her hesitation, thinking perhaps that she was a little frightened.

"It must be now or not at all," he said firmly. "What I have to say will not take two minutes. I have no wish to hurt or embarass you, but—"

She laughed in his face. The laughter did not ring quite true: "You can hardly hurt me more than you have already done—physically and mentally—and as for being embarrassed—"

Vessie was impatient. He had been turning the whole affair over in his mind during the forty minutes he had been left to himself in the smoking-room. He was almost persuaded that this woman was taking advantage first of all of his kindness; then of a terrible blunder, for which she was partly responsible.

"I'm ready to do anything in my power to —er—recompense you for the unfortunate acident of last night. In the circumstances it was only natural that, when I found you talking over the telephone to Lady Vessie, I should feel suspicious and accuse you of blackmail. I shall be only too happy to withdraw the accusation, on the understanding—"

Before he could finish the sentence she stopped him with a furious gesture: "Blackmail, blackmail!" she hissed. "That word comes very quickly to your lips, Sir John Vessie. It is simply infamous of you. Do you think that I, Myra Berrington, with my name and reputation, would demean myself to a low trick of that sort?"

Vessie flushed. "Please let me explain."

"Not now," she retorted. "You must explain at my convenience! You accuse me of blackmail, but I think the boot is on the other leg. I was quite willing to believe that your kindness to me on the train was absolutely disinterested, that your brutal conduct last night was a mistake. I begin to doubt it."

Again Sir John Vessie tried to speak but she would not hear him.

"I shall return to the hotel about half past two this afternoon. I'll listen to whatever excuses or apologies you have to make then."

Turning away, she swept toward the entrance. Vessie followed her.

"Miss Berrington—it is impossible! My train leaves Victoria at three o'clock."

"I'm afraid you must catch a later one."

She told the porter to call a taxicab. Crossing to the bureau she spoke to the clerk again: "I shall be keeping my room for the next two or three days."

She walked out of the hotel. Sir John Vessie watched her get into the taxicab and drive away. His face was the color of putty. He took a couple of turns up and down the lounge, his hands clasped behind his back. He told the porter to have his heavy baggage ready shortly after one o'clock.

Going to the telephone box, he had a call put through to "090 Horsham."

Miss Berrington drove no further than the corner of Escott Street. There she stopped the cab and dismissed it, waiting until it had gone out of sight. The street was long, perfectly straight and narrow. From where she stood it appeared to end in a cul-de-sac, which perhaps accounted for the fact that, with the exception of a very old and dirty motor-car standing a little distance off, it was devoid of traffic.

There were several little restaurants bearing French and Italian names, sinister-looking newspaper shops where European journals, French cigarettes, and doubtful picture postcards were sold. For the rest the street seemed a mixture of second-rate offices and fifth-rate apartments.

Myra's heart was beating rapidly. At last she reached No 29a. She glanced over her shoulders as if she were afraid of being watched or followed. But no one paid the least attention to her. Well-dressed women were quite common even in the humblest quarter of Soho.

She mounted a flight of dirty stone steps. The knobs of half a dozen electric bells faced her on the wall. She pushed the second, Flat B, and waited. Even then she was tempted to run away, but the taunt of blackmail still echoed in her ears.

She had no idea what this man wanted with her. Common sense warned her that she was doing a foolish thing in taking any notice of his letter; but instinct told her that if she did not go to him he would most certainly follow her. The sooner she knew what he wanted and got rid o' him the better.

The front door opened a few inches and Myra saw a fat, middle-aged German woman peering at her; a large blouse open at the neck fell in ungainly folds above her waist; a red peticoat bedraggled the floor, a large plait of coarse hair had slipped from its place and fell across her shoulders.

"Flat B?" Myra asked huskily.

The woman nodded and opened the door. "Second floor, straight up."

Why Tolerate Catarrh?

You have noticed, no doubt, that any cold aggravates nasal catarrh, and the flow of mucous amazes you that such objectionable matter could find lodgment in your head. To ignore this catarrh when the cold subsides is wrong because it continues to slowly injure the delicate linings of the nasal passages and clog them up.

To correct catarrh, cleanse the nostrils frequently with a solution of warm water and salt, insert vaseline on retiring, and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month. Scott's acts through the blood to feed the tissues, and contains soothing glycerine to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Scott's is pleasant to take.

THE HUMAN FOOT.

In Its Primitive State It Was Larger Than It Is Today.

Artists say that no Greek sculptor would have ever dreamed of putting a nine inch foot on a five and one-half foot woman. The types for the classic marble figures were taken from the most perfect forms of living persons. Unquestionably the human foot, as represented by the ancient sculptors, was larger than the modern one, and, in fact, the primitive foot of all peoples whereof we have any record, either of statuary or otherwise, was considerably larger than the restricted foot of modern times.

The masculine foot, forming an approximate average of four different countries, was about twelve inches long. This would require at least a No. 10 shoe to cover it comfortably. The average masculine foot today is easily fitted with a No. 8½ shoe and is, therefore, not above ten and seven-sixteenths inches. Now, by the old sculptural rule of proportion a man five feet nine inches in height should have a foot eleven and one-half inches long, or one-sixth his height. It was of no great consequence what size sandal he wore, but he would have required a modern shoe of at least a No. 10½ for a minimum fit or a No. 11 for real comfort.

For women, allowing for the difference in the relative size of the sexes, which was about the same then as now, a woman of five feet three inches in height would have had a foot ten inches long, requiring a modern shoe of the size No. 6 as the most comfortable or a No. 5½ as the limit of comfort.

Shakespeare and Cervantes.

April 23, besides being the festival of England's national saint, says the Pall Mall Gazette, is also the anniversary of the death of both Shakespeare and Cervantes. But, though both Shakespeare and Cervantes died on April 23, 1616, there was actually an interval of ten days between the two deaths.

The explanation is that in 1616 England was still using the Julian calendar, which in Roman Catholic countries had been superseded by the Gregorian calendar in 1582. Cervantes died on a Saturday; Shakespeare died on the Tuesday falling ten days later.

A Timely Warning.

Across the line there is a peace society which is very active in its clamors against the continuance of this war.

A lady who belongs to the society sent to a Canadian friend the society emblem—an American flag, with an olive branch painted across the stars and stripes.

The Canadian studied the thing out, and, without wishing to reflect on the lady's artistic ability, wrote a note of thanks for the emblem, but added this little sting to it: "I would suggest, however, that those who paint an olive branch on the American flag should take care not to make it look like a white feather.—Canadian Courier.

THE OLD NIPIGON LINE

PIONEER RAILWAY HAD A BRIEF AND PICTURESQUE CAREER.

It Has Served as a Line of Communication for Construction Armies of the Canadian Northern and the National Trans-Continental — Its Officials Were All Plain Men and Real Railroaders.

TO-DAY some discerning visitor to the old settlement of Red Rock — now called Nipigon — would have his curiosity aroused by a string of ties which drop from the limits of the town, down the face of a lofty and precipitous sandbank, across the Canadian Northern tracks, into the seething waters of the Nipigon River, which run at the rate of some eight miles per hour.

Talk of momentum grades, this nameless road can boast of the greatest momentum, outside of an incline railway or Swiss Funiculaire. If it were in any place that such a thing could be, one would suppose that this was a disused spur, but what business could any civilized, well conducted spur have had on the face of a sand cliff and what could the watery plunge at the bottom suggest but insanity and suicide? Up stream there is nothing but the forest, and the wild things, which make it their home, have no dealings with freight shipments, spur tracks, or industrial sidings. Down stream are Nipigon Bay and the open waters of Lake Superior, in short, the whole proposition appears freakish, if not futile.

Nor would the visitor's curiosity grow less if he came, as I did, in the search for an Indian burial mound of reputed antiquity, upon a trail winding its way through the woods back of Camp Alexander, the first portage; a trail of ties half hidden in brambles and waving grass, but still in fair condition and laid for the same obsolete type of narrow gauge as the water shute 12 miles lower down. Shades of Harriman, what is the meaning of this defunct line, apparently starting from nowhere and bound for the same place?, says a writer in Toronto Saturday Night.

The explanation is simple. While the Nipigon Forest Reserve is penetrated to-day by the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway System, in addition to which the C.P.R. crosses the river at a point where it broadens out into a land-locked arm of Lake Superior, and the N. T. R. touches the far northern shore of Lake Nipigon, there was an earlier railway to reach the heart of that picturesque and interesting region, which flourished unheeded by the outer world, and is now but a memory perpetuated by several thousands of grass grown spikes and ties.

Despite the absence of elaborate equipment, massive terminals, gilded officials, or advertising literature, its brief career was one of busy usefulness, for it served as an important line of communication for the construction armies of both the Canadian Northern Railway and the N.T.R. These lines, running from 40 to 100 miles north, and hundreds of miles east or west of the nearest distributing centres, felt the need of some more rapid method of transportation for material and supplies than the wilderness could afford, and so the Nipigon Construction Company came into being.

Building a forty-mile railroad does not appear to be much of a stunt, but the company's undertaking was more ambitious than would appear on the surface. In the first place, it is a drop of 240 feet from Lake Nipigon to Lake Superior which means an average northbound grade of more than 1 foot in a thousand, with a maximum as steep as you please. Having discovered that the only location suitable for their purpose involved a combined rail and water route, the second difficulty presented itself in the method of reaching the river, as hills rise sharply from the water's edge and the formation is generally the most solid variety of rock. Having got over this by the shortest cut, a final obstacle was presented by the river itself. Nipigon is really a chain of lakes, varying in length from three to eight miles, situated on gradually descending levels which are connected by turbulent streams that force their aggressive way through walls of rock with a resulting swiftness of current to which reference has already been made.

Finally, however, in the face of these and other difficulties of which the builders never complained and which will now certainly never be known, this first railroad through the heart of the Nipigon was completed, and direct service to the head of the Nipigon lake by water and rail for a distance of over 100 miles through the virgin forest was placed in regular operation.

Inhabitants still speak with reminiscent relish of how the Operating Department used to take a few turns with a rope round the axles of the light trucks in use and "Let her drop" into the water and the waiting scows; the return trip being made with less speed and more effort by the aid of sturdy donkey engines. We can fancy the tugs crawling across the treacherous depths of Lake Helen with the sunlight blazing on the rugged, green-clad hills and the quaint Indian mission nestling beneath their heights. We can hear, too, the jests exchanged with the strain of the clumsy scows on which are perched laden trucks. We can hear too the jests exchanged between the half-breeds and the polyglot community of some C.N.R. construction camp as the river winds its tortuous way through the marshy meadows of the Indian Reserve. Arrived at Camp Alexander the trucks are slid onto the rails which jut out over the water from an embankment flush with the level of the decks, and so the miniature train is drawn through the cool silence or sunlit glades of the forest by an important, puffing little locomotive.

U.S. Envious Of B.C. Progress

The activity of the lumbermen of British Columbia in co-operation with the Provincial Government in developing export markets for the lumber products of that province have not only brought definite and practical results, but have stirred up much envious anxiety among the lumbermen of the Pacific Coast States. An indication of this feeling on the part of Pacific Coast lumbermen in the United States is afforded by the testimony given recently by Hon. Joseph N. Teal, of Portland, Ore., when addressing the Federal Trade Commission in a recent hearing at Washington.

The question of Canadian competition was considered at some length by Mr. Teal, who spoke of the great cooperation between the lumbermen of British Columbia and their government, characterizing it as a regular "partnership" between the two parties. The officials in British Columbia, he said, were "progressive and awake to the opportunities of the day." Developing the idea further, he said that after the war there was little doubt that a commercial unit would be formed, just as now there was a fighting unit, the object of the commercial co-operation being to lay the foundation for a preferential tariff.

Referring to the situation in the Northwestern States in regard to Canadian competition, Mr. Teal said:—

"To the north an active, virile commonwealth, producing the same commodity and competing in the same markets, is aiding its own lumber industry in every reasonable way. British Columbia competitors enjoy not only the same rail rates to the markets in the United States, to which fact reference has been made, but by reason of the operation of our navigation laws such competitors can charter ships under any flag in normal times for delivery at any port in the United States on the Atlantic coast at from $2.50 to $3 a thousand feet less than the shipper in the United States. Some preferential tariffs are now in effect between Canada and other British colonies, and the establishment of such tariffs between all the British possessions is being urged with vigor."

Referring to the export trade situation, Mr. Teal said:—

"In the past the Pacific coast states have done by far a greater export business than has British Columbia. It must not be assumed, however, that this condition will continue unchanged.

"The war, while affecting this country as all others, has necessarily borne harder on Canada than on us. But some day—and God speed the day—the war will end, and it may be accepted as a certainty that everything an intelligent government can properly do will be done by Canada and by every other country engaged in this war, to rebuild and reconstruct their industries and to heal their commercial wounds. It would, therefore, seem that simple, ordinary prudence and business sagacity should impel the Government of the United States in like manner, and with like persistence to aid, foster and further its own industrial and commercial interests."

Mr. Teal also discussed the shingle industry, which, he said, had not been a paying one, the main cause being competition from B. C. "No branch of the lumber industry in the northwest has been the subject of more thought and discussion than that of shingles," he said, "and yet notwithstanding the product is an article of common use and the business one of some years' standing, it is putting it mildly to say that it is in a very unsatisfactory condition. Wide fluctuation in prices and unstable demands with more or less demoralization as a result, have been the history of this branch of the industry since its inception. Various reasons have been assigned in explanation, and many have studied the subject in order to find a remedy for a condition which all concede exists."

"The testimony of those engaged in the industry shows that, taken as a whole the business is not only not profitable, but is being conducted at a loss. The northwest states produce red cedar shingles. In 1912 cedar shingles represented 78.9 per cent. of the entire production of the United States, and the State of Washington produced 84.2 per cent. of the cedar shingles and 66.4 per cent. of the total shingle output of the United States."

A higher grade of shingle was made in B. C. Mr. Teal said, than in the United States. He hoped that this would continue to be the case, so that the competition on the low grade would not be so keen. However, he said, there were already some concerns in B. C. making a low grade shingle.

"The British Columbia manufacturers as yet make on the whole a higher grade shingle than is made in Washington, but some of the newer mills are now manufacturing practically the same grade. The tendency, moreover, on both sides of the line, is gradually to approach the same standards. That is, in Washington there is a decided trend towards higher grades, better grading, more careful packing, and better manufacturing, while in British Columbia there is a tendency to produce larger quantities of the medium grade."

Taking up the question of the advantage under which the British Columbia mills work as regards raw material, he said:—"There is no question but that British Columbia has a decided advantage in the raw material, it being estimated that this advantage in itself represents about 25 cents a thousand feet; also in the shingle mill about 75 per cent. of the labor is Oriental. The labor cost, besides, is somewhat less in British Columbia than in the United States. Attention has heretofore been directed to the active interest the British Columbia Government takes in promoting the lumber industry. It is but current legislative history of the United States that while formerly foreign shingle manufacturers paid 30 and 50 cents a thousand duty, shingles now enter free. The shipping laws, particularly as affecting shipments to the Atlantic coast by water, work as much hardship to shingles as to lumber; and under existing laws, with normal conditions, the British Columbia manufacturer has an undoubted advantage on shipments via the Panama Canal. While as yet the movement of American manufacturers to British Columbia has not assumed large proportions, it is, nevertheless, in progress."

Carvell Made Bitter Attack On Profiteers

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—For nearly five hours in the House today Frank B. Carvell, the Liberal member for Carleton, N.B., lambasted the Borden Government. His speech sounded very much like a challenge to bring on a general election. He denounced the shell committee, the purchase of hay in New Brunswick, and finally touched upon the investigation into the purchase of horses recently held by Sir Charles Davidson at Brampton. Mr. Carvell never minces words, and his address teemed with charges of graft. He even went so far as to say that men would not enlist because of the scandalous abuse in public expenditure.

R. S. Glass, the Conservative member for East Middlesex, replied in a moderate speech. He reminded the House that Mr. Carvell had made many reckless mis-statements in the past, and had endeavored to cut down the militia expenditures within a few weeks of the time that war was declared. Sir Sam Hughes is expected to take part in the debate tomorrow, and Hon. Mr. Burrell, who was severely dealt with by Mr. Carvell this afternoon, will speak on Thursday. The debate on the address, therefore, which was expected to end to-morrow, may consume the balance of the week.

Reports Villa Wedded Again

JUAREZ, Mexico, Jan. 24.—Although three Carranza columns have been sent out to capture him, dead or alive, Francisco Villa has found time to be married and has forsaken his cavalry saddle to ride in a coach with his bride, according to Ignacio Enriquez, Civil Governor of the State of Chihuahua, who arrived here today.

At fewest two women, one now in Cuba and the other in Los Angeles, are said to claim Villa as husband, but Enriquez said he had authentic information that Villa had tarried at Bachineva, in the mountains of Western Chihuahua, long enough to marry.

The man who gave this information, Enriquez said, saw Villa only four days ago. He confirmed previous reports that Villa was boasting he "would force intervention by the United States inside of thirty days." He asserted that Villa had only a few men with him. Enriquez said that the man who made the report and forty other Villa followers had sought amnesty.

RAID BAR UNDER CHURCH

PASSAIC, N.J., Jan. 25.—A fully-equipped bar was discovered this afternoon in the basement of St. Stephen's Hungarian Catholic Church, Hird and Morris Streets, when Captain of Detectives, Benjamin F. T. Turner, who has been investigating violations of the Sunday selling law, broke into the rooms of the Hungarian Catholic Workingmen's Club.

Two men, who gave their names as Andrew Borozasky, and Andrew Molanan, who were serving drinks behind a bar to twenty-seven young men in the room were arrested. On the discovery that the club has been dispensing spirituous refreshments to its members without a liquor license, a second charge was entered against the two prisoners.

The Laverandrye Club of St. Boniface has recently received $800 in donations, and it will be sent east. Sums ranging from one dollar to fifty are being contributed by the Manitoba French-Canadians.

POPE CANNOT GOVERN LAVERGNE IN POLITICS

QUEBEC, Jan. 25.—Armand Lavergne, M.L.A., gave his idea on the duty of Canadian bishops in this war at the session of the legislature.

J. M. Teller had repeated that Mr. Lavergne in a previous speech said that a certain high ecclesiastical dignitary, whom everybody recognized as the Archbishop of Montreal, was encouraging recruiting because he had not received the red cap from the Pope. Mr. Lavergne then said:

"It is not for bishops to say what we are to do regarding the wars of the empire. I take my dogmas from the church, but regarding my politics, the bishops and even the Pope cannot tell me what opinions I am to hold regarding the wars of the empire."

DECLARES RED HAIR BAR TO MATRIMONY

Those With Titan Locks Advised to Accept First Offer

"If you have red hair you'd better grab the first matrimonial chance which comes your way, because opportunities to marry are few and far between for those with titan locks, declared Dr. Edward T. Lazelle, of Denver, the eugenic expert.

"Red hair is one of the most pronounced matrimonial disqualifications," Dr. Lazelle added. "Girls with red hair see brown and black and yellow tressed ones being grapped up on all sides while they pine alone.

"It is the same with red-headed men. Red haired people are the weaklings of the race, too, provided they have the fair skin which generally, goes with red hair."

WOOD ALCOHOL KILLS FOUR

Since the prohibition law went into effect January 1st there have been seven deaths in Seattle from alcoholism, according to records kept by the coroner. Of this number the death of four men was due to drinking wood alcohol. One woman long addicted to drink died because she was unable to satisfy her abnormal craving for liquor after the state went "dry," and two died of overindulgence in whisky.

THE TONKA BEAN.

From It We Get the Perfume Known as New Mown Hay.

Grass, freshly cut or otherwise, has had nothing to do with the production of the perfume labeled "New Mown Hay." The source of the essence is really the tonka bean, found in the tropical countries of South America, chiefly in the valleys of the Orinoco, Caura and Cuchivero rivers in Venezuela and certain sections of Colombia and Brazil.

The tonka bean tree in some cases reaches a height of sixty feet. It has pinnate leaves and large panicles of flowers, which are succeeded by a pod containing a single seed. The odor, which is remarkably strong, resembles that of sweet clover new mown hay and is due to the presence of cumarin, a crystallizable, volatile, neutral substance which is soluble in alcohol or ether and somewhat so in boiling water, from which it crystallizes on cooling. The beans are often frosted with crystals of this substance, giving them the appearance of being sugar coated. The collectors in Venezuela and Colombia usually set out for the forests in February, when the fruit begins to ripen. They go up the rivers in canoes or skiffs by the hundreds, stopping wherever the trees are plentiful, and when the fruit begins to fall the pods are gathered and taken to some open space where sunshine is plentiful and there carefully crushed and the beans extracted and then spread out to dry. When thoroughly dried they are loaded into the boats and transported to Ciudad Bolivar or some other convenient port, where they are sold to the exporting merchants. Here they go through the process of crystallization by being steeped in strong rum or alcohol for about twenty-four hours and then again dried.

They lend their fragrance to high grade tobacco, fine toilet soaps, to "brilliantine" and other hair dressings and dyes, to cosmetics, to flavoring extracts used in confections and to many other things that gratify the sense of smell.

FINANCIAL SENSE.

Take Care of What You Earn and Then Invest It Wisely.

The greatest financial genius I ever knew and the richest man I ever knew personally once said to me:

"There is no greater financial genius possible than taking care of what you earn, and there is no better or surer way of taking care of your surplus than to invest it in sound securities paying 5 or 6 per cent. And such securities are easy to find any day of any year. So any man may be a financial genius if he will exercise the simplest common sense."

I protested that it would be said of such a man that he was narrow and selfish.

"Nonsense," the financial genius replied. "I have money invested in railroads, in packing houses and in manufacturing enterprises. Could money be invested more usefully? Yet it is as safe as government bonds and pays a better rate of interest. I invest my own money, but a man without financial experience may secure safe investments without difficulty. If a man has a bank account his banker will find safe investments for him. Bankers are men of financial experience, and 99 per cent of them are intelligent and honorable. There is no excuse for a busy man losing his savings. Many women, when they come into possession of money, lose it because they invest it in schemes bankers would not trust, or else the women loan their money to men who could not borrow money at a bank. Everything in life is simple and easy if we would only accept experience and be careful of big and sentimental notions. Financial sense is knowing that certain men will promise to do certain things and fail. Therefore when you invest your savings get security. And it is no more trouble to get good security than it is to get bad if you are guided by common sense and experience."

Fat Crystals.

If small quantities of butter, lard and beef fat be separately boiled and slowly cooled for, say, twenty-four hours, the resulting crystals will show very marked differences under the microscope. The normal butter crystal is large and globular. It polarizes brilliantly and shows a well marked St. Andrew's cross. That of lard shows a stellar form, while that of beef fat has a foliated appearance. In course of time, as the butter loses its freshness, the globular crystal degenerates and gradually merges into peculiar rosette-like forms.

A Plateau in Papua.

The most singular plateau in the world is in the island of Papua. The plateau is 6,000 feet above the sea, and there are summits towering 5,000 feet higher, but owing to the proximity of the equator the great plain is covered with luxuriant vegetation. The climate is a perpetual May, birds sing in every bush, and the only animals are a few marsupials, such as ground kangaroos and opossums. Yet this lovely region is almost deserted. The Papuans live in the sweltering coast jungles and rarely visit the uplands.

How to Win Her Heart.

We know a boy who knows girls, all right.

He's only six years old, but he observes things. We heard his mother calling him down for rudeness at play the other day, and our eavesdropping was rewarded with this:

"Billie," called the mother, "I want you to quit teasing that little girl! Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"Well, I got to tease somebody, an'"—

"You've got to tease somebody? That's a fine idea, I must say! And so"—

"Yes, an' she wants to be teased. If I quit she'll go play with some other little boy."

The Word "Canvassing."

How "canvassing" got its election significance is a puzzle. The word appears originally to have meant tossing in a canvas or blanket and thence generally mishandling or assaulting. "I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat," is the Duke of Gloucester's threat to the bishop of Winchester in "King Henry VI." The next stage of meaning was that of destructive criticism, from which to thorough discussion—"canvassing" a subject—was simple enough. But how exactly did it arrive at the election sense? Dr. Johnson explained that the term meant "trying votes previously to the decision" and derived it from "canvas, as it signifies a sieve."

Certainly Foolish.

We never heard of a man who tried to free himself of a manslaughter charge by pleading guilty to murder, but an up state man tried to prove he wasn't crazy the other day by claiming he was in love.

Fixing the Blame.

The Parson—To whom am I indebted for this visit? The Bridegroom—To Mamie's mother; she thought I'd been courting her long enough and she said so.

BLACK OPALS.

These Gems Fairly Blaze With Myriad Shades of Color.

Those exquisite gems, black opals, which were practically unknown up till comparatively recently, cost more, carat for carat, than do diamonds even, while experts declare that they are infinitely more beautiful.

And in this connection it may be pointed out that the term "black opal" is distinctly misleading. It was coined to distinguish it from the familiar light opal. As a matter of fact, the black opal is alive with myriad shades of flaming splendor, from brightest tints of green glowing fire to meteoric gold or lavender that in an instant quivers to crimson or slips into molten ruby or sapphire as the angle of light alters.

Black opals are dear, not only because they are so beautiful, but because they are so rare. They are found only at one spot, a comparatively small tract of ground in New South Wales, adjoining the Queensland border.

The field is called Lightning ridge. It is a wild and desolate spot. The nearest towns to it are Walgett and Collarendabri, and it is about 500 miles from Sydney as the crow flies.

Black opal mining is about the biggest gamble extant. There is really nothing to guide the miner in selecting a likely spot. The work is hard. The shafts average forty feet in depth, and all rock has to be "bucketed" to the top. Water is scarce, food almost unobtainable. On the other hand, the prospector who is lucky enough to stumble upon a pocket of fair sized, flawless stones reaps a fortune forthwith.

Harder Still.

"Well, have you reached the point where you can assemble a motorcar?" asked Mr. Chugson.

"No, indeed," answered Mr. Johnson. "In fact, I haven't yet reached the point where I can assemble the price."

Very Simple.

"My wife is going to that masquerade ball as a simple fisher maiden."

"Going to borrow a fisher's costume from some simple maiden?"

"Not on your life. Going to have one especially constructed for $2,000.

WORLD'S GREATEST WAR CORRESPONDENT GOES TO GRIFFIN'S, 31ST. JANUARY

Frederick Palmer, the World's Greatest War Correspondent, is coming to Griffin's on the 31st of January, under the auspices of the 80th "Overseas" Battaloin. He will lecture on the Great World War and show for the first time the official war films supplied by the British and French Governments.

Of special interest to Canadians is the chapter in his book, "My Year of The Great War," entitled "The Maple Leaf Folk," where he refers in glowing terms to the great work done by the Canadians, mentioning in particular the work of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

His lecture will deal not only in a general way with the Candians, but will undoubtedly go into some of the details, which will be of very great interst to us here.

The plan opened this morning, and from the appearances a full house will be sure to greet Mr. Palmer on his arrival here. There are still, however, some good seats left, which can be obtained by telephone, or a call at J. V. Doyle's. Prices 50c., 75c., and $1.00, rush seats, 25c. 80th Battalion orchestra of 18 pieces will be in attendance.

AT GRIFFIN'S

A large and interested audience greeted the great photoplay "Quo Vadis," on its first appearance here last evening at the Griffin's Opera House. This film is undoubtedly one of the best that has ever been shown here.

The photoplay goes back to the year 31 A.D., when that tyrant "Nero" held sway over the entire southern part of Europe. The most wonderful scene is where Rome is burning and all the men, women and children fleeing from the angry flames, while Nero sits on his throne gloating over his victims, quoting a favorite song. When the flames are all subdued the citizens come before "Nero" and demand that they should have the victim who caused the fire. The blame is put on the Christians. Then comes the scene of the persecution of the Christians, when they are thrust into the Arena, and are terribly mutilated by starving lions. The climax comes when "Lygia," the heroine of the play is strapped on the back of an enraged bull which is turned into the Arena. Ursus, the giant guardian of Lygia, seeing her on the back of the bull, rushes towards it and seizing it by the horns twists its neck and rescues his mistress. The audience seeing the great feat of strength, demand that "Nero" give himself up as the destroyer of Rome, but he escapes into the woods and commits suicide.

CASEY'S MISHAPS.

At Scott's Theatre last night before a large and appreciative audience the George Munro Musical Comedy show presented a laughable and amusing burletta entitled "Casey's Mishaps." All members of the company portrayed their parts well. Felix Martin as Dan Casey, the country fiddler, kept the audience continuously in laughter by his many witty sayings and antics. Bert Shaw in piano monologue was certainly good and showed that he is a player of no mean calibre. The singing by the chorus girls was excellent and they were repeatedly compelled to respond to an encore. Taken altogether it was a clean and amusing performance.

The Germans insist that they must have "milk for their babies and meat for their men and women." But who started the starvation process, anyway? We know, but we are willing to let Belgium answer.

It all depends upon the kind. A common cause of lessened vigor of body and mind is improper eating.

Report of Schools In Centre Hastings

Mr. J. E. Minns, School Inspector for Centre Hastings, at the County Council session yesterday presented a lengthy report of his work in the inspectorate. The following is a synopsis of the report:

"In the first place I have been most favorably impressed with the general condition of the schools and with the character of the work which in the great majority of the cases is being done. There are in the inspectorate a fairly large percentage of experienced teachers who are capable and efficient, and the results of whose efforts are plainly visible in the spirit and love of the schools over which they preside. The equipment also of the schools generally is fairly up-to-date and shows evidence of careful supervision during past years.

"It gives me great pleasure to speak just here of the courtesy and uniform kindness shown me by my predecessor, Mr. Mackintosh, in introducing me to my new duties and in providing me at all times with such information as I required.

The lack of continuity of service in the same schools on the part of the teachers is a condition really to be deplored. There are many capable and experienced teachers even who remain but a short time in a school, thus detracting very seriously from the effectiveness of their efforts and greatly handicapping the children. The teacher's function as a developer of character depends largely upon getting into a living near relationship with child life, and to this end the element of time and continuous service are absolutely essential. It is greatly to be regretted that in a few cases at the close of the present term trustees have dispensed with the services of teachers who were doing good work in their schools and who were happy in their relations with the children, on the mere chance of securing another teacher at a few dollars less salary.

"I regret that it was necessary at the beginning of the term to remove from their positions a number of teachers (nine in all) because of not having the requisite qualifications; but in one case the trustees deliberately chose to retain the services of an unqualified teacher, with the consequent loss of their school grant, rather than comply with the regulations.

"The inspectorate has the following teachers with the following qualifications: 5 first class, 61 second, 22 third, 6 district, 3 interim, and 1 without qualification. Of this total of 98, 16 are males and 82 females

"During the year the Marmora school building was burned and a new building has since been erected on the old site without any additional cost to the ratepayers. The building is modern, but fails to provide adequate provision for future expansion.

"There is fair prospects of two and possibly three new school buildings being erected during the coming summer." Mr. Minns concluded by a reference to the changed basis of the legislative grants this year.

Annual Meeting of St. Andrews Church

Last evening the congregation of St. Andrews church held their annual meeting in the School room. The pastor occupied the chair, and Mr. Arthur McGie acted as secretary. Reports from the various organizations were read, stating the progress which had been made during the year. The membership of the church was increased by thirty-seven additions, making the entire membership 385. The attendance at the June sacrament session, reports had been the largest in many years. Fifty-five members and adherents of the church have enlisted for overseas service. The Treasurer reported that the amount raised for all purposes during the year was $5,589.26. In the ordinary revenue, there was an increase of $150.00 over last year. A reduction of $600.00 on the debt of the church was made. For missionary, benevolent and patriotic purposes approximately $1,500.00 was raised. The Sunday school reported an average attendance of two hundred, being a small increase over last year. Seventy-one prizes were awarded for regular attendance. Three diplomas for reciting the shorter Catechism and sixteen for memorizing scripture. The revenue of the Sunday school amounted to $560.53. The Brotherhood Bible Class, nothwithstanding the fact that many had enlisted, still had been able to maintain an average attendance. The adult classes both men and women made liberal contributions to Mission funds of the church. The Ladies' Aid, during the year, had raised $587.43 and had on hand a balance of $273.79. The Mission Band had a successful year under the presidence of Miss E. Holmes and the Women's Missionary Auxiliary, under Mrs. Perry. The Guild were able to purchase a lantern and put in the necessary equipment at a cost of $91.15.

The following managers were elected by ballot for the term of three years:—Mr. A. McGie, Mr. Wm. McGie, Mr. B. Mallory, Mr. W. C. Reid, Mr. W. B. Walker. The meeting closed with the national anthem

HELD REGULAR MEETING

The A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church held its regular meeting on Wednesday evening, January 26th. An athletic evening had been arranged for, but weather not permitting a social evening was spent in the Parish Hall. Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D. Letters From Belleville Boys At the Front

France, Dec. 30th, 19195.

Dear Mother:—Your card of the 9th O. K. Have been waiting till I got my boxes to thank you. A thousand thanks for you and give my most heatry thanks to all the rest who sent something. But I am sorry to say, I have not got the boxes. You better get the value of them for I will not see them. I have been since the 27th in England and I am now returning from there. I got the mittens and handkerchiefs, thanks very, very much, I needed them badly. Also the others will come in good. But do not send any more, as we are getting issued with more now. And it costs far too much to send anything here. And then have some mean, cold footed fellows of the communication line, who stays back out of reach of danger, cheat the ones who bear all the fighting and hardships of the trenches out of the parcels that we all look forward to. There is on an average, half the parcels go astray; yet the letters telling of sending them, always reach us. I saw a fine sight. An air raid was made yesterday, somewhere, 21 of our aircraft passed over our heads, sixteen or more battleplanes, the rest monoplanes. The Germans fired thousands of shells at them when they crossed their lines. It was fine to see them manoeuvering and fooling the German fire.

Will close, wishing you all a happy New Year. May it be the best living year we can have. It all remains with us. For what is life without God? And that may be the place were we will meet, and one sure thing no sin is allowed there.

With loads of love,
Your loving son,
ORMAL AIKINS.

December 31st, 1915.

Just received the sweater coat, socks and underwear O. K. The sweater, oh, it's grand. No more getting cold on sentry or listening post. Also the underwear, I see is the best. Thanks very much. I also got the papers. I see Mr. Spafford's name on them. Did he give them to you? They are appreciated very much, as we get very little reading matter out here. How is dad, and the rest? Tell Edna I won't tease her any more. By the way, I see all the Canadians who are wounded are sent back, when able to travel, for a vacation. Sounds good go to me.

With love from,
ORMAL.

Woman is Dead Paramour Held

Body Lay on Ice Below Balcony While Drunken Man Slumbered Above

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—A coroner's inquest and the police will establish whether murder, suicide or accident caused the death of Jeanne Dorion, aged 24 years, whose body was found last night lying on the sidewalk under the third storey balcony of the flat at 2951 St. Dominique street, where she lived with Philip Lacerte. Lacerte is locked up at police headquarters pending the finding of the coroner's jury this morning. Neighbors told the police that they had heard the couple quarreling frequently, and as recently as yesterday afternoon and last evening. Lacerte had been drinking, and was to all appearances asleep when the police entered his apartment.

Joseph Aubre, of 2951 St. Dominique street, returning from a trip to a store at 9.20 last night, saw the form of a woman lying motionless on the icy walk. Closer investigation showed that the woman was lying with her head split open in a pool of blood, and that she was quite dead, and that she was a resident of three months' duration, known to her neighbors as Mrs. Lacerte, wife of Philip Lacerte.

Aubre gave the alarm, calling Dr. Bastien of 3018 St. Lawrence Boulevard, and notifying Lieutenant Dooner at the Beaubien street police station. Dr. Bastien found life to be extinct, the victim's skull having been so split as to indicate that her injury had been due to no ordinary fall. The woman's body had been carried into one of the first floor flats, and when Lieutenant Dooner and Constables Redman and Sauve arrived, they were told of the suspicions already rife among the neighbors, who only a short time before the finding of the body, had heard violent quarrelling between Mr. and Mrs. Lacerte.

Going upstairs, the police entered Lacerte's well-furnished and orderly four-room apartment. Lacerte was found in bed and apparently sound asleep. His breath showed that he had been drinking. He was told to get up and dress, and he complied grumblingly. Taken downstairs to where the woman's body lay, he at first denied ever having seen her before.

When Lieutenant Dooner informed him that he must go to the police station Lacerte burst into tears and stated that he did know the dead woman. He said that she had passed as his wife, but that they were not really married. Her name, he said, was Jeanne Dorion, she was 21 years of age, and she had come here from Gaspe. They had been living in the St. Dominique street flat only about three months. He made no further statement, and was first taken to the Beaubien street station and then to the cells at headquarters. Lacerte gives his occupation as that of a clerk in the employ of his brother, who has a store in St. Hubert street.

Coroner McMahon was notified and he ordered the body removed to the morgue. All available witnesses were ordered to appear for the inquest this morning at 10 o'clock. Lieut. Dooner and his men conducted an investigation of the premises. No signs of a struggle were found in the flat, but the door leading to the gallery was found open, satisfying the police that the woman jumped, fell or was thrown from the balcony to the solid ice thirty feet below.

The only thing many a man can enthuse over is himself.

THE DOMINION BANK REPORT A GOOD ONE

A very satisfactory statement was submitted to the Shareholders of the Dominion Bank at the Forty-fifth Annual Meeting held recently at the Head Office in Toronto. The Report showed that the Bank has made marked progress during the past year, and has taken an important part in the financing of the general business of the country.

The profits for the year were $870,266, and after making the necessary allowances for charges of management, bad and doubtful debts, and Dominion and Provincial Government taxes, the net earnings amounted to $605,123 equal to 13.40 per cent. of the Capital. Total assets reach the sum of $87,175,126 and increase of fully $7,000,000 over 1914. Current Loans show practically no change, being $17,153,000 as against $17,196,000 last year.

An interesting feature of the Report is the fact that the Cash assets amount to $19,921,625 or 27 per cent. of the liabilities to the public, while the immediately available assets show $32,660,400 or 44 per cent. of the liabilities to the public.

There is a considerable increase in the Note Circulation, due no doubt to the activity displayed by The Dominion Bank in helping to finance the Western wheat crop.

The Report constitutes a very creditable showing, and is one of the strongest ever issued by this well known institution since its incorporation 45 years ago.

Grey Declares Blockade Tight

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The result of the anxiously awaited debate in the House of Commons on the blockade question is that the British Government adheres to its existing policy.

A resolution introduced by Arthur Shirley Benn, Unionist member for Plymouth, that the entire over-oceanic traffic with Germany should be prevented by a blockade, was talked out, and the subject dropped, thus leaving the position exactly as before the debate, except that Parliament seemed more converted to the Government policy.

Interesting figures published by the War Department partly demolished the elaborate structure raised by the newspapers, and Sir Edward Grey's effective speech appeared to finish the work thus begun.

BASEBALL

THE COMING YEAR IN BASEBALL

When Old Doc Time beckons up the highway of sport they all follow the graves and the best with the rest of the field that has served its term under the banner of the game.

So for 1916 it will be of some interest to see just how many drop from the ranks or fade into the mists where even the greatest are soon forgotten by a fickle public that only remembers what you are to-day—not what you used to be. The past counts but little in a game that moves with such swiftness, where so many come and go and where the places of those who fall are so quickly taken by others waiting for the chance.

Here are at least a few of those who may hike onward for a year or two longer—or who might also drop out before 1917 opens its docket:

No. 1. Christy Mathewson.
No. 2. Honus Wagner.
No. 3. Napoleon Lajorie.
No. 4. Edward S. Plank.
No. 5. Mordecai Brown.
No. 6. Edward Walsh.
No. 7. Hal Chase.
No. 8. Napoleon Rucker.

Five of these belong to the greatest contingent of pitchers brought forward in fifty years of play—Mathewson, Brown, Walsh, Rucker and Plank. What a staff that would have made for any club with all five in their prime!

This doesn't mean that all five are to go, but no one of the five is certain to start another campaign beyond this spring's mobilization. Mathewson is doubtful in regard to his neck and shoulder trouble, where his nerve centers are badly worn away. There is a chance that 1916 will be his closing campaign. All depends on how the old salary whip and adjacent neck muscles thaw out this spring.

Walsh has been practically out of it for two years. But last season he was able to win a game or two. 1916 will probably wind up his career. Miner Brown had a good season with the Feds, but the Three-Taloned marvel is now forty years old, and he, too, is edging toward the shadows. Ed Plank, one of the game's greatest marvels, was still almost as effective as ever, although he had passed his fortieth year. But the Gettysburg Guide is closer to the border at last. Nap Rucker has had arm trouble for the last two years, so no one can tell what 1916 will hand him before October. But of the five pitching stars mentioned, who have served an average of more than twelve years, at least three are doomed to hand in the old uniform and take their places with the birds that used to be.

The requiem has been sounded for Hans Wagner and Nap Lajoie ever since Hector was a pie-eyed pup. When we were still a toddling infant we recall that the sportive gossip of the day was to the effect that old Hans and old Larry were about through.

But each year they come back and crack the pill on the proboscis or spear the festive grounder with abandon and eclat. Still they can't go on forever. Their places in balldom's sun must soon be taken. Hans is forty-one or more. Larry is forty. They have served twenty years each on the skinned plots back of the green turfed infield. They have outlasted the average player by nearly a dozen seasons.

Both big and powerful, they have stood the strain of the game where smaller frames would have curled up. And though most of this period may go through 1916 and hold their places without a slip. But to go on the Flying Dutchman is concerned, we refuse to predict his finish until a full month has elapsed after he has turned in his uniform and nailed his old glove to the cabin wall.

As for Hal Chase, one of the greatest of all first basemen. Hal seems to be pointed toward the minor border. Hal, through his excessive flopping from spot to spot and league to league, isn't the most popular bloke in the game with the controlling powers. Most of them would be much obliged to observe Hal drop out for good, so another star is fairly sure to fade this summer.

HOLDS $105,000,000 CASH

Judge Gary's Brief Review of Steel's Strong Position

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Nearly all the eighteen members of the Steel Board were present for the dividend meeting today, and were in a cheerful mood, quite different from a year ago, when the dividend was passed because earnings had fallen to a low level and plants were working at not more than 40 per cent. of capacity. Judge Gary issued a statement saying:

"The earnings for the quarter, amounting to $51,232,788, are $5,729,084 larger than any previous quarter. As usual, they were not made up until the day of the meeting of the directors. The amount of cash in banks is about $105,000,000.

"The members of the finance committee and of the board of directors were all in favor of the declaration of the 1¼ per cent. on the common stock."

"Judge, was there any dissension among the directors while the dividend was being discussed?" the chairman was asked.

"None at all," Judge Gary replied. "The Steel directors are always unanimous on everything they vote upon."

The usual preferred stock dividend of 1¾ per cent., payable February 24 to stockholders of record January 31, was voted. The common stock dividend will be paid March 30 to holders on the books March 1.

The corporation had unfilled orders amounting to 7,806,220 tons on its books when the year ended.

Isle Royale is now producing around 900,000 pounds of copper monthly.

DEPUTATION OF 155TH ADDRESS COUNTY COUNCIL

A Grant of Four Thousand Asked For---Matter is Referred to Committee on Ways and Means---Deputation Receives a Hearty Welcome From Council.

Thursday, Jan. 27th.

Afternoon Session

Council resumed at 2 o'clock.

On motion the council went into committee of the whole on bylaws; Mr. Montgomery in the chair.

A bylaw was read authorizing the borrowing of $31,800 to meet current expenditure until the taxes are collected.

A bylaw to appoint two members of the council on the Board of Management for the House of Refuge was introduced. Messrs. T. Naylor and J. V. Walsh were appointed members.

A bylaw to appoint a member of the audit of the administration of justice accounts was introduced. Mr. E. W. Hawkins was appointed.

Mr. Geo. West was appointed High School trustee for Madoc High School; Mr. Wilfred Woodcock for Deseronto High School; Messrs. Walter Potts, W. Hyde and Jas. Sondercock were appointed for Trenton High School.

The committee rose, reported progress and asked to sit again.—Granted.

Asked For a Grant

A deputation representing the 155th Battalion was present to address the Council. Warden Nugent welcomed the deputation and stated the Council would be pleased to hear them.

Col. Adams, Commanding Officer of the Battalion addressed the Council The battalion, he said, was being well recruited and there was no doubt it would be a full battalion in the spring. The deputation was present to ask for a grant for recruiting and regimental purpose. There were at present 10 recruiting officers in Hastings County, and the results were excellent. The Council had granted $1,000 to the 39th Battalion, and a like sum for the 80th Battalion. The 155th Battalion was in every sense a Bay of Quinte Battalion, composed of men from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. Prince Edward County Council had made a grant of $1,000 to the 155th Battalion. The expenses of a battalion were great and much in excess of what is granted by the Government. He would ask Hastings County for $1,500 for recruiting purposes and $2,800 for regimental purposes.

Mr. Vermilyea—What does the Government allow as expenses for recruiting purposes?

Col. Adams—The Government provides transport by rail only and does not provide for the providing of instruments for a band and other expenses which were incurred.

Mr. C. Ketcheson—If we produce the most men for the battalion from

Women Win In Manitoba

Enthusiasm in Legislature—Gives The Right Also to Sit in The Legislature

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—Tremendous enthusiasm signalized the third reading of the woman suffrage bill in the Legislature to-day. The galleries were filled with women who have been prominent in the movement for the political equality of the sexes, and they sang and cheered as the House unanimously passed the bill. Only one member of the Legislature, Joseph Hamelin, Conservative member for Ste Rose, had a word to say against it. He remarked that he had always been opposed to woman suffrage, not because he doubted the ability of women to judge legislation, but because votes for women might cause domestic troubles at election times. He did not, however, vote against the bill.

Right Also to Sit in House

Premier Norris had introduced the bill, but he is in Chicago. The third reading was moved by the Hon. T. H. Johnson, Minister of Public Works, who called attention to the fact that besides giving the women the vote, the bill recognizes their right to sit in the Legislature.

Mutual Compliments

After the bill had been read a third time the women rose in the galleries and sang "O Canada" with great heartiness. They they sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," referring to the members of the House. Not to be outdone, the members rose and replied in like manner.

Munition Making Being Pushed in Government and Private Factories

LONDON, Jan. 28.—A special despach from Delhi says: Throughout the whole of India efforts to assist in securing victory for the allies are proceeding steadily. Gifts continue to flow in for the equipment of hospitals, for ambulance service, and for institutions for providing comforts for the troops. The manufacture of munitions is being keenly pushed forward, the government giving eager attention to the extension of this work, the progress of which is most encouraging. Government factories are going full blast, while all the workshops of the great railway systems of the country are similarly engaged, and most of the big private firms are lending their aid. The Mahrajahs are rushing the output of war materials.

SHARP FIGHTING NEAR NIEUPORT

Berlin Tells of Terrific Hand-to-Hand Struggle For Trenches

BERLIN, Jan. 27—Reports from France and Flanders say that a favorable turn in the weather has been followed by active fighting on the entire western front. Along nearly the whole line the roar of artillery is heard, but the heaviest fighting has been in the vicinity of Nieuport, to the north of Ypres and in the Argonne.

German patrolling parties brought back word that German artillery had done effective work against trenches of the Allies near Nieuport, The British artillery, it is said, was hardly less active than that of the Germans. On one section of the front the British fired 1,7000 shrapnel shells, 700 high explosive shells and about the same number of bombs within a period of twenty-four hours.

BRITAIN'S SINGLE AIM IS FINAL, DECISIVE VICTORY

King George's Significant Speech When Parliament Prorogued Until February 15th— The Commons Thanked For Its Liberality

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Parliament was prorogued yesterday until February 15. In the prorogation speech King George said:

"We shall not lay down our arms until we have vindicated the cause which carries with it the future of civilization."

The Royal assent giving statutory force to the military service bill, the trading with the enemy bill, and the bill prolonging the life of Parliament were concluded in the House of Lords to-day.

The speech of the King probably was the briefest on record on such an occasion, but his references to the war were regarded as highly important.

"For eighteen months my navy and army have been engaged, in concert with brave and steadfast allies, in defending our common liberties and the public law of Europe against unprovoked encroachments by the enemy," he said. "I am sustained by the determination of my people at home and overseas to carry our flag to a final decisive victory. In this struggle, forced upon us by those who hold in light esteem the liberties and covenants which we regard as sacred, we shall not lay down our arms until we have vindicated the cause which carries with it the future of civilization.

"I rely with confidence upon the loyal and united efforts of all my subjects, which have never failed me, and I pray that Almighty God may give us His blessing."

The King thanked the House of Commons for the ungrudging liberality with which it has provided for the heavy demands of the war. The speech was read by Baron Buckmaster of Cheddington, the Lord High Chancellor.

New War Credit Vote

At the resempling next month after an unusually short recess, the House of Commons, owing to the necessity for financing the war, will be engaged almost exclusively for some weeks in financial business. A new war credit vote will be necessary, as the sums already voted will be exhausted before the end of February. It is understood that the Budget will be submitted at the earliest possible moment and that it is likely to contain drastic new taxation proposals, including probably a scheme for compulsory investment in the war loan of a proportion of the earnings of the community, the aim being thus to reach the greatly enhanced earnings of workers engaged in the manufacture of munitions and other Government necessities.

Later the Emperor and the rest of the party attended service.

"All prisoners in Germany between the ages of 18 and 55 were pardoned by the Kaiser and will be enlisted in the army."

No Opposition To Extension Of Parliament

Liberals Decide After Careful Consideration to Allow Measure to Pass

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 27.—The Liberals have decided to allow the resolution for the extension of Parliament to pass without opposition. It is understood that after careful consideration this attitude has been decided upon by the opposition. They will make a protest against the measure being introduced so early in the session but they will not oppose the principle and there will not be active opposition.

The Liberal caucus was unable to come to any decision and the matter was left to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He has been in frequent conference with his leaders during the past few days and it is understood that it has agreed to allow the bill to pass unanimously. Whether Sir Wilfrid will be able to carry with him the belligerent wing of his party led by Hon. William Pugsley and F. B. Carvell remains to be seen. They may refuse to be bound by this decision and insist on carrying their opposition in the House next Tuesday according to present arrangement.

The debate on the address will wind up Friday night. Monday is private members day.

CANADIAN INITIATIVE IS PRAISED BY GEN. JOFFRE

LONDON, Jan. 27.—H. M. Tomlinson, correspondent at British headquarters for a London morning paper, in a long despatch published this morning, makes the following references to the Canadian army:

"Nowhere does one find such punctiliousness on duty as in the Canadian lines. The man who owns a ranch salutes his junior or superior with even elaborate emphasis. But there is allowed a freedom of individual expression, nevertheless, which has proved so fruitful that the story of one exploit of Canadians has been circulated in the French Army by General Joffre as revealing a manner to deal with the Prussians. But it cannot be told here.

"The ideal of the Canadians generally is to get the men opposite them into such a state of mind that when our scouts openly insult them they dare not even lift their heads, and are afraid to retaliate, in case worse things happen.

"The habit of self-dependence in adversity, as practised in that young country, is proving a great habit to the Canadians. Their commanders know how to exploit it to the common good.

"When a bomb expert was required some time since—a man who could device the means of delivering the right explosive exactly where the enemy was not expecting it—this job was given to a young man who had astonished the overseas community on several occasions with his scoops as a journalist. The new expert proved no less cunning than the commander who thought of him as a likely candidate. He has since developed into a general authority on bombs.

"The Canadians, intent on worrying the enemy, have established schools where, when not at listening posts or taking part in expeditions and getting 'trench feet,' the men assemble to listen to lectures on better methods of getting their work done.

"Standing in a sea of mire, there was an old barn full of officers, with fodder stowed over their heads on rafters. And yesterday, smoking their pipes, they sat listening with me to a young major who had been thinking out a new war-like device, and wished to communicate his idea. After the lecture the men were paraded in two squads, both shouted at afike, and they marched as lightly and tenaciously as mud to the ankles would let them, to get facility in some other dodge of war, as though they were in team training for Olympian games."

35 Students Join Guelph Battery

Collegians, One-Third Theologs, Eager to Get Definitely Into Service

GUELPH, Jan. 27.—A most unusual addition will be made to the ranks of the 43rd Battery, which is being recruited here by Col. McCrae. On Monday next it is expected that there will be 35 students from Knox College, Toronto, added to the strength. Twelve of these are taking the theological course at Toronto. The men from Knox have made inquiries through a representative committee regarding the possibilities of the various military units. Artillery being most in favor, the committee familiarized themselves with the conditions governing the raising of new batteries in the Toronto district, under Major Richardson and others. There being no immediate opening in that direction, the men duly considered the move in the University to raise either a University Battery or an Overseas Training Battalion. Since this also appeared a trifle vague and problematical, the men composing the Knox contingent have arranged to join the Howitzer Battery in Guelph, and will report for duty on Monday, the last day of this month.

TRAVELLER HAD TOO MUCH TALK

Ventilated Opinions on War, Advocated Pro-Germanism, and Narrowly Escaped Arrest

LINDSAY, Jan. 27.—Yesterday morning a traveller from Napanee narrowly escaped arrest for treasonable utterances. He was one of those loud-mouthed fellows who like to see what a disturbance they can create by their vaporings, but his time he went a little too far under the hypnotism of his own tongue.

It seems that Tuesday evening while seated at the supper table of a local hotel he started to air his views and got into an argument, and chose as his subject the present war.

He waxed hotter and hotter and announced to the whole roomful among other treasonable utterances he would not salute the uniform, nor the king, nor the flag, nor would he fight for Great Britain, and furthermore that he believed Germany was in the right anyway.

The remarks were made pointedly, it is said, in the presence of a number of officers, who took counsel together, and in the morning the man's arrest was ordered and brought about. The traveller on arrest immediately "crawled." He said he did not know anything about his remarks the previous night and apologized most humbly. The proprietor of the hotel was called into consultation and gave the man a testimonial as to character, stating that he liked to talk merely for the sensation he could produce. The man was ill of a serious wasting disease, which had probably affected him. He was thirty-six years of age, and was born in Napanee.

He was allowed to go, but will be kept under surveillance, and the authorities of his home town, it is said, have been asked to look into the case. He was allowed to proceed to Peterborough to conduct his business. This should be a lesson to loud talkers and those fond of an argument to leave military matters alone when they would side with the enemy for the sake of an argument.

OUR EMPIRE, IS IT WORTH FIGHTING FOR

Brilliant Address by Archdeacon Cody at Inaugural Meeting of The Canadian Club at High School Lecture Hall—Audience Highly Pleased

The opening meeting of the Canadian Club was held last night in the spacious assembly hall of the High School. By 8.15 o'clock every seat was occupied by members of the club, their wives and friends, also by officers of the 80th and 155th Battalions, and by the members of the County Council. It was the largest and most representative audience in the history of the Canadian Club. The President, Mr. D. V. Sinclair, presided, and was supported on the platform by the guest of honor and speaker of the evening, the Ven. Archdeacon Cody, of Toronto. There were present on the platform also, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., Mayor Ketcheson, Warden Nugent, Col. Adams and Col. Ketcheson. Mr. I. L. Moore, the indefatigable secretary, presided at the door and received the tickets and subscriptions of membership, and Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, B.A., principal of the High School, took charge of the ushering.

After singing "The Maple Leaf," Mr. Sinclair introduced Dr. Cody in a felicitous speech, who was warmly greeted by the large audience. Archdeacon Cody is gifted with a magnetic personality, and possesses a voice of rare charm and strength that seems to penetrate the soul like the notes of a cathedral organ. There is a mystic halo in his manner and a religious zeal for God and righteousness and the British Empire permeated his address, even as it did the speeches of St. Francis of Assisi, or the Hebrew prophets of Israel. Dr. Cody is a modern Savonarola, combining in highest order the role of preacher and reformer with boldness and fervor. His message is a clarion call to faith in God, in our Empire and in each other in these dark and troublous days, and its value as a moral tonic and spiritual fulcrum cannot be overestimated.

Taking up his subject "The British Empire—Is it Worth Fighting For?" Dr. Cody gave a resume of the events leading up to the present war with Germany in August, 1914, and outlined in succinct fashion the surprises that Germany gave to our Empire. These he enumerated as follows: (1) Germany's preparedness and plans for war; (2) Her marvellous and sinister system of world-wide espionage; (3) Her doctrine of Kultur, which has revealed a low ethical ideal, and a mere veneer of pinchbeck civilization, with an undercurrent of brutishness and materialism that we cannot realise or express in proper terms; (4) Her utter abandon to materialism as shown in her praise and eclat over Ritschl, Trietszche, Nietszche, and Bernhardi; (5) Her utter absence of the gift of humor, and her obsession of stolid paranoiac hatred of England. Dr. Cody quoted the "Hymn of Hate" against England by Ernest Lissauer, as showing the childishness and jejune spirit of Prussianism, and pointed out the fact of the Kaiser conferring upon the author the highest decoration of the order of the Red Eagle of the fourth class, with the royal crown. As showing the German nation's utter absence of humor, and abandonment to savagery, the speaker illustrated the fact of the outspoken satisfaction of the entire German press over the "Hymn of Hate," and the Emperor's approval and decoration of the author, also the Berliner Tageblatt's childish assertion that Lissauer's poem entitles him to rank as one of the celebrities of modern times, and that the hymn itself is being actually taught in every German school to the little children. Dr. Cody quoted some of the lines of the hymn:—

"You will we hate with a lasting hate;
We will never forego our hate—
Hate by water and hate by land,
Hate of the head and hate of the hand,
Hate of the hammer and hate of the crown,
Hate of seventy millions choking down.
We love as one, we hate as one;
We have one foe, and one alone—
England."

Dr. Cody's speech at this point sparkled with delicate sarcasm, keen wit, and sly humor, as he depicted the attitude of "Tommy Atkins" towards this dull and senseless German hate. To the shilling-a-day cockney the "'ymn of 'ate" is the personification of comic opera and rollicking humor.

Turning to the surprises our Empire had given to the Germans, Dr. Cody enumerated the following:—(1) That we came into the fight at all, seeing we had only national honor to defend, and our treaty obligations to uphold, which to the stolid Hohenzollern were only a "scrap of paper." "They began the war," exclaimed Dr. Cody, "and we will end it—and end it right, and thoroughly." (2) Another surprise we gave the Germans was the exhibition of a united Empire in the face of a common foe, and the ignoring of all party lines, religious bigotry and racial animosities as by a magic "by presto!" (3) The fact that as a Christian nation we have backed up the war and fought fairly, and given our sons and ourselves freely for our ideals, was another big surprise to the Germans. "My Christian faith has not been shaken by this war, it has been infinitely strengthened," exclaimed the speaker, but," he added, "it would have perished as a mere chimera had we stepped aside and folded our arms, while a great bully beat to pulp a little brother like Belgium." (4) Another surprise we gave the Germans was the rapidity with which we gathered men, munitions, and money for this war. We have proved to that great oligarchy that in a democracy there can be—and must be—freedom and strength, liberty and justice, and that freedom can make greater sacrifices and shed richer blood, than a fettered civilization. (5) We surprised the Germans by the invincible strength and strategy of our British navy. Dr. Cody spoke at some length upon the history of naval warfare as illustrating the fact that it is in the sea-power nations must rely for final defence and victory of their cause. He also paid a splendid tribute to Admiral Jellicoe and the boys of the navy.

In a solemn and searching peroration, that was listened to in rapt silence, Dr. Cody showed that while the superficial advantages may seem to have been so far with the enemy, nevertheless the great fundamental advantages are with us, for every German plan has miscarried. They are on the verge of exhaustion in men, finance, spirit, and people are rioting in Berlin, and Maximilian Harden and every critic has been throttled by the Kaiser's mailed fist. Dr. Cody closed his speech by appealing for a renascence of charity, faith and hope, and an unfaltering belief in our Christian ideals of liberty, justice and truth.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker by Rev. Dr. Blagrave and Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and enthusiastically carried by the audience.

SIDE-NOTES.

Dr. Blagrave in his motion referred to the fact that Dr. Cody preached the sermon at his ordination service in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, thirteen years ago.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., credited the securing of Dr. Cody to address the club to the importunity of Mr. John Elliott.

Mr. Sinclair spoke of the enforced absence of Col. Ponton, through sickness, and declared that he was a man after Dr. Cody's own heart, and would have revelled in listening to his address. The audience heartily applauded this remark.

The High School hall lends itself finely to the idea of a Canadian Club. It is light and airy and centrally located. The pictures, maps, blackboards and screen give it an educational and didactic atmosphere. The trustees have kindly granted the use of the hall for the remainder of the season.

A Most Extraordinary Cure of Epileptic Fits

Mother Had Appealed to Three Doctors in Vain—Cured Four Months Ago by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter from Mrs. Noxel is endorsed by Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., as being true and correct. While it reports a most remarkable cure of epileptic fits by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, it only goes to corroborate similar cures reported by others.

Mrs. Henrietta M. Noxel, R. R. No. 1, Humberstone, Ont., writes: "I cannot help writing to you, as I want you to know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills have been to my boy. He was taken with very violent fits, would twitch all over, his eyes would turn towards his nose, his jaws set and his lips turn almost purple. He would clench his fists tightly, become unconscious and then go into a long sleep. After several hours he would wake up sighing and so weak he could not stand. I was afraid he would die and took him to the doctor, who pronounced his case epilepsy. As his medicine was not effective and the fits continued, I took him to another doctor at Fonthill, but his medicine seemed to make him worse.

"As the boy's nerves were in such a state that he could not sit down or lie down, and the fits continued, I took him to a third doctor, who said that he would not undertake to cure epilepsy, as no doctor could cure it. That night I went home very much discouraged, and when I took my dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I gave my boy a dose, and that was the first night in weeks that he slept well. I kept on giving him the Nerve Food three times a day and occasionally a Kidney-Liver Pill to keep the kidneys and bowels active. I can, with a clear conscience, say that he has not had even one fit since beginning this treatment. I give him no other medicine. He looks and feels well, and as there have been no returns of the old trouble for four months, I believe he has been cured. I can never cease to be grateful to the manufacturers of these medicines, for I am sure I would have lost my boy if it had not been for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., writes: "This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. Henrietta M. Noxel, and believe that the statement she has made in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is true and correct."

Death of Lieut. Raymond S. Carter

The news of the death of Raymond Carter came as a great shock to his friends in this community.

Mr. Carter died on Monday morning, Jan. 24th after only a few days' illness, aged 18 years, 2 months and 4 days.

The deceased was born in Picton, and was the son of the late Harry Carter and step-son of Mr. D. J. Shannon.

After finishing his education at the Picton Collegiate some two years ago he entered the employ of the Picton branch of the Montreal Bank, where he was exceptionally popular with the staff and the customers of that institution. In this capacity he proved very efficient and the bank accepted his resignation with regret when he responded to the call of his country and enlisted with the Canadian Overseas forces in November last. Since that time he has been in training for Lieutenancy at the Military School in Kingston, only completing his course and returning home on Saturday, Jan. 15th.

Before returning from Kingston he was suffering from a cold which later developed in an attack of pleurisy. He was under the doctor's care during last week and was apparently improving until on Sunday last he was taken worse and rapidly sank until the end came early on Monday morning.

The funeral was held at St. Mary Magdalene's church on Wednesday, and a large number of friends and acquaintances assembled to do honor to the departed. Interment in Glenwood cemetery.

Annual Meeting of Agricultural Society

The annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Agricultural Society was held in Shire Hall on Jan. 21st.

The annual statement and Auditor's and the financial affairs of the Society showed a healthy condition. The liabilities were reduced during the year approximately $1,200.00, $1,000.00 of which was the grant received from the County Council.

President Gough reviewed very closely the work of the past year, and pointed out that during the past as well as a few previous years a good deal of improvements had been found necessary and carried out. This would not be required for some time again, so that we should be able to curtail expenses very materially the coming year. The following officers and directors were appointed for the ensuing year:—

President—Howard Leavens.
1st Vice-President—A. J. Cundick.
2nd Vice-President—G. Ed Boulter.
Directors—W. H. Gough, H. B. Bristol, W. J. Carter, M. Gilbert, E. M. Herrington, B. R. Leavens, C. Metcalfe, D. Burlingham, H. H. Horsey.

Owing to the growth of the Society bringing about increased duties, it was the unanimous wish of the members present that application should be made to the Minister of Agriculture, for authority to increase the directorate from nine to fifteen and six others were elected to meet this requirement, if it is asnctioned by the Minister of Agriculture.—Picton Gazette.

E. B. Purtelle Elected Warden

At the first meeting of the County Council for 1916, which convened at Shire Hall on Tuesday of this week, Mr. E. B. Purtelle, Reeve of Bloomfield was elected Warden.

Mr. Purtelle has had several years' experience in municipal life and has fairly earned the honor that has come to him. He was a member of the Council for Hallowell township for a time, and for several years past has represented the village of Bloomfield in the County Council, having been elected as Reeve of that municipality for the past four years.—Picton Gazette.

BANCROFT MARBLE QUARRY BOOMING

For some time past the marble quarry just south of the town has been in operation but seemingly on a small scale, perhaps because of financial conditions and the war. However, during the past couple of weeks they have renewed vigor and are now working over time in filling rushed orders. Last week one car load was shipped and the management have another one well under way.

The quality of the product being taken out has been pronounced the best in Canada, and will in all probility give vent to a thriving industry for some time to come. There are now about 25 men employed and it is possible the force will be doubled should the demand for marble continue.

CHOIR BOY HELD FOR THEFTS FROM CHURCH

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—George F. Davis, 17-year-old choir boy at the St. Mark's Episcopal Church, is in custody following the finding of church property valued at $10,000 in his home.

Davis is believed to have carried out a series of thefts at St. Mark's church for the last two years. The church is attended by many of the most prominent church men in the city. Five checks of the Farmer's Bank, of Delaware, each of them made payable to the order of George F. Davis for $1,000 and signed "St. Mark's Church, per Davis," were found in the boy's clothes.

"I stole because I wanted to have a church of my own, where I could preach my own sermons," Davis told Lieutenant of Detective Emanuel.

The vestments and ornaments which the boy stole from the church were of the richest sort.

The Peps way of treating coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung and throat troubles. How? Well, up to now people with these chest and throat troubles have swallowed cough mixtures, sickly syrups and the like, into their stomachs. Sore lungs and throat get no good by dosing the stomach. Peps work differently.

Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes —not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. All druggists and stores or Peps Co., Toronto, will supply

Labor Decisively Backs the War

BRISTOL, Jan. 27.—British organized labor, on the first day of a conference which has attracted world-wide attention, out-voted the extreme Socialist anti-war, section, and adopted two resolutions expressing the patriotic resolve to carry the war through.

The first resolution carried by a vote of 1,847,000 against 206,000, and entirely approved of the action of the Parliamentary Labor party in co-operating with other political parties in the national recruiting campaign.

Another resolution pledging the conference to assist the Government in the prosecution of the war was also carried by a big majority.

THE SHELL COMMITTEE

The clean-cut two-hour statement by Major-General Hughes in the House of Commons on Wednesday should silence the defamers of the Shell Committee, which has been made the subject of general and severe criticism by the Liberal Press and the Opposition side of the House. As portrayed by the speaker the work of the Shell Committee has been creditable to the gentlemen who constituted that body, and to Canadian industry, both those who direct the different kinds of establishments concerned and the men who work therein. The class of agitators against whom Mr. Lloyd George complained in Great Britain as seeking to limit the amount of work that should be done in a day have not been effective here in checking the production per man. High wages have been paid and capacity and skill have been well remunerated. The story is interesting. The idea of the War Office was to get shells made in the United States through Canada. General Hughes was among those who thought the work should be dne in Canada. The Shell Committee came into being. It was a business body whose members were of all political opinions. With its doings Major-General Hughes did not interfere, either as to the giving of contracts or fixing prices. The prices were fixed by the British Government. The Canadian companies and concerns interested were also readier to act than were at least some of those in the United States. In the United States some got large advances before undertaking their contracts. In Canada there was none of this. The Canadians took the risk of the business, made their experiments, and learned by their mistakes. They produced an article which received the commendation of the British authorities both as regards quality and time of delivery. They produced it at a price lower than was paid to United States industries. For 18-pounder shells the figures were $8.55 in Canada and $12.80 in the United States. As they come to better understand the work, also, the Canadian makers' prices were reduced. It is to be hoped that Major-General Hughes' critics will carefully peruse his manly reply to the uncalled for charges, and silently retire to their respective corners—out of sight.

PUGSLEY AND PARTIZANSHIP

The pink of political humbugs, the Hon. William Pugsley, after spending over two hours in denouncing what he termed "middlemen" and manufacturers for securing contracts for war supplies at enormous prices, coolly and with a sanctimonious smile declared that he had no fault to find with the manufacturer, it was only the shell committee that he blamed. It was the giver of the contracts at enormous prices and not the receiver who was to pocket the profits who was to blame. The votes of the manufacturers loomed up. He feared them; hence, a little "soft solder" was applied, fancying that would heal the wound of an act of wrong-doing. The Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, pricked that bubble, when he said: "How gently and with what soft gloves did the hon. member for St. John handle the manufacturers of this country. If Mr. Pugsley's argument meant anything, it meant that these manufacturers had employed middlemen and that they had been paid sums far in excess of the value of the work they had done, and this for political reasons."

Mr. Pugsley was not satisfied with berating the Shell Committee and the manufacturers for giving out and accepting contracts out of which fortunes were made, but he charged the Government with partizanship in awarding contracts and in the appointment of war officials. This charge Mr. Hazen combatted and proved to be untrue.

He read a list of names of Liberal directors of a number of firms in the Maritime Provinces and Canada generally which had secured contracts, among them being that of Hon. Clifford Robinson, former local leader of the Liberal party in New Brunswick.

Other Opposition members also raised the cry of partizanship. Mr. Macdonald, of Pictou, said that in his county only physicians who were Conservatives were allowed to examine recruits for active service.

Mr. Kyte, of Richmond, Nova Scotia, declared that no one could secure an appointment or a contract unless he was a Conservative.

How far this spirit of partizanship has been acted upon, this section of the Dominion can answer, each contract that has been secured in this city for, shells or boxes is held by Liberals, who are doing good work. No one will deny that this city and county are not Conservative. All we can add is, that all their orders may be duplicated, and that the profits to the manufacturers may be reasonably remunerative.

As to the doctors, no partizanship has been shown. Those who hold similar positions to those referred to by Mr. Macdonald in this city are Liberals, and are doing their important work well. No partizanship has been shown in dealing with war appointments or war contracts. The charges are but the cravings of minds who desired plunder and didn't get it.

The Swastika Gold Mines, Limited, has been organized to develop the Swastika and other claims. A Provincial charter has been granted and the capital of the new company is $2,000,000.

A FEW OPPOSITION TIT-BITS.

Mr. E. M. MacDonald, of Pictou, criticized the Government for the fact that Canada has contributed no volunteers to the British naval service, as had Australia, New Zealanders and even South Africa.

"We have not got a single submarine in Eastern Canada," said the member for Pictou.

He also referred to one period after the war broke out, when all the British vessels guarding the Atlantic coast were down in the West Indies, leaving the coast bare of effective defence, stated that insufficient precautions were taken to guard the Halifax dockyard, and asserted that the Niobe was now being dismantled. Mr. Macdonald thought Canada should have two torpedo-boat destroyers on the Atlantic coast.

The member for Pictou went on to state that the fallacy of the idea that Canada could not build steel ships having been exploded, the Dominion ought to equip herself for transportation on the sea as on land.

Mr. Macdonald censured the Government because Canada had contributed no volunteers to the British navy and also because the Canadian navy was not in a state of efficiency when the war broke out. As a result many German vessels which could have been captured, had the Niobe been afloat, had escaped into United States waters. Mr. Macdonald also thought that torpedo boats and submarines should have been purchased for the protection of Canadian commerce on the Atlantice coast as well as Canadian transports.

With the single exception of the small vessel given to the Government by Mr. Jack Ross of Montreal, which had been converted into a torpedo-boat destroyer, there was not a single Canadian boat to protect Canadian transports. Had there been a German submarine raid on the Atlantic coast Canadian shipping would have been practically without protection save for that rendered by Australia or Britain. At the present time the Niobe was again dismantled, and a solitary policeman was on guard at the gate to the Canadian Admiralty at Halifax.

It is only necessary to point out that Mr. Macdonald, M.P. for Pictou, is Sir Wilfrid's right bower from Nova Scotia, and ONE of those who, when the question of strengthening the navy was proposed to Parliament, VOTED AGAINST the appropriation, declaring there was no emergency, nor was there any fear of a war with Germany. Now he holds the Borden Government responsible for not being prepared for war.

Can this class of partizanship, hypocrisy and chicanery be excelled in the ranks of the Pugsley following? Unfortunately Mr. Macdonald is not alone in the policy now being adopted by the present opposition in Parliament. Office is of more importance to them than the ending of the carnage now raging in Belgium and France. The great mass of the people do not share in such tactics.

Current Comment

Now comes news that the Wilson administration favors, not only a tariff commission, but an anti-dumping clause. It will be quite a protectionist administration if it keeps on.—Buffalo Express.

Gen. Sam Hughes is growing in favor in Canada as his work and impartiality are properly appreciated. This is as it should be, for undoubtedly Canadians owe a debt of gratitude for the work of the Minister of Militia.—Guelph Herald.

A tax on mail order business, with increased taxes on express companies and street railways, are being considered by the Government of Manitoba. Having gone borrowing money it now has to go taxing people to pay the interest.

"Canada is united and determined to make every sacrifice for helping Britain and France to make triumphant the cause of right, of justice and of civilization. These are the sentiments of La Patrie, of Montreal, sentiments to which its readers will surely say "Hear, hear."—Mail and Empire.

Father Bernard Vaughan is as frank as Lord Fisher as to the conduct of the war when he says that "Our business is to keep on killing Germans." If enough of the enemy are killed, then victory will be in sight; and that is the goal. It is the slaying that counts in war.

The Belgian Minister to War denies indignantly that Belgium would consider a separate peace. Belgium knows that her chances of obtaining indemnity for her wrongs depend on sticking to the Allies to the last, and she may reasonably argue that when Germany begins to throw out hints about a separate peace, those chances are looking brighter.

A Brockville hockey club player has been suspended by the O. H. A. for leading a mob in an attack on a referee from Ottawa, and the club, which was not to blame in the matter, has been notified that if ample protection is not given visiting teams and officials, league hockey will be forbidden in that town. The case is not an isolated one, for there have been unpleasant incidents on the ice in numerous other towns. Why is it that certain strenuous players of games insist on acting as though their opponents were Huns to be swatted into unconsciousness, together with officials, on the slightest provocation?—Montreal Gazette.

The statement made by the Prime Minister of Sweden on Tuesday that for the sake of neutrality his country should not submit to dangerous restructions on its rights and liberty gives meaning to what Sir Edward Grey declared in the House of Commons on Wednesday on the resolution calling for a stricter blockade of the German Empire. The statements of the United States customs service are evidence that through Holland and the Scandinavian countries quantities of this continent's produce are being shipped for use in Germany. Some of it may never reach its destination. No one can doubt that some of it does.

How can the Government of Canada, without dishonor, refuse to make the Parliameneary inquiry Mr. Carvell demands into the operations of the defunct Shell Committee? During the thirteen or fourteen months of its career that committee awarded contracts calling for the expenditure of almost three hundred million dollars, a greater sum than was spent during the same period by the Dominion Government on all the public services of the country, including the raising and equipping of the Canadian overseas contingents.—Toronto Globe. It is quite evident the Globe has not digested the two-hour statement of the Minister of Militia in the Canadian House of Commons on Wednesday.

SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, DROPSY.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to tell you of a recent experience I had when suffering from backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, and congestion of the kidneys. I tried a new medicine called "Anuric," which has recently been discovered by Dr. Pierce, of whose medicines and Surgical Institution in Buffalo, N. Y., you have no doubt heard for years. This medicine acted upon me in a wonderful manner. I never have taken any medicine so helpful in such quick time. I do wish anyone in need of such a remedy would give it a trial.
(Signed) G. H. HERR.

NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery" which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

FREE MASONS' INQUIRY RESULTS PUBLISHED

PARIS, Jan. 27.—A despatch from Havre to the Havas Agency says that the Belgian Government has completed the volume which has been under preparation in answer to the German White Book, and that it definitely disposes of German charges regarding the attitude of the people of Belgium toward German troops. It is stated that the assertions in this regard made by certain German officers were for effect in neutral countries, and that it is proved that they were unfounded. The Belgian book, which comprises 500 pages, and which will soon be distributed, contains a number of hitherto unpublished documents and the report of an inquiry carried out by international Free Masons.

The Poets' Corner

The Dogs of War.

Thus you may tally the dogs of war;
(You pay the kennel fee)
Fending your borders they range afar,
The harriers of the sea.

Grim in grey water, steel on steel,
Squat battleships sit low,
Their great guns are the bull-dog's teeth
That close upon the foe.

The armored cruisers are strong-ribbed hounds,
Swift on the trail they go.
As burrowing terriers follow the fox,
The submarines hunt below.

Slinking into the midst of dawn,
Black hull and raking stack,
The fell destroyers skulk along,
Mad dogs in a deadly pack.

Every ship with a bone in her mouth
Travels the watery track,
Guarding your goods in the East and South,
Till the keeper calls them back.

He whistles them off, and the battleships
Come sullenly to heel;
He slips the leash, and his eager hounds
Leap forth on rushing keel.

Thus you may tally the dogs of war;
(You grudge the kennel fee)
Guarding your borders they range afar,
The harriers of the sea.

TIRED WORKING MEN

A LOCAL DRUGGIST SUGGESTS A REMEDY FOR OVERWORKED, RUN-DOWN MEN.

The following lette from Manager Hodes recounts the experience and condition of many Belleville men. Read this letter and our offer which follows:

Brooklyn, N.Y. "I am a general office manager, and became so nervous and run-down in health that I lost my appetite and finally my health broke down completely, largely because of overwork. I tried Beef Iron and Wine, and other remedies without help. I saw Vinol advertised, and soon after taking it I noticed an improvement. I now have a hearty appetite, sleep better, feel better and have gained considerable in weight." Samuel Hodes, 501 Stone Ave.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains the three oldest and most famous tonics viz.—the medicinal elements of fresh cod livers without oil, peptonate of iron and beef peptone.

We ask every run-down, over worked man in Belleville, to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it fails to help them as it did Mr. Hodes. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

Billy Sunday's Usher Bitten

Billy Annoyed When Congregation Turns From Sermon to Fight

TRENTON, N.J., Jan. 27.—In a fight with a fanatic in the Billy Sunday Tabernacle tonight, Willard Vogts, an usher, was severely bitten. The disturber got one of Vogts' fingers between his teeth and almost severed it. It was during one of the most impressive parts of the evangelist's sermon that a man whose name was not ascertained, arose among the audience of 12,000 persons and shouted: "This is not Christianity! This is paganism This is a music hall!"

Ushers immediately ran to the man and evicted him after a lively tussle. The commotion irritated Sunday, but he was the least excited of anyone in the shed. He urged the audience to keep calm, and said it was not uncommon for the devils to cry against him. He added that if the ushers could not remove the trouble-maker, he would do it. When the audience persisted in looking toward the place where the fight was going on, Sunday who resumed his sermon, became angry. "Stop craning your necks!" he shouted. "If you don't I will quit preaching. You must not mind such mutts. Perhaps you thought they would do such things in Paterson but not in Trenton."

THERE IS A VAST ARMY

of men and women who really never know what it is to enjoy sound, vibrating health—who would be surprised to suddenly gain that exhilarating vitality that robust health brings.

Literally thousands without any particular sickness live in "general debility", as the doctors call it—have headaches, are tired and indifferent. To all such people we say with unmistakable earnestness—"Take Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month and allow its rare oil-food to enrich and enliven your blood, quicken your circulation, stimulate nutrition, and aid nature to develop that real red-blooded life that means activity, enjoyment, success."

Scott's Emulsion is not a drug, but a pleasant food-tonic—free from drugs. One bottle may help you.

CHAPTER V.—Continued

Myra slipped past her through the narrow hall and commenced to climb the dark staircase. It was carpeted, threadbare in places, and looked as though it had not seen a broom for years. Instinctively she clutched her short skirt and held it higher. She ran up the stairs as if eager for the interview.

On the second floor facing her a door stood wide open; on the right against the wall was a highly colored poster advertising a cinematograph film. The scent of stale cigarette smoke filled her nostrils. It drifted in thin gray clouds through the open door.

Her courage failed her. She was on the point of retreating when a man appeared suddenly out of the mist. The man she had expected to see—he with the black mustache and the shining bald head.

He nodded and held out his hand. Automatically she took it, and a shiver of repulsion ran through her body.

"You are remarkably punctual for a woman! Come in."

His voice was unpleasantly soft and persuasive. When he spoke the sinister expression left his face; it became almost pleasant; his eyes were like those of a ferret, just as small; the same sickly color and the same blood-hunger gleaming in them.

"Sit down, Miss Berrington. I feel honored by the presence of such a famous actress." He pulled the armchair forward and Myra dropped into it. "Do you smoke?"

She shook her head. She prayed the man did not notice how her fingers trembled.

"You must be surprised I took any notice of your anonymous communication," she said, trying to speak carelessly. "But, like all women, I am dreadfully curious."

He seated himself on the edge of the table and looked at her with unpleasant familiarity as he puffed a cloud of smoke between his thin, colorless lips. She noticed that the fingers of his right hand were yellow with tobacco-smoke.

His patent boots were cracked and highly varnished. His clothes were well cut, but suffered from excessive cleaning and ironing. He wore a diamond pin in his tie. The ends of his mustache were well soaped.

"I haven't introduced myself—but a rose by any other name would smell so sweet—and you had a pretty bunch this morning. The last roses of summer, eh?"

"I told you curiosity brought me here. Unless you satisfy it quickly I shall go, Mr.——?"

"Mr. Paul Duhardt—at your service; though I hope we are going to be of mutual service to one another. If you are in a hurry, Miss Berrington, I'll come straight to the point without any preamble. I guess you're a business woman, though, as a rule, business and beauty don't go together—what!"

He changed his position, and waved a cloud of tobacco-smoke away.

" 'Gad, such a beautiful woman as you ought never to be out of an engagement. London ought to have been at your feet long ago; yes, and Paris and Berlin."

"Mr. Duhardt, what do you want?"

Duhardt threw his cigarette away and lit another. "Money," he said, extinguishing the match.

He waited a moment, but Myra Berrington was silent. He rose to his feet and stood in front of her, almost touching her, his arms folded.

"A mutual want, eh? That's what you're after—money. And, by gad, you've struck a gold mine."

"I havn't the faintest idea what you're talking about." Myra spoke under her breath.

"I saw you get onto the train at Homburg. I heard you curse the German state railways. You did it very nicely. And I watched the little game you played with Sir John Vessie. One of the prettiest comedies I've seen in my life. I don't believe there's another woman who could have done it.

"You know his reputation? Why, down in Sussex they say he won't shoot a hen pheasant until he's been introduced to it! And you had him groveling at your feet inside half an hour."

Myra Berrington rose to her feet as if to leave the room. But Paul Duhardt refused to move an inch. He blocked the way.

'You gave him the slip at Ostend, let him get on the train at Dover alone, with your dressing-case. Followed on by the last train from Dover. On inquiry at the bureau of the Hotel Regent you found that Sir John had your dressing-case in his possession. So you calmly walked into his sitting-room and—he heard some one there, thought it was a thief, and, well—you've fairly got him on toast."

He gave Myra Berrignton an opportunity of speaking, but she said nothing.

"I was passing outside in the corridor; I heard the shout of 'Thief!' Then a scream from you! Of course, I'm not sure now that Vessie didn't know something! Anyway, you worked it perfectly.

"I listened afterward outside the door; overheard every word. You are an artist, Miss Berrington, a great artist. And, by gad! you've struck a gold mine. I need not tell your that Vessie is one of the richest men in England."

Myra stepped back and leaned against the mantlepiece. She was stupefied. She had not expected anything so terrible as this.

She had been accused of blackmail by Sir John Vessie. Now she found herself in the grip of a professional blackmailer. She felt incapable of speech, incapable of action She could not think clearly.

"What has all this to do with you?" she stammered.

Paul Duhardt lit his third cigarette and once more carefully extinguished the match.

"Well, I'm afraid I mu[illegible] to let me share in your good fortune, Miss Berrington. You want money? Money means success, fame, to you. And money breeds. I want it—at the present moment more than you do. I've had my eye on Vessie for a long time, but he was too difficult a proposition for me. But you've got him in the hollow of your hand. A veritable gold mine.

"All you need do when you go back to the hotel is to 'stake your claim,' as it were. I'll do the dirty work and get the gold for you. And all I ask in return is 50 per cent. Share and share alike! Now, sit down again, and we'll go into the affair properly. What do you say?"

He looked at her and wagged his head cunningly. "It's no good being greedy and refusing! It's a fair offer I've made. Share and share alike. You can't refuse—you see I know too much!"

"But of what do I—do you—accuse Sir John?" Myra stammered.

"Of what do we accuse him!" Duhardt grinned. "You've a good choice—of assault and robbery, if you like. Dash it all, you traveled tete-a-tete with him from Homburg, shared his wagon-lit and carried on a delightfully innocent flirtation. You lose sight of him at Ostend; but he holds on to your dressing-case!

"Then you turn up at the Hotel Regent. Sir John is already there. You are told your dressing-case is in Room 11. Naturally you look for it there. Suddenly the door blows open to—a man rushes into the room and shouts 'Thief' and knocks you down. There is still evidence on your forehead of his brutality. The hotel is roused; but Sir John Vessie daren't confess what has happened."

Duhardt leaned toward her. "Neither dare you, now! It wouldn't pay, would it? Evidence! You've almost enough to hang him!"

CHAPTER VI.

The Hawk Strikes

Myra Berrington tried to laugh. She knew the ferretlike eyes of Duhardt were fixed upon her. She was afraid, or ashamed, to meet their gaze—she hardly knew which.

She did not know what to do or what to say. Her instinct at that moment was the instinct of the rabbit—when it suddenly finds it dread enemy facing it—to bolt! She could quite appreciate the feelings of that unfortunate little animal when it finds its home invaded by the ferret thirsting for blood.

The machinery of thought and action was clogged. The soft, persuasive voice of the man facing her acted like a drug. She began to argue with herself, knowing all arguments were futile. Knowing, too, that silence was fatal.

At last she forced words to her lips. She scarcely recognized her own voice.

"This is blackmail!"

An echo of Sir John Vessie when he had found her at the telephone. Had she been entirely innocent? Her conscience suddenly pricked her.

"Call it what you like," Paul Duhardt said blandly. "We are partners in it."

Again she felt tongue-tied. This man's attitude robbed her of all defense.

"Partners—with you—in blackmailing Sir John? Is that what you mean?" She jerked her head back and forced herself to look at him.

He smiled and nodded his head as if she had asked him some simple question. "That's it, exactly. But may I suggest the wisdom of calling a spade a 'horticultural implement,' even when you are discussing business with your partner?"

"Blackmail!" She flung the word in his face with all the scorn she now felt, backed up by fear and loathing of the man. "Blackmail! You brought me her to accuse me of blackmailing Sir John Vessie—you!"

With speech some courage returned. She looked Paul Duhardt up and down, from the top of his shiny bald head to his highly varnished patent boots. She had seen his prototype over and over again in the front row of the stalls when business at theaters was dull and the box-office was only besieged by deadheads. The sort of man who breakfasted and lunched at the Bodega bar, levying blackmail on the biscuit-box and the cheese-dish. The sort of man who knew the names of every chorus girl in musical comedy, who haunted billiard saloons and blackmailed the markers that they might find him pigeons to pluck.

When Tosti Kissed Melba.

The first time I sang "Goodby" it was in Tosti's studio, and he played the accompaniment himself. The lines "Hush—a voice from far away;" "Listen and learn," it seems to say; "All the tomorrows shall be as today!" "The cord is frayed, the cruse is dry; the link must break and the lamp must die," I sang throughout pianissimo, with only the two slight crescendos that he had marked in the music. Stopping suddenly at the end of those phrases, Tosti kissed me and exclaimed, "That is the way I heard it!" I knew what he meant. The desire prompted by imagination in its composing had been realized. And I was very happy. — Mme. Melba in Woman's Home Companion.

Turn the Children Loose.

Turn them loose. That is the best way to develop the muscles of boys and girls. Turn them loose and let them live wild—climb trees, jump fences, chase squirrels, play with the dogs, dig in the garden, pick flowers, hop, skip and jump and do all sorts of things that a natural human animal wants to do. The trouble is, our boys and girls are tamed too much. We are all born wild and in the civilizing process have to be tamed more or less. Most of us, however, get tamed too much. We become so tamed that we are spoiled.—Good Health.

ALLIES TO WIN WAR IN YEAR

Frederick Palmer Makes This Heartening Statement — The Famous War Correspondent Addresses Great Audience

From Hamilton Herald, Jan. 26.—The American war correspondent, Frederick Palmer, who has returned from the front, faced in the Lyric theater last night an army of a very different character to those whose exploits he had come to dilate upon. It besieged the building before the doors were opened and charged for the booking office with eager anticipation. Once inside the victors in the rush for seats surrendered themselves to the enjoyment of a personal narrative of the great war. Mr. Palmer made no attempt at flights of oratory, and spoke more in a conversational tone. But he brought a message of hope and encouragement, and said he had no doubt but that the allies would win in a year. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Canadian club and Norman Slater, the president, was able to make the gratifying announcement that the Red Cross society would be the richer by the lecture to the tune of $1000.

"Not until people have been in Belgium, and know what it is to have their lives and property at stake, not until then will they realize that there is no price too high to pay to be owner of their own body and soul. I concluded that there are things worse than death—surrender of the principle which Anglo-Saxon civilization stands for, and all that Magna Charta stands for." This was Mr. Palmer's almost opening sentence. In an interesting manner he proceeded to describe the trenches, remarking that the shell he had the most respect for was the Jack Johnson, the 9.2, because they knew it was coming and were able to take cover. He praised the marvellous skill of the British aviators and described their movements over the battlefield.

He passed on to speak of the arrival of the Canadians at the front. He was mighty interested to see what they were going to do, and how they would compare with the British and French in standing up to the Germans. It was said at Salisbury that their discipline was bad. The Canadians wanted to know "why?" German soldiers, if told to pour pails of water all day long and let it run down the hill, would do it; but if the Canadians were told to do it they would want to know what was the good of it. He told one of the British officers that they did not want to fight the mud of Salisbury but the Germans. "Wait until they get into the trenches and you will be surprised how soon they will learn." After they had been in the trenches two weeks he spoke to a British brigadier, who admitted that they had discipline, but had a different way of doing things.

Mr. Palmer referred to the gallant stand made at St. Julien by the Canadians, where they showed they had the same qualities as the British regular, and not only stuck to it, but charged into it. He said the British had now got shells, and added, "My sympathies are not only on the side of the allies, but I have not the slightest doubt the allies are going to win."

He described a battle which took place the last day that he was at the front, because he said it illustrated an idea—that the British army had guns and shells. Promptly at one o'clock the guns broke out, flash upon flash, and whichever way they looked they saw flashes. The guns were firing over 2,000 yards of trenches, and the noise was so great that it gave one a headache. It was interesting, because the British had not half those guns last year. They looked to see the result of the firing, and saw an embankment of dust and smoke, as if a wall had risen up before them. At the back of those British guns was another line of firing. When spring came it would not be over three or four miles, but over many more miles along the western front they would see that shell firing, and not for three days, but for three weeks. The Germans had used machinery against flesh and blood; but the allies had now machinery, and the moment that spring arrived they could look for the overmastering supremacy of the allies.

Mr. Palmer, replying to the criticism, "Why don't the British fleet go and dig out the German fleet?" said they could not get at the German fleet unless they got at them from the air. What was the German fleet doing? That was what a great many people overlooked. The British navy had had the initiative right from the start. A British naval officer remarked to him, "Of course we have not the imagination that some of the Latin people have got, but there is one thing you may trust us for—we never get distemper." The lecturer said Sir John Jellicoe had impressed him the most of any man. He had had the greatest responsibility, and at the conclusion of the war he thought it would be admitted that he had proved worthy of it.

Mr. Palmer showed a number of interesting moving pictures taken under the direction of the French staff. In showing a review of French troops by King George he remarked that the best marching troops on the continent of Europe were the French. "These are some soldiers," he remarked, "and they gave the Germans some strafe." He quoted the remark of a German officer, who, speaking of the coolness of the British officers, said, "They walk up and down, smoking their pipes as if they were in Piccadilly." Some wonderful pictures were shown of Arab cavalry trained by the French.

Mr. Wardrope moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Palmer.

Mr. Lynch-Staunton seconded the vote, which was carried with hearty applause.

IF YOU CAN'T ENLIST

and are anxious to "do your bit," you can relieve the sufferings of the men who are spending this winter in the trenches by sending them Zam-Buk for which they are asking.

Numerous letters from soldiers at the front prove their need of it. In a letter from one of the men to his people he says: "If it is a choice between tobacco and Zam-Buk—send Zam-Buk."

Constant exposure to damp and cold, inevitable in trench life, causes rheumatism, chapped hands, cold cracks, and frost bites. Zam-Buk heals these, and a box of Zam-Buk, which can be easily carried in the pocket, will save a man much unnecessary suffering. Zam-Buk is equally effective for sore hands, caused by trench digging; and an application of Zam-Buk to the feet will prevent foot-soreness and blistering on long marches.

Sold by All druggists, 50c, 3 for $1.25, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Says Serbia Will Surprise The Enemy

PARIS, Jan. 27.—The Corfu correspondent of the Petit Parisien has had an interview on the island with Nikola Pachitch, the Serbian premier, and quotes him as saying:

"The retreat of our troops from Albania to Corfu is far from completed. Those who suffered most will soon be sent to places where they will be cared for, reorganized and rearmed. As for the others, if they are kept supplied, you may be sure they will continue the campaign in Albania with vigor. They will give the enemy some unpleasant surprises, for in Albania the roads and paths can be defended by small numbers of men and it is simply a question of transports and supplies and you alone, the Allies, can solve the problem.

"Give us enough to eat and we shall head on and we shall fight. I am certain that with you and by your aid we shall triumph. I repeat that we are absolutely sure that the Allies will triumph and our one wish is to be able to contribute to the great victory."

MUST NOT INSULT

KINGSTON, Jan. 27.—Lieut.-Col. Charles A. Low, commanding the 146th Battalion here, has had to issue an order to his men that they must not use insulting remarks to those who have not enlisted. It has been brought to his attention that munition workers in locomotive works have been jeered at as slackers, and remarks have been made relating to "yellow," "cold feet" etc. This practice, the commanding officer says, must be discontinued. So far as recruiting is concerned, Kingston has contributed as high a percentage as any city or town in Canada to the various units from this district.

Czar Urged Serbia To Resist Austria

Revelations in Berlin of Ante-Bellum Correspondence Seized From Crown Prince

BERLIN, Jan. 27, via London.—Telegraphing from Budapast the correspondent of the Tageblatt says that, according to a Sofia despatch, two letters and one telegram signed by the Russian Emperor, were found among the archieves of the Serbian Crown Prince Alexander, which were recently captured by the Bulgarians.

All the documents were dated just before the outbreak of the war. The first letter advises the Crown Prince under no circumstances to yield to the demand of Austria-Hungary for the resolution of the Narodni Ocirana, a Serbian political society.

In the telegram Emperor Nicholas is said to have instructed the Serbians to reject the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum because Russia was ready to support Serbia with the force of arms.

In the second letter the Russian Emperor is declared to have pointed out the advantages which Serbia would derive in following Russia's orders. His Majesty added that Russia's armed power was being held in readiness, and he urged Serbia to resist to the last drop of blood.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Diplomatic circles in London showed little surprise at the Berliner Tageblatt's publication of the correspondence between the Russian Emperor and Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia, but declined to comment until convinced of the authenticity of the letters and telegram.

The Russian embassy stated that the Russian Orange Book embraced all the correspondence of which it had knowledge.

It is pointed out by some of the diplomats that actual events prove that there was no conspiracy between Russia and Serbia, as Serbia gave way completely to the Austrian demands for the dissolution of the Narodni Ochrana, the Serbian political society, and stood out only against the clauses in the Austrian ultimatum which threatened the sovereignty of Serbia.

Irate Citizen Attacked Ashman

Peterboro Property Holder Strenuously Objects to Marring the Landscape Beauty

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 27.—A garbage collector with a load of ashes was attacked by a north-end resident on Water street when the former endeavored to dump his cargo on the embankment at Goose Pond. The citizen, who lives in this immediate neighborhood, took offence at having the landscape as seen from his front window, marred by the dull grey of an ash heap. He rushed across the road and ordered the man to cease. The ash man protested, saying that he was simply following instructions. A lively contest followed this declaration and the pair could be seen through a vapor of ashes, fighting for the possession of a horse whip. Finally the citizen wrested it from the driver and the vanquished was treated to a series of lashes across the legs. In a last spasm of anger the Water street man broke the whip and cast it into the sleigh. When the smoke of battle had cleared the ash man was making a hasty retreat down the road and the conqueror was wending his way home, covered with both glory and ashes.

UNCERTAINTY AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Jan. 27.—Today's ministerial caucus was devoted to a discussion of the sessional programme. There was a full attendance of members under the presidency of Mr. David Henderson, the veteran member from Halton, and consideration was given to questions with which the House will be called upon to deal when the debate on the address is disposed of.

The unwillingness of the Opposition to take a definite position upon the question of an extension of the term of the present Parliament creates a situation of uncertainty as to the outcome of the session and presents possibilities which Conservative members are not disposed to disregard. Rumors of election preparations by the Opposition have been persistent during the last few days.

IN BULGARIA TO STAY

PARIS, Jan. 27.—A despatch to the Temps from Saloniki says a German municipal commission has arrived at Sofia to consult with the authorities in the Bulgarian capital with regard to the measures to be taken for organizing the municipality on German lines.

The Bulgarian Government, the correspondent adds, at the request of Germany, will present a bill in Parliament making the teaching of German obligatory in all the Bulgarian schools.

Lord Kitchener is a man not much given to humor, but he is rather fond of telling this story of a dinner which he gave to the Duke of Cambridge, when the latter was visiting Egypt. The function went off splendidly, but there was a slight delay in the middle of the meal. The next day Lord Kitchener complimented his native staff on their success, but asked what had caused the delay. "Cook, he die of cholera. Push him under table. Go on."

Lost Horse and Cutter in Lake

Mr. J. Munsey, of Allenwick, lost a valuable horse while driving home across Rice Lake on Saturday evening.

He had left Keene and was proceeding towards Krack Island when the ice gave way and the horse and cutter disappeared in the lake. Mr. Munsey had considerable difficulty in saving himself.

The ice on Rice Lake is in a very bad state and persons who take chances in crossing now are taking their lives in their own hands. The Brush trail laid out is particularly dangerous. The Trent River is open to the Lake.—Norwood Register.

Sixth Annual Apiculture Short Course in Ontario

This short course was held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, January 11th to 22nd, 1916.

Owing to war conditions a large attendance was not anticipated. On the opening day, however, there was an attendance of twenty-seven later increased to thirty-five young men and a few ladies. Practically every one of these had been previously engaged in bee-keeping. They included beekeepers owning one hundred or more colonies, sons of successful beekeepers, and in one case a beekeeper's hired man. Many different parts of Ontario were represented, also Quebec and the State of Michigan. The get-together spirit was much in evidence, and the interest shown at all the lectures was very gratifying.

It is the purpose of this course to give the underlying principles of bee nature, a knowledge of which is essential to successful bee management. Fifty-nine lectures and demonstrations were given, covering the different phases of beekeeping. Typewritten copies of each lecture outline were distributed to the class so the main points could be followed closely and carried home for future reference. As far as possible the lectures were illustrated with stereopticon views and the actual objects under discussion. Members of the class were also given laboratory practice in hive construction, and a visit was made to the apiary of a successful beekeeper in the neighborhood of the college.

One important feature of the work was the display of apiarian apparatus and implements. The educational value of this was clearly demonstrated by the keen interest shown by those present.

In conducting this course, the Provincial Apiarist, Mr. Morley Pettit, was assisted by F. W. L. Sladen, Apiculturist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa; F. E. Millen, B.S.A., Lecturer in Apiculture and State Inspector of Apiaries for Michigan; James Armstrong, Selkirk; Vice-President of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association; also some of the apiary inspectors of Ontario. Lectures on allied subjects were given by other members of the College staff. Mr. Frank C. Pellett, State Apiarist of Iowa, paid the class a visit and lectured on beekeeping conditions in his state.

Throughout the course there were many kind words of appreciation by members of the class, and on the last day a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Pettit and the other instructors for the valuable information received and the systematic arrangement of the work.

It is proposed to hold a Summer School for beekeepers at the Ontario Agricultural College, some time in June when bees are active and apiary practice will be possible. Persons interested should write at once for particulars to Morley Pettit, Provincial Apiarist, Guelph, Ontario.

At a rough estimate, the capital wealth of the British Empire is £26,000,000 ($130,000,000,000) and its yearly income £4,000,000,000 ($20,000,000,000) according to Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

DEPUTATION OF 155TH ADDRESS COUNTY COUNCIL

Hastings County, we should only be asked for $1,000 and the County of Prince Edward should give the $4,000.

Col. Adams—The population of Prince Edward County was only 17,000, whereas the population of Hastings County was over 50,000.

Mr. Montgomery—How many officers are there from Hastings County in the 155th Battalion.

Col. Adams—There are at present 4.

Dr. Harper, medical officer and former reeve of Madoc Village, received a warm welcome as he arose to address the council and congratulated Warden Nugent upon the exalted position he occupied. In the Village of Madoc over $3,000 per month was paid out in that village by the militia. He thought the amount asked by Col. Adams was not excessive. The officers were a fine body of men and the battalion should appeal to all.

Major A. P. Allen said the 155th Batalion was purely from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. We want money to get men and not take money away with us.

Major Wallbridge said the members of the 155th Battalion were ready to go to the front and do their bit, and he hoped the Council would deal liberally with the battalion.

Capt. Gilmour said there were expenses incurred in recruiting a battalion which the Government did not provide for.

On motion the matter was sent to the Ways and Means Committee.

Col. Adams thanked the members of the Council for the reception and hearing of the deputation.

Warden Nugent said the Council would deal with the matter as liberally as possible.

The National Anthem was sung and three hearty cheers were given for the 155th Battalion.

Bridge Asked For

A deputation from Northumberland County addressed the Council.

Mr. Seeley asked Hastings County Council to unite with Northumberland County Council in building a bridge about 120 feet long on the north channel of the Trent river on the boundary between Sidney and Seymour Township. The bridge was of great necessity.

Mr. Chas. Ketcheson was of the opinion that the Township of Sidney should not be considered in the matter of a boundary road. There was only about 100 acres of land belonging to the Township of Sidney involved in the island.

Mr. Rollins—What do you think a suitable bridge would cost?

Mr. Seeley—I cannot say.

Mr. McCadden addressed the Council, endorsing what Mr. Seeley had stated. He thought a wooden bridge costing probably $1,000 would be sufficient. Northumberland County, he had no doubt, would assist in the erection of the bridge.

Mr. Ketcheson considered the Township of Sidney had no particular interest in the matter. The bridge if built would be virtually for the whole benefit of Northumberland County.

On motion the matter was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Council adjourned until 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Friday, Jan. 28th.

Morning Session

Council resumed at 10 o'clock; Warden Nugent in the chair.

The minutes of Thursday's sessions were read and confirmed.

A petition was presented from a number of ratepayers at Rawdon Township asking for the changing of a road in the 8th and 10th concession in the township and a counter petition was presented objecting to a change of the road.

On motion the petitions were received and filed and no action was taken.

Expenditures as per treasurer's book, $9,641.53; provisions from farm to House $1,625.73. Total cost of House for 1915, $10,567.26; total cost previous year $9,743.62; amount paid from paying inmates, 1915, $624.67; amount paid from paying inmates, 1914, $1,170.32; average cost per inmater for 1915 per week, $1.99; average cost per inmate for 1914 per week, $1.63; average cost per inmate for 1913 per week, $1.89½; average cost per inmate for 1912 per week, $2.05; average cost per inmate for 1911 per week, $2.00.

The committee recommended that another house be purchased this year.

Warden Nugent, who was chairman of the House of Refuge for 1915, reported that in August last a horse died, and it was necessary to procure another horse. As the report shows the decrease of receipts from paying patients for 1915 was about $300 less than the previous year. Provisions were also higher and these items caused an increase of expenditures over those of 1914.

The report was received and adopted.

Mr. Ketcheson moved, seconded by Mr. Hess, that Principal J. N. Bell of Frankford continuation school, be appointed to the Entrance Board of the High School with which it is affiliated.

Moved by Mr. Jordison, seconded by Mr. Green, that this Council take the matter up of securing a better mail service and passenger service between Trenton and Maynooth, as the service north of Bancroft is most deplorable, having only three mails per week. Now, we think when both Governments have granted large bonuses to the C.N.R., we demand a daily train service as it affects the rural mail delivery.

Mr. Jordison spoke strongly in favor of the motion, alleging it was almost scandulous the service which at present is in vogue. A change should be made, and especially as the railway is receiving bonuses from the Government.

Clerk Chapman said that this was an important matter and that something should be done to relieve the situation which at present prevails.

Feel Out of Sorts?

It's a good idea to look for the cause!

One common, but often unsuspected cause is tea and coffee drinking. Yet some persons seem able to get along with tea or coffee—at least for a time. But when headachy, bilious days come; breakfast or some other meal doesn't taste good; and the day's work goes wrong (ever feel that way)?—then it's time to find out for sure if tea and coffee are causing the trouble in your case.

There's a subtle, cumulative drug, "caffeine," in tea and coffee that interferes with the normal functions of body, brain and nerves, and often lessens one's comfort and progress.

Suppose, for a test, you try the simple expedient of quitting tea and coffee and using well-made

POSTUM
(Made in Canada)

—a pure food-drink made of choice wheat. It has a delightful snappy flavor and is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

After ten days or two weeks you will be able to decide whether to go back to tea and coffee troubles, or stick to Postum and peace and comfort.

Postum comes in two forms.

The original Postum Cereal—must be well boiled; 15c and 25c pkgs.

Instant Postum—doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and adding cream and sugar to taste. 30c and 50c tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds. Cost per cup is about the same.

SPORTING NEWS

HOCKEY

The match between the Belleville and Lindsay Juniors scheduled for tonight, has again been postponed to next Monday, when it is hoped the ice will be in condition to pull the match off.

The warm weather has played havoc with sports at the local skating rink.

Anyhow, the local teams should be in the pink of condition if waiting can assist.

Hockey fans should get ready for the coming cold snap, when rooting will be in order—and strenuous rooting at that.

Brother "Dick of the rink, carries his usual smiles, even if he has had to get three sets of bills printed for the Belleville — Lindsay junior game. "Dick" always was game.

The members of the Belleville Junior and Intermediate clubs are waping their muscles and shins for decisive victories. Nothing like getting into shape, boys.

Someone told us the Lindsay boys are talking pretty loud regarding what they expect to do with the Belleville Juniors when they get at 'em. But, confidentially, we don't believe they possess the sand. We'll show 'em.

DEPUTATION OF 155TH ADDRESS COUNTY COUNCIL

Mayor Ketcheson addressed the Council, stating the Government is providing a Soldiers' Aid Commission. The object is to make provisions for returned invalided soldiers who return home, and it is desired to form a Hastings County Association. He would ask the Council to co-operate in the matter, and to attend a meeting in the Armouries this (Friday) evening. Every reeve of the muncipalities would be a member of the executive.

Warden Nugent thanked Mayor Ketcheson for his presence, and stated the County Council would co-operate in the matter, which was important.

Moved by Mr. Naylor, seconded by Mr. Fox, that the clerk of the county write Mr. W. B. Northrup, K.C., M. P., asking him to look after the usual grant made on roads through the Mohawk Reserve, Tyendinaga Township, by the Indian deparment of the Dominion Government, and that the superintendent of roads of the County of Hastings be allowed to look after the spending of same.—Carried.

Nominating Committees

The Nominating Committee recommended the personnel of the committees to be as follows:

Chairman of Roads—S. Fox.

Finance Committee—R. P. Coulter.

Chairmen—J. H. Clare, R. P. Gray, N. Vermilyea and C. Thompson.

House of Refuge—J. V. Walsh, chairman, and J. Naylor.

Bridge Committee—J. A. Gunter, chairman, U. A. Hubbell, J. Moore, S. B. Rollins, E. Tufts and the Warden.

Auditor of administration of Justice Account—E. W. Hawkins.

Mr. Vermilyea thought it was undesirable that a man living in the remote part of the county as Mr. Gunter does, should be elected years after year as chairman. He contended that a representative in the more central part of the county should be appointed chairman.

Mr. Coulter said he did not seek the office as chairman of Finance, but he had by a majority of the county been asked to retain that position.

Mr. Gunter stated that he did not aspire to be chairman of the Bridge Committee. He was in the hands of the county.

In the discussion which ensued the matter of O'Brien's bridge repairs was touched upon, but not enlarged upon, as it was intended to take the matter up later.

The report of the nominating committee was adopted.

Council adjourned until 2 o'clock.

Six Mile March Through Mud and Inky Night

Lieut. A. G. Mordy, formerly accountant of the Winnipeg branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, in a letter "from the trenches," tells of the optimistic nature of the Canadian boys who are at the front. "Nothing daunts them," writes the Lieutenant. "I cannot adequately express my admiration for men who have been through the mud of Salisbury, the fighting at Ypres, and the drudgery of the trenches for months. With 75 lbs. to carry, no food for seven hours, they lately started out on a six mile march in pitch darkness and in a pouring rain, and they sang as they marched. I hope they will get the reception they are entitled to when they return to Canada."

Then Lieut. Mordy tells of a former Commerce boy named Blacklay, who was killed while doing duty beside an aeroplane, and says: "This war is a cruel, dirty, dastardly business, and no Hell eternal can be devised sufficient to expiate the suffering and sorrow caused by those responsible."

Talented Priest A Shoe Shine

Catholic Father Wandering in New York May Be Insane

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Patrolman Tienkin pushed through a crowd gathered at City Hall Park this morning and found a man in the garb of a priest who carried a bootblack's box on which was printed: "I am a Catholic priest, expelled by the Mexicans. Shoe shine 5 cents."

Tienkin took the man to the station and sent for Father Diamond, of the Church of the Transfiguration, in Mott street, who acted as translator, and learned that the priest was the Rev. Peter Belanstegin, a native of Argentina. He said he had been imprisoned in Mexico for forty days and cruelly treated. He escaped at last and made his way here. He said he had been unable to get work of any kind and finally had manufactured the shoebox and with it had earned 30 cents on Monday, 5 cents on Tuesday, and $1 today. The dollar, he said, had been given to him for one shine by a customer, whose shoes already were polished until they glistened.

Father Belanstegin had a letter from R. D. Aquilor, editor of La Presna, of 24 Stone street, saying that the priest was an eminent musician and composer, and a learned man.

Father Diamond said there was no reason why a Catholic priest should be reduced to shining shoes in this city, and suggested that his sufferings in Mexico had deranged him. Father Belanstegin will be arraigned before Magistrate Levy in the Tombs Court later and remanded to Bellevue Hospital for ten days for observation as to

PROOF OF KING'S DECEIT IN POSSESSION OF ALLIES

Despatches From Rome Indicate That the Greek King May be Arrested and Taken to France

ROME, Jan. 29.—(Special.)—The allies, who are practically preventing navigation of Greek shipping, and thus have stopped Austro-German submarine warfare in the Mediterranean, have secured convincing evidence to the effect that the Greet King has favored in every possible way the operation of Austrian and German submarines, which were based at Corfu prior to the French occupation, and still are based at other Greek islands.

Submarines are also said to be based on the seaside of Constantine's villa in Athens, where gasoline is sequestered. All of this is part of the evidence in the allies' hands, showing the Hellenic ruler's complicity with the central powers. Undoubtedly this evidence will be sensationally divulged at the opportune moment, and it is bound to have the climax in the Greek situation looked for in the immediate future.

The neutral diplomat who to-day foreshadowed an invountary trip by King Constantine to France added that he had reason to believe that the exile of the Montenegrin King and his family was not self-chosen, but had been decided upon by the allies because of Austrian threats to have King Nicholas executed.

FATAL ACCIDENT NEAR DESERONTO STATION

A deaf and dumb man named Kimmerley was almost instantly killed on the C. N. R. railway, near Deseronto, shortly after noon today. The victim, it appears, was walking on the track and had no knowledge of the approaching westbound train until struck by the engine, death resulting almost instantly. The body was removed to the Deseronto station, where it was subsequently viewed by the jury empanelled on the case. The unfortunate man had for some time been a resident of Deseronto, where he was well and favorably known.

KAISER "GIVES" BULGARS BOOTY WON IN SERBIA

"Generous" Donation Makes Great Impression, Says Former Minister

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Emperor William has presented to the Bulgarians all war materials captured by German troops in Serbia, according to an interview with the former Bulgarian Minister to Italy, M. Rizow, printed in The Dusseldorf General Anzeiger.

M. Rizow told the interviewer that the booty was "very great, comprising more than 30 cannon, numberless machine guns, tens of thousands of rifles, quantities of ammunitions, 172 baggage and hospital wagons, and sanitary material.

"The booty is worth probably thirty to forty million marks," the diplomat added, "and the generous gift has made a great impression on us."

HAS FOUR SONS IN KHAKI

CORNWALL, Jan. 28.—James Mattice, of Osnabruck Centre, has four sons at present at the front or enlisted in overseas battalions, as follows: John Mattice, enlisted with a western regiment; Clarence Mattice in Bermuda, with the 38th Battalion; Walter Mattice, in Alexandria, taking N.C.O. course for the 154th battalion; Sergt. Wilfred Mattice, 154th Cornwall.

HELD TOBACCO SHOWER

CORNWALL Jan. 28.—In response to a request for smokes from Major S. M. Gray, of Cornwall, now at the front with the 21st Battalion, the Daughters of the Empire held a showers today. A veritable avalanche of tobacco was received at the Soldiers' club rooms, and in addition to the donations in kind, the sum of $130 was realized with which to purchase more smokes.

Quitting France and Belgium Within Two Months?.

GREAT VICTORY FOR RUSSIA

London Hears Erzerum is Wrested From Turks

PARIS, Jan. 28.—Among the inhabitants of invaded districts recently repatriated via Switzerland is a French business woman from Lille, who says "The last few months have been a positive nightmare. The population is confident, but suffers greatly. It gets no rations from the Germans, and is only saved from starvation by American relief.

"German officers quartered in my house declared there were no need for me to go, because they themselves would have left France and Belgium before two months had elapsed, as they could not hold their extensive line any longer. The German soldiers were in a state of abject misery. Their clothes were in rags, they had no shoes and they had meat to eat only once weekly.

"But worst of all was the plight of the horses. Their condition was pitiable. Instead of fodder, they got chopped straw mixed with sugar, but the latter the men themselves stole."

$2,302,829 For Patriotic Fund

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—Generous Toronto and York county, small and large givers and contributors from the United States contributed $2,302,829 to the "on to victory" campaign of the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund after a four days' whirlwind campaign, which was brought to a glorious close last night. The victory was a notable one. It was not only pleasing to the volunteer workers who gave up their time and labor to gather in the money, but also to the citizens, whose generosity is told in the result attained for a most worthy cause. After the fund closed last night the "trench workers" assembled in the banquet room of the old McConkey building, the headquarters of the campaign, to hear the result of their strenuous efforts.

HEAVY STORM IN THE WEST

Canadian Press Special.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—At least sixty lives have been lost in the storm which has ranged over the entire Pacific coast since early Thursday. Fully fifty have perished in the bursting of the California Mountain Water Company's dam in the Otay Valley, south of San Diego. Many more are missing.

In Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho there is extreme cold and snow, and railway traffic is demoralized. The storm is now moving eastward and more favorable conditions for the coast are predicted.

WIFE MURDER AND SUICIDE

WOODSTOCK, N.B., Jan. 29.—Special!—A case of wife murder and suicide is reported from Woodlawn, a Carleton county settlement near the United States border. William Wilson, aged 56, a well-to-do farmer, killed his wife with an axe and then ended his own life by hanging. He was in poor health and had been despondent of late.

MORE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Erzerum, the principal city in Turkish Armenia, well fortified on modern lines, is reported to have fallen into the hands of the Russians. Official confirmation of the report is lacking. The report is, however, not doubted here in view of the steady headway made by the Russians since they launched their campaign into the interior of Armenia.

The capture of Erzerum, if confirmed, means the greatest Russian victory in Asia Minor since the outbreak of the war, overshadowing in importance the defeat of the Turks at Sari Kamish, a year ago. It is expected to have a strong moral and military effect on the operations in Mesopotamia and Persia.

The Athens' correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs to-night: "It is stated in reliable quarters that Persia is about to join the Allies officially."

TURKISH TROOPS ORDERED TO THE GREEK FRONTIER

Need of Reinforcements Said to Have Dolayed Attack on Salonica

PARIS, Jan. 29.—(Special.)—The fifth Turkish army that had been operating against the Entente forces at the Dardanelles has been ordered to the Greek frontier, according to news in diplomatic circles, says a despatch to the Temps to-day from Bucharest.

L'Universal says it has learned that Emperor William paid his visit to Nish recently with the object of discussing there with the Bulgarian and Austrian leaders a general attack on Salonica. The details of the plan were discussed, and a decision reached to begin the offensive soon, according to the newspaper.

Mr. Burrell Gets After Mr. Carvell

A Verbal Flogging For Liberal Critic in the Commons by Minister Of Agriculture

CHARGES WHICH RECOIL

Bourassa and Lavergne Denounced By Dr. Edwards as Men With Calloused Hearts and Blackened Blood

OTTAWA, January 28.—The House of Commons yesterday witnessed the verbal flogging of a member. It was administered by the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Martin Burrell, and the man who suffered under it was Frank B. Carvell, Liberal member for Carleton, N.B., a man whose attempts by terrorizing the Government to render impossible the co-operation of the two parties, have darkened the records of Parliament ever since the war began. The punishment meted out to this man to-day was merciless and overwhelming.

It was this member who out-Heroded Hon. Wm. Pugsley in the recklessness of his attacks upon the work of the Shell Committee. It was he who charged the Minister of Agriculture with permitting the manipulation of hay contracts in the province of New Brunswick, and it was this charge which recoiled to-day with blasting effect upon the man who made it.

Mr. Burrell did two things. He proved from the departmental records that Mr. Carvell's charge that inferior rejected hay had, through manipulation, been accepted by Government inspectors and paid for at a high price, was contrary to the facts. He proved, again from departmental records, that Mr. Carvell had himself been guilty of one of the offences charged against the department, that of holding down the price paid for lose hay to the farmer. This had taken place in 1902 when the present member for Carleton, then the secretary-treasurer of the New Brunswick Hay Company, which was supplying hay for the troops, had established a virtual combine under which subcontractors were forbidden under pain of penalties provided in a hard and fast contract, to pay the farmers more than eight dollars a ton for their hay. The penalty was described in this remarkable contract as "punishment."

"This," said Mr. Burrell, "is the patriot who has charged me with bleeding the farmer."

The Carleton member, after a number of efforts to interrupt, efforts which were suppressed by an indignant House, sat silent in his seat, a picture of suppressed fury.

In contrast to the attitude of the Liberal Government, which refused even after the close of the South African war to permit the investigation of hay purchases for the Imperial Government, Hon. Mr. Burrell announced his personal willingness to produce all records relating to all such transactions of the conclusion of the present conflict.

Other speakers in the debate to-day were Mr. Emmanuel Devlin of Wright; Dr. J. W. Edwards, of Frontenac; and Mr. W. F. Carroll, of Cape Breton.

Dr. Edwards' speech was featured by a vigorous condemnation of the conduct of Mr. Henri Bourassa and Col. Armand Lavergne in their efforts to prevent Canada's participation in the war, and stated that it was impossible to appeal "to the calloused hearts or stir the blackened blood of Bourassa and Lavergne." He declared that it was disgracing the King's uniform that Lavergne was permited to use it.

The debate on the address will now probably last into the middle of next week.

IMMEDIATE ADVANCE ON SUEZ CANAL

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Daily Mail's correspondent who made a recent trip through the Balkans, and who owing to his dark complexion, the assumption of Turkish costume, and ability as a linguist, was able to talk with all classes without exciting suspicion, says all the Turkish as well as German sentiment is for an immediate advance on the Suez Canal.

Heavy Fighting On West Front

French Recapture Crater in Neuville Region

FOE ALSO SUCCEEDS

Gains a Footing in Some Parts of Advanced French Trenches In Artois District

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The Germans have begun a great drive in Artois. Following artillery preparation lasting forty-eight hours, four successive attacks were launched to-day at different parts of the French front. They gained a footing in advanced French trenches at one point. The other attacks were repulsed, according to the Paris official report.

Still another attack against the British salient northeast of Loos resulted in a complete check for the Germans, says the British Headquarters report.

The scene of the attacks was the stretch of line from Loos to Arras, the cockpit of the most terrific fighting in previous tests of strength on the west front.

Heavy German losses are claimed by the French in actions which preceded the great drive. In one crater formed by a mine exploded to wreck the French advanced trenches near Arras 150 German bodies were counted.

The Franco-Belgian artillery violently shelled the German positions in the dunes along the Belgian coast, while British monitors shelled the Westende district.

ALL HIS SONS HAVE DONNED THE KHAKI

Mr. John Kane Sends His Boys to Do Their 'Bit'—Two Have Commissions and One a Private

KINGSTON, Jan. 28.—In the family of Mr. John E. Kane, 81 Earl street, there are three sons and all of them have joined the colors. This is an enviable record and one that is hard to equal in this city. The oldest son, Dr. John Kane, will go to England with the Ontario Hospital. He is a graduate of Queen's University of the class of 1914 and has been in New York in the large hospitals since his graduation. As a doctor he is a fully qualified man.

The second son, Capt. Carl. J. Kane, adjutant, 146th Battalion, has proven his worth as a soldier and is beloved by all his men. He is a former member of the Standard staff. The third son, Pte. Vincent Kane, is in the ranks of Queen's Stationary Hospital. He was an employee in the offices of the Canadian Locomotive Company and was on Wednesday night presented with a fine wrist watch by his former fellow employees. The three boys will go overseas to do their "bit" for the cause.

Whitby Local Option Goes Wet

Drys Lose Three Votes and Wets Gain Two on the Recount

WHITBY, Jan. 29.—Judge McGillivray made a recount this morning of the ballots cast in the recent vote on the local option by-law. By the recount supporters of the by-law lost three votes and the antis gained two votes. Three ballots marked against local option in polling subdivision No. 1, had by error been counted for the bylaw, which made a loss for the supporters and a gain for the antis. In division No. 3 a ballot previously counted for the bylaw was rejected by the Judge, making the total loss of four ballots. A gain of one was made for the bylaw in Ward Two, with a corresponding loss to the antis. The net gain for the wets was therefore two, and the net loss for the drys, three. The vote thus stands: For the bylaw, 328; against, 325, 3 4-5 votes less than sixty per cent. of the total Ten more ballots marked for would be necessary to win. James Haverson, K.C., represented the license-holders. W. E. N. Sinclair appeared for the Local Option Committee.

The County Council Makes the Above Donation for Patriotic Purposes---80th and 155th Battalions to Receive One Thousand Each.

Friday, Jan. 28.

Afternoon Session

Col. Ketcheson, Commanding Officer of the 80th Battalion, addressed the Council, asking for more assistance for that Battalion. It was necessary to have more money for the 80th Battalion, which had been recruited in the district. He had the honor for some time of being the colonel of the 49th Regiment of Hastings County, and the greater portion of the officers had enlisted. He had 1,100 men under his command, and they were a creditable lot of men. There were in Belleville 650 men of the Battalion, and the expenses were great. He was a farmer of Hastings County and was willing to pay what ever extra taxes were necessary to be paid. He was proud of the 80th Battalion as the men were a fine body of men. The County Council had given him $1,000 for the 80th Battalion and he would ask for $1,500 additional to meet the necessary expenses.

Capt. Watson said the extras supplied to the men cost the battalion about $400 a month. The Government provided certain food, but the men needed a few extras and they had to be provided out of the regimental funds. There were other necessary expenses incurred which the Government did not provide for.

On motion the report was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

A motion prevailed that a bridge which had been taken down in Rawdon Township be not sold, but be left where it is stored until the county needs it.

A motion was carried that the superintendent and chairman of roads inspect two bridges on the boundary between Monteagle and Carlow Townships and to report to the Council as to their condition and to take action if necessary.

Moved by Mr. Jordison, seconded by Mr. Green that in view of the very inefficient train service on the Trenton to Maynooth branch of the Central Ontario Railway the clerk be and is

He was born in Killree, Ireland, in 1829, and came to this country in 1849. He arrived in Belleville in 1850 and resided here ever since. He was a valuable and trusted employee of the Rathbun Co. for over fifty years, and was one of the best estimators of timber limits in the Dominion. He retired from business about ten years ago. The numerous floral and spiritual offerings attested to the esteem in which he was held. He leaves to mourn his loss three daughters, namely, Mrs. J. J. Sullivan, of Chicago; Mrs. J. R. Collins, of this city; Mrs. W. J. McCoy, of Ottawa, all of whom were at his bedside when he passed away. He also leaves thirteen grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Lt. W. E. BATTALION ORDERS

EXTRACT FROM "DIVISIONAL ORDERS."

Absentees without leave C.E.F.

The following copy of Order-in-Council P. C. No. 3,057 dated 6th January 1916 is published for general information:

...... H. Q. 652—1—34 ....

Where as much difficulty in the administration of the Canadian Over. Expeditionary Force in Canada and numerous failures of justice have arisen through the fact that in very many cases absentees from that force do not give themselves up or are not apprehended until after their respective units have embarked for overseas service. And whereas then the witnesses to the attestation, absence, etc., having also gone, it is difficult if not impossible to produce evidence sufficient to secure the offenders' conviction by Court-Martial.

"Therefore His Royal Highness the Governor-General-in-Council, under and in virtue of the authority of providing a more easy and ready means of bringing offenders to punishment, is pleased to make and do hereby make the following orders and regulations, namely:—

Every man of the Active Militia of Canada who without leave of his commanding officer, absents himself from his corps while it is on Active service and every soldier of the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force who absents himself from his unit without the leave of his commanding officer is guilty of an offence under the criminal code and on summary conviction under the provisions of part 15 of that code, is liable to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two years.

Production of an attestation paper purporting to be signed by the accused and attested by a Justice of the Peace or by an officer appointed to command a battalion or other similar units of the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Force and purporting to be an engagement by the accused to serve in the corps or the unit from which he is charged with being absent shall be sufficient proof that the accused was duly enlisted into such corps or unit; and evidence that the accused was in Canada at the time of his surrender or apprehension and a written statement purporting to be signed by the Adjutant-General of Militia, or by an assistant Adjutant-General, that the unit to which the accused was posted or belonged has departed from Canada for overseas service shall be prima facie proof that the accused is an absentee without leave from such corps or unit and shall be sufficient to cast upon the accused the onus of proving his absence from the corps or unit was not illegal.

Nothing herein shall in any way limit or affect the power of the Military authorities to proceed against rules an absentee without leave according to the rules of Military law, but an accused person shall not be liable to be tried both by a "Military Tribunal" and by a civil court, but may be tried by either of them as may be prescribed.

The military pay and allowances of everyone who has been convicted of absence without leave from his corps or from the unit to which he belongs, shall be held liable to be stopped to make good any loss or damage or destruction done or permitted by him, to any arms, ammunition, equipment, clothing, instruments, or regimental necessaries, the value of which the Minister of Militia and Defence has directed him to pay."

Prevention of Espionage

Militia order No. 515 of the 29th November 1915, is hereby promulgated for the information of all concerned:—

It is strictly forbidden to disclose to unauthorized persons any information with respect to the movements, numbers, description, condition or disposition of any of the forces, ships or war materials of his Majesty or any of his Majesty's Allies or with respect to the plans or conduct of any naval or military operations by any such forces or ships or with respect to any works or measures undertaken for or connected with or intended for the fortification or defence of any place or any information of such a nautre as is calculated to be or might be directly or indirectly useful to the enemy.

Commanding officers are directed to promulgate the foregoing instructions and to see that they are fully explained to all ranks on parade by officers commanding squadrons, batteries and companies and other units.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once; Go to J. S. McKeown's drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a 2-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

OBITUARY

The Passing of Mrs. James W. Anderson Of Ameliasburg

It was with feelings of the deepest regret and sorrow, the many friends of Mrs. (Capt.) J. W. Anderson learned of her death, which took place at her home in Ameliasburg, on Monday January the 25th, 1916, after an illness of upwards of two years. The deceased, whose maiden name was Theadocia Brickman, was the eldest daughter of the late Peter Brickman, of Ameliasburg. She was born in the Township , July 21st, 1840, and was in the 76th year of her age at the time of her death. On December 30th, 1857, she married Jas. W. Anderson, who predeceased her about two years ago.

The result of their marriage was a family of four children, two of whom W. E. and H. C. at home, are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate and indulgent mother. The other two members of the family, Fred and Mary having passed away some years ago. This break in the family circle was a severe loss to the mother, from which she never fully recovered. The late Mrs. Anderson in addition to her two surviving sons, leaves three sisters and two brothers, who keenly feel the loss they have sustained. Mrs. R. D. Conger, and Mrs. W. A. Clarke, of Toronto, Mrs. L. F. Sprague, Mountain View, P. Ed Co, and Wm. W. Brickman, of Trenton, and Edwin A. Brickman, of Phillips, Alberta. At an early age the deceased was converted, and has for over 60 years continued a faithful and devoted member of the Methodist church. It can truly be said of Mrs. Anderson, she lived an unselfish life, and nothing gave her more pleasure than to make sacrifices for her family and friends. She always met the wants of the needy with a generous hand, in fact her hospitality was general and nothing was omitted which would in the least degree contribute to the comfort or happiness of those about her. Her own comfort and pleasure was a secondary condition, she lived and labored for her family and friends. During the few weeks she was confined to her room, she bore her sickness with unquestionable patience, while her two sons omitted nothing which would in any way relieve her sufferings, or contribute to their mother's comfort. Her hope was in the future and her unwavering faith in the sacred promises of her Saviour, was a comfort and support at the last, when she peacefully slept away, to mingle in happy reunion with loved ones gone on before. The funeral service was held at her late residence on Thursday the 27th inst., conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. L. Edwards. The rain prevented many of the friends and acquaintances from attending to show their esteem and respect in which the deceased was held.

The bearers were all nephews of the deceased being, J. F. and A. W. Anderson, G. W. and A. H. Anderson, Jas. R. and Ridley Anderson. The interment took place in the family plot, Albury cemetery.

FORCED ACID IN BABY S MOUTH

Four Week Old Child is Victim of Terrible Crime in New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Four weeks old Jules Clements died to-day from the effects of a quantity of acid forced down his throat by an unidentified man while the child was sitting in a gocart outside of a candy shop in the Bronx yesterday.

Mrs. Charles Clements, the boy's mother, had stepped into the shop, leaving her four year old daughter, Leona, to watch Jules. When the mother rushed to the street in response to the girl's screams she found that the baby's mouth, chin and neck had been burned by a strong acid and that the child was crying. "A man did it," said Leona. "He gave baby something."

Mrs. Clements later recalled that she saw a sallow skinned man, apparently about forty-five years old, walking away from the go-cart, but at the time she was too excited to carefully not the man's appearance.

The police have been unable to obtain a clue to the identity of the child poisoner and they are also at a loss for the motive for the crime.

FIRE DRIVES GIRLS FROM INDUSTRIAL REFUGE

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—General alarm sounded shortly after 8 o'clock last night called the attention of the whole fire department to a fire which broke out in the Industrial Refuge for Girls at 43 Belmont. Some ninety-two girls, inmates of the place, were quietly marched out on the lawn, where where they remained until the firemen extinguished the fire.

It was a lively blaze while it lasted, starting in the furnace room, the flames making their way up to the living-rooms of two of the matrons, near the main entrance. The fire was put out in less than half an hour. The loss is less than a thousand dollars, chiefly to clothing and personal effects of the matrons.

Floods in Galt As River Rises

Ice Breaks up Backing Water Into Streets and Cellars

GALT, Ont., Jan. 28.—As a result of the mild weather, the ice on the Grand river here broke up during the night and the water rose several feet. It was about nine o'clock this morning when the ice reached Galt, and in less than half an hour cellars were flooded and the basements of factories along the river filled. The bridges backed the water up and part of Water street street was inundated to a depth of one to three feet. Backing up in the sewers, the water overflowed a block from the river. People in the houses surrounded by the water were taken out by the fire department and by draymen. All three municipal bridges were damaged, that at Main street faring worst. The flooring was torn up on one side. The basement wall of the Schlatbaum Block was partly torn away. Manufacturers who had stock in their basements will suffer to a considerable exent. The damage will run into thousands of dollars.

Why Dr. Jackson Objects to Bran-Gems.

They are as unbalanced as white flour. They have little nutrition. They irritate and cause catarrh of the bowels, a worse condition than the constipation they are intended to relieve. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a bran—containing food, but it also contains deodorized flaxseed, whose soothing properties counteract the irritant effects of the bran. It makes delicious porridge, pan cakes, gems, cakes, and bread. It nourishes better than meat. It prevents indigestion and positively relieves constipation or "money black" Ask your doctor. TOOK FIVE ENGINES TO PULL THE TRAIN

FORT WILLIAM, Jan 28.—Not for seventeen years has Fort William been snowbound to the extent it is now. Over four feet of snow has fallen since Christmas and the big storm of yesterday and last night has demoralized all street railway and steam railroads.

The streets of the city are like canyons, huge piles of snow as high as the head of a tall man being piled on each side. C. P. R. train No. 2 from Winnipeg for Toronto, arrived at 10 o'clock this morning twelve hours late and hauled by five engines. Residents of houses on the outskirts of the city had to dig tunnels through the snow to get out this morning. The snow had drifted up to the eves of some of the cottages.

Journeyed From Cuba To Enlist

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—Dr. "Dick" Grant, the former University of Toronto and Harvard athlete, arrived in town last night to enlist in the Sportsmen's Battalion for overseas service. He came from Cuba, where he is the proprietor of a grape fruit plantation.

For fifteen years the mile record established by "Dick" Grant at Harvard withstood the assaults of the best track men developed at that institution. After quitting Harvard Dr. Grant went to the University of Minnesota, where he coached the track and field teams. More than twenty years ago Grant was a student at the University of Toronto. He and his brother Alex were prominent athletes in the Blue and White at that time.

LEAVES WIFE AND FOURTEEN CHILDREN TO FIGHT HUNS

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 29.—Few recruits must cut so many ties when they leave for overseas duty as will Pte. Frederick Roberts, who has joined the 145th Battalion in Moncton.

Roberts has a wife and fourteen children to leave behind him, and his chief reason for enlisting is novel. He admits that his family is large, and he says that the more there are of them the more reason he has for going overseas to defend them.

Roberts leaves a good job to get into uniform. He is a woods-foreman, earning large pay, and the financial sacrifice counts with a family of that size. He has the physique of a fine soldier, and his experience in handling gangs of men has made him a welcome addition to the battalion.

Made Wife Beg Then Beat Her

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—A sad case of neglect and persecution was brought to light this morning when Alexander Racicot was brought before Judge St. Cyr accused of having forced his wife to beg in the streets during the past five years, and also thrashing her whenever she would refuse to hand over all her pennies to him. For beating his wife Racicot was condemned to two months in jail, and for refusing to provide for his family he was given a term of four months in jail.

Read it in the Faces of the People You Meet

The Irritability, the Worry, the Gloom, the Despair of Nerve and Brain Troubles. The Blood is Watery, the Nerves Are Starved.

This is the age of nervous troubles, of brain fag, of heart failure, of paralysis and bodily weakness. You can read it in the faces of the people you meet.

The business man, the factory hand, the professional man, the woman in the home, all find their nervous systems giving way before the terrible strain of modern life and keen competition. Nervous force is consumed at a terrible rate, and the blood which must make good this loss becomes thin and watery, lacking in quality as well as quantity.

The whole secret of preserving health and curing disease in all such cases is to supply an abundance of rich, red blood. Stimulants may drive the heart at a more rapid pace for a time, but the breakdown will come with greater force.

The blood demands nourishment, the nerves cry for sustenance. They call for just such help as is supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great blood builder and nerve restorative.

In many, many thousands of cases of this kind Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proven exactly what was needed. In using it you are not experimenting, but are supplying to the system the very ingredients from which Nature reconstructs the wasted nervous system. For this reason its cures are both thorough and lasting.

'This is the 542nd day that the British Empire has been at war with Germany

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL.

The Military Service Bill, which has been attacked from many sides because of the failure of its opponents to grasp the groundwork of its purpose, not to say absolute need, may now be said to have become law. Assurance from high authority that the measure was in no way designed or intended to create "a monster in the form of a military machine which would grab all coming within its scope," was hardly necessary. The bill, as it now stands is the mildest form of compulsion for military service that any conscriptionist could imagine. It simply calls up for examination and attestation a small part of the young unmarried population of the country; it inquires into their reasons for not joining the army, makes allowances for conscientious objection, family responsibilities, and the nature of a man's occupation, and only after these amongst other conditions are observed does it make the citizen liable for service.

There could hardly have been, under such circumstances, much criticism of the measure. With three millions or more of the manhood of the country engaged in the war and hardly a family in the British Isles unaffected thereby, the fact that 300,000 or 400,000 single men demanded their own freedom no matter what happened to British freedom, would not receive much consideration from the sovereign people.

A general election on compulsion, it now appears, was quite unnecessary. The British people are intent only upon victory: they do not care greatly about the means.

FRANCHISE FOR WOMEN.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley, with an evident view to recuperating his waning popularity and political influence, has, it is said, under consideration the task of championing the cause of feminine franchise throughout the Dominion. Already he has given notice of a resolution in the House of Commons declaring that wherever a Provincial Legislature allows women to vote in Provincial elections the Federal Government shall allow them the same right in Federal elections. In other words, the resolution provides that the Provincial lists shall continue to be the basis of the Federal lists, even if women are included in the Provincial lists, as seems likely to be done in the cases of Manitoba and Alberta.

Truly the move is magnanimous and worthy only the mind of Dr. Pugsley's unequalled fertility. But we fear the effort will be fraught with many an obstacle, and ere carried to a successful issue will find the great hearted statesman in a condition of "nerves." Let us hope the end will be satisfying if it will bring him increased prominence in the world of politics. At least, when he is engaged in this effort he is doing nothing worse.

NOT SOON BUT EVENTUALLY

General Joffre has no illusions as to the length of the war. "If only the civilians will hold firm," he told a railwaymen's deputation a day or two ago, "that is the essential thing. If Frenchmen keep steady we shall have victory not immediately or even soon, but eventually."

The words are worth remembering by every Briton as well as by every Frenchman. This war is lengthening out beyond our expectations. Much sacrifice has yet to be endured by all the allied nations but it is the quality of that endurance that will win in the end. The conflict is a conflict of nations as well as of armies; it will be won by the nations that know best how to suffer, to wait and to do.

General Joffre is quietly confident. Lord Kitchener has no doubts about the outcome. The Allied armies dream never of defeat. It is for the people behind the armies to emulate their confidence.

GETTING AFTER THE SHARKS

Under the title of "More Lies to be Nailed," the Montreal Daily Star handles without gloves the tactics of certain sharks across the border who for purposes of personal aggrandizement are seeking to hedge the entrance into this country of many who desire to better their condition. While considered a belligerent country, the standard of life in Canada is far above the average citizen of the United States, the privileges greater, the social relations more cordial and the staunch, considerate backing by the Federal Government far superior to that of our neighbors. Would-be citizens of high repute are welcomed to the fair Dominion, and the hand of fair treatment is extended to all. It is refreshing to note the energy with which The Star takes up the question. It says:—

The Minister of the Interior has done well to summon a conference at Chicago of all Canadian immigration agents at present on duty in the United States. His action has been inspired by the latest of a fantastic crop of rumors concerning conditions in Canada, sent broad cast through the United States, and which unless promptly contradicted will do us much harm by restricting the flow of settlers from south of the boundary into the farm lands of the western provinces. The yarn in question is to the effect that the Federal Government contemplates putting a "war tax" of five dollars per quarter section on Dominion lands. Tacked on to this was the usual rider that conscription is about to be enacted in Canada.

Doctor Roche proposes to meet our immigration agents to talk things over, and when he is there it is to be hoped he will make a speech or publish a statement in which war conditions in this country will be accurately described. That this and other absurd canards have already had a certain effect has been shown in more ways than one. There was, for instance, a considerable falling off in the number of hunters from the United States who came north to the Maritime Provinces for the shooting this year. Americans who come to Canada know, of course, just how little the traveller is affected by the fact that this is a belligerent country as do those who read Canadian newspapers. Unfortunately these are the small minority of our neighbors. If Doctor Roche makes things quite clear when in Chicago his words will receive wide publicity and should do much good.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, Jan. 29, 1868

Alexander M. Sullivan, the editor of the Dublin Nation, has been arrested for printing seditious articles in his paper. He is a well-known Fenian.

The Legislature of Quebec voted $4,000 in aid of the Nova Scotia fishermen.

A meeting of the Town Council, held last evening, was adjourned till Friday night. The following members were present: Messrs. Sutherland, Diamond, Kennedy, Jones, Henderson, Watters, Tannahill, Holden, Foster, Brown, Robertson.

Current Comment

A news despatch says that the Kaiser hasn't smiled for a year. He's had no reason to smile, and there has been less smiling in the world in the past year than ever before.

Once he wanted a "place in the sun,"
And he gleefully toasted "The Day";
But the Day and the Sun.
Are now toasting the Hun,
And he's steadily dwindling away.
—From "John Bull."

A leader of Toronto society announces that for the duration of the war nothing but tea and bread and butter will be served at her "five o'clocks." And about a week from now we may get a despatch from Germany—via Sayville—describing the famine conditions prevailing in Canada.—Montreal Star.

It has been noticeable throughout the war that when the Germans are planning a new outbreak of frightfulness, they always precede the frightfulness by accusing their enemies of atrocities. At the present time they are working up another spasm of hate over their own version of the Baralong affair. What new kind of crime is there left for them to commit?—Montreal Herald.

The Northcliffe Daily Mail lays down a peculiarly immoral doctrine in its criticism of Sir Edward Grey: "Wars are won by men who refuse to be bound by judicial niceties—who are determined to stick at nothing in order to win." Was not this the spirit of Prussianism which tore up the "scrap of paper"?—Toronto Globe. Very true; but consider what Sir Edward is contending with in the present war.

The spectacle of the times is the exposure of the shell business by the Ottawa Citizen, a Conservative paper, and the defence of it by the Ottawa Free Press, which is a Liberal paper. The thing is inexplicable.—Kingston Whig. An equally interesting spectacle is the avidity with which the average Liberal paper grasps an opportunity to denounce that which it cannot personally use to profit.

Breather of hope upon the face that grieves,
Redd'ner of paleness, mocker at despair,
Playground of happy wings that upward fare,
Lover of violets and sodden leaves,
Of roses running to the cottage eaves,
And hay-fields sweet'ning in the sunny glare,
Companion of the heart that knows no care,
And of the budding boughs and bursting sheaves;
Though armed with weapons of the icy North,

PAINFUL SWOLLEN VEINS
Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler of Federal, Kansas writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact one had broken), for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks and, to quote from her letter, "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since.'

Absorbine, Jr., is an antiseptic liniment—healing, cooling, and soothing. Safe and pleasant to use. $1.00 and $2.00 at your druggist's or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c. in stamps. W. F. Young, P.D.F. 457 Lymans Bldg. Montreal, Can.

Canadians Fortify The Suez Canal

Trenches and Rows of Forts Parallel Waterway, Berlin Reports

BERLIN, Jan. 28—A despatch from Naples to The Cologne Gazette transmits a description of the extensive fortifications and other works along the Suez Canal as told by travellers arriving at the Italian port aboard the steamship Montebello from Bombay.

The work of constructing the fortifications is said to be in the hands of British, Indians and Canadians. Trenches and several rows of forts parallel with the canal and a road is being built from Suez toward Ismailia, an Egyptian town equi-distant from the Red Sea and the Mediterranean Sea.

The Red Sea is being patrolled by torpedo boats with the latest quick-firing artillery. The travellers say that precautions are being taken so that if the British troops are defeated on one bank of the Nile they will be enabled to concentrate and strengthen themselves on the other bank.

Three Germans Were Removed

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Details of the removal of three German passengers from the steamship Zacapa at Kingston on the outward voyage were told to-day when the steamer returned to this port. Three British officers boarded the Zacapa and after examining the passports of all passengers and questioning the crew, ordered Mr. and Mrs. Herman and J. Davids ashore. The two men were sent to a detention camp while the woman was permitted to remain at Kingston.

The British officers allowed Mrs. Schulzer, the stewardess on the Zacapa, to remain on board as she had taken out her first United States citizenship papers.

FARM AND DAIRY

LADY SHAUGHNESSY'S DINNER STORY.

I wonder if Lady Shaughnessy will mind very much if I tell a story which though it is at Her Ladyship's expense, is thoroughly relished by her. The dinner guests had all arrived at the Shaughnessy residence, in perfect time, as of course a dinner invitation demands. But they waited and waited wondering more and more as the minutes passed, a very natural feeling of uneasiness arose. Lady Shaughnessy herself left the room to see what was wrong. She stopped aghast in the hallway when she heard the voice of her cook at the telephone. "Hello, hello, is that ——'s shop?" she was asking, then, "Well, it's Lady Shaughnessy speaking. Where the h——'s them potatoes?"—Beck's Weekly.

A LUCKY DECISION.

One day a Montreal girl decided she would take the Government course and become a nurse, and qualify for her Lieutenancy. So she went down to Halifax when she was "off a case," and passed her examinations. That was in June, 1914. Who in Canada ever dreamed of war then But war broke out in a month's time and she was immediately called upon for war service. She went to England in the early autumn and has been on active service ever since. Then one day she received a sudden call, a very special call. Her patient was none other than her King, His Majesty, King George. So you know of course at once that the lucky nurse was Miss Vivienne Tremaine. Now she is rather wondering just what she will do after the war. Her friends say that her fortune is made. She could settle in New York and set her own prices. For name me the New York multi-millionaire who wouldn't want the King of England's nurse to care for him in his sickness.

Begins to look as if the groundhog might be drowned and never get a chance to see the outside world again.

Two developments which most of us devoutly desire, the end of the war and the end of the grippe epidemic.

Some Liberals Court Election

One Section of the Party Would Have an Appeal to the Country

FORCING GOVERNMENT

Province of Quebec the Reason For The Apparent Desire For a General Election

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—Despite the promise of political harmony contained in the speeches of Sir William Laurier and Mr. Michael Clark at the outset of the debate on the address, there are indications that a determined attempt is being made by a section of the Opposition, if not by the Opposition as a whole, to bring about a general election. Tactics which have been pursued by the Opposition since the opening of the session show either a decision to force the Government to the country or an extraordinary condition of disunion in the party itself. The speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the member for Red Deer, and Hon. Frank Oliver were moderate in tone and indicated no intention not to attack, but to offer such reasonable criticism as might assist the Government in carrying on the business of the country under war conditions.

That intention has not been apparent in the speeches of such Liberals as Hon. William Pugsley, E. M. MacDonald and Mr. Carvell, which abounded in wild assertions involving charges against the Government, the Shell Committee and the Davidson commission, although the report of Sir Charles Davidson has not been presented to the House and his investigation has not been concluded. To what extent these attacks have the countenance and endorsation of the official leader of the Opposition is not known, but the history of the last ten days has shown that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is either in accord with the conduct of his maritime lieutenants or is unable to restrain them.

The purpose of the attacks made by Messrs. Pugsley, Carvell and MacDonald has been obviously to weaken the confidence of the country in the Government and two weeks have been consumed in pursuit of this object. It is well known that the central Liberal organization at Ottawa, which is under the direct control of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has distributed tons of campaign literature during the past year. The whole trend of the Liberal conduct since the session opened has been at variance with the statement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that he "would never seek to open the gates of office with a bloody key."

The apparent Liberal desire to bring about an election is said to be based upon the belief that the province of Quebec can be relied upon to rally to the support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and that the agitation in that province with regard to the bilingual schools in Ontario can be used effectively against the Government. It is believed also that the Liberals rely strongly upon the strength of the foreign vote in the western province and expect that large numbers of men in the expeditionary force in Great Britain and France will be unable to poll their votes under the Soldier's Votes Act of last session, an eventuality which Opposition members believe would be of great advantage to the Liberal cause should a general election be brought about.

UNIFORMITY LACKING

There seems to be too much lack of uniformity in the different classes of farm products marketed; at least, the purchaser is often able to keep the price down because the goods are not uniform in quality. This is one feature in which our producers could aid in strengthening the demand, and certainly increase prices on many commodities sold. The buyer will pay a premium, every time, for the high-quality product. If fruit is being sold, it should be carefully graded, and that of a certain grade should be as nearly identical, from one end of the country to the other, as it is possible to get it, and, every time, it would pay to keep the quality for grade high. In selling eggs from the farm, grading pays. If the eggs are carefully elected according to size and color and sold in this manner, the total sum of money received for them in one year will be higher than if they were all thrown in indiscriminately without attention being paid to these matters. It has been amply proven that grading cream is the only sure way of making the best butter. Denmark has proven that uniformity in the bacon hog pays, for by it the Danes captured the British market, and their bacon sold at a premium on that market. If the farmer has a carload of potatoes to sell, or if a number of neighbors wish to club together and ship a carload or more tubers, the smaller price must always be taken if the carload is made up of several varieties and is not uniform in size, color and quality. Even the breeder of pure-bred stock makes a better name for his herd if the calves in that herd each year show uniformity in all his products, from the grain which he grows to the finished articles which he sells.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

But Mr. Paul Duhardt was smiling at her as he read her thoughts. She could not run away. She could only crouch back in her seat. It required all her strength not to shriek aloud.

Duhardt once again balanced himself on the edge of the table.

"Nerves rather shaky this morning, eh! Miss Berrington."

"If you don't let me go I shall call for the police." It was a feeble threat, an expiring effort.

"Don't be silly and don't bluff," Duhardt retorted coolly. "We are in the same boat; we must pull together. You're a woman of the world. If you hadn't been I should have gone to work another way. Hang it all, I'm treating you very well. I am being generous. But if you put difficulties in the way you may force me to become greedy. .. .. Now then; you left old Vessie at the hotel?"

Miss Berrington moistened her lips. Duhardt nodded.

"He'll be walking up and down the lounge sweating from every pore of his skin until you return. Of course, he'll put up some sort of a fight; you must expect that. But, as I dare say you have already discovered, it's the really innocent man who is easily convinced of his guilt, and the honest man who is terrified of being thought dishonest."

"Sir John has done nothing which he need be in fear of. I have done nothing .. .. .. It was an accident.. .. .. Of course, if it became public property—"

She stopped, realizing that already she was on the defensive. Duhardt threw the end of his cigarette away, and drawing forward a chair planted himself exactly in front of Myra. His varnished patent-leather boots touched the toes of her suede shoes. With the yellow-stained fingers of his left hand he emphasized his words by tapping on her knee:

"Look here, my dear girl, we can't waste any more time. Let's put our cards on the table. What do you want out of Sir John?"

"Nothing. I swear it."

Duhardt gave an impatient shrug of the shoulders. "Well, I do! I've told you not to waste any more time; perhaps I ought to have said don't tell any more lies. The moment you spotted Vessie in the train at Homburg you made up your mind he should be useful to you. When you sat chatting together in his wagon-lit with the blinds pulled down I heard you tell him that you had lost money at the Casino. Has he made you an offer yet?"

"An offer? What for?"

"To recompense you for his assault—for knocking you down last night. Why, the trip from Homburg to Dover is enough in itself. But last night that little scene at the hotel fairly capped it. Perhaps you arranged it yourself. Planned exactly what would happen and gambled on it."

Myra stared at him in horror, unable to reply.

Dudhart laughed in the back of his throat. "Between us we've got enough evidence to absolutely ruin Vessie or to drive him out of the county which his family has adorned for the last three generations.

"Questions asked in Parliament; Sir John forced to resign. His eldest son gives up his commission in the Guards and his youngest son is kicked out of Eton."

Myra Berrington wrung her hands. "But he is innocent, I tell you. He did not mean to hurt me. And he kept the affair secret because—"

Duhardt chuckled. "That's just it! That's what makes the game so easy. If he were guilty—" He gave a twirl to his mustache and winked. "If he were guilty of any crime he would fight like the devil. Probably face the music and brazen it out. No, it's the innocent man or woman who always tumbles into the trap and pays for his innocence. My chance has just come. .. .. We are going to flourish, Myra!"

She rose and pushed back her chair. She understood at last exactly what Paul Duhardt wanted. She had fallen into the trap. She crossed the room, and reaching the door, held the handle firmly in one hand while she faced him.

"You think I'm going to blackmail Sir John Vessie? Then I refuse. You can do your worst. I'll go straight to Scotland Yard and interview the police and you'll be arrested."

Duhardt smothered a yawn. "Suppose I got to Scotland Yard first?"

Myra understood the covert threat in the suggestion.

"But there are other people besides the Commissioner of Police to whom I might go; Lady Vessie for instance, or Mr. Ralph Humphry, your lover."

Myra's arms dropped to her sides. Shel eaned against the door for support.

"It is remarkable how apt people are to believe evil of their friends. And love itself breeds suspicion. I don't suppose the guard of the express train from Homburg cherishes any feelings of affection for you. Or the steward who looked after the wagon-lit which Sir John occupied. The porter at the hotel or the fireman who heard the cry of 'Thief!' and the shriek for help."

Suddenly, Duhardt rose from his seat, and crossing the room put his arm around Myra, supporting her. He led her back to the armchair. Opening a cupboard, he poured some brandy into a wine glass, which he gave her to drink. He smoked a cigarette, waiting until she recovered.

"Rather a close morning. Thunder in the air," he said laconically. "Now then, shall we get to business?"

Myra Berrington covered her face with her hands. "What do you want me to do?"

Duhardt cleared his throat and walked the length of the room and back. He moved quietly and swiftly. "It's a case of you and I against Vessie, or of I alone against you, Vessie, and Mr. Humphry. I'm not sure if the latter scheme would not be the most profitable for me. But it would be complicated. Besides, I like working with a woman, and such a beautiful one."

"You said you wanted money. How much?" Myra spoke between her teeth as if she were biting off the words, as if the taste of them were gall and wormwood in her mouth.

"Money is only the means to an end. I am ambitious just as you are. I hate being idle. You want money so that you may marry the man you love, the man who worships the very ground you walk on."

Myra Berrington trembled. Her hands still covered her face. Between her long fingers tears slowly trickled.

Duhardt twirled the soaped ends of his black mustache. "You want money, too, to produce the play he has written at a West-End theatre. London has refused to realize what a really brilliant actress you are. That is bad luck, because I've seen you have got genius, my dear young woman. You know it, too, and it's making you crabbed and sour because you can't use it, can't get a chance of showing it.

"But your chance has come at last. The hour has struck. If it hadn't been for me you might have turned your back on this wonderful chance—it's my odds you would have botched it. But with me at your back, why, you've got the ball at your feet."

"How much do you want?" Her voice rose tremulously.

"I told you fifty per cent. We share and share alike. Half or whatever comes out of the Vessie gold mine."

Turning around, he fumbled in the drawer of the bureau, and taking a book, laid it on the table.

"Listen to this," he cried, dropping his voice. "Sir John Vessie's estate in Sussex is valued at £325,000. That is merely the land and houses he owns. He has got pictures and plate, and his wife has jewels worth double that amount. She has also an income of her own of about £7,000 a year.

"His income from all sources is over £25,000. And he has a controlling interest in the Hatchet Brewery Company. He makes a bit out of his racing stable, too. Just a few thousands, nothing worth mentioning, and he don't mention it either, not to the income-tax assessors. You may call it £40,000 a year. Think of the capital required to bring in that. A gold mine, I said; better than any gold mine."

He closed the book with a snap and put it back on the bureau. The expression on his face had changed, the timbre of his voice had altered. His features no longer looked cynical nor his expression sinister. But the blood hunger in the ferrety eyes was stronger than ever.

He took a watch from his pocket and looked at it. "What time does Sir John expect you at the hotel?"

Myra Berrington dropped her hands onto her lap. She rested her head wearily against the back of her chair. Her face was like parchment. Her red-brown hair made a vivid blot of color in the dingy apartment. She saw Duhardt faintly through a cloud of quivering pale-gray smoke.

"I told him half-past two."

Duhardt nodded. "Time you were going then. Better have a bit of lunch first and a small bottle of wine with it. And don't look scared. Work him your own way. Don't force things. If he still seems keen—but no, I think he's scared. You had better come down to bed-rock and talk business."

"Business!"

"Tell him you want capital for your theatre. You must keep me out of it. Makes it easier for you. But I guess he'll know I'm in the background, though he mustn't know we have ever met. I shall just hover round and keep his nerves on edge."

He stood beside her and laid his hands on her shoulders. "You need not be afraid; I shall play the game as long as you're straight with me. Mr. Humphry need know nothing; he shan't have a chance of suspecting anything. I'll keep right out of the way until things are fairly started."

TAUGHT SERBS TO FIGHT

That French troops are fighting side by side with Serbians is a reminder how the present Serbian army was in its origin, largely a French product. It was Col. Modain, a French officer lent by Napoleon III., who, in 1863, took in hand the organization of the Serbian forces. Col. Mondain remained in Serbia for six of seven years and under his tuition French drill and French uniforms—even that hideous "bonnet de police," which the French army itself rejected with scorn—were adopted by the Serbian soldiers. That the Serbs thought highly of their foreign drill master is evident from the fact that he was appointed to the double post of minister of war and commander-in-chief.

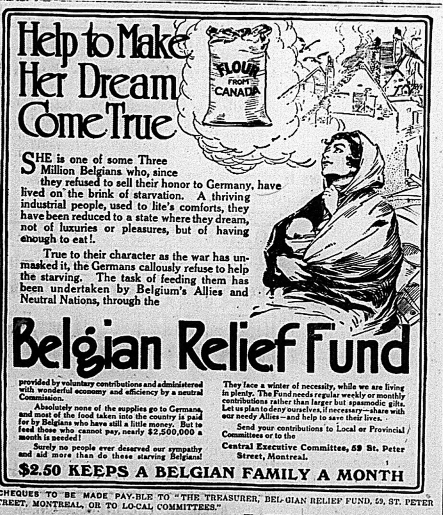
$500,000 Fire In Albany, N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 27.—Fire which broke out in the Albany Tire Repair Shop in the entire of the business district from exploding oils at 3 o'clock this morning, destroyed the company's building and spread to adjoining buildings with a loss estimated at half a million dollars.

Among the buildings destroyed were the Albany City Tire Repairing Company, Oddfellows' Hall, and several office buildings which housed the New York State Automobile Club. A portion of the Municipal Gas Company's building was also destroyed.

NO DIVINITY STUDENTS

KINGSTON, Jan. 27.—The Educational Committee of Diocese of Ontario reported to the Synod Executive to-day that the war is taking available men for the ministry. One divinity student who was preparing for orders donned khaki and went overseas, and the committee has not a single other student in view. Promising young men destined for the church have responded to the call of the country.



Help to Make Her Dream Come True

SHE is one of some Three Million Belgians who, since they refused to sell their honor to Germany, have lived on the brink of starvation. A thriving industrial people, used to life's comforts, they have been reduced to a state where they dream, not of luxuries or pleasures, but of having enough to eat!.

True to their character as the war has unmasked it, the Germans callously refuse to help the starving. The task of feeding them has been undertaken by Belgium's Allies and Neutral Nations, through the provided by voluntary contributions and administered with wonderful economy and efficiency by a neutral Commission.

Absolutely none of the supplies go to Germans, and most of the food taken into the country is paid for by Belgians who have still a little money. But to feed those who cannot pay, nearly $2,500,000 a month is needed!

Surely no people ever deserved our sympathy and aid more than do these starving Belgians!

They face a winter of necessity, while we are living in plenty. The Fund needs regular weekly or monthly contributions rather than larger but spasmodic gifts. Let us plan to deny ourselves, if necessary—share with our needy Allies—and help to save their lives.

Send your contributions to Local or Provincial Committees or to the Central Executive Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

Two German Emperors In The East

"Uncle Dudley," in the Boston Globe, Roots Into History and Digs up Much Interesting Information

A few days ago William II held a review of his troops in Belgrade, once the capital of fallen Serbia. Past the German Emperor marched the gray-clad troops who had made their way over the Danube, conquering as they marched.

William is not the only German Emperor who has reviewed troops in Belgrade.

Seven and a quarter centuries ago Frederick I reviewed 100,000 German knights in the same city, with much the same feeling of pride in an enlarged Germany and an East at his mercy.

Because we are accustomed to look only a short distance into the past we have come to think of Germany as having been small until the genius of Bismarck welded the little German States into one.

Germany was once much larger than it is to-day, even with all the territory now held by German arms counted as a part of the Empire.

Once most of Europe was Germany. The story of the Empire which Frederick Barbarossa founded is both interesting and important in the light of what is happening to-day.

The father of Frederick was merely Duke of Swabia, but Frederick had an uncle, Conrad III, King of Germany, and by 1152, when Frederick was 31, he had succeeded both his father and his uncle. This was a promising beginning, especially as his blood combined that of Guelfs and Ghibellins, two of the most important families of the Middle Ages, with the powerful line of the Hohenstaufens.

Frederick was carefully educated to be a King. He was intelligent, resolute, eloquent, with a remarkable memory, religious and charitable. In the second crusade he was almost the only personage to emerge with credit. He took Charlemagne as his model and aimed to rule Europe and the Church.

His first work was to establish himself as German Emperor. By the time he had completed this task his Empire included almost all that is now Germany and the Austrian Empire. Prussia was outside, as was Hungary. Poland was tributary. Brussels and Rheims were just over the border, but Holland, Switzerland and that part of Southern France called Provence were parts of the Empire. In addition, all of Italy except that south of Rome was ruled by Frederick.

The cities to the north of Italy gave him no end of trouble. They formed a league for defense and it took a German army to smash the league. Milan was the strongest of them all, and so Milan was subjected to imperial reprisal.

After its capture Frederick and his knights withdrew and the punishment was delegated to Italians who had once been conquered by the Milanese. There were no big guns in those days and the cities were built of stone.

It took a week of hard work to blot out Milan. In seven days walls, towers and churches all were gone. A heap of stones was left. The inhabitants were disarmed, scattered and left to agricultural pursuits. The heavy indemnity required of the city made rehabilitation impossible and the Emperor seized for himself the best lands.

Frederick went to Rome for his coronation, reviving the tradition of the Roman Emperors. He brought along as an offering to this authorities a certain Arnold of Brescia, an Italian cleric, who had studied philosophy and striven to apply the principles he had imbibed to political life. Arnold was slain, his body burned and his ashes, scattered over the waters of the Tiber.

As Emperor, Frederick devoted himself to the remarking of Germany. He had revenues and armies at his command and his rule became famous for art and letters. Toward the end the Lombard cities were again troublesome, and finally the Emperor signed a truce with them by which they were given the right to choose their own rulers, but he still retained his suzerainty and received from them fixed taxes.

In the year 1189 Frederick proclaimed universal peace in his dominions and resigned the Government to Henry, his eldest son, in order to crusade to the Holy Land. With him went 100,000 German knights, very efficient troops in those days, as German soldiers are today. They won great victories at Philomelium and Iconium, but the Emperor never returned from the East. He was drowned in a small stream in Cilicia in 1190. His burial was at Tyre.

Although he had accomplished much, his Empire fell to pieces under his successors. He was a man of the past. Great forces which he did not understand were rising to overthrow the Empire he had built and had controlled so brilliantly. The church was asserting its independence of temporal rulers. Nationality was coming to its birth. The common people especially of the cities, were demanding the right to govern themselves.

William II knows the legend of Frederick as every Germany knows it. William has sought to make an Empire almost as great as that of Frederick. He, too, has gone to the East, but he is on better terms with the Turks than was Frederick. They are his allies.

HEALTH WRECKED THROUGH LA GRIPPE

IT GENERALLY LEAVES THE PATIENT DEBILITATED AND AN EASY VICTIM TO OTHER DISEASES

One of the foremost medical writers says: "It is astonishing the number of people who have been crippled in health for years after an attack of la grippe or influenza." The real danger from this disease, which sweeps over Canada every winter, is during convalescence, when the characteristic symptoms, the fever, the catarrh, the headache and the depression of spirits pass away. Grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and oversensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration and even consumption. It is a condition that calls most emphatically for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic especially adapted to meet this need as they purify and enrich the blood. They tone up the nerves and give vigor, strength and health to the debilitated system. Mrs. Howard D. Chaffey, Indian Island, N. B., says: "For several winters in succession I was attacked and badly run down. In each case I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. Last winter when the trouble was again prevalent I took the precaution of fortifying my system with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and escaped the trouble, while many of my neighbors were down with it. In fact I enjoyed the best of health all spring and feel sure this medicine will so fortify the system as to prevent the trouble."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHILD'S WISDOM EXCEEDS THAT OF CHANCELLORS

PARIS, Jan. 27—"My presence and that of my family and my Government here," said King Nicholas of Montenegro to a special correspondent of The Journal in Lyons, "shows my unbounded confidence that France will protect me from calumny. I do not need to make any apology. My grandson, Prince Humbert, Crown Prince of Italy, when I saw him in Rome the other day, asked me why I was sad. I replied, 'Your grandfather is a beaten man.' The child, saddened, then asked: 'You had nothing to eat in your country?' Thus my eleven-year-old grandson summed up the causes of our defeat better than the diplomatists and the Chancellors have done."

Gen-Townshend Driving Turks

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Gen. Townshend, commanding the British force invested at Kut-el-Amara, in Mesopotamia, has reported that the Turks have evacuated their trenches on the land side of the defences at Kut and have retired generally speaking, to about a mile from the British entrenchments, it was officially announced here today.

No change in the situation was reported by General Aylmer, commanding the British column that has been marching to the relief of the Kut-el-Amara garrison.

FIREWOMEN

In a certain well-regulated household the last thing done each night before the family went to bed was the filling of two buckets with water from the well. The neighbors jeered. This custom was kept up 11 years. In the 11th year those two buckets of water made the difference between a petty blaze and the burning down of the house.

Mr. John A. O'Keefe, the Metropolitan Fire Prevention Commissioner, says that fire-prevention in the house is largely the woman's job. And so saying, he produces a set of practical precautions — things not to do; not to leave matches where they can do mischief; not to let rubbish collect in corners; not to hang clothes too near a stove; not to hang curtains near a gas jet; not to carry a lighted lamp or candle into a closet; not to let flues go uninspected and not to let furnace or stove get overheated.

He also provides a set of rules for caution with kerosene which are worth careful study. It would not be a bad plan to memorize these and teach children to do the same.

Another good rule is this: always on leaving a room with a lighted lamp or lantern, turn and look back to see that nothing is afire. Like the buckets aforementioned, this precaution may be needless 999 times. The 1000th time it may "save your bacon"—and your house.—Boston Globe.

FRENCH WOMEN DRAFTED FOR REAL ARMY

PARIS, Jan. 27.—"Women must replace auxiliary soldiers in the army clothing stores, uniform repair shops, hospitals and, so far as possible, in the shell-making factories," says Gen. Gallieni in a statement made public this evening.

Rigid instructions to this effect have been sent to the military authorities throughout France.

"An initial experiment in tentatively replacing men with women," Gen. Gallieni says, "has proved completely successful, especially in office work in the Ministries. The time has come to draft the women for real army work."

ALLIES HAVE STEEL BAND AROUND GERMANY

Frederick Palmer Declares That They Can and Surely Will Win the War

"The German Empire in Europe is surrounded by a band of steel. It is a relentless band of steel that has not a weak spot, and which extends even into the Balkans. Germany must continue to at all times attack. When she fails to attack she will be on the defensive and beaten. What will the Kaiser say to German people, when he returns to them and tells them that he is able to attack no more. The Allies shells will be pouring into his lines to a greater number than ever. In London to-day there is a spirit of gloom. But I venture to predict that a year from now the horizon will be of a different glow, and those who are gloomy to-day will be the fellows to say, I told you so."

These were words by Frederick Palmer, world renowned war correspondent, during his lecture in the Lyric Theatre last evening. A writer who has gone through many campaigns, Frederick Palmer is indeed an authority on the war and having come but a short while ago from visiting the different fronts, and from witnessing too frequent scenes of the war, his talk was graphic indeed, and prompted W. H. Wardrope, K. C., who moved a vote of appreciation, to declare that Mr. Palmer's lecture "has been the most interesting, the most eloquent and the most satisfactory talk on the war that Hamilton people have had an opportunity to listen to.—Hamilton Times, Jan. 26.

Plea From Admiral Beatty

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 27.—Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, commander of the first British battle-cruiser squadron, whose ships defeated the Germans in the North Sea, has made a stirring appeal for a great religious revival in England as a necessary step to victory in the war. In a letter read at the annual convention of the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge he writes:

"Surely Almighty God does not intend this war to be just a hideous fracas of blood-drunken orgy. There must be a purpose in it; improvement must come out of it. In what direction? France has already shown us the way and has risen out of her ruined cities with a revival of religion that is wonderful. Russia has been welded into a whole, and religion plays a great part. England still remains to be taken out of the stupor of self-satisfaction and complacency into which her flourishing condition has steeped her. Until she can be stirred out of this condition, until a religious revival takes place, just so long will the war continue.

"When she can look on the future with humbler eyes and a prayer on her lips, then we can begin to count the days towards the end. Your society is helping to this end, and so is helping to bring the war to a successful end."

JUST LIKE THE GIRLS

Katherine and Margaret found themselves seated next to each other at a dinner party and immediately became confidential.

"Molly told me that you told her that secret I told you not to tell her," whispered Margaret.

"Oh, isn't she a mean thing!" gasped Katherine. "Why, I told her not to tell you!"

"Well," returned Margaret, "I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did."

A Merry Time In An Old Barn

Providing entertainment for Canadian soldiers near the trenches in an old barn at night, without heat or light, is one of the interesting experiences of a Y.M.C.A. officer, as related in a letter just received from France.

"Recently a Colonel sent in a request for a night's entertainment for his men, but added that it might be wise to send some one in advance to view his accommodation, as all he had was an old barn," he writes. "We found the officers and all the men assembled in the old barn, and although without heat or light, we had a merry evening. The piles of last year's straw served as desirable seats for a large number, the loft made a serviceable gallery, while the overhead beams were crowded with those who wanted uninterrupted views. The curtain was suspended among the cobwebs and the pathescope machine mounted on a couple of bully beef boxes, while the gramophone was honored with a small table borrowed from a farm house.

"No audience at a famous theatre could have enjoyed the evening better than those chaps. When the phonograph played pieces they knew they all joined in, and several times during the evening they enlivened the barn with selections that were not known when the First Division left Canada. Eight rolls of films were shown, and when at the close of the evening the Colonel called for cheers for the Y.M.C.A., they made the rafters ring, and an officer from the column, who accompanied me, said: 'The 'Y' sure has a place in the hearts of those men.'

"Five nights a week are spent in this way, and so far the column have loaned me a car so that places can be reached. They average eight miles from this central 'Y'.

"Recently I asked an officer from an Ontario town to accompany me on one of these trips and operate the machine, which he gladly did. At the close of the evening he said: "Do you know, the last time I was in the 'Y' they put me out for using bad language, and there I've run through six films and haven't sworn once'."

Already Beaten And Knows It

LONDON, Jan. 28.—At the annual meetings of eight important banks yesterday the financial situation was reviewed by the nation's leading authorities. All were optimistic, but all emphasized the necessity of economy, both public and private.

Of the various views Lord Inchcape's carry the most weight, for he is a commercial as well as a financial authority, being a great ship-owner, head of the Peninsular & Oriental and other lines, an insurance director and a director of the Suez Canal. He said:

"Germany is already beaten irretrievably and she knows it. Her losses in men and material are stupendous—she is eating herself up, blazing away her resources and soldiers on impregnable lines.

"Our present taxation is now bringing in 400,000,000 pounds sterling ($2,000,000,000) annually. We will probably have to provide another 200,000,000 annually by taxes or a reduction of private and public extravagance.

"The standard of living must go down. The nation must work harder and spend less."

MUSIC & DRAMA

BRINGING UP FATHER

A treat of unusual proportions is promised at Griffin's Theatre next Friday night, Feb. 4, where the successful Cartoon Comedy in three acts, "Bringing Up Father" is underlined to hold the boards. This merry concoction of mirth, melody and songs is based on the popular comics of George McManus' and is sponsored by Manager G. Hill whose name needs scant introduction to followers of local theatricals. The play is out of the beaten path and has been universally praised by critics all over the country, because of its original features, treatment of theme, catchy music, novelties, surprises and all around entertaining qualities. Dullness has not been permitted to find access into its ranks while the dialogue and situations are so spirited and effervescent that one must always be on the alert to catch the good things that the action and plot unfold. A strong and competent company has been engaged and no details have been overlooked to make the offering one to be remembered and enjoyed. This is the original company, numbering 40 people, carrying a 60 ft. baggage car load of special scenery and electrical effects.

ANOTHER BIG CROWD

A treat was in store for the patrons of Scott's last night, when the Hunroe Musical Company played "Fun in a Court Room." Felix Martin as the Judge, kept the crowd in one roar of laughter. Good music and dancing made up an excellent show. Owing to the great success of the Monroe Musical Company this week, contracts have been signed with the Scott's Theatre for the first three days next week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the same prices, 15c. 25c, and 35c. An entire change of programme is promised. Watch the ads in this paper in next issue.

hereby authorized to take the matter up with the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada and request the Board to send its inspector to Maynooth to meet Reeves Jordison, Green, Walker and Hubbell, at a date to be fixed by the Board, and one week notice to be given of said meeting.—Carried.

It was moved by Mr. S. Fox, seconded by Judson A. Gunter, that the Reeve of Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga, Rawdon, Huntingdon, Hungerford, Marmora, Madoc, Lake, Elzevir and Tudor be a committee re proposed changed in the Approved Roads System of Hastings County, said Reeves to first consult their township Councils if they consider advisable, and met at the clerk's office, Shire Hall, on Monday, February 21st, at 1 P.M., and to place any corrections considered necessary before the Deputy Minister of Highways when at the Good Roads Association, and that the clerk be hereby authorized to have copies of all letters and schedules in conection with the matter made and forwarded to the above named Reeves, also to procure blue print copies of the map in connection with the same and forward along with other papers to each Reeve mentioned.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. S. Fox, seconded by Mr. S. B. Rollins, whereas considerable discussion has taken place in reference to O'Brien's Bridge repairs, none of which reflects in any way on the committee or engineers having same in change.

Resolved that this Council hereby expresses its implicit confidence in the committee having same in charge and hereby requests said committee to carry on the work of repairs to O'Brien's Bridge and piers as they in their best judgment deem advisable, and the treasurer is hereby authorized to pay the chairman's orders for any work in connection therewith.—Carried.

Messrs. J. Elliott and A. E. Bailey addressed the Council in reference to the Children's Aid Society and requested the county give a grant to the extent of $1,000. The present building had been greatly improved and would no doubt be ample for two or three years to come.

The expenses had been considerable and the county was asked to assist.

Mr. Bailey stated that it was desirable that the County Council have a representative upon the Board of Management.

Mr. Hawkins eulogized Mr. Bailey and others who were engaged in the worthy work.

Mayor Ketcheson spoke in support of the request made. The Children's Aid Society he considered, was doing a good work. The present building would be handed over to the Society if the city and county united in the matter.

A committee consisting of the Warden, Messrs. C. Ketcheson, M. Vermilyea and Mr. Coulter was appointed to confer with the Children's Aid Society and do what is considered best in the county's interest.

On motion the Committee of Ways and Means resumed; Mr. Laylock in the chair.

On motion of Mr. Jordison grants amounting to $800 were passed to numerous schools in the northern part of the county.

The usual grant towards assisting in making repairs upon roads in the northern part of the county was made.

On motion of Mr. Ketcheson, seconded by Mr. Rollins, the special grants to the continuations classes in schools in the county was laid over to the June session.

A motion made by Mr. White, seconded by Mr. Hubbell, that a special grant of $75 be made to assist in repairing a bridge in Mayo Township, was laid over until the June session.

A motion prevailed that a grant of $199.55 be made on a road in Marmora Township, being an equivalent to the Government grant.

Grants Made

The request of the 155th Battalion for a grant of $1,500 for recruiting purposes and $2,500 for regimental purposes, was considered.

Mr. Vermilyea was in favor of giving $1,000, the same as was given the 80th Battalion.

Mr. C. Ketcheson thought the money should be given for recruiting purposes. If the battalion wants money for regimental purposes and needs it, we can give it to them later on.

Mr. Coulter was in favor of granting $1,000 to the 155th Battalion for recruiting purposes.

Mr. Vermilyea—Does not the Government provide the means for recruiting?

Mr. Naylor—Give $1,000 now and let it be used as it is needed. If the Battalion is here in June and want more money we will possibly give it to them.

Mr. Coulter—The battalion is not up to its strength and the money is needed for recruiting purposes and should, he thought, be so used.

Mr. Clare—Make a grant for recruiting and regimental purposes.

The motion to make the grant for recruiting and regimental purposes prevailed.

The request of Col. Ketcheson for $1,500 for regimental purposes was considered.

Mr. Vermilyea—We have already given the 80th Battalion $1,000, and we should not make a further grant. He moved that no action be taken on the request made.

Mr. Coulter spoke in support of making a grant of $1,000 to the 80th Battalion. We should give and not question. His taxes were over a dollar a day but he would pay them if they were $2 a day. Let us do our duty. If we don't fight let us pay.

Mr. Vermilyea—The Minister of Militia says everything is provided, and he has issued a circular to that effect.

Mr. C. Ketcheson said Col. Ketcheson was making a great sacrifice and would go overseas to fight for us. He (the speaker) last year had by Providence been blessed, and the receipts of his farm were doubled.

Mr. Rollins spoke in support of the grant being made.

Warden Nugent would support a grant, and he would support any grant for such a purpose. This year he did not expect to make a profit from his business.

Messrs. Montgomery and Gray both spoke strongly in support of a grant to the battalion.

Mr. Vermilyea—Let us give with prudence; give liberally, but justly.

Mr. Montgomery—Everything I sold last year off my farm brought me more money and I should give it willingly for such purpose.

A motion to give $1,000 prevailed.

Moved by Mr. Montgomery, seconded by Mr. Fox, that the County Council of Hastings give a grant of $2,500 per month for the year 1916 for partiotic purposes.

Mr. Montgomery said he was almost ashamed at the smallness of the grant. It should not be cut in the least but go through as it is. Other counties were giving most generously for this worthy cause.

Mr. Ketcheson moved in amendment that the Council grant $1,000 a month until June and if then it is necessary to make a greater grant we will do it.

Mr. Montgomery—In different counties throughout the Province from 2 to 4 mills and the assessment of the county has been added to raise money for this purpose.

Mr. Rollins was in favor of Mr. Montgomery's motion. The necessities demand liberal contribution. Men at the front need everything that can be provided for them. This patriotic fund must be liberally subscribed to.

Mr. Vermilyea was in favor of Mr. Ketcheson's suggestion. If at the June session it is thought that more money is needed, then we can give it. The Red Cross Fund should not be overlooked.

Mr. McLaren—I intend to vote for Mr. Montgomery's motion.

Mr. Fox—This is a worthy cause and should be supported.

Mr. Coulter said it was calculated that there would be a demand of $14,000,000 for the patriotic fund for the year 1916. The Red Cross Fund will be looked after by the minor municipalities. He told the ratepayers of his municipality that there would be an increase of 2 mills on the taxes this year and they would be disappointed if they did not have to pay the same.

Mr. Montgomery—I will make an amendment to my motion that the grant be $2000 a month until the June session.

Mr. Tufts—The representative ratepayers of Madoc Village had virtually given him (the speaker) a free hand in making any grants for patriotic purposes.

The motion of Mr. Montgomery as amended, was voted upon and carried.

On motion the committee rose and reported progress and asked leave to sit again—Granted.

Council adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

MONTHLY MEETING OF WOMAN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the West Belleville Women's Institute was held Friday afternoon in Queen Mary school.

DRAWS 117 MILAGE

Speaking of the size of Hastings County, our councilman draws on the finances for 117 miles' travel. And some have the impudence to aver that Hastings can be placed in a shoe-box He really comes from where they lie up the North Sun.

LAID AT REST

Yesterday afternoon a number attended the obsequies of the late Mr. Thomas H. Asselstine of Belleville. At the family residence, Pinnacle street, Rev. S. C. Moore, pastor of the Tabernacle Methodist church, conducted an appropriate service. The remains were placed in the vault at Belleville cemetery. That the deceased had many friends was evidenced by the numerous beautiful tributes placed upon the casket. The bearers were Messrs. G. Ballantyne, H. Burke, H. Rooney, Ed, Penny, A. and J. Mattis.

We do not ask anyone to make an investment through us unless they see clearly for themselves that the security behind such an investment is, beyond all question, more than sufficient.

The securities we specialize in are five times as safe as a conservative first mortgage or a corporation or an industrial bond.

The record of municipal bonds in Canada is particularly satisfactory to the investing public.

There is no class of security outside of government bonds which have so good a history.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

SPORTING NEWS

HOCKEY

If this cold snap keeps going, the ice will be in prime condition for the Belleville—Lindsay game Monday night in the local rink.

Undoubtedly there will be something doing when our boys get after the up-country team on Monday night. Already we can see the puck spinning for its destination with the speed if a bullet.

Some one from Lindsay says it will be a walk-over for the visitors. Well, we are on hand with a wad that says it won't.

Anything doing among the Intermediates? Now is the time to harden up the muscles—while the ice is good.

Hockey throughout the district has been nil for a week or more, but now that colder weather is promised by Uuncle Solon, we may look for a renewal of energy.

Brother "Dick" felt three degrees happier when he arose this morning and saw frost on the windows. Do you wonder?

The boys will probably have a try out tonight in preparation for Monday night's game. Go to it boys.

The Soldiers' Aid Commission

A representative meeting was held in the Lecture Room of the Armouries last evening to establish a branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission of the Province of Ontario for the district, consisting of Hastings, County, City of Belleville and town of Trenton. The object of this branch will be to take care of and to find employment for members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return to Canada during the period of the war, particularly those who have returned to this district, and to assist, advise and co-operate with the Soldiers' Aid Commission and other local committees and organizations to attain these objects and to do all things which may be incidental and auxiliary thereto.

Upon motion His Worship Mayor Ketcheson occupied the chair and J. F. Wills, K.C., acted as secretary, pro tem.

The proposals and correspondence with the Secretary were read and discussed, and upon motion of Warden Nugent, seconded by Reeve Naylor, of Deseronto, it was unanimously determined to establish a branch of the commission in this district upon the lines suggested by Secretary Cochrane of Toronto.

The meeting then proceeded with the adoption of a constitution for the Branch as suggested by Secretary Cochrane with a few slight variations adaptable to this community.

It was determined that this branch should have representatives in every portion of the district whose known public activities would ensure their active sympathy in this most worthy cause.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows: Hon. Presidents—Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G., Hon. Senator Corby; President—E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P.; Vice-Presidents—W. B. Northrup, K.C., M.P., J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., Sandy Grant, M.P.P., J. R. Cook, M.P.P., Warden W. H. Nugent, Mayor H. F. Ketcheson, Mayor W. Ireland. Executive Committee—The Reeves of the municipalities of the County of Hastings, Robert Weddell, Geo. Collins (Trenton), Mayor E. A. Rixen (Deseronto), H. F. Coyle (Supt. G.T.R.), H. W. Ackerman, Lt.-Col. Marsh, W. B. Deacon, J. Elliott, W. C. Springer, J. A. Higgs (Rolling Mills), S. E. Carman, C. J. Bowell and J. O. Herity. Secretary-Treasurer, A. M. Chapman (County Clerk).

In accordance with the constitution of the commission the following committes were elected for this branch for the ensuing year: Chairman, E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P.; Vice-Chairman, J. F. Wills, K.C.; Sec.-Treas., A. M. Chapman; Finance Committee, C. Ketcheson (Reeve of Sidney), Mayor Ireland, Reeve Naylor, J. Elliott. Employment Committee, Mayor Ketcheson, Robt. Weddell (Trenton), Henry Bleecker (County Superintendent), Mayor Rixen (Deseronto), and W. B. Deacon.

The local branch of the commission have the assurance of the support and active sympathy of the representatives and the people themselves in every part of this district, and "a helping hand" from time to time when the returned soldier needs it, is what they ask.

Your hens have commenced to lay. Keep them at it by supplying their needs: Poultry regulator, Meat and Bone Meal, Grit, Shell, Charcoal, Alfalfa, etc., etc.

Delivery of Original $169,000,000 Worth Has Hardly Yet Commenced

OTHER REASONS ARE GIVEN

Shell-Loading Plants Must be Established—Empty Cases Already in Advance of Requirements

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—The Imperial Munitions Board today issued a statement which defines the present position of the munitions industry in Canada. The statement explains why comparatively few new orders are being placed in the Dominion and why the board and the manufacturers are co-operating in an effort to have existing orders filled at lower prices than those which prevailed during the first year of the war. The facts of the situation as contained in today's statement are as follows:

"First as regards orders. During the months of October and November [illegible] orders for munitions were placed in Canada amounting in the aggregate to $169,000,000. Delivery of these orders has not yet commenced, except in one or two cases. These orders were intended to be spread over a longer period. It is not to be expected, therefore, that fresh orders would be given until the old ones were running out. That is the explanation of the fact that only $7,000,000 of additional orders were received in December and January.

"Moreover, out of the orders for munitions placed in Canada previous to Oct., 1915, less than one-half had been filled at the end of the year. The balance remained to be executed at that date, and in nearly all cases, deliveries were overdue, in some cases much overdue. This was the case in orders taken as a whole, although some individual manufacturers may have finished their portion. It is not reasonable to expect further large orders to be placed in this country until part, at any rate, of the arrears on delivery of existing orders has been made up.

Empty Shells Not Needed

"There is one other important point to be mentioned. Most of the capacity which has been developed in Canada is for machining and turning out of eighteen-pounder shell bodies. This is the quickest part of the work connected with shell-making and requires less capital expenditure and less specially trained labor than the other processses. It is possible to develop a large capacity for this class of work quietly, and this has been done in Canada. But at the same time, the same thing has been done in Great Britain. Consequently, in both countries the present capacity for turning out and machining empty shell bodies of the smaller sizes is in excess of all possible requirements. But these empty shells are of no use until they have been loaded and fitted with fuses, which must also be loaded. In Canada there are only two shell loading plants in operation and another one under construction. There is no fuse-loading plant at all. The establishment of one has been begun and is being pushed forward as quickly as possible. But at best it will be several months before it can be in operation. Meanwhile, the loading and fuse-making plants of Great Britain are fully occupied in completing the shells which are turned out on the spot. At the present moment there are quantities of empty shells which have been sent from Canada which are piled up waiting until they can be loaded, and supplied with fuses.

"It is evidently a waste of money to increase the output of empty shell bodies beyond the capacity for loading and fuse fitting. The only way in which the capacity of Canada for turning out shell bodies could be kept fully employed, pending the time when the shells can be completed in this country, would be for some of the plants which are now occupied on similar work in Great Britain to be shut down.

ALLIES OCCUPY GREEK FORT ON KARABURUN PENINSULA

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A Reuter despatch from Saloniki says the occupation by the Allies of the Greek fort on the Karaburun Peninsula was due to the fact that a few days ago a German submarine approached to within a few miles of the entrance of the channel leading to Saloniki and torpedoed a transport conveying mules. The transport was beached and a majority of the mules saved.

JUSTIFIES OUR CONDUCT

London Times Comment on Wilson's New York Speech

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The London morning newspapers express enthusiastic approval of President Wilson's speech before the Railway Business Association in New York on Thursday night. The Times says:

"Only those who have not followed the development of political ideas in the mind of President Wilson will be surprised by the language of his address. No honest man, whose views have been formed chiefly by abstract thought and academic study, can escape the bracing influence of responsible contact with the facts. The formal jutisfication of our conduct in asserting with our whole strength what Sir Edward Grey recently called the transcending cause for which the Allies are fighting.

It brings all that is best in American opinion into complete harmony with ours and contains a pledge that minor technical controversies that will inevitably arise between the Entente Allies and the United States will be settled in an amicable spirit."

FARMERS' BANK JUDGMENT

Those Holding Stock at Winding-up Must Pay "Double Liability"

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—If a judgment pronounced by Mr. Justice Lennox at Osgood Hall today is sustained, it will mean that those who subscribed to Farmers' Bank stock and held it at the time of the winding up in January, 1911, will have to pay in the neighborhood of $500,000 under the double liability. His Lordship sustains the decision of the official referee in two test cases in which J. R. Lindsay, of Georgetown, and Mrs. Maria Allison contended that they were not contributories because the organization was never properly incorporated as a bank. It is held that it is too late, after enjoying the fruits of the shares, to say that the issue of the charter to the bank was irregular.

Fall of Burner Cost $5,000

PEMBROKE, Jan. 29.—The loss caused by the toppling over of the Colonal Lumber Company's steel burner is estimated at $5,000. It is to be rebuilt at once, and the company hope to have it ready for use when the mill opens in the spring.

The burner had been the cause of much bother to the company all summer. On Friday seven men had begun to re-brick the interior and had pulled out a number of bricks, thereby weakening the burner. It began to sway, and the men had barely time to get out of the way when it crashed to the ground.

To Join Forces With British

Success Near Kandalanski Pass Puts Them Near Persian Gulf

START MOVE IN NORTH

Big Column of Czar Rapidly Making for Upper Tigris Valley

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30.—The Russian Caucasian operation is widening, fan-like, to the westward, southwestward and southward, with the possibility, according to semi-official opinion, of a juncture being formed with the British Mesopotamia expedition.

The Russian advance is pushing west of Melazghert, where the important town of Khynysskala, 50 miles south of Erzerum, has been captured. At the same time progress is reported in the direction of Van and likewise toward Urumiah, where it is officially announced that the Turks have been repulsed with heavy losses. Further southeast, in the region of the Kandalanski Pasas, southwest of Hamadan, another Russian victory is reported.

Although a broken mountainous country intervenes, the latter positions are not far removed from the head of the British expedition at Kut-el-Amara. It is pointed out that the Turks evidently fear a junction, this being indicated by the retreat towards Mush of a large part of their army that was recently reported to have been routed, the evident purpose of the move being to cover Bitlis and Diarzekar.

It is admitted that the recent successes of the Russians in the Caucasus operations are thus far not of great strategic importance, but are regarded as having an important moral effect upon the Turkish troops which, military observers point out, readily stampede in an open campaign.

Napanee Ladies Honored Abroad

One a Musical Progidy in California The Other An Author In Liverpool

NAPANEE, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Hester A. Lake, 3 Adelaide Terrace, Liverpool, writes to the Express:

A few years ago there lived in Napanee two cousins, Miss Frank McKim, at her home, and Miss Myrtle E. Lake, with her uncle, the late John A. Shibley.

Later, they both married, Miss McKim one of her own townsmen, Mr. Boyes, and Miss Lake, James Richardson, Liverpool, Eng. Since that time they have never met.

In an extract in your paper, which reached me this past week, I read of Miss Shibley Boyes, San Jose, California, aged twelve, a musical prodigy, who charmed her audience with her wonderful performance on the piano, and they predict a brilliant future for her.

At this time I was mailing to you and my friend in Napanee the Liverpool papers criticising a book written by a girl of twelve, Miss Dorothy Richardson. They say of her and her book, "The Joy of Youth," a prodigy by a prodigy, as you will read.

These two young girls, the one in America and the other in England, can claim as their grandparents—Miss Dorothy Richardson, the late Jacob Shibley, Newburgh, and Miss Boyes (his sister), the late Mrs. Nelson McKim.

GERMAN DETACHMENT ENGULFED IN MARSHES

Unusual Flood of Hidden Waters Wrecks the Enemy's Works And Cut Off the Soldiers—Many Perish

LONDON, Jan. 31.—(Special)—A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says that prisoners taken during the last few days by the Russians confirm reports of the terrible condition of the German troops in Pinsk marshes, where a rapid thaw released such vast quantities of subterranean water that all the enemy works have been wrecked as completely as if they had been bombarded by heavy batteries.

Not only have thousands of caissons, quantities of munitions, and numerous guns been engulfed, the despatch says, but various entrenched detachments of troops, and often large ones, have been cut off, and, having been unable to extricate themselves from the marshy labyrinth, they perished miserably.

Five hundred tents were burned, and many Bulgarians killed or wounded. Aviators brought back photographs of the camp in flames.

Rock Fragments Blind Austrians

Pathetic Scenes in Vienna Hospital —Teutons Seek Food From Turks

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Daily Mail's special correspondent, who returned recently from an extended tour of the Central Empires and the Near East, writes: "The pinch of hunger felt in Vienna and Italy's entrance into the war, both resulting from the intervention of Great Britain, made the people of the Austrian capital much more hostile against Britain than they were during my visit at the end of last May.

"The humorous side of the situation is that, while the people of Turkey expect to get food from Austria and Germany, the people of Austria and Germany expect to get food from Turkey.

"I visited the largest hospital in Vienna—perhaps the largest in the world—the Wiener Allgemeines Krankenhaus, where one of the saddest sights was presented by two halls filled with blind, most of whom had lost their eyesight through rock splinters caused by high explosives from the Italian Isonzo front.

"The head of the hospital told me that the immense number of 70,000 Austrians were blinded during six months by these rock fragments. He regarded the problem of their employment after the war as insuperable."

LINER BATTERED BY PUMICE STONE FROM VOLCANIC OUTBREAK

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—Pumice stone, presumably from a submarine disturbance were mixed with the waves which battered the Oceanic Steamship company's liner Sierra during a hurricane, three days out from Sydney, N.S.W., according to a report made by the captain of the steamer.

Captain Koughan said that a few hours before leaving Sydney, Jan. 5, it was reported to him that seismographs there registered violent disturbances at sea.

The Sierra, he said, must have passed over the seat of the volcanic outbreak. For hours the ship was in a sea of pumice, pieces varying in size from a marble to a hat being thrown on deck by the waves.

SIX MONTHS FOR STEALING CHICKENS

A St. Catharines Man in Trouble After Discharge From Army

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 30.—The discovery of some forty chickens and one turkey unfit for use on St. Catharines market Saturday led to the arrest of Richard Johnson, who in the afternoon was convicted of stealing them. Johnson, who was given an indeterminate sentence of not less than six months and not more than two years on the Prison Farm, maintained that he had bought the poultry in Dunnville. Some months ago he was before the late Judge Carman, and was allowed to go on his promise to enlist, which he did, but he was afterwards discharged from the battalion. Clinton Bowman, a young married man, who offered the chickens for sale, said that Johnson had offered him $5 to dispose of the fowl. Bowman was fined $25 for selling the poultry, which was unfit for consumption.

OTHER CREW RESCUED

Boat From Philadelphia, With Seven Men is Missing

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The American Line steamer Philadelphia has been in collision with the Liverpool steamer Ben Lee, 12 miles south of Carnarvon Bay. Lloyd's reports the Philadelphia putting back to Liverpool under her own steam. The Philadelphia sustained considerable damage to her upper structure, several boats and the main top mast being carried away. Nobody on board the Philadelphia was injured.

The collision of the Ben Lee and the Philadelphia, which was outward bound from Liverpool for New York, occurred about 9.30 o'clock Saturday night. The Ben Lee speedily became water-logged. Her crew was rescued by the Cork steamship Randon, and landed at Holyhead. One seaman on the Ben Lee was badly injured.

A later report given out by Lloyd's said that one member of the crew was missing from the Ben Lee, but the others had been landed. When the crew left the Ben Lee her decks were awash. A boat containing seven men, which left the Philadelphia with the object of assisting the Ben Lee has not returned, according to the Central News. A number of trawlers are searching for it.

SHOULD BE LOOKED UPON WITH SUSPICION

A report from the Provincial Analyst on samples of water sent from the city water supply, calls attention to the large number of Colon Bacilli present and states that "such water must be looked upon with great suspicion, as it contains large quantities of inorganic impurities." The local Medical Officer of Health states that this is the most unsatisfactory report he has ever received regarding the local water supply. It is probably due to the unusually large amount of rain falling on the ice and frozen ground and washing surface and sewer impurities into the bay, not only in this immediate locality, but from Belleville to Trenton and from Trenton all the way up the Trent river. This water should be thoroughly boiled and cooled aagin before using.

Palmer Takes Guelph by Storm

(Guelph Mercury)

Frederick Palmer, probably one of the best known war correspondent who has covered incidents in connection with the present war, spoke in Norfolk St. Methodist church last evening, under the auspices of the Red Cross Society. Above all else, Mr. Palmer is an optimist. His descriptive powers are good. He never gets excited. He speaks as a man whose temperament has been mellowed and seasoned by seeing and experiencing things that few men see or hear.

Mr. Palmer's description of the helpless state of Belgium; of the heroism of the people in throwing their little army in the path of the great German war machine; of the scenes that had made it plain to him that the German army was no place for him, though he would have been welcomed there, made a story that was at once interesting and of the most gripping variety.

Palmer is very frank in stating that at one time the British and their allies were defeated. They didn't know it. At that time London was all optimism, and there was no cause for it. Now conditions at the front are all right, and the grand fleet is right on the job, and London has the dumps.

Mr. Palmer is a good speaker, with a very decided Americanism in his accent. He was given a splendid hearing, and the applause was liberal and frequent. The Red Cross Society are to be congratulated on having made it possible for Guelph to hear Frederick Palmer.

Belleville Boys Acknowledge Gifts

Bramshott Camp, England, Jan. 17, 1916.

Editor Intelligencer,

Dear Sir:—The Belleville boys serving in the 8th C. M. R. at present under going training in England, wish to thankfully acknowledge through your paper, the receipt of the Xmas boxes sent by the ladies of the Patriotic League. The pleasing variety of gifts which the boxes contained were all most acceptable and were appreciated both for their own usefulness and for the proof they gave of the thoughtfulness for our welfare. When we have finished our task on the continent of Europe, we hope to return speedily and thank the givers face to face.

At present we are all well and in good spirits.

Signed on behalf of the Belleville boys in our regiment,

GIFTS ACKNOWLEDGED

From O. C. No. 2 Canadian
General Hospital.
To Mrs. C. J. Bowell, 161 Albert St.,
Belleville, Ont., Canada.

My dear Mrs. Bowell,—On behalf of No. 2 Canadian General Hospital I beg to acknowledge and thank you sincerely for the very acceptable gifts which have recently been received from you and your Belleville friends. These gifts are particularly useful and show great taste in their selection. I understand from some of my friends at home that you sent us boxes of hospital goods last year. These, I regret to say, went astray, and were never received by us. We have been working here since last March, and have treated about 11,000 cases. The little extras in the way of hospital comforts and preserved fruit kindly donated by friends go far to cheer and revivify those who have shown such self-sacrifice and devotion in the interests of their country.

Again thanking you and the other kind friends associated with you in your good work, I am,

Yours gratefully,
J. W. BRIDGES, Col.
O.C. No. 2 Canadian General Hospital
Jan. 14, 1916.

Although Col. Bridges did not get the boxes mentioned in the above letter, another hospital did, and Mrs. Bowell has heard from them.

Mrs. Bowell has heard from gifts sent Geo. Phillips, Edgar Dean, letters from Mr. Hugh Parker in Shorncliffe, Mr. Harry Parker, in the trenches, a letter published in this paper from Mr. Weller, and a letter from Capt. Adjt. O'Flynn, and the regimental card. In fact Mrs. Bowell has heard from all her boxes and parcels, small or large, that have been sent away.

Frederick Palmer At Griffins Tonight

To-night the citizens of Belleville will have the opportunity of hearing Frederick Palmer, the great war correspondent, relate in thrilling narratives the "Great World War" as seen by him when at the front. He will show a great number of "moving pictures," which will illustrate his stories. Without a doubt this will be one of the greatest events of the season. Frederick Palmer has been received in a most hospitable manner—wherever he has appeared. Because of his excellent entertainment and his wonderful personality, he could fill houses twice the size of those he has lectured in. There will be two hundred rush seats at 25 cents. There are still a few reserved seats left. Come early. An orchestra of eighteen pieces will assist at this entertainment.

Within the Military Circle

BELLEVILLE

The concerts held by the 155th Battalion yesterday afternoon and evening at Griffin's Front Street theatre were very successful. Four films were shown and a number of selections were given by an orchestra composed of members of the 155th Brass Band.

Lt.-Col. Adams of the 155th Batt., spent Sunday in Picton.

Lieut. Wills, of the 155th Batt., reported for duty this morning.

The members of the 155th Batt., were present at the 80th Batt. Church parade held in the Armouries yesterday.

A pleasing event took place at Rednersville, Saturday evening, when two members of the 155th Batt.—Ptes. Dempsey and Wilder—were presented with wrist watches. Mr. N. Parliament, M.P.P., delivered a stirring speech, which was greatly appreciated by those present.

The 155th Band expect to begin practising this week.

Lieut. Kelly, of the 155th Batt., visited Kingston yesterday.

Lieut. Hamly, of the 155th Batt., left for Picton yesterday.

More recruits are needed for the 155th Machine Gun section. An effort will be made to have only Belleville boys in this section.

Captain P. Ketcheson, of the 80th Battalion, received a cable yesterday from his brother, Sergt. Allan Ketcheson, of the 39th Battalion, now in England, stating that he had been commissioned as a lieutenant, and Sergt. Wm. H. Wallace had also been commissioned as a lieutenant.

Having so much April weather thrust into January suggests the shivery thought that April may be punctuated with January blasts.

WAR JUST BEGINNING SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

British Minister of Munitions is Absolutely Confident of Victory

LONDON, Jan. 28.—"I think that for us the war is only beginning," said Mr. David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, in an interview today with the London correspondent of The Milan Secolo, "but I am absolutely confident of victory because, although we all have made mistakes in the past, Britain and her Allies are now taking counsel together and will be stronger because they are united. By next spring we shall have for the first time more munitions than the enemy and our superiority in men is unquestioned. Besides this, Germany's financial position is growing worse daily."

The Minister of Munitions said that Great Britain has 2,500 factories with 1,500,000 men and 250,000 women turning out war munitions, and for the first time Britain has more munitions than the enemy. He says, that Great Britain will have 4,000,000 men under arms in the spring.

Indian Father And Son Enlist

Mr. Michael Williams, a full-blooded Iroquois Indian, who originally came from the St. Regis reservation, Quebec, but who has been living for some time at Verona, has enlisted in the 146th battalion, and is going overseas to fight for Britain and Canada. His son Mitchell Williams, a young Indian of 18 years, has also enlisted, and will accompany his father to the front with the 146th. The father and son are both enthusiastic over the prospects of doing their part for home and Empire, and are not satisfied with enlisting themselves, but are out looking for recruits. They have already secured two others, and now Verona has ten recruits for the 146th.

The Indian appreciates the privileges he enjoys under a British flag, and feels it his duty to do something for the flag and country that has done so much for him. Among the first to fall in the ranks of the 21st battalion in Belgium was an Indian from Rice Lake who left all to go out and fight the battle of civilization and who frequently called at the office of The Standard, and expressed himself as proud of the privilege of going out and doing his "bit."—Kingston Standard.

HUNS CAUGHT IN FLOODS

Trenches and Fortifications Swept Away on Russian Front

LONDON, Jan. 28.—A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Petrograd says:

"A thaw in the Oginski Canal district has caused the Rivers Shara and Jasiolda to flood the country, sweeping away trenches and fortifications which the Germans built when the ground was frozen hard, according to a telegram received here from Minsk.

"All the railways and roads have been turned into swamps, and the German temporary field railways have been washed away. The Germans are working waist-deep in the water trying to extricate their guns, keeping up a heavy and protective rifle fire meanwhile.

"It is said that the washing away of a bridge at Lida, Government of Vilna, caused the wreck of a troop-train, in which a hundred persons were killed or injured.

"There are many cases of scurvy among the prisoners taken on this front."

WOMAN FINED FOR SHIPPING RUBBER

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Annie Dekkers, recently indicted by the Federal Grand Jury on charges of being implicated with Edward Weber and others in a conspiracy to ship rubber from this country to eGrmany under false manifests, was to-day arraigned in the federal district court and pleaded guilty.

Judge Clayton fined her $250, saying that she was more culpable than Richard Wohlberg, one of the defendants who pleaded guilty and was fined $100. Mrs. Dekkers was ill at the time the other defendants were arraigned.

CANADIANS MENTIONED BY GENERAL HAMILTON

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The following Canadians are mentioned in General Sir Ian Hamilton's despatches issued tonight, dealing with the operations in the Dardanelles: Lieut. H. W. Mann, Royal North Lancashires, killed in October, served several years with Northwest Mounted Police; Major C. M. Stephen, Army Ordance Department, graduated in Kingston in 1896, served in South Africa, receiving the Queen's medal and two clasps; Captain A.S.C. Rogers, East Yorkshire and Sixty-First Pioneers, killed, graduated in Kingston, 1910.

TORONTO LADY IS DECORATED FOR COURAGE

LONDON, Jan. 29.—We are authoritatively informed that the recent decoration of Miss Laura Ryerson of Toronto, as Lady of Grace of St. John of Jerusalem, was in recognition of her "courage, fortitude and unselfish devotion in the Lusitania disaster."

Miss Ryerson is a daughter of Surgeon-General Ryerson. She and her mother were passengers on the ill-fated Lusitania when the vessel was torpedoed and her mother was among the lost.

MRS. PANKHURST TO VISIT TORONTO

Mrs. Pankhurst is coming to Toronto about the end of February. The Suffragists' War Auxiliary has secured her services and those of Mr. Chedo Izatovich, late Minister for Serbia at the Court of St. James, both to speak on Serbian Relief. Mr. Izatovich is touring with Mrs. Pankhurst in the interests of the Serbians, and he will doubtless address some men's organizations while he is in Toronto as well as speaking with Mrs. Pankhurst for the Suffragists' War Auxiliary.

IF!

By Bartholomew F. Griffin.

(Described by Literary Digest as one of the best anti-war poems that have appeared in recent years.)

Suppose 'twere done!
The lanyard pulled on every shotted gun;
Into the wheeling death-cluth sent.
Each millioned armament,
To grapple there
On land, on sea, and under, and in air!
Suppose at last 'twere come—
Now, while each bourse and stop and mill is dumb
And arsenals and dockyards hum—
Now all complete, supreme,
That vast, Satanic dream —

Each field were trampled soaked,
Each stream dyed, choked,
Each leaguered city and blockaded port
Made famine's sport;
The empty wave
Cathedral, castle, gallery smoking fell
'Neath bomb and shell;
In deathlike trance
Lady industry, finance;
Two thousand years'
Bequest, achievement, saving, disappears—
In blood and tears,
In widowed woe
That slum and palace equal know,
In civilization's suicide—
What served thereby, what satisfied?
For justice, freedom, right, what wrought?
Naught!—

Save, after the great cataclysm, perhaps
On the world's shaken map
New lines, more near or far,
Binding to king or czar
In festering hate
And passion, but and pride made satiate;
And just a trace
Of lingering smile on Satan's face!

Even Hospital Treatment For Kidney Disease Failed

Well-known Commercial Traveller Says That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Undoubtedly Cured Him.

News of his recovery from kidney disease will be welcomed by the many friends of Mr. L. D. Griffin throughout the lower townships and the adjoining district of the United States.

Mr. Griffin has travelled this section for 35 years and what he says will be accepted, as proven by all who know him best.

He tells in his letter how relief was obtained by treatment in Sherbrooke and Montreal hospitals, but the old kidney trouble returned again and again until by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure was effected. As he says, these pills "undoubtedly did the work."

Mr. L. D. Griffin, Bulwer, Compton county, Quebec, writes:—"I can add one more statement of kidney disease cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For about twenty years I was bothered more or less with the kidneys, then the disease became worse and I was sick in bed for one year, took doctor's medicine to no avail, and on his advice went to Sherbrooke Hospital, where I was benefited, but the old trouble returned and I tried a Montreal hospital. Got a little better, but the help was only temporary, and I was soon bad again.

"On the advice of a friend, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I now thank that friend, for today I am as free from kidney disease as I ever was in my life. I owe the cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for they undoubtedly did the work. I am 68 years old and have spent 35 years as a traveller calling on the drug trade. Everywhere I am told that Dr. Chase's medicines are the best sellers and give the best satisfaction of any medicines on the market. Shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to my cure if people care to write me."

Canadian Timber Wanted in Britain

Exceptional prosperity has fallen to the lot of the timber trade in Britain as a result of the war. With Russia and other northeastern sources of supply practically cut off and heavy war demands, available timbers have found a ready and profitable market. In reviewing the situation at the close of the year Churchill and Sims, London, state that "with an early winter the competition from the north of Europe is already suspended for the next few months, and the shortage that exists in the supplies of whitewood must be made up from the lower ports of Canada." The war has produced the almost unknown phenomenon in the timber trade of continuously rising markets in all branches of soft woods. Canadian shipments of spruce assumed greater prominence than usual during the latter half of the year, and London buyers were enabled in part to satisfy urgent calls for stock from them. Ocean rates were 60 to 65 per cent. higher than normal. Of sawn wood, deals, battens, boards and ends Canada shipped to London 5,301,000 pieces in 1915, compared with 2,738,000 in 1914, and it is estimated that consumption was 4,883,000 pieces. Total importations to London from all countries were 62,417,000 pieces, as against 59,450,000 in 1914 and estimated consumption 61,225,000 pieces.

LARGEST MILK BOTTLE IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA

The bottle (it belongs to the City Dairy, Toronto), stands on a steel tower 75 feet high, it is made of boiler iron ¼ inch thick, its diameter is 13 feet at the bottom and 6½ feet at the top, and the top of the bottle is 107 feet from the ground. Four men can stand shoulder to shoulder on the top, and 24 men can stand on the balcony with their backs against the bottle. The bottle is 32½ feet from the balcony to the top, and has a capacity of 25,000 gallons, and when filled the bottle and tower weigh 236,000 pounds. Financial

The market of the week in the Porcupine and Cobalt issues has been comparatively dull with reactionary tendencies and there have been few outstanding features. This dullness has, however, a singular resemblance to the dullness which prevailed for the fortnight immediately preceding the inauguration of the tremendous markets of December, and I firmly believe that this comparative quietude of the market presages a resumption of active and advancing markets in the very near future.

It is also to be borne in mind that a market such as we have had this week is very sensitive to bear attacks and such reactions as have occurred have been solely the result of this form of manipulation. Such forced reactions have nothing whatever to do with the mines themselves and need not in anywise be construed as grounds for nervousness. This is, emphatically not a market to sell in.

The sudden burst of activity and the consequent rapid advance of prices which eventuated at the end of November came almost without warning after a period of dullness. Those who purchased stocks during the dull period secured exceptional profits. This market is repeating itself and the well-informed are making purchases now—before the second advance begins.

There now seems to be no question but that an attempt will be made by certain interests to wrest the control of Temiskaming from the present management, but I doubt very much that this opposition can be worked up to a point which could be regarded as formidable by those now in control. It is my opinion that the directorate may safely rest upon their accomplishments and feel assured of the entire support of the shareholders—even those who are inclined to feel disgruntled on the subject of dividends. So far as dividends are concerned, I pointed out a fortnight ago, that the policy of the management was development first and dividends later; and that this sound, conservative mining practice is hardly open to question. The Temiskaming has an ambitious programme before it, and money must be in hand to carry it through.

There seems to be every reason to expect that most important ore bodies will be encountered on the lower contact of the diabase sill. There is no need to go into geological detail, suffice it to say that the LaRose, Kerr Lake, Drummond and other mines encountered their greatest values on the lower contact, which, however, in the case of these mines was encountered much nearer the surface than will be the case on Temiskaming, where it occurs at between 1,600 and 1,700 feet. The location of ore bodies at this point will immeasurably enhance the value of and prolong the life of the mine.

The annual report of the company will show the past year to have been the best in the history of the mine, shipments having amounted to 1,456,791 ounces, while 1,664,081 ounces was broken down in the mine. Production cost was appreciably below 20 cents per ounce. Officials of the company state that owing to the irregularity of the ground, an accurate estimate of ore reserves is impossible, so that no figures appertaining to this feature will appear in the report.

Everything considered, Temiskaming is one of the best silver stocks on the list and purchasers at around current low levels are practically assured of excellent profits within a very short time. Buy Temiskaming.

THE LABOR SITUATION

The labor problem is with us again, and in a most aggravated form. If all signs hold true, it will be harder to get farm help, experienced or inexperienced, in 1916 than in any one of the last ten years. The surplus men of the cities, who might have been available for farm work now that English immigration has practically ceased, have joined the ranks. The rest are busy in munition factories. To a greater extent than is generally believed, the boys from the back concessions also have been volunteering for service abroad.

And now the call comes for 275,000 additional men. From where are they to come? "From the rural districts," answer the recruiting officers in chorus. For the most part these recruiting officers, city, men, know nothing rural conditions. They do not realize that the cities have already swallowed up a big percentage of country boys, until now there is no surplus labor in the country, young or old. A recent census taken on one concession line, seven miles long, in the township of Peel, in Wellington Co., Ont.—and it was a good concession—discovered just three men of military age, unmarried and physically fit, and in all there were close to 30 families on the concession. We have it on good authority that in the county of Victoria, which is largely rural, there are only 2,400 men of military age, both married and single, and that if Victoria contributes its share to Canada's half million soldiers, they will have to part with 1,400 men. In many rural sections, every rural young man who enlists leaves a 100-acre farm unworked or only half worked. Is it the part of wisdom to take these workers from the land?—Farm and Dairy.

AS OTHERS VIEW US.

According to a Montreal despatch to New York, says the Monetary Times, "Canada is in the icy grip of the coldest weather ever known," and "snow has fallen in enormous volumes." The snowfall is also "the greatest in history," and the temperature has been for a week at a time "from 40 to 60 degrees below zero." Street car services, motor traffic and taxi-cab service "are well nigh impossible," and "the terrific weather" will increase the expenses and cut heavily into the earnings of all the railways.

For the benefit of those in the United States who shivered at the thought of the horrible climatic ordeal which we were supposed to be undergoing, it may be pointed out that across the way, a New York firm is excavating for an eight storey office building and proposes to continue operations throughout the winter. The chief drawback to date has been the rain! We had a few days of a cold snap a week ago, but unfortunately it did not last. White River, the Ontario town in a draught, has two ambitions in life, namely, to forward trains east and west and to hold the record for low temperatures. So, it is always cold at White River, where the Montreal correspondent must have been raised. In the northern parts of the western provinces there have been some cold dips but not severe enough to take the smile out of the Westerner or the possibilities out of the country, or to frost bite the record crop achievements of Western Canada.

The Montreal correspondent of the Wall Street Journal should take a drop of ginger wine, put on a pair of warm socks, and trim a few shavings off his imagination. If his weather story was aimed at railroad stocks it is interesting to note that the aggregate increase in the earnings of our three transcontinentals for the past three weeks of January compared with the corresponding period of last year is $2,704,620.

THE HYPHENATED CANDIDATES.

Yes, yes, by all means, run somebody as the candidate of the American Germans and their non-German sympathizers, says the New York Times. Call him the Candidate of the Aggrieved. The grievance of the American Germans is notorious. They will never, never forgive the American people and their President for failing to ratify, confirm, and approve everything Germany has done in the war. We do not know who the candidate will be. Champ Clark's name is impudently used, but he would indignantly spurn the dishonor. But leaving the first place blank, this should be the arrangement:

For Vice-President, Dr. Hexamer of Germany. Platform—Gott strafe England; freedom of the underseas for the U-boats, and no meddling; no export of munitions unless Germany can get hers; three hours daily of German Kultur in the common schools; one term for our hyphen President, and then turn the United States into a German colony.

Mr. Bryan, of course, would be Chairman of the Hyphenate National Committee. There is unlimited money available for this campaign. "It was asserted yesterday," says The Sun, "that more than $2,000,000 a week is being collected in this country through singing societies, turnvereins, and other organizations." That is in addition to the hundred millions already on deposit in the great German bank organized here on the basis of the resources withdrawn from the American banks which participated in the Anglo-French loan. The names of Hexamer, Weismann, Koelble are prominent in the literature of the propaganda. We hope the organizers of the hyphen boom won't overlook Jeremiah O'Leary. But their great reliance is W. J. Bryan.

THE NEW WAR FLEET

If at last the German fleet comes out to fight in the North Sea, desperately trying to cut a strangling blockade, it will not be the fleet that took shelter in the Kiel Canal at the opening of the war, nor will the British fleet that meets it be that which then made its rendezvous in the Firth of Forth. Though secrecy has been preserved as far as possible respecting the transformations that have been going on behind the scenes, the re-arming of ships with guns of larger calibre and longer range, and the launching of ships that outclass their predecessors, have been assumed as matters of course. It is long since we were told that the vessels under the command of Prince Henry of Prussia were being prepared to equal, if not surpass, the most powerful British dreadnought, Queen Elizabeth, with her fifteen-inch guns. And now it is asserted by London newspapers that seventeen-inch guns of twenty-mile range are being mounted on the new German battleships. If so, a difficult promlem in the prevention or absorption of concussion and recoil must have been solved, and the lighter steel which was sought for the larger gun must have been produced. Guns such as the seventeen-inch howitzers that demolished the Belgian and Russian forts might have shaken ships to pieces, but the scientific artillerist may not yet have reached his limit in the combination of greater power with less weight. The British admiralty is silent regarding new guns. But it is understood to have been launching new super-dreadnoughts at the rate of almost one a month ever since the war began. This is the chief reason why Parliament has voted 50,000 more men for the navy. The recent vessels probably have nothing under 15-inch guns in their main batteries. Sir John Jellicoe will be well prepared when he gets a chance to fight Germany's new battleship squadron.

Current Comment

Paris has more news of bread riots in Berlin, in which women and children are said to have been killed. Of course, these stories are always denied from German sources.

Now rest we calm in the Motherland

For the Lion knows that the Cubs will stand

The New York Herald says that a canvass of the senate shows that the Shackleford pork-barrel highways bill will be defeated in the Upper House. There ought to be enough American patriotism in the country to defeat also about 200 of the representatives who voted for it.

Jess Willard, heavyweight champion, has been offered $25,000 to box ten rounds with Jim Coffey in Madison Square Garden. This rate of $2,500 for one round of sparring looks high for war time. The old game of prize-fighting must be looking up again. Perhaps it is about to recover completely from the blow Jack Johnson gave it when he humbled the white man's pride.—Montreal Gazette.

According to the Athens correspondent of the London Mail, Germany's idea of magnanimous separate peace terms for Serbia would be the acceptance by the Serbians of Prince Eitel Friedrich as their king and some enlargement of the boundaries of the kingdom at the expense of Austria. The Austrians must wonder occasionally what they are supposed to be fighting for.

The Japanese Government, according to London reports, has renewed its demands on China. That peculiar land, which desires only to be left alone to work out its own salvation, should be used to demands by this time, for they come its way whether the world is at peace or at war, and whether the Chinese are governed as a republic or as a monarchy.

The London police have warned the public to keep strictly under cover whenever an air raid is in progress. This probably means for one thing, that when next the pirates come they will be given a very hot reception by the defence fleet.

It is said that about $62,000,000 in gold will have to be paid by Germany to clean up its paper circulating in Holland. Sending more paper will not help much at the present rate of exchange. The Dutch want to see the color of the boasted Reichsbank gold.—Mail and Empire.

Like too many others of the protests which the United States has sent to Great Britain, the note of Secretary Lansing on the interference with mail is much too general and indefinite to permit any fair opinion as to whether we have a real and serious grievance.—Buffalo Express.

The British labor conference has voted in favor of seeing the war through, but against conscription in any form. They would better give their fellow-workmen in the trenches a chance to vote and see how they come out.

A despatch from Cork announces that Marcus Adams, a head centre of the Fenian Brotherhood, was arrested in that city last evening.

A fire occurred on Lake St., Chicago, last night. Loss $30,000.

While 300 men, women and children were crossing the Ohio river on foot, near St. Louis, the ice broke lose from the shore. It seemed as though there would have been a terrible loss of life if the ice had not floated close to a steamer from which boards were pushed out and everyone was saved.

The Empire Mine, Madoc is now yielding over $21 to the ton.

The Poets' Corner

Moscow.

(By Fedor Nikolaevich, translated by N. H. Dale.)

Wondrous city, ancient city,
Thou enfoldest in thy walls
Villages and smiling suburbs,
Churches, palaces and halls.

Thou art girt by grassy meadows,
Gay with gardens, rich in flowers;
Seven the hills are which thou crownest
With thy temples, with thy towers.

Thou enfoldest like a parchment
Written by a giant hand,
And beside thy little river
Thou art glorious now and grand.

Many are they ancient churches
Towering like the Northern pine;
Where can eyes see streets so noble,
Mother Moscow, as are thine?

Once a captive and dishonored,
In thine embers thou didst lie!
Now arisen from thine ashes
Changless, lift thy head on high!

Flourish through the countless ages,
Moscow! many-towered town,
Thou art central heart of Russia,
Russia's glory, Russia's crown!

Although he doesn't get the credit for it, the little man who sprinkles sand on a slippery sidewalk is doing more to make this a better world than the yaps who get themselves quoted at great length in the newspapers and whose pictures glare at you from the pages of the magazines.

Strange, isn't it, that none of the February magazines have a heart interwoven in its cover design?

A BLAZE IN JAPAN

Yelling Mobs Throng the Streets When a Fire Starts.

IN A FRENZY OF EXCITEMENT

Every Native In Town Makes a Mad Dash For the Scene of the Conflagration and Chaos Reigns Supreme. Even a Small Fire Is a Big Event.

A fire is a great event in Japan. One would think that, inasmuch as the flimsy construction of the Japanese houses and their packing together make fires of almost daily occurrence—in the cities, at any rate—fires would have lost a portion of their novelty during the ten or fifteen centuries Japan has regularly been burning down. They have not, though. When the fire bell begins to toll the whole population goes to the fire.

I was in a jinrikisha in Yokohama on my way to the railroad station when I heard the clangor of a bell and the coolie who was drawing me shouted: "Kwaji! Kwaji!"—or what sounded like that—and displayed strong evidences of breaking into a gallop.

"Sore wa nanigesuka?" I inquired politely, remembering from my phrase book, "What is that?"

"Kwaji!" he shouted. "Kwaji!"

And so it fell out that we went to the fire—the coolie, the jinrikisha and myself—for I had no words to stop him except a very uncertain "Tomaru!" And he did not choose to tomaru.

The coolie galloped down one street and up another, and in ten minutes I was in the midst of 20,000 people clad in every style of Japanese dress, and all running backward and forward. Not a man walked. All ran. They were so interested and excited that I thought they must be shareholders in the shanties which were burning.

A man dashed wildly to one end of the street elbowing people out of his way, stepping on them, pushing against them, and then he stopped, emitted a wild screech and dashed back again. I say one man did that. In reality a thousand did it on each of the four sides of the block in which the fire was, unconcernedly and in a casual and unhampered manner, demolishing some small houses.

Other thousands—many of them—ran this way a few steps and that way a few steps, all hy-ahi-ing. Not a man stood still except myself, and I soon got away, for the Japanese, frenzied with excitement, were bumping into me from all sides.

Presently the firemen came. They dashed in from all quarters of the city, dragging little hose carts painted red and flying white and red flags.

The hydrants in Yokohama are in manholes below the surface of the street. The firemen joined in the milling throng. They ran back and forth, too, and the spectators ran back and forth after them. There was much shouting and gesticulation. Every fireman, whether regular or volunteer, seemed to be a chief. They all gave orders that nobody obeyed, like a volunteer fire outfit in a country village at home.

There were ten or fifteen minutes of this running back and forth and shouting by the firemen; then some tiny streams of water began to sprinkle on the fire. Also, a few big engines began to squirt. Meantime the firemen were paying no attention to the houses on fire, but were trying to keep other houses from burning. A few of them tore slates from adjacent roofs and cast them indiscriminately into the crowd. Women with bundles of household belongings straggled out of the houses that might catch fire. More thousands came. For four blocks each way the streets were packed from wall to wall with excited people, all running back and forth and all shouting.

I had to club my coolie with my cane to make him start with me to the station, and he looked backward over his shoulder all the way. I was depriving him of a real pleasure—taking something out of his life by not allowing him to stay and help put out that fire.

It seems almost superfluous to say I missed my train or that the jinrikisha man, bowing and smiling, remarked, "I am sorrow for you!" However, that made me later in getting back that night, and as I went up dark and deserted Water street in Yokohama I heard music ahead of me—a kind of music and tune that sounded familiar.

Presently I overtook the musician. He was a Japanese youth, stumping along on his wooden clogs, wearing a derby hat and clad in a kimono, and he was playing on a mouth organ "Shall We Gather at the River?" Wherein was illustrated and exemplified the old and the new Japan.

Cutting.

He—Do you know, I have of late fallen into the habit of talking to myself.

She—I wondered why you were looking so fearfully bored.

"My wife has finicky tastes."

"Yes?"

A Thorough Job.

A Doctor's Story

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

One of my patients was a Miss Young, an orphan, whose uncle had called on me to visit her.

I attended Miss Young for some time, during which I not only made no headway in improving her condition, but lost ground. I noticed that whenever I called the nurse was in the sickroom and never left it during my visit. One day while I was with the patient, having asked the nurse to get me something from the bathroom adjoining and she was absent a few seconds, Miss Young's face suddenly assumed a pained expression, and she whispered in my ear, "She's killing me." She had barely time to say this and resume her usual expression when the nurse returned.

Of course I gave no sign to Miss Hazard, the nurse, of what had been communicated to me, but I saw at once that something must be done to free my patient from her ministration. I called up Mr. Van Orden, the uncle, and told him over the phone that I was not satisfied with his niece's nurse and would not be responsible for my patient unless she were replaced by another of my own choosing. I received no definite reply, but before my next visit was informed that since the patient had lost ground under my treatment he had decided to call in another physician. My services would no longer be required.

Putting together what my patient had told me and my dismissal at attempting to get rid of the nurse, I made up my mind at once that something was wrong. But I dared not act without more information and resolved to proceed cautiously. I soon came to the conclusion that I had better act with my successor in the case and sent my office assistant to watch the house and discover who had succeeded me. She reported that a recent graduate, a Dr. Vernon, had called at the house, and I at once made an appointment to meet him and put him in possession of all that I knew about the strange condition of affairs.

Vernon, possessing this knowledge, had a great advantage, since it was not known that he had it, and he could thus the better take steps to make more discoveries. We arranged that I should make inquiries as to who the parties were and secure such other information as was possible. Vernon was to do what he could by way of investigation in the sickroom. I learned that Miss Young was an heiress and that her uncle was her guardian till she came to be twenty-one years old, when the estate would pass into her own keeping.

Vernon found means to communicate with the patient by insisting that the nurse get something for him that would require her going to the kitchen, and he learned that the medicine he was giving had a taste that it should not have. He gave Miss Young a vial, which she concealed under the bedclothes, and when about to take a dose she sent the nurse to the bathroom for a glass of water. While she was gone the patient emptied the medicine into the vial, and when the doctor called again he took it away with him.

That evening Vernon and I in my laboratory investigated the contents of the vial and found traces of a slow poison. The secret was out—the guardian was killing his ward. Investigations made by Vernon, who was by this time much interested in the case, as well as his patient, revealed the fact that with Miss Young out of the way Van Orden would be sole heir-at-law to her estate.

The question now arose, What should be our next step? Should we inform the victim of this conspiracy of her danger or have the suspected parties arrested without her knowledge? Vernon told me that his patient was in a nervous condition, bordering on collapse, and recommended that we act without consulting her. To this I assented.

That same morning Van Orden was arrested, and Miss Hazard was called out of the sickroom and also taken into custody. A new nurse whom I had selected was ready to take her place and at once entered upon her duties. Vernon and I were in the house at the time of the arrests and entered the sickroom with the new nurse. The patient saw at once that she had been delivered from the tyranny under which she had been slowly dying and greeted us with a smile of supreme relief. Had I not been a married man I should have been disgruntled at seeing the look she gave Vernon, for it was plain that she had given him her heart.

"Oh, doctor," she said to him when she knew all that we thought best to tell her, "how much I owe you!"

"Where do I come in?" I asked.

"And you, too, of course."

Our patient was not told that an attempt had been made to poison her, and that her uncle and nurse had been arrested charged with the crime until she had recovered her health. Her recovery was hastened by the especial attentions, or, rather, the devotion of Dr. Vernon, and before she was informed as to what had occurred they were engaged.

Van Orden jumped his bail and disappeared. Miss Hazard's counsel succeeded in having her acquitted because the prosecution failed to prove that she had any motive for the crime. Nevertheless it was known that her motive was a large share of the fortune her employer was trying to secure, or at least a promise of it.

HARD ON THE NERVES.

War Has Had a Marked Effect on Repose of Soldiers.

It is being noted by genial hosts in Great Britain, anxious to show hospitalities to returned soldiers, that though bravely determined as ever, the war-worn heroes have suffered badly from the strain upon their nerves.

By way of illustration the following incident is recorded:

"I was out shooting the other day with a young lieutenant who was wounded at Ypres," said a well-known sportsman yesterday. "He was a crack shot in a pheasant-drive—before the war—and I never knew anybody with such a neat hand among the snipe, which means quick snapshot shooting, a cool head, and balanced judgment. But Lieut. ——, though he had completely recovered from his wounds, and is now, in fact, on his way back to business, made a very poor show in his day's shooting with me. We were walking through one of the avenues of a wood, and I noticed all the time that my companion was looking nervously to left and right of him and treading softly as a cat. Then suddenly he burst out laughing. 'I confess,' he said, 'that I have a mortal dread of trees since that affair at Givenchy, when the Germans let fly with their machine-guns out of the wood.

"Then they came out into the open again and at the corner of the wood, barely two hundred yards distant, half a dozen guns blazed away.

"Lieut. —— immediately dived for cover.

"The impulse was too strong, and though the lieutenant apologized for it afterwards, he qualified his apology by remarking that since the war began he confessed to the strongest respect for the ostrich, which, he declared, was surely the wisest of all birds."

How to "Go Sick" Successfully.

At the military hospital attached to the barracks at D——, says a writer in an English publication, all soldiers who wish to see the doctor assemble each morning at the door of the doctor's surgery. There used to be a great deal of malingering, or "swinging the lead," as the soldiers call it, among the sufferers. This has been effectively stopped by the following notice, which has been affixed to the surgery door:

Hints to those who, for one reason or another, wish to "go sick."

1. Don't swing smartly to attention and walk briskly up to the medical officer when you have chosen an injured kneecap.
2. Don't forget that sprained wrists and ankles are always swollen.
3. Don't, on emerging from "the presence," let your friends shout "Any luck?"

Those wishing for further advice should apply for my various illustrated pamphlets. The most popular are:

2. How to strengthen and weaken your pulse.
3. How to get a bad tongue.
4. How to get a very bad tongue (price 1s).
5. How to make your joint swell.

Escorted Her Anyway.

While Robert Browning and his son Barrett were living alone in Florence the son gave one afternoon an exhibition of his new paintings in the family drawing room. To Mr. Browning was assigned the task of meeting the guests. Late in the afternoon, when the room was well filled, there appeared at the drawing room door a woman whose face was familiar. Yet Mr. Browning could not recall her name, and he judged from her appearance that she was not an invited guest.

There was embarrassment on both sides for a moment, and then the woman said eagerly: "Oh, please, Mr. Browning, I'm the cook. Mr. Barrett said as I was to come and see his pretty pictur's."

Whereupon Mr. Browning, offering his arm, showed her about the room with all the attention that he could have bestowed upon a reigning queen.

A Horse's Medal.

A Russian artillery horse won a bronze medal at Plevna. Orders were given for some ammunition wagons to be hurried to a spot that meant crossing the enemy's zone of fire. All the time shells were crashing among the horses, bringing them down in heaps and frightening such as escaped. Times without number did the Russian drivers, sparing neither whip nor spur, attempt to urge the horses forward, but they stood cowed and shivering with fright. Some were blindfolded; but the effect was the same, and only one horse showed any willingness to go. Thereupon the driver jumped down, and, cutting the traces of the other horses, drove the willing one at full gallop through the fire. The wagon passed through without exploding, and after the war the horse was decorated in the manner described and the driver promoted.

Exact Thomas.

Thomas Hoar, the devoted servant upon whom Gilbert White, the English naturalist, depended to carry out his garden plans and to look after his comfort in many ways, was noted for his exactness. Mr. H. C. Shelley, in "Gilbert White and Selborne," gives an amusing illustration.

There was one occasion when Thomas came to report, "Please, sir, I've been and broke a glass."

"Broke a glass, Thomas! How did you do that?"

"I'll show you, sir," he rejoined as he disappeared for a moment. Returning with a glass in his hand he let it fall on the floor, remarking:

"That's how I broke it, sir."

"There, go along, Thomas; you are a great fool," said his master, adding to himself, "and I was as great a one for asking such a foolish question."

A TRAGIC RETREAT

When the Afghans Lured the British Into the Jaws of Death.

THE EVACUATION OF KABUL

Of 16,000 Persons Who Left the City Under Pledge of Safety Only One Man, Except a Few Prisoners Taken, Escaped Massacre.

In this wondrous day of wire and wireless we learn, half across the world, the events of the day almost instantaneously, and the very elements carry abroad the news. It is more than romance; it is miracle, but a miracle that may banish forever from the pages of the future historian and romancer one of the most dramatic figures of the past—the messenger bringing first news from the battlefield.

Long even before Pheidippides of Marathon ran to Athens from the immortal battlefield, cried "Victory!" and fell dead the messenger held a place in myth and chronicle that he has maintained for centuries. Sometimes he is merely the swiftest rider or runner, sometimes a hero of the fight, chosen as an honor to bear glad tidings; sometimes a hard pressed refugee, sometimes even a lone survivor.

Lady Elizabeth Thompson Butler, the distinguished woman painter of wartime scenes, of which "The Roll Call" is most famous, once illustrated in a less known painting one of the most tragic episodes in the history of modern England—the arrival of Dr. William Brydon at Jalalabad, Jan. 13, 1842. Her terrible little picture shows the young Scotch surgeon, dazed, desperate, exhausted, clinging half conscious to his wearied horse as the walls of the city loom in sight.

He had come from Kabul, through the mountains, in midwinter, one of a retreating army of British and native troops, accompanied by swarms of attendants and camp followers. With them at first were also nine English women, wives of officers, including Florentia, Lady Sale, wife of Sir Robert Sale, the commander at Jalalabad, and his daughter. There were also fourteen children. A long, intricate and hideous series of blunders, treacheries and murders had brought the tremendously outnumbered British in Kabul to the point where evacuation of the city and acceptance of a promised safe conduct to Jalalabad seemed to their leaders the best that could be hoped for, and the retreat began.

But the Afghans did not keep their word, and soon there were no leaders. Before the march was half over many were slain and conditions were so hopeless that the others yielded to a proposal to surrender the commanding general himself, General Elphinstone, together with the women and children, into the care of the Afghan chief, Akbar Khan, as hostages, but not until the Kurd Kabul was passed.

The gorge of the Kurd Kabul is a five mile ravine between high mountains, so narrow, lofty and grim that in winter the sun scarcely reaches its depths. That January it was deep in snow, the rocks were glazed with ice, and upon every mountain slope, in every crevasse, behind every bowlder, lurked the fanatic Afghan tribesmen with their long guns and long knives. Weary, crowded, half crippled by frost, the confused and formless masses struggling through the gloomy canyon soon lost all semblance of an army, as the slaughter soon lost all semblance of battle. It became simply the massacre of a rabble, and the snow grew red.

"Three thousand men," says the historian Sir J. W. Kaye, "fell under the fire of the enemy or dropped down paralyzed and exhausted to be slaughtered by Afghan knives. And amid these fearful scenes of carnage, through a shower of matchlock balls, rode English ladies on horseback or in camel panniers, sometimes vainly endeavoring to keep their children beneath their eyes and then losing them in the confusion and bewilderment of the desolating march."

After the general became a captive with the women the rout and slaughter increased in horror. The Jugdulluk pass succeeded the Kurd Kabul; a dark, steep, winding track ascending high among frowning crags, and barricaded at its narrowest point. It was a trap. The fugitives were caught beyond escape. A mere handful emerged alive.

Within sixteen miles of Jalalabad only six of these remained. Before those sixteen miles were covered five of the six had been killed by straggling marauders.

Dr. Brydon alone, one man out of 16,000, reached the goal and bore the awful news.

Later, when England awoke and avenged, the women and children and a few prisoners were rescued. Dr. Brydon himself lived to share and survive the famous siege of Lucknow, another terrible episode in his country's history, but one as honorable and inspiring as the retreat from Kabul was humiliating and disastrous Concentrated Sun Rays.

Archimedes once arranged a number of mirrors so as to bring the rays of the sun to a point called a focus, which means a hearth. The heat thus gathered together from the sunshine is said to have been sufficent to set fire to the Roman ships, which were besieging the harbor of Syracuse.

(CHAPTER VI.—Continued)

She looked at him then. All the fight had gone out of her. She had been listening against her will, as it were, yet fascinated by everything he said, realizing in some terrible, subconscious way that she was going to obey him. She had no choice in the matter.

There was no way out.

Presently she heard herself speak. "Suppose he refuses?"

"If you don't suppose such a thing he won't refuse. Anyhow he can't—and you know it."

Duhardt's hand gripped her shoulder tightly. "Why not own up, Miss Berrington? From the moment you found yourself talking to him in the wagon-lit on the German express you made up your mind that he should be useful to you. Didn't you now? Out with it—own it."

"Yes—perhaps I did. There is no harm in that. I thought he might be useful, interested."

Duhardt smiled, and turning on his heel, crossed the room. "That's all right, you'll know how to tackle him. Make it easy for him first. Just suggest that he invests, say £10,000 in your theatrical venture."

"Ten thousand—"

"A flea-bite. He'll write you a check before he leaves the hotel. Better make it an open check. When he is gone you'll come back here. I'll be waiting for you, say, at four o'clock."

He opened the door. Myra rose to her feet. Her gloves had fallen to the ground. She picked them up and crossed the room unsteadily.

"You have over an hour in which to get a bit of lunch. And don't forget the bottle of wine. I'll keep out of the way, but I shall not be far off in case you want me. And you'll be back here at four o'clock—earlier if possible."

She felt his hand take hers. It felt like the claw of a bird—hard, bony. She walked down the stairs with difficulty, holding to the banister. She waited in the street outside until a taxicab had passed. Hailing it, she drove to a small restaurant in Dean street. She tried to eat, but the food choked her. She heard herself laugh as she drank the wine. She was doing just as Paul Duhardt had told her.

She propped a newspaper up in front of her table, for she was terrified lest some one who knew and recognized her come into the restaurant.

At a quarter past two she paid her bill and drove back to the Hotel Regent.

She felt better. The wine perhaps had gone to her head and drugged her senses. She felt she did not care. She would get the money if she could. And she knew that Duhardt had spoken the truth when he said Sir John Vessie would pay. Yes, he would pay up all right, even to the extent of ten thousand pounds!

She looked around the lounge of the hotel, but he was not there. She looked into the smoking room. She waited a little while, then she inquired at the bureau.

The clerk told her that Sir John Vessie had left at one o'clock. He was not expected back!

CHAPTER VII.

Napperley Hall.

The clerk repeated his information that Sir John Vessie had left shortly after one o'clock. Myra Berrington stared at him, dazed for a moment. Then she asked him if he had left any message for her. The clerk shook his head. She inquired for letters. There were none.

She turned away almost with a sense of relief. He had gone, gone out of her life just as suddenly as he had come into it. She tumbled into an armchair in the lounge and lay back with her eyes closed trying to collect her thoughts.

She still had the bunch of roses which Ralph had given her; they were beginning to droop and fade. She pressed the red petals against her white face. She brushed them with her lips. If he suspected or mistrusted her.

It was only during the last twelve hours that she realized how much she loved him. Ralph was more to her than anything else in the world. Even more than work or ambition. And they had always come first.

In a spirit of adventure, and with the instincts of coquetry, she had trifled with and risked all three, and they were still in danger. In about an hour's time she would have to meet Paul Duhardt again. She started to her feet, the temporary feeling of relief she had experienced giving way to a feeling of fresh terror. Duhardt would probably insist on her following Sir John.

Crossing to one of the writing tables she opened Whitaker's Peerage and feverishly commenced to hunt for Sir John Vessies' name. She knew he had an estate in Sussex, for he had told her he was going down there. She ran her fingers down the page.

'Vessie, Sir John, Bart., M.P. . . . 25, Knightsbridge, S. W. . . . Napperley Hall, Horsham, Sussex. . . . Clubs: White's, Constitutional, Junior Carlton. . . .

Myra threw the book aside and picked up the A.B.C. Vessie had told her he was going to catch a train about half past two. She glanced at the clock; it was now within a minute of that time. She looked up the Horsham trains. There was one leaving Victoria at two o'clock, another at about three o'clock.

He had probably caught the earlier train, yet there was just a chance he was going by the three o'clock. It was obvious he had left the hotel to avoid her. He was running away—because he was frightened of her!

Myra was beginning to feel more normal now, though her brain was still in a whirl. But she was no longer under the influence of Paul Duhardt. Leaving the hotel she took a cab and drove to Victoria Station.

She had made up her mind to brazen the whole thing out to Sir John Vessie. To confess the whole truth—for she had something to confess. She was not entirely innocent.

Duhardt had made her feel like the lowest of criminals. And she wanted to get right with herself as well as with Sir John Vessie, so that she could look the man she loved in the face, take his hand and press her lips to his without feeling that she had betrayed him. Duhardt might still succeed in blackmailing, but at least her conscience would be clear.

She reached Victoria and hurried on to the platform. There were five minutes before the train was due to start. She searched, but Sir John was not among the crowd of passengers. She looked into each first-class compartment, then waited, facing the barrier, eagerly watching every man who passed it.

The guard waved his flag; the train crept out of the station. She watched it until it was out of sight. She felt that her fate was sealed. She steeled her heart. She would just have to go through with it. She would do as Paul Duhardt commanded.

She heard herself laugh in a strange unnatural way as the taxicab took her back to the Hotel Regent. Ten thousand pounds was a lot of money. It was obvious Sir John was frightened, that was why he had run away!

She began to make her plans. After all, Duhardt could not do anything without her help. He might ruin her reputation as a woman, increasing its value as an actress. He might set Ralph against her and break her heart.

Again she heard herself laugh Ten thousand pounds! Five thousand would silence Duhardt, buy him off for good and all. With the other five thousand she would take the Ingenue Theatre and produce their play. It could hardly fail. The part had been written for her. She knew she could not fail!

She entered the hotel and sat down in the lounge. At half past seven Ralph would be waiting for her at the Savoy. The management of the Ingenue would not keep the date open much longer for her. She wondered how quickly she could get the money out of Vessie; she would have to tell her lover that she had interested him in their scheme, that he was putting money into it.

Ralph could hardly object to that. Suddenly she felt her body break out into an icy bath of perspiration. A wave of unreasoning terror seized her. Raising her eyes she saw Paul Duhardt crossing the lounge. To her surprise he sat down at a table a little distance off, and gave an order to a waiter, who brought him liquor and a cigar.

Myra sat quite still trying to control the trembling of her limbs. Paul Duhardt had smoked his cigar half way through before he rose from his seat. After glancing round the lounge he strolled to Myra Berrington's side.

"It's not four o'clock yet; what are you doing here?" she asked, trying to steady her voice.

"You'll always find me handy in case you want me when business is on. Have you seen Vessie?"

He has gone."

"Gone. You haven't seen him?"

"I was here at twenty past two. I asked the bureau; they told me he left about one o'clock. I went to the station in the chance of his catching the three o'clock train. But he was not on the platform, so I came back here."

Myra drew her breath quickly. Again she felt unable to look Duhardt in the face.

"You shouldn't have followed him," he said bruskly. "He left no letter or message?"

"Not a word."

Duhardt smiled and rubbed his tobacco-stained fingers together. "Good. He's scared. I summed him up pretty correctly. He's one of those clever fools who are born to be bled." He pulled out his watch and looked at it. "What time does the two o'clock train get to Horsham?"

"About half past three I think."

Duhardt nooded. "He'll motor from there to Napperley Hall. Family waiting to meet him.? Swell guests in the house for the partridge shooting. Gad, I shouldn't mind a day or two in Sir John's coverts! You must put a trunk call through and ring him up just as he's sitting down to dinner. In the country usually at half past seven."

Myra was nervously dragging off her long, white gloves. "I can't. It's impossible. I'm—I'm dining out."

There is a capital hotel system in vogue in certain parts of Norway. A legal journal gives the following instances of humor in German courts:

In Berlin an ironworker was sent to prison because he had laughed at a policeman. It appears that as this man was proceeding along a street one day his risibilities were aroused by the sight of a particularly stout policeman giving chase to a dog. The offender was promptly haled to court and "sent up" for scandal.

A German in attempting to board a moving train fractured his leg. After six months in a hospital he was discharged, whereupon the state railway department at once prosecuted him for "infringement of regulations." He was fined a sum equivalent to $5.

Upon entering an omnibus a man trod on the foot of a woman, who was so incensed by the incident that she remarked that he walked like a hen. For this term of reproach the lady was fined 20 marks.

Very Simple.

"My wife is going to that masquerade ball as a simple fisher maiden."

"Going to borrow a fisher's costume from some simple maiden?"

"Not on your life. Going to have one especially constructed for $2,000.

Somebody Had to Sleep.

The doctor entered the patient's room in the morning and, according to habit, read the chart the first thing. He was a little surprised to read:

"2 a. m.—Patient very restless; nurse sleeping quietly."

Australia's Military Boys.

Australian boys begin their military career at the age of twelve years, when they enter the ranks of the "junior cadets" and drill under the instruction of their schoolteachers. Their target practice is limited to shooting what is popularly known as the "twenty-two" rifle.

At the age of fourteen the schoolboy is graduated into the "senior cadets," and here his military training begins in dead earnest. He learns to care for his rifle, which the government furnishes to him. The state also gives him an olive drab military uniform. He learns the movements of squad and company formations and learns to deploy as skirmishers.

The Australian schoolboy becomes a soldier irrespective of his own wishes in the matter, or those of his parents. Truancy officers, such as in this country, watch the attendance at school in Australia, hale into court the parents of boys who are absent from their military drill, and it is not an infrequent occurrence for heavy fines to be levied on parents who are indifferent to their sons' military education.—

TO RUN-DOWN WOMEN

DETROIT WOMAN TELLS HOW TO REGAIN STRENGTH

Detroit, Mich. "I was in such a run-down condition I had no ambition to do anything. I had a chronic cough and cold and nothing seemed to give me any relief, and I was gradually getting worse, until a friend advised me to try Vinol, which I did. After the first day or two it seemed to put new life into me, the tired worn-out feeling began to disappear, I regained my appetite and was able to get a good night's rest. The cough gradually wore away, and I am now feeling like myself again, so that I can do all my housework and go about my duties as usual. Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine." Mrs. W. E. Waters, Derolt, Mich.

Vinol restores health and strength in conditions like this, because in a natural manner it increases the appetite, tones up the digestive organs, enriches the blood and strengthens every organ in the body.

We guarantee that Vinol will do the same for any run-down person in Belleville, or give back their money. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

BIRTHS

DICKENS—At the General hospital on Tuesday, January 25th, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dickens, a daughter.

Laid at Rest

The funeral of the late Gerald Jos. Venn, who died on Thursday last, took place from his mother's residence, King St., on Saturday morning, at 9. a.m. to St. Michaels church, where the funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Father Killeen. A large number of the school children were at the church to pay their last respects to their deceased classmate, who was well liked by them all. After the service at the church, the body was conveyed to St. James cemetery, where it was placed in the vault. The interment to take place later. The late Gerald Venn was 7 years and 4 months of age.

ESPONSIBILITY RESTS WITH THE ALLIES

All Matters will be Dealt With in Name of All Allies

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The London correspondent of the New York Herald cabled yesterday as follows:

I am in a position to state that henceforth in all matters, including the blockade, the seizure of contraband mails, the submarine policy and other moot questions, replies to notes from the United States and other neutrals will be in the names of all the Allies, including Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro; that France, Russia, Italy and Great Britain accept full and joint responsibility for all war measures and that the motto of all the Allies from now until the end of the war will be that of the Three Guards, "One for all, all for one."

BEGS PAIR OF SHOES

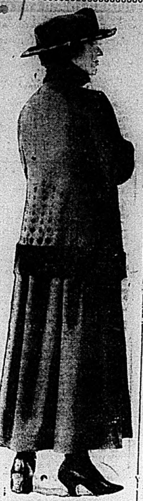
Kingston War Prisoner in Germany Needs Footwear

Pte. Gordon Byron, who formerly resided at 12 Corrigan street, Kingston, has written a very pathetic letter home from Germany begging that a pair of shoes be sent him immediately. It would be inferred that the German authorities do not seem over anxious to supply the prisoners of war they take with proper footwear, and it shows what the character of the Huns really is when such a letter has to be written home. Through the generosity of American Consul, F. S. S. Johnson, some articles of clothing are being sent, but it takes such a letter as that received from Pte. Byron to bring the urgent need of clothing home to Kingstonians. The Red Cross Society, it is understood, is forwarding the shoes. —Whig.

Villa started as a brigand, became a popular leader, had his day and is now back where he started, except that he's got something coming to him.

SMARTNESS ITSELF.

A Grateful Variation From the Suit of Popular Flares.



SEAL AND SIMPLICITY.

Full skirted and box coated, this smart suit is featured in tan colored gaberdine. The bottom of the short coat is edged with seal, as are the cuffs. A choker collar of seal fastens snugly, and the patch pocket and back of the coat are embroidered with disks of tan silk, different sizes of them giving an interesting detail.

Rebuked by a Donkey.

John and James were tramping through a dusty lane one day when they spied a little toad in the road.

"Look, look!" exclaimed John. "Here is a toad. Let's stone him."

"Why?" asked James. "He isn't hurting you, is he?"

"No; but it would be fun to see him jump. Come on, see if you can aim straight."

James felt that it would be wrong to hurt the innocent thing, but John had often called him "baby" and "coward," so to avoid a repetition of these remarks he took up a stone and was about to throw it when a donkey cart came up the lane. The cart was well laden, and the donkey's burden was heavy, but the donkey trudged on, his head down, and thus it happened that the animal spied the toad almost under his foot. He stopped short and kept his foot up until the toad hopped safely out of his way. Then the donkey moved on with his load.

James dropped the stone without attempting to aim.

"Rebuked," he cried, "rebuked by a donkey! I say, John, that donkey has more horse sense than you and I."

"Yes," answered John, blushing for shame, "that donkey has taught us a lesson in kindness to dumb creatures."

Hul Gul.

A very good game to play is hul gul. The players are supplied with an equal amount of beans. The leader takes a certain amount in his or her hand and says: "Hul gul, hand full. How many?" Each player guesses how many beans the leader holds in his fist. If the player guesses more than is in the hand he must give the difference; if less, the leader must give him the difference. At the end of fifteen minutes the game is finished. The beans are counted, and the player who has the lesser number of beans is the loser and pays a forfeit to the leader. The person having the most beans is the leader for the next game.

Saturday.

Saturday is named from Saturn, a very disagreeable god of the southland. He was so unpleasant that the people made his day a holiday to make it pleasanter. The last day of the week is Saturn-day. Now, spell it and then leave off the "n" at the end and there you have Satur-day. In the olden days this was a disagreeable day, but we feel very differently about it nowadays, don't we?—John Martin's Book.

He (passionately)—I would go to the ends of the earth for you!
She (calmly)

He Did.

"They say he got rich quick."

"Yes. His wealthy uncle died from heart disease."

The Proper Weapon.

"I'd like to drive that old miser to terms." "Then why not use a screw driver?"

STOOD BY THE COMPANY

When the late Lord Strathcona was stationed at Mingan, , H. B. post on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the post burned down during his absence. When he returned he found that the staff had flung themselves zealously into the task of saving his personal belongings, rather than those of the Company. t shows a curious trait in his character that he at once proceeded to fling his own clothing, books, and other effects upon the flames, remarking.

"Let them go too, if the Company's goods are gone!"

THOMAS LEOPOLD WILLSON,

Canadian Scientist Was the Discoverer of Cheap Acetylene Gas.

The death of Mr. Willson at the somewhat untimely limit of fifty-five removes one of our eminent Canadian scientists from the arena of research and discovery. He was born at Princeton, Ontario, and was educated at the Hamilton Collegiate Institute, where he displayed the bias toward original research that became strongly developed throughout an active life. His most interesting discovery was a method of producing acetylene gas both cheaply and abundantly, and of utilizing it for illuminating purposes. This discovery was in some measure accidental, but only a trained scientific intelligence could have discerned the practical importance of the outcome of an accidental combination of circumstances.

Acetylene gas had been known as a laboratory product long before Mr. Willsons' discovery, but when it was analytically produced the compound used in conjunction with water—petassium carbide or sodium carbide—was too limited in quantity to enable the gas to be generated in sufficient abundance for common use. While using an electric furnace to fuse carbon and calcium for some other purpose altogether Mr. Willson was disappointed with the result, which proved to be not what he expected. He threw the hot fused mass into cold water to cool it, and noticed that gas with the familiar garlic odor of acetylene began to pass off into the air. This was the necessary hint to the trained thinker and practised experimenter. He discovered that the calcium and carbon separated in contact with water, and that the carbon of the carbide united with the hydrogen of the water to form acetylene, while the calcium of the carbide united with the oxygene of the water to form lime.

By one of the curious coincidences in the history of research, the same discovery was made almost contemporaneously by Moissan in France: a fact which obscured somewhat the prestige due to Mr. Willson. The latter devoted himself for some time to inventing and perfecting mechanical devices for the practical use of acetylene as an illuminator. Both prussic acid and sugar have been made from acetylene, and so has alcohol, so pure as to cause a surmise whether it might not be produced in sufficient quanaitites to displace the more or less toxic alcohol of commerce.—Toronto Globe.

BLEW HIS MEMORY AWAY

Canadian Soldiers' Story of What a German Shell Did For Him.

Gunner Thomas F. Trusler of the Third brigade, Field artillery, Canadian forces, who is in New York, got too close to a big German shell in the battle of Vlamartinge in Belgium, just before the battle of Ypres, and forgot everything in his life before.

Trusler, who is from Montreal, says all he remembers of his twenty-two years of life dates from a day he awoke in a hospital at Shorncliffe, England, and wanted to know why he wasn't at the front. He couldn't tell what his name was, nor where he came from. He was told that he had been entered on the hospital lists as Private Howard Trusler, and it was by that name that he went back to the front and joined another Canadian artillery company, only to have his left leg shattered by a shell and be sent back to an English hospital. When convalescent he was sent back to Montreal, where his papers showed he came from.

His relatives had been notified, he says, and his uncle went to Quebec to meet the Scandinavia, the ship on which he had sailed, but when his uncle greeted him the soldier told him he didn't know him. When he reached Bonaventure station, in Montreal, his parents met him, but got the same cold reception. He was taken all over the city to his old haunts, but he knew none and had to begin all over making acquaintances.

When he went to war he was engaged, and on his return was taken to see his fiancee.

"I couldn't remember ever having seen her," said Trusler, "but if I wrote some of the letters she received from places I had been, I guess I was all right as a lover."

Canada's Asbestos Trade.

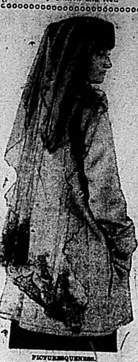
Closing of the German and Austrian markets and abnormal sea freights adversely affected the international asbestos trade in 1915. Germany and Austria could not obtain Russian asbestos. Even if they had access to Russian supplies they could not have benefited thereby, for the material produced by the Russian mines is unsuited for weaving purposes and could not be used for automobile parts. Inferior grades of asbestos—shingle and board stock—were confronted by curtailed allied markets and by stagnation in American and Canadian building trades, but those producers so situated that they could supply crude, and cater to the demand for short fibres, had no difficulty in getting satisfactory prices, provided delivery were made to the Allies. Sales of crude hit high spots, and it is to be noted that asbestos—Canadian asbestos—played an important part in the construction of those guns, more especially of the French, which have wrought havoc with enemy entrenchments. For months the chief trouble was in securing space in transatlantic vessels at rates not altogether prohibitive.

After Forty Years.

York township some forty years ago issued a cheque for $100 and again in 1870 another one for $20. In whose favor the present officials do not know, because all the records were destroyed by fire in 1881. But just now Mr. W. A. Clarke, the Township Clerk, received word that the two cheques were lying as unclaimed balances at the Receiver-General's office, Ottawa. For some unknown reason they had never been cashed. The cheques will be returned to the township and may be kept as curios.

A NEW FAD.

A "War Bride" Veil in Navy Chiffon and Net.



PICTURESQUENESS.

Over a navy velvet, close turban is draped in graceful folds a long net veil beautifully finished across the bottom with a rose pattern done in points. In addition a shorter one of chiffon is thrown back from the face, hanging about half the length of the long veil. These novelties come in all popular shades and are very piquant.

MEALS FOR MEN.

Some Masculine Peculiarities Worth Heeding For the Sake of Harmony.

"Now, that's the kind of dinner I like," said a big business man after dining at a friend's—"no frills, no pastry, and yet the whole dinner fine and dandy. Why don't more women make meals like that instead of all those dinky little dishes?"

The conversation following brought out further points of difference between men meals and women meals, the ornate, the complex, the really disguised foods which she herself relishes with delight.

Several men have these peculiarities: One has for breakfast, morning after morning, a bowl of top milk and white bread, with eggs in different forms; another lunches on rice dishes or the plainest of stews, and all men seem to like the dinner consisting of the following: A good strong cup of bouillon or plain soup, a steak or chops with peppers or mushrooms, a plain salad with French dressing and salted wafers and perhaps pie, with a strong cheese. These are not the plats preferred by madame. She it is who likes the nameless dishes of entrees, the devilled and pastrified meats or pates. She it is who likes the elaborate and creamed vegetable. She it is whose chief delight is the complex fruit salad with sweet dressing and the still sweeter cake and comfit dessert.

Now, this is but a plea for women to understand the tastes of men and not cook for them what in reality the women like most themselves. We believe that this century old fiction that man has a capricious appetite is disproved by fact and that most men prefer the plainer, less elaborate dishes. We believe also that most of man's superior strength lies in the secret of his more wholesome feeding. We feel like believing that woman, too, might attain this superior strength if she also ate more plainly and spent less time in making concoctions. "Feed the brute," yes, but what he really wants, and then eat it ourselves, so we may attain his superior strength and physique in order to be shoulder high with him when that great wave of equality comes.

A Retreat For the Kiddies.

Every child needs some corner to call his own. No matter how young he may be, no matter how restricted the home space, he should have some refuge from adult interference. Few city homes and apartment houses are built so that a whole room can be turned over to a child for his exclusive use.

It is often possible, however, to give the child a corner in the living room or one of the sleeping rooms in which to keep his toys and where he may play undisturbed.

The result of such a scheme is that, instead of the toys being scattered all over the house, they are assembled in one spot, and the mother's work is lessened.

Low shelves, arranged like built-in bookcases, make an excellent storage place for playthings. It is imperative that the toys be arranged in an orderly manner, so the child can find a particular toy he wishes without disturbing the rest.

By tacking a strip of denim the color of the paper along the wall it is possible to protect the paper from finger marks, and at the same time it offers a place for the child to pin his drawings or the pictures that appeal to his taste.

Children love individual possessions, and often a plant or flower will add greatly to the appearance of the child's corner and at the same time will be a source of pride.

WATCHING PRICES.

R. H. Coats' Work in Labor Department Has Been Invaluable.

Thanks to Mr. R. H. Coats, late editor of the Labor Gazette and now promoted to the position of Dominion statistician, we have a record of the course of wholesale prices in practically all articles of consumption, and covering the whole Dominion, for a full quarter-century. More than that, we have a carefully calculated average of these prices for the decade 1890-1900, and this average constitutes the "Index number" for Canada, the gauge by which all wholesale prices in this country may now be measured. If one wishes to consider the subject only cursorily, he will find all the facts he needs in the Labor Gazette for July last, but if a more careful study is intended, the volume entitled "Wholesale Prices, Canada, 1914," should be consulted. Both are published by the Labor Department, Ottawa.

In the boom times of several years ago, the rise in prices was an annoyance. People complained of it, but were too busy to do more than complain. Now that economy is the one great word of command, the question of prices will have to be faced and dealt with. And, pending any action that may be taken by the public at large, it will be money in the pocket of any individual to consider this question of prices with a view to reaching conclusions for his own guidance.

The main chart, so to speak, of this system of price reporting is a diagram showing by a line the course of wholesale prices for the last twenty-five years. Beginning slightly above what afterwards proved to be the average for the decade, prices fell rapidly from 1890 to 1897, when they touched eight points below. Almost the whole of this decline was recovered in one steady rise before the beginning of 1900. In that year there was another slight reaction, followed by another long and steady rise which, by the year 1907, had carried prices twenty-six points above the average. A fall of five points was recorded within two years thereafter, and that was the last seen of decline. Up to the end of 1914 there was a rise to thirty-six points above the index number, and the monthly reports since then have shown that that rise continued during the first half of the present year, reaching a fraction over forty-seven points above the average in June.

These, of course, are general averages, and indicate no more about the details of local prices than the figures of average rainfall foretell whether to-morrow will be fair or showery. War conditions greatly disturb prices, and may make the average higher or lower than the normal. But a fair consideration of prices as given in these reports will help any man to plan more intelligently his own budget for the year and therefore his general scheme of living. Many economies can be effected through knowing what the course of prices has been and how prices are affected by events and conditions.

Buttons From Clam Shells.

Canada has natural resources of which little is known. One of these, which is of but recent development, is the clam-shell fishery. In many of the inland streams, large quantities of shells may be found. From the Grand river, in South-Western Ontario, alone no less than 165 tons of the clam or washboard shell have been taken. Other species found in the Grand river are the mucket shell and sand shell.

A use has been found for these shells in the manufacture of fresh water pearl buttons. For this purpose, from two to three hundred tons are used annually, a considerable portion of which comes from the United States. These shells have a market value of from $14 to $25 per ton. The fishing for the shells is done under license from the Ontario Fisheries and Game Department, under a royalty of one dollar per ton.

The button discs are cut from all parts of the shell, some of the discs being 11-16 of an inch in thickness. They are afterwards split to the required thickness for buttons.

After the discs are cut from the shell, there is still a use found for what might be considered a factory waste. The perforated shell is ground up and sold for chicken grit, for which it is admirably adapted.

There is no doubt that, were it generally known that the shells have a market value, a much larger supply could be secured from the inland streams in other parts of the country.

Placing the Responsibility.

To the recruiting officer and medical officer of Major E. G. M. Cape's heavy Siege Battery in Montreal, there came last week a bantam Englishman. Physically fit in every other particular, his size disqualified him, and he was regretfully informed that he could not be accepted. His vigorous claim that the measuring machine was at fault failed to convince the officers, and his almost tearful pleading that the regulations be strained a point also found them obdurate. Turning wrathfuly away, he launched his final shot. "Garn!" he ejaculated. "'Ave it yer own wye, but if yer gory battery gets gory well licked, don't blyme me, that's all!"—Saturday Night.

Lakes and Farm Land.

Millions of acres of land now under water in the North-west will, within the earlier years to come, be redeemed for farming uses by means of irrigating and drainage plans. All the states and provinces bordering on the Great Lakes have laws favoring this addition to land holdings. The Province of Manitoba has, under a new law, organized its first irrigation district covering 18,000 acres. Thus the irrigated area spreads farther and farther north, and the unused waters are brought in to make agriculture immeasurably more certain than under the olden plan of waiting on the weather to supply the needed moisture.

A MELON MUFF.

Hudson sealskin, cuffed, chokered and almost ruffled with muskrat, gives this rich effect. The skirt ripples gracefully, and the deep collar forms tabs in front. The smart muff, fashioned in sections like a cantaloupe, makes a cozy accessory. A perky velvet rosette trims the pressed black beaver hat.

AFTER THEATER SUPPER.

Is there anything more welcome to the average person with good digestion than an invitation out to supper after the theater, and is there any place more delightful to give a little affair of this kind than at your own home, where all can laugh and talk as much as they please without disturbing any one? The following menu is one easily prepared, therefore welcome to the maidless housekeeper: Shrimps a la Newburg on toast, cheese and crackers, nuts and olives, coffee or wine.

Lobster a la Newburg is also delicious. Use the daintiest cloth or luncheon set on the table. When serving the lobster a la Newburg remove the meat carefully from the shell, wash the shell, put little paper doilies in it, then serve the olives, radishes and green onions from this. It may be filled instead with flowers.

Recipe for shrimp and lobster a la Newburg: One large lobster or one can of shrimps (meat cut into half inch squares), one-half cupful cream, three eggs, one tablespoonful butter, red pepper, salt and nutmeg; melt butter, add fish, allow it to simmer five minutes, mix eggs, cream, pepper, salt and nutmeg together; stir into fish, then stir mixture until it thickens; add last one-half cupful of sherry if desired.

Cultivate Neatness.

Tidiness is one of the most attractive of feminine qualities. It is also one of the rarest. Early and persistent must be the training which carries the girl into womanhood with her "bump of neatness" well developed.

Unless inherently fastidious during school days she is liable to drift into careless habits which she never outgrows.

One girl may have a trick of leaving shoes about her room. As a child she was permitted to do this, and as she grew older the untidy custom was never abandoned for the simple reason that she herself did not notice anything unusual about it and probably nobody else took the trouble to correct her. Another slovenly habit is leaving a bunch of combings in the comb or on the dressing table. Constant vigilance on a woman's part is necessary in these small matters if she would be thought really tidy.

CREAM WALNUT CAKE.

Sift together three times a cupful of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Break an egg into measuring cup, fill cup with milk, beat well into dry ingredients and add three tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Beat all well and bake in layer cake pans.

Walnut Cream For Filling—One and a half cupfuls of milk, scalded; an egg well beaten, a scant half cupful of sugar, a dessertspoonful each of flour and cornstarch, a quarter teaspoonful of salt. Mix all with egg, add to milk and cook in double boiler until quite thick. When cool flavor with vanilla and add a cupful of hickory nuts ground fine through a meat chopper. Spread on cake. If you prefer use a white frosting on top and decorate with whole nut meats.

Unconsciously, perhaps, but in reciting these immortal words, "She was a vampire and he was a boob," that New York lawyer appears to have laid the foundation for a whale of a movie scenario.

A GREAT TUNNEL.

C.P.R. Mountain Tube Through Rogers Pass is Now Complete.

Another great Canadian railway achievement was completed a few days ago when the two heads of the marvelous Rogers Pass tunnel in the Rockies met, says the Canadian Courier. A new grade-conquering underground highway passed from an engineering feat to a railway fact. The greatest railway tunnel in Canada and one of the greatest in the world will be in operation next autumn. The Rogers Pass double-track tunnel was decided upon in order to overcome difficult grades between mileages 78.6 and 91.5 on the mountain subdivision of the C.P.R. The western portal is 326 miles east of Vancouver, the eastern 1,056 miles west of Winnipeg. The length of the tunnel is 50 feet over five miles. It runs through Mt. Macdonald and under Rogers Pass. Since April, 1915, 3,200 men have been working to complete the tunnel for traffic as early as possible. That the work was practically completed in 1915 is a tribute to the engineering and construction staffs of the world's greatest transportation system. It was a stupendous task. A traffic highway five miles long, 29 feet wide, and 26 feet high had to be blasted through solid rock. The tunnel was designed for double-track laid on rock ballast, to be operated with oil-burning steam locomotives.

The primary purpose of this tremendous tunnel was to reduce the C. P. R. summit of the Selkirks, 4,324 feet above sea level, and to do away with nearly five miles of snow sheds necessary on account of the snow-slides in that part of the Selkirks. The tunnel reduces the summit about 540 feet and shortens the old line 4.3 miles. The tunnel was driven double, the first example of that kind of tunnel construction on this continent. A small bore 8 ft. 6 in. by 8 ft. was made 50 feet to one side of the centre line of the main tunnel, and its floor about 6 feet above the main floor line. The "Pioneer" heading and one or more centre headings were driven simultaneously. After the Pioneer had been driven 1,000 feet at the east end a cross cut was run to the spot where the centre of the main tunnel was to be and from that point new headings were begun in each direction. All "muck" had to be brought up this incline and out through the Pioneer.

A FISH MARKET.

Big Opportunities for Business Have Arisen in Australia.

Opportunities for marketing the product of Canadian fisheries, "the most extensive in the world," in Australia, are treated in a report received by the Trade and Commerce Department from Commissioner Ross, of Melbourne. He states that there is a serious shortage in canned fish in Australia, advantage of which has already been taken by some New Brunswick packers to introduce canned sardines and herrings. However, the amounts exported are very small in comparison with the great demand that now exists in Australia for Canadian fish, says Mr. Ross, and he regrets that "no concerted effort has yet been made to develop the inshore or coastal industry by canning fish for export overseas."

Although Canada has quantities of fish, however, there is lacking the tonnage to carry them. Commissioner Bickerdike, of England, deals with this subject in a report just received. He states that at the present moment there is a famine in merchant ships for which the success of the British fleet, rather curiously, is partly responsible. Great Britain's navy has captured or driven off the sea some 2,800 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 6,500,000, possessed by Germany and Austria-Hungary, as well as 202 ships of 123,000 tons under the Turkish flag. By its success the fleet thus reduced the amount of shipping available for the carrying trade of the world, since the mercantile marine of Russia, which embraced 1,254 ships of over 1,000,000 tons, has been imprisoned to a considerable extent owing to conditions in the Baltic Sea. The British Admiralty also has over 2,000 vessels requisitioned for carrying troops and stores and 2,300 auxiliary craft engaged in patrol services. The requirements of the French and Italian navies have also put a heavy drain on their merchant marine.

The Crop of 1915.

It is beyond question that 1915 has been the banner year in the history of western Canada as far as the yield of all produce of the soil is concerned. The prices in respect to grain have been well in excess of the average obtained during the past ten years, and the present grain crop has brought more money to western Canada than any previous one.

The yield of grain has been large in every locality in the west, and in some cases phenomenally so. Reports would indicate in portions of Alberta and Saskatchewan a yield of wheat of over sixty bushels to the acre, and it has been well said that we have this year garnered not one crop but two. As to what effect this crop has had on the prosperity of the individual farmer it is difficult to say.

A Strathcona Story.

Lord Strathcona was fond of telling this story of a Highland chief, The Macnab, a pioneer on the upper Ottawa. "On one occasion Macnab entertained Sir George Simpson and a number of leading fur traders of Highland origin. Some surprise was expressed that Simpson should have occupied the seat at one end of the board, and a Mr. McKenzie the other end.

"At last some one inquired: 'Macnab, why are ye no at the head o' your ain table?'

"The host turned upon his questioner and answered with great dignity:

"'Mr. MacPherson, I'd hae ye ken weel that where The Macnab sits, there is the head o' the table!'"

It looks like an awful libel on mother when a New Yorker sues to recover damages for losing a tooth when he engulfed his face in a cake that was advertised as "the kind that mother used to make."

THE LOYALTY OF INDIA

The Effect of War on Missions—Splendid Address by Rev. Harry Stillwell B. A. at the Baptist Church

In spite of the inclement weather a large audience assembled at the Baptist Church yesterday morning to listen to an address by Rev. Harry Stillwell, a noted Baptist missionary and traveller, and one of the leading authorities on the Orient and the problems of the far East. Mr. Stillwell is home on furlough and expects to return to India next fall, where he is the Principal of a High School at Cocanada, having 600 young men—Brahmins and Christians—in residence. Mr. Stillwell declared that there are no pro-Germans or pacifists in India. He said that India, under the fostering wing of Great Britain, continues to move steadily forward in the path of national progress. Already she possesses 35,000 miles of railway, which carry every year 350,000,000 passengers; 72,000 miles of telegraph, and 88,000 miles of canals, which irrigate 48,000,000 acres of land. The "unrest" of a few years ago has ebbed and died, to be followed by a wave of passionate loyalty and devotion to the British Raj, which has thrilled the Empire and astonished the whole world. The enthusiasm with which the great ruling princes have offered to place the whole resources of their kingdoms at the disposal of the Government, and the eagerness with which all classes have clamored for a share in the defence of the Empire, are a fine tribute to the just and magnanimous rule of the great Christian nation, under the folds of whose flag so many once divided and warring peoples now live in peace and brotherhood. This outburst of loyalty is a convincing reply to the multitude of detractors who have of recent years carried on a campaign of slander and abuse of British rule in India. Yet we do not hesitate to affirm, said the speaker, that were it not for the presence of the more than 3,000 missionaries in India and the work they and their predecessors have done in creating new ideals and in welding the bonds between the British Government and the native people, this remarkable demonstration would have been impossible. That this is not merely the ex parte judgment of overwrought missionary enthusiasts may be proved from the public statements of some of the greatest of British statesmen. For example, Lord Bryce, the distinguished diplomat and historian, writes: "The longer one stays in India, the more evidence one has that the future well-being of this country and, above all, the extension, permanence and quality of British influence depend largely on the progress of Missions." And Sir Augustus Rivers Thompson, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, writes: "Christian missionaries have done more real lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined. They have been the salt of the country and the true saviours of the Empire." Similar testimony in almost identical language might be quoted from Sir Mackworth Young, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and Lord Lawrence, one of the greatest of India's Viceroys.

Christianity is touching the deepest springs of India's life, and great social and intellectual, as well as religious movements are coming to birth, which are completely revolutionizing Indian society. There is now an insistent demand for a new social order, in which the old inequality so long perpetuated by caste shall be done away. A new social conscience is demanding the abolition of the nautch, early marriage, polygamy, legalized prostitution, and intemperance. Movements looking toward religious reform are springing up here and there (all of them the indirect, if not direct, results of Missions), one of the most notable being the movement among the Sikhs of the Punjab.

Speaking of the war and its effect on foreign missions, Mr. Stillwell said that a conflict which disturbs the social, moral, commercial and political equilibrium of the whole world, should have a profound effect upon the missionary enterprise, goes without saying. When it is remembered that the countries engaged in this Titanic struggle, together with their colonies and dependencies, embrace a population of 950,000,000 and occupy three-fourths of the territory of the globe; that the nations involved, with the exception of Turkey, are at least professedly Christian; that the resources of these nations are being drained at the rate of $50,000,000 a day; that Mission fields have been the scene of great battles; that hundreds of native Christians, especially in Asiatic Turkey, have already been put to the sword; that many missionaries have been summoned to the colors by their respective countries, while others have been arrested and interned, leaving hundreds of native workers without pastoral care; that station after station has had to be abandoned, hospitals, schools and dispensaries closed or abridged in their operations, and all advance movements halted—some faint idea of the dislocation caused by the war may be imagined.

It need hardly be remarked, too, said Mr. Stillwell, that the war has had a very disturbing effect upon the minds of both Christians and non-Christians on the foreign field. The faith of the former has been sorely tried, while to the latter the spectacle of so-called Christian nations in deadly conflict presents a moral enigma they are utterly unable to solve. Unquestionably the prestige of Christianity as a world force has suffered a temporary eclipse, while thousands intellectually convinced of its truth are hesitating about openly identifying themselves with the Christian religion, until the issue between the nations is finally settled. Perhaps in no part of the Mission field does this phase of the situation assume a more serious aspect than in India where, our missionaries inform us, in the minds of the people Christianity and the Government are one, and consequently the downfall of one would mean the collapse of the other. This fact alone should furnish a fresh stimulus to prayer and effort that the cause of the Allies may triumph. The speaker reiterated that the people of India, from the wealthiest Rajah to the lowest fellaheen, were loyal to the great British Empire, and that all Germany's attempts to sow the seeds of sedition, and religious bigotry had signally failed, and had indeed proved a veritable boomerang—for the Indians, with their hot, passionate hearts, were literally pleading to be allowed to fight the battles of their great sovereign, King George V. These Sikhs and Gurkhas and Bengalese make fine sldiers, and are proving their loyalty in Egypt, Mesopotamia, and Persia in valorous fashion today. Mr. Stillwell believes that after this war is over we will witness a wonderful epoch of missionary zeal and world-brotherhood, and he urged the church to adopt a policy of preparedness and to get on a war footing.

Address And Presentation

On Tuesday, January 25, over one hundred friends of everywhere gathered at the home of Mr. John Donnan and family to bid them good-bye as they are to leave here on Thursday 28th inst., for to spend the remainder of their days with their sons and daughters at Saskatoon, Sask. After the gathering came to order the Rev. Mr. Huffman read the following address.

To Mr. and Mrs. John Donnon,
Plainfield, January 25th, 1916.
And Mrs. Helen Commins.
Dear Friends;

There are very few changes which have occurred in the old community of Plainfield which have caused greater surprise than the one about to take place in your departure to your new home in the Western country. Yet in the ruling of an all-wise providence the unexpected is continuallly occurring in the lives of individuals communities and nations.

If sentiment alone was sufficient to determine our lot ere is no doubt that at this age you would prefer to remain the little time, still alloted to you in this place where you have spent so many merry years and where you are so well and intimately known. But kind providence acting through your boys has made it possible for you to spend the remaining time of your life near your own, surrounded by all the comforts that they are able to furnish. This will show the compensation for the love in parting with so many old friends and neighbors and for Mrs. Commins, who faces the world with her little family. We cannot but feel that the burden of raising her family will be greatly lessened living as she will, near those who can care for her. The advantages to get education for the family will be such as any of us might wish for our boys and girls at the same time. We regret her leaving us. We need not multiply words to express the esteem in which you are held in our presence here too high, speaks louder than anything we may say. We ask you Mr. John Donnan to except this gold headed cane, Mrs. Donnan this wool komano also this sweater coat. Mrs. Helen Commins, this purse as an expression of our esteem and good will at this time and with these go our prayers and best wishes for a safe journey to your new home and trust that you all may be spared many years to enjoy your new home in the city of Saskatoon and we are sure that though separated here for a season, we shall meet by and by over the river where we all have so many waiting to greet us.

Signed on behalf of the friends,
Rev. Huffman, D. Poucher, M. Tummon, A. Moore.

After which speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Huffman, D. Poucher, A Moore, M. Tummon.

After tea was served all joined in singing, "There's a better Land than this." After wishing Mr. and Mrs. Donnon and Mrs. Commins and family farewell and a safe journey and many days of pleasure in their western home., the gathering broke up at 11 p.m.

DEATH OF MRS. JAMES DONNAN

At the family residence, West Huntingdon, on Sunday night, Jan. 23rd, there passed away Jane Robinson, beloved wife of Mr. James Donnan. Mrs. Donnan was one of the oldest residents of this vicinity. She came to West Huntington from Ireland in 1871, and was married in 1875 to Mr. James Donnan. To them eight children were born, all of whom reached home to see their mother laid away in her last resting place.

Mrs. Donnan was a member of the Presbyterian church in Ireland, and united by certificate with St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, West Huntingdon.

Throughout her life she took a deep interest in all kinds of church work, being always ready to lend a hand in anything that would further her Master's cause.

Mrs. Donnan was the centre of a happy home which drew many to share in its generous hospitality. She will be greatly missed both in church and social life.

The following daughters and son survive her, who, together with her husband, are left to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted wife and mother:—Mrs. Reid (Isabelle), Sidney; Mrs. Scott (Mary), Lowell, Mass.; Mrs. Cottom (Margaret), Parry Sound, Mrs. Devolin (Blanche), Madoc Matilda, New York, and Eliza, Sam and Nellie at home. There are nine grandchildren.

MUSIC & DRAMA

BRINGING UP FATHER

Not even excepting the famous Floradora Sextette, has there ever been gathered together in one musical comedy company, such a galaxy of beautiful women, as is to be seen in Gus Hill's stage presentation of George McManus's newspaper cartoon piece, 'Bringing Up Father,' which is scheduled for appearance at Griffin's Opera House next Friday night, for a stay of one night only. Their matchless beauty is augmented by costumes from the emporiums of Worth, of Paris, Hayden and Mme Rhue, of New York, who were given carte blanche to dress these women in the latest costume creations. This special feature of the production is calculated to attract the women, and place before their eyes the very latest satorial wrinkles. 20 tuneful song hits are introduced during the performance.

India, home of the dark men, always has had a fascination for us, and any photo reproduction of life in India is always sure to prove popular and unusually interesting, and the management of Griffin's Opera House announce that they have been fortunate in booking the massive Geo. Kleine 6-reel photoplay entitled "Between Savage and Tiger" for exhibition tomorrow night only, this photodrama teems with excitement and adventure throughout the entire 6 reels and has proven one of the most gripping wild animal stories shown in some time. As a special extra attraction for Tuesday and Wednesday, The Ford Canadian Monthly, which includes a review of all the important Canadian events for month will also be shown and includes the following interesting events, recent Ice Races at Delormier Park, Montreal, Harry Lauder the famous Scotch comedian arriving in Hamilton, 86th and 120th battalions of Hamilton in sham battle, also showing same battalions in action with platoons, and hand grenade practice. A review of 10,000 Canadian troops in Toronto by The Duke of Connaught, and many other interesting Canadian events, besides the above offerings some highly amusing comedies will be presented.

The fascinating novel in 4 acts universal feature "Lord John in New York" has been selected as the feature offering at Griffin's Palace Theatre, to-night and Tuesday, matinee and night. This splendid photoplay, which features William Garwood, who is ably supported by a cast of unusual excellence, is being offered in addition to a program of sure to please comedies.

CHERNIAVSKY TRIUMPH

A splendid audience at Massey Hall greeted the Cherniavsky Trio on the occasion of their local debut on Saturday night. These accomplished Russian artists scored an indisputable triumph. They created a profound impression with their first ensemble number, the Mendelssohn Trio, No. 1 for planoforte, violin and 'cello, a favorite work with amateur players. Each of the brothers has abundant technique, greatness and resonance of tone, and plays with the abandon and vigor of youth. Their concerted work in the Mendelssohn number, as in a group of three small numbers, as arranged by Widor, Schubert and Brahms, revealed a mutual understanding of sympathy in the rendering. One does not often hear chamber trios played by professional artists from Europe, and the musical treat offered was of a specially welcome nature. The most brilliant string trio that has appeared in Toronto consisted of Ysaye, Marteau and Gerardy, and for piano and strings trio Lachaume as pianist. The Cherniavskys proved themselves to be accomplished soloists. Leo contributed the first movement of Tschaikowsky's exacting violin concerto, a movement bristling with most difficult passage work; Mischel gave Golterman's violincello concerto in A minor, and Jan, the pianist, two Chopin numbers and the virtuso fantasia in Rigoletto, by Liszt. These selections gave the brothers ample opportunity to display their facile execution with bow and the left hand.

The concert was for the benefit of the Citizens' Recruiting League, and was under their auspices. One may add that the artists were recalled two or three times after each number.

Canada's Crops

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The final returns of the yield, quality and value of the grain crops of Canada for the season, 1915 have been issued from the census and statistics office. They are compiled from the reports of agricultural correspondents throughout Canada. For the three northwest provinces a large number of returns estimating the yield per acre of wheat, oats, barley rye and flax were also received from the rural postmasters and brought into the compilation.

Yield of Grain Crops

As a result of the returns of the average yields per acre, made after threshing, the total yields of the grain crops in bushels for the season of 1915 compared with 1914 are as follows:—Wheat 376,303,600, as against 161,280,000 in 1914; oats 520,103,000 as against 313,078,000, barley 53,331,300 as against 36,201,000, rye 2,394,100 as against 2,016,800 peas 3,478,850 as against 3,362,500, beans 733,400 as against 797,500; buckwheat 7,175,900 as against 8,626,000, flaxseed 10,628,000 as against 7,175,200, mixed grains 17,523,100 as against 16,382,500 and corn for husking 14,368,000 as against 13,924,000 bushels. The average yields per acre in 1915 are, in bushels as follows. The figures placed in brackets representing the yields of 1914 for comparison:—Fall wheat 29.41 (21.41); spring wheat 28.93 (15.07); all wheat 28.98 (15.67); oats 45.76 (31.12); barley 35.33 (24.21); rye 21.31 (18.12); peas 17.73 (17.64); beans 16.70 (18.20); buckwheat 22.88 (24.34); flaxseed 13.10 (6.62); mixed gains 37.54 (35.36); and corn for husking 56.72 (54.39.)

The average yields per acre for 1915, as now definitively returned, and consequently the estimated total yields, are thus larger than the two previous estimates published by the census and statistics office, viz., the "preliminary" estimate of August 31 and the "provisional" estimate of September 30. For the principal grain crops the total yields represent the most abundant harvest in the history of Canada. With regard to wheat and oats this result is due to a double cause; expansion of the acreage by special effort as a consequence of the war and an exceptionally favourable season giving for Canada the highest average per acre on record.

Quality of Grain Crops

The quality of the grain crops in 1915, as determined by the weight in lb. per measured bushel, is, with the exception of one or two crops, superior to that of last year and is also superior to the average of the last five years. The weights per bushel for 1915 are as follows: Fall wheat 59.71 lbs., spring wheat 60.31 lb., all wheat 60.19 lb., oats 38.61 lb., barley 48.26 lb., rye 56.32 lb., peas 60.74 lb., beans 59.61 lb., buckwheat 48.02 lb., flax 55.28 lb., mixed grains 44.98 lb. and corn for husking 56.32 lb.

Values of Crops

The values are estimated from local market prices as returned by the crop reporting correspondents of the Census and Statistics office. For wheat in 1915 the average price per bushel for the whole of Canada is about 10 cents less than that of last year and about 10 cents more than that of the quinquennial average. The total values of the principal grain crops of 1915 are as follows: Wheat $312,569,700, beans $176,894,700, barley $26,704,700, rye $1,899,900, peas $5,730,700, beans $2,206,800, buckwheat $5,913,000, flaxseed $15,965,000, mixed grains $10,034,700, corn for husking fodder crops, particulars of which were published last November, the total value of the field crops of Canada in 1915 amounts to nearly $800,000,000 comprising grain crops $568,161,900, potatoes and sugar beets $36,739,500, and fodder crops $192,768,100.

Wheat, Oats, Barley and Flax in the ….. ..Northwest Provinces …….

In the three northwest provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the production of wheat in 1915 is estimated at 342,948,000 bushels as compared with 140,958,000 bushels in 1914, of oats at 334,840,600 bushels, in 1914, of oats at 334,840,600 bushels compared with 150,843,000 of barley at 35,317,200 bushels compared with 19,535,000 bushels and flax at 10,559,000 bushels compared with 7,083,00 bushels.

Calls For More Canadian Troops

Twenty Thousand Additional Men To Sail Soon—Dominion to Equip Soldiers

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.—Britain has asked for the despatch across the Atlantic of 20,000 additional Canadian fighting men. Nearly twice the number are ready, and within the next two or three months twenty more Canadian battalions will encamp in England and to wait the summons to the front.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, made the announcement in an interview with the newspapermen tonight. While the plans for the transportation of the troops cannot, of course, be made public, it is understood that the Admiralty has made arrangements which wi l mean as little delay as possible. The Minister gave no intimation to-night as to individual battalions likely to be chosen, other than wou.d be made solely upon merit, but it is generally conceded that the camp under the command of General Logie at Toronto will furnish its share, as will probably the camps at London and Kingston.

Supply Own Machine Guns ….

Sir Sam Hughes also announced that Canada will supply her own troops with machine guns, and that all Canadian machine guns would be "pooled" iwth the British guns. Col. David Carnegie of the Shell Committee was, the Minister stated, now at the front making observations with a view to guiding the Government in further preparation and purchase of munitions.

Sir Sam is enthusiatsic over the outlook for raising the Canadian army to half a million men. Within the past few days he stated he had received offers from Regina, which city is sending 2,500 additional men. Swift Current, Saskatchewan, has offered to raise a battalion, an offer which has been accepted, while Mr. Edward King has written from the Peace River District offering to bring down a battalion from that northern outpost. The Minister has also availed himself of this offer.

$2,379,854 For Patriotic Fund

Campaign Closes in Blaze of Enthusiasm, With Collections Nearly Million Over Mark

Montreal's whirlwind campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the Patriotic Fund concluded last night in a blaze of enthusiasm, when reports up to date showed that nearly an additional million dollars had been raised, the total collections reported amounting to $2,379,854. This brings the amount given to well beyond the two million dollar mark, without counting the expected city donation of $250,000. The final returns were brought to these huge figures by the achievement of the Day's Pay Committee, under Mr. J. W. McConnell, which reported no less than $427,048. It is expected that a number of other reports will come in within the next few days, which may bring the final total well on towards $2,500,000, as occurred on the opening campaign in the fall of 1914, when returns received after the close of the regular campaign added considerably to the fund.

Germans Win And Lose Attacks

"A Belgian told me the sign on the station at Ostend had been taken down and the legend 'Calais' substituted," writes a captain in the Army Service Corps to a Toronto friend, adding, "The German women evidently thought that Calais was taken, for they forwarded packages of socks and things to our brave soldiers who have captured Calais. These went through Holland to England to be trans-shipped to Calais. He claimed to have actual possession of some of them. It was a curious mistake!

"The Belgians I have met are very charming people, and they simply do not regard the Germans as belonging to the human race.

" had and interesting visit to an aeroplane hangar a little time ago. One machine had just come back from France and had a number of holes patched up where fragments of a shell had pierced it. Apparently quite a bearing space can be destroped without bringing the plane down.

Too Popular

"The flight captain said that when one is being shelled, it seems as if the whole enemy army is devoting its entire aatention to bringing down that particular machine. . He also told me it was very difficult to hit anything and sometimes the bombs missed the object aimed at by a mile. It is good news, for it will be difficult to hit our trucks."

The captain is stationed in England at present. He reports that one of the camps near them was shelled during the raids in the fall because a light was left burning in a guard tent for a short time. That gave the raiders a mark. The authorities always seem to know when a raid is coming, for word comes from headquarters to douse all lights, or "lights out" sounds on the bugles and is taken up by the bugles of the various guards."

Impregnable Front

Speaking of the situation on the Western front, the letter says, "Apparently we are so well entrenched that it is impossible for the micreants to advance. All agree as to the vast supply of ammunition, etc., stored there, so we evidently are prepared for any contingency."

"Eggs here are three shillings a dozen, and a lot of other things have gone up. There is a widespread belief that the merchants soak the Canadian soldiers very hard, and I think there is a lot in it."

Capt Bingay of Port Arthur Dead

PORT ARTHUR, Jan. 30.—Word has been received here that Capt. L. W. Bingay has died at a military hospital in Etaples, France, from gunshot wounds received in action two weeks ago. He was Captain of Port Arthur Company, 8th Battalion, first contingent. Captain Bingay, who was a Nova Scotian by birth and of U. E. Loyalist stock, served in the South African war. He was news editor of The Evening Chronicle of this city. Mrs. Bingay was with him when he died.
